GOD IS LOVE.

Sing, the morning light is breaking,
And the shadows fly,
Earth, in all its beauty waking,
Praises God most high.
Sing, the zephyrs soft are o'er us,
Fleecy clouds above,
While the birds in joyful chorus,
Tell us God is love.

Now the noon is bright and glowing,
Rest would be so sweet;
When the brook is softly flowing,
And the shadows meet.
Summer's light and life are o'er us,
Summer skies above;
All the world is bright before us,
Knowing God is love.

Weary feet are homeward turning,
Lower sinks the sun;
Sunset clouds in splendor burning,
Tell us day is done.
Pray, the shadows deepen o'er us,
Darker all above;
But the stars, in solemn chorus,
Whisper God is love.

CHRISTMAS.

WM. SHEPHERD.

This is a day set apart by all religious nations to celebrate the nativity of our blessed Lord. We may trace its observance back as far as the second century, about the reign of the Emperor Commodus; some carry it a little higher and say that Telesphorus, who flourished in the reign of Antonius Pius, commanded religious services to be celebrated and divine hymns to be sung the night prior to the birth of Christ. It certainly was observed previous to the time of Constantine, as history gives us a "melancholy proof; for whilst the persecution raged under Dioclesian, who then kept his Court at Nicomedia, that tyrant, among other acts of cruelty, finding multitudes of Christians assembled together to celebrate Christ's nativity, commanded the church doors where they were met to be shut, and fire to be put to it, which soon reduced them and the church to ashes."

This festival, as well as many others contained in the nominal church calendar, has its origin in the Catholic Church; and although we may say nothing against the propriety of celebrating it, yet there certainly is nothing in the Sriptures which enjoins the observance of such a day upon the followers of Christ.

While the early Church were particularly careful to commemorate the death of Christ, and did so at first in anticipation of his death at the last supper, Jesus himself presiding; and while it is most explicitly enjoined upon them in so many words—"For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do show the Lord's death till he come" (1 Cor. 11: 26; compare 2nd verse), we have not in all those Scriptures the most remote allusion to the birth of Christ to be regarded as an annual festival. Indeed, there is no stated time given in the Divine Record when, where, and at what time, his death should be celebrated, but "as often as ye do this," etc. You see it is given in such an indefinite manner that we are at liberty to repeat it daily if we wish; and this was customary with many of the early Christians, as history informs us.

This is called a "holy day," and many claim to religiously observe it; but how many thousands celebrate the day in gluttony, intemperance and profanity, without one thought of Christ, his birth, life, death, resurrection, or anything else.

The question has been agitated by many good men, whether it be proper and beneficial to appoint or keep any holy days. Some suppose that these days have a tendency to impress the minds of men with a greater sense of religion. They contend that if "the acquisitions and victories of men be celebrated with highest joy, how much more those events which relate to the salvation of man; such as the birth, death and resurrection of Christ," etc. Others think that if these days had been necessary in the present age, Christ would have called our attention to it, either in precept or example; but he has nowhere alluded to anything of the kind; and they think these days have a tendency to bring us again into bondage to ceremonial laws, from which Christ came to free his people;—that such days, on the whole, are more pernicious than beneficial to society, as they serve to open a wide door for the enactment of much vice, indolence and blasphemy.

And do not the Scriptures explicitly speak against the observance of them? See Gal. 4: 9, 10; Rom. 14: 5; Col. 2: 16. And do they not have a tendency to sensualize Christianity, and invite us to seek for it more in outward forms than in that deep and hearty adoration or inner temple service to which Jesus and his apostles so often allude, and declare it to be the only true and acceptable worship to God which we may offer. See Isa. 29: 13; Matt. 15: 8, 9; John 4: 23, 24; Rom. 8: 26, 27; 1 Cor. 2: 10–12; 2 Cor. 3: 17.

Christianity is of a spiritual character, and Christ does not enjoin upon those who accept it and espouse his cause to observe days, months, years, or Sabbaths. With them it is one centennial day of holiness. The followers of Christ have taken up the cross (Matt. 10: 38), and there is no interval, no release from that cross until they lay it down once and forever to receive their crown in exchange. Matt. 24: 13; 1 Pet. 5: 4.

Those who labor to serve God through ceremonies, forms and gaudy rituals, and by observing holy days, are but outer court worshipers, and have not yet drank of that living water which should be in time a well of water, springing up into everlasting life; rendering him a portable well, as it were, and a well of water under the severest droughts, which never fails. John 4: 14; compare John 7: 37–39. They have not yet learned that "more excellent way"—that new and living way (Heb. 10: 20), whereby we have free access unto the Father by the one Spirit (Eph. 2: 18), coming boldly to the throne of grace, whereby we find mercy and grace to help in every time of need. Not through any so-called religious drapery, or consecrated rites; but coming at once to God with a "full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water," through Jesus Christ, our only Mediator and great High Priest.

Blessed be God for a religion that does not depend or rest upon human enactment or forms for its enjoyment and possession. Christianity was not introduced into the world with any very great pomp and imposing ceremony; it first came into Jerusalem with its divine author in the most lowly and unpretending manner possible,—riding "on an ass's colt." John 12: 15. What a rebuke was this to those splendid forms and gorgeous ceremonies which were then carried out in the temple where our Lord was wending his way, in order to drive out those religious charlatans and formal worshipers. Church services and dazzling rites received a blow, there and then, from which it has never yet fully recovered.

The religion of Jesus is in no way connected with pompous forms, orders, or ceremonies. It came at first in a simple garb, and so it does now. No change, only what men have made. It is the same to-day as eighteen centuries ago,—cross-bearing, lowly, unpretending, unpopular, surrounded to a great extent with poverty, dishonor, persecution and contumely. It altogether corresponds with the lowly and humiliating life of its founder, from his couch, or manger, to his grave. In this he has consecrated the walks of an honorable lowly life, and a condition of comparative honest poverty. He "endured the cross, despising the shame." He at times had "not where to lay his head." And shall we complain, who may be in lowly circumstances, though surrounded with much that the Master was destitute of?

It is customary to present gifts, one to another, on this day. This arose perhaps from the fact of the eastern sages who came to Jerusalem in those days, being guided by a mysterious star that beckoned them thither, while they inquired, "Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and have come to worship him." And when they came into the house where the infant Savior was, they "opened their treasures and presented unto him gifts [which doubtless were very acceptable, as they were poor in "this world's good"], gold, frankincense, and myrrh." This was an outward expression of their inward homage and adoration.

The christian may not be in possession of these tangible gifts to offer, and the circumstances of the case are materially changed. Our blessed Lord does not require such offerings now. He is rich; the Father having committed all things unto him, giving over all things both in heaven and in earth. Yet there is a way in which we may present gifts to him, and that is to give to the persons of his little flock; for "inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these," he declares we do it unto him. Matt. 25: 40. By this we give a practical demonstration of our faith in Christ; and this is not an annual matter with the christian, but an every day affair,—at all times, and in every place, where the circumstances demand it.

The child of God is called more especially to give himself to Christ, as a whole burnt offering; and this he is urged to do from the consideration of the tender mercies of the Lord. "I beseech you therefore, brethren [says the apostle], by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12: 1. In conformity with this, let the sentiment of our hearts accord with the poet—

"Here, Lord, I give myself away,
'Tis all that I can do."

The nativity of our blessed Lord is pleasing and profitable to contemplate, but there is no need of a day being set apart to the christian in order to refresh his memory, or awaken in him sentiments of a warmer devotion to his Lord; none in the least; for these scenes are ever present to him,—the birth, life, death, resurrection, ascension, and second coming of Christ. They are his daily meat and drink. The thought that that babe, whose birth was first announced by angels to the humble on the dreary plains of Judea, was none other but the Prince of the house of David, who is destined to govern the nations and rule the world in righteousness, is a most blessed one. That he is soon to appear in glorious manhood, or glorified humanity, and they that look for him are to be glorified together with him; that he is to quietly come and reign on Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem, and before his ancients gloriously. Then we shall have a day to celebrate, not like unto to-day, where Christ's birth is professedly commemorated by so many thoughtlessly, recklessly, and profanely; but a day worthy of the highest meed of praise and adoration of God and the Lamb. Blessed be God! Are we ready to hail its incoming with the waiting ones, as described by the prophet—"Lo this is our God, we have waited for him"? Isa. 25: 9. This song shall be sung in the land of Judah,—"We have a strong city; salvation will God appoint for walls and bulwarks. Open ye the gates, that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in." Isa. 26: 1, 2. Compare 2 Pet. 1: 5; Rev. 22: 14.

May persevering, enduring, and saving grace be with all who love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth. Amen.

JESUS.

E. C. PEASE.

How divinely sweet this precious name sounds in the ear of the one who has just dropped his heavy load of guilt and sin at the foot of the cross; and as such an one walks daily in paths of righteousness, with this precious Savior at his side, he fears no evil, for the remembrance of that blessed promise of Jesus—"Lo, I am with you alway," cheers and encourages him. Though the way be sometimes enshrouded in darkness, and briars wound the weary feet, the name of Jesus comes so sweetly to the troubled soul, and bids us remember that he was tried and tempted,—that he walked the same rough road, and he knows just how to succor those who are tempted. "In all their afflictions, he was afflicted." Jesus knows how to help, and knows what is best for us. And he has promised never to leave or forsake, and his promises never fail.

Do you wonder that the name of such a friend is precious?

"Precious name, oh! how sweet,
Hope of earth, and joy of heaven."

"His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." Oh, what love is here made manifest; he not only pardons all past transgressions, but his blood cleanses from all sin, and then he takes up his abode in the purified heart, and saves us from sinning again. To have Jesus for a constant companion oh, how blessed! His companionship is so divinely lovely, so elevating to our earth-bound minds, so soothing in trouble, so sweetly chiding if we are tempted to go astray, guiding us in the narrow way with more than human wisdom. Ah, is it strange that the name of such a dear friend should seem sweeter than all others?

I remember once reading a story of a husband whose companion's love for Jesus' name was the means of his conversion. He mentioned it in an irreverent manner, and said the wife, with tender emotion, "If you knew how much I love that dear name, you never would again take it in vain." This gentle reproof so touched the feelings of her husband, that he, too, was led to love the precious name.

And besides all this, Jesus has gone to prepare a city where all who love him may dwell forever, free from sin, aud its terrible effects. Beautiful mansions in the New Jerusalem, immortal magnificence, which mortal minds cannot conceive, the crystal river which floweth from the throne of God and the Lamb, the fair fields of earth's wide domain, clothed in Edenic beauty; all this and more is the inheritance of those to whom the name of Jesus is dearer than all others. But best of all, Jesus is coming soon, and his reward is with him.

Dear friends, let us love this precious name more every day, think of it oftener, cling to it closer, and when He who has loved us so much appears in glory, may we hail him with joy.

"Jesus' name all names above,
Jesus, best and dearest,
Jesus, fount of perfect love,
Holiest, tenderest, nearest;
Jesus, source of grace completest,
Jesus purest, Jesus sweetest,
Jesus, well of power divine,
Make me, seal me, keep me thine."

REST.

L. B. WEAVER.

O, if ever I felt the need of rest, it is now. If ever I longed for the kingdom to come, it is now. If ever I wanted to see Him who purchased our pardon, it is now; for I feel weary, tired, sick and afflicted. I look for rest, but there is none only in Jesus. I look for rest, but not here. I am trusting, resting, and reposing upon Jesus. He gives us rest in him; but there will never be permanent rest till the dear Redeemer shall come and take to himself the kingdom, and give rest eternal to all his waiting ones. I long with earnest longings for it to come.

Perhaps you ask, dear reader, why I so earnestly sigh and pray for rest? Dear ones, I am tired. I am so distressed. My body is racked with pain during long days of weariness, followed by nights of intense suffering, with not one ray of hope of being any better till "He who is our life shall appear," when I expect to see Him whom my heart so deeply loves and adores. Then it will well pay me for all my sufferings here; for we read, if we suffer with Christ, "we shall also reign with him." Blessed promise, made by one who cannot lie. We know we can depend upon his word. If ever I felt to praise God for any thing, it is that he said he would come again, and then would take all his children hence to dwell with him, where there would be no more trial, sorrow, suffering, pain or tears. As the tears roll down my cheeks to-day, I think soon the last lingering tear will be wiped away by Jesus' own soft hand, and then nothing can cause us to mourn or weep. O Jesus, hasten the day. Dear weary ones, cheer up; the day is breaking.

THE OLD COVENANT.

R. W. WILSON.

(Concluded.)

Hear Elder Andrews again. I quote now from his work entitled, "The Three Messages," third edition revised, page 114. Here he cites us to the words of our Savior found in John 15: 10; and he seems so anxious to have Jesus, the faithful and true witness, give testimony in favor of his notion of the supremacy of the ten commandments, that he has garbled the words of the Master. He has quoted them as follows: "If ye keep the commandments, ye shall abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love." By taking away my, and substituting the, he makes the Savior teach that the condition of abiding in his love, or in him, which is the same, is to keep the ten commandments. This position is so far from truth that in order to sustain it from the words of Christ, or any of his prophets or apostles, garbling, or perversion, would be a necessity. But Jesus did say, "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." John 15: 10. "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." John 14: 21. "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you." John 15: 14.

Our Sabbatarian friends will doubtless say this is a mistake of Bro. Andrews or of the printer. If so, it is now high time for its correction, it being in the third edition revised, and it is exceedingly misleading as it now stands.

The Seventh-day keepers are determined to make the ten commandments the first and the last, the pack-horse of all that God has said in his Book touching morality. This they call the law; and they talk much about another, which they say is the ceremonial law, and when any proof is adduced to show that the ten commandment covenant is abolished, they try to prove that that means the ceremonial law; but we find that God has not given any such law disconnected from the old covenant. Paul said, "Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service" (Heb. 8: 1); and we read in Deut. 4: 13, 14—"And he declared unto you his covenant, which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone. And the Lord commanded me at that time to teach you statutes and judgments, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go over to possess it." These in their connected form are called the law, and what God has joined together let no man put asunder.

Paul said the law was appointed (Diaglott) because of transgressions till the seed should come to whom the promise was made, and it was ordained by angels in the hand of a mediator (Gal. 3: 19); and now, inasmuch as the law embraced in the old covenant, having served the end of its appointment, and the seed having come to whom the promise was made, and having confirmed the new covenant, under which we now live, is it not clear that the old covenant is abolished? "No," say they, "that passage means the ceremonial law." In order to make this claim stand, they must first prove from the Scriptures that God gave the ceremonial law, and ordained it by angels in the hand of a mediator. This they have never done, for the good reason that such a record is not in the Bible. Then it follows that the law mentioned in this text is none other than that embraced in the old covenant, the ten commandments, with its statutes and judgments.

It is quite common for seventh-day keepers to claim superior authority for the ten commandments on the ground that God gave them in person. This is not tenable, for even if we allow God gave them in person (which we do not), they can be no more authoritative than the other portions of his doctrine, which holy men spake "as they were moved by the Holy Spirit." Did God give the law to Moses in person? Let us see. "And they saw the God of Israel." "They saw God, and did eat and drink." Ex. 24: 10, 11. "And he gave unto Moses, when he had made an end of communing with him upon Mount Sinai, two tables of testimony, tables of stone, written by the finger of God." Ex. 31: 18. "The Lord talked with you face to face in the mount, out of the midst of the fire." Deut. 5: 4. These texts do not prove God's personal presence any more than other like expressions which we may find in the Old Testament; such as are given by Jacob, who called the name of the place where he had wrestled with a man until the breaking of the day, Peniel, "For I have seen God face to face." Gen. 32: 30. But God said to Moses, "There shall no man see me and live." Ex. 33: 20. Jesus said, "No man hath seen God at any time." How shall we reconcile these seemingly opposite scriptures?

It is evident in the instances cited that God was represented by means of his angel or angels, which the following scripture fully substantiates: "For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward." Heb. 2: 2. That the word spoken by angels here has reference to the law is obvious, from the fact that the apostle in this epistle addressed the Jewish people, contrasting Christ with Moses, the gospel with the law. Stephen, when speaking to the Jews, said: "Who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it." Acts 7: 53. "It [the law] was appointed because of transgressions, till the Seed should come to whom the promise was made, and it was ordained [spoken or commanded] by angels in the hand of a mediator." Gal. 3: 19. The only law spoken or commanded by angels, and placed in the hand of a mediator, is that embraced in the old covenant, and given to Moses on Mount Sinai.

MATT. 24: 14.

J. P. MARQUAND.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations; and then shall the end come."

A proper and right understanding of this scripture will be profitable to each of us. What is the meaning of the word gospel? It means good news. What is the meaning of "gospel of the kingdom"? It means that a kingdom shall be established all over this earth,—a theocracy governed by God supremely and man subordinately. It shall be everlasting and perfectly pure.

In all ages of the world there have been cardinal truths adapted to that age, and applicable to that age only. Noah preached the gospel to the people that if they would repent and believe, they should be saved from a watery grave. Moses preached the gospel to the Jewish nation to repent of their sins, obey God, and live; but very few took the advice. Jeremiah preached the gospel to the Jews to put their necks under the yoke of Babylon, and serve them until the seventy years were fulfilled for their deliverance. Christ and his apostles preached the gospel to the people, urging as a motive that the kingdom of heaven was at hand; but very few obeyed the truth.

Now we come down on the stream of time, and find ourselves in "the time of the end," when we have the gospel of the kingdom, or kingdom gospel, preached in the nineteenth century; and woe be to those who refuse the message and will not have Christ to reign over them. The gospel of the kingdom could not be preached until "the time of the end"—until the great tribulation of 1260 years was passed, and the sun had been darkened, the moon appeared as blood, and the stars had fallen from heaven. This gospel is now due, and it is the last message to this sin-cursed earth. Happy will all those be who take heed to the sure word of prophecy, who love truth and righteousness, are reconciled to God, and kiss the Son; for there is no other way of salvation for poor lost humanity.

Another reason why men should give their hearts to God immediately, is the fact that man's probation has been lengthened out so many thousand years, and the Bible asserts the fact that the judgment of the world is just before us. Another reason also is that the Spirit of God still lingers around this planet, to get as many trophies of grace as possible; but when the last sinner is sealed with the Spirit of God, the mandate will go forth to the reaping angels, The harvest of the earth is ripe; put in the sickle, gather together the tares in bundles for burning, but gather the wheat into my garner.

Many people have a very erroneous idea of what the kingdom of heaven is and how constituted; some think we have wings and fly away like a bird in the air, and go beyond the blue sky, and sing hymns all day and night. Others think that the kingdom of God is so spiritual that it is not necessary to have any bodies whatever, and that christians, after death, live on air. We will now state what we believe.

In order to make a kingdom, we must have a king, subjects, officers, and territory. We must have bodies that are incorruptible, righteous rulers, righteous people, a glorious theocracy, a kingdom in which God shall be the supreme Ruler, and his will the law;—a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, but endure for ever. It will be a kingdom in which the most refined and elevated pleasures will exist, and fill to satisfaction the breast of every redeemed soul, and in which depravity, sickness, pain and despair shall never enter. It shall be established under the whole heavens and stand forever.

Now who are the heirs of this kingdom? Abraham's seed (Christ). It was given by promise, and not through the works of the law or the flesh. Abraham had two sons,—the one by Hagar, who was in bondage with her children; the other son was by promise, and was born of Sarah, who was free. These are the two covenants. The first was natural, the second spiritual. The first was earthly; the second, or new covenant, was heavenly. Moses was the mediator of the law covenant. Christ is the mediator of the second, or new covenant. All our blessings come through the Son of God, and he that honoreth the Son honoreth the Father; for the Father hath committed all judgment into the hands of the Son.

If any say they love God and do not love Jesus Christ, they are deceived. This was the case with the Jews. They pretended to love and reverence Abraham, but denied Christ. Jesus told them if they really loved Abraham they would love him, because he came forth from the Father.

If we are truly heirs of God to that blessed kingdom which is being prepared for the righteous, then we are joint heirs with Jesus Christ to an inheritance incorruptible, undefiled, and that fadeth not away.

Now, dear saint, lift up your head and rejoice; the darkness will soon pass away, and your righteousness shall appear as the noonday sun. Why do you fear and tremble? It is God who is on your side, and he would sooner let the heavens fall than leave or forsake you. I know that the true children are passing through fiery trials and deep waters, but God has all power in heaven and in earth, and the fire shall not consume nor the waters drown. He who has been with you in six troubles will be with you in the seventh and give the victory. Amen.

Bion, the philosopher, once told a miser, "You do not possess your wealth, but your wealth possesses you."

ONLY A LITTLE WHILE.

J. W. THOMAS.

"A little while."—John 16: 16.

"A little while." Truthful words. He who was the joy and light of his disciples, whose presence gave them gladness, and the announcement of whose absence cast a shadow over their hearts, said in tender and affectionate tones, "A little while, and ye shall not see me; and again, a little while, and ye shall see me." He must leave them; it was expedient that he should. He had work to do in heaven; they had work to do on earth. The Teacher and his pupils, the Shepherd and his sheep, the Savior and his followers, must be widely separated. A little while, and his face they could not see, his voice they could not hear, his step they could not follow. They must remain in the world to be witnesses for him, to meet its trials, to battle with its influences, to overcome its difficulties.

But said he, "If I go away, I will come again." "A little while and ye shall see me." His work in heaven will soon be finished, and the mansions be prepared. Only a little while, and he will come. His voice will be heard, his countenance seen all radiant with immortal beauty. If the disciples were glad to see him after his resurrection from the dead, how much more glad will they be to see him coming in his kingly glory, with robes, and palms, and crowns for all his waiting ones. O what comfort there is in those words, "A little while." Yes, only a little while, and the dark shadows of this earth life will be forever past, and the bright morning of eternity will dawn. Have you been toiling hard, and bearing the burden in the heat of the day? Are you very weary? and do you long for rest?

Do the hours seem long, and are you sometimes almost impatient of the Master's delay? Hush; be patient. A little while and ye shall see him who giveth rest. Toil on a little longer. Soon you will hear the joyful words, "Well done."

"A little while." Then parted ones will meet. Who has not lost a friend? The dust of the departed mingles with the dust on which we tread. Earth is but one vast sepulchre. All over its bosom, here and there in family groups, and in isolated graves, sleep the rich, the poor, the great and small. You remember when the hearse drove up to your door and bore away the form of your loved one. You remember where they laid him, for you have often been there to weep. That little grave, it may be, where your loving child is buried, how many times you have been there, and sat mournfully looking at the flowers that bloom over its resting place. How this life has seemed like a night of weeping to you since death entered your family. Everything is changed. At times an inexpressible loneliness creeps over you, and your heart yearns for the presence of the one you loved so long ago. O will they live again? Yes, 'tis but a little while, and our friends will rise. We shall see them shining in immortal beauty. Every grave will be opened. Not one saint will be left behind. As the dew sparkles on the spring flowers, so the crowns will sparkle on the heads of the redeemed. "Thy dead men shall live; together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing, ye that dwell in the dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out her dead."

"A little while." Then all tears will be wiped away. Sin, sorrow, and temptation will be known no more. This valley of tears will be exchanged for the "beautiful vale of rest." Old earth will be disrobed of its mourning apparel, and adorned with its bridal garments. Where thorns and thistles have grown, flowers will spring up in perennial beauty. Here where Jesus was smitten with the reed, and wore the crown of thorns, will he wield the sceptre of Almighty power, and wear the crown of everlasting dominion. "Behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man as his works shall be."

UNDEFILED RELIGION.

B. PERHAM.

"Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world."—Jas. 1: 27.

I think it would be very difficult at the present day to find a church without spot or wrinkle, for the fashion of the present day produces a great many spots and wrinkles, on churches and on individuals. I think, if we are to judge a tree by its fruits, that there are many at the present day who are church members in good standing, who live so carelessly that they get terribly spotted by the flesh, and Satan succeeds in leading them into a great many errors on the Bible, which makes their minds very spotted, and then Satan contrives to lead them into many of the snares of the world, in pursuit of worldly pleasures and many things which are forbidden in God's holy Book. In Eph. 1: 3, 4, the great apostle says—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ; according as he hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." St. Paul says to the Thessalonians (1 Thess. 4: 7), "For God hath not called us unto uncleanness, but unto holiness."

But how shall we keep ourselves unspotted from the world? We answer, "Come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing"; "have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." Thus we see that in order to be on a safe standing before God, we must forsake sin in every form and shape, for certainly we must have on the wedding garment when Jesus comes, and it must be white and clean; no spots must be seen on it.

But how is it about visiting the fatherless and widows in their afflictions? Only think how many poor widows and their fatherless children are suffering for want of the comforts of life, and no one seeming to care for them. O, what a dreadful account will the rich professor have to give before the great judgment throne! But, there are some noble-hearted christians who are wealthy, who seem to delight in relieving the poor and needy and distressed; who seem willing to help the poor preachers, and the poor widows with their suffering children. Such ones will find that passage of the dear Savior's words fulfilled in Matt. 25: 35, 36, 40. Please turn and read Isa. 1: 16, 17. Here the great Evangelist prophet gives us a rule that will judge us at the last day.

Reader, we must all be very careful not to love our money so well as to want to gain the whole world, and lose our salvation. It should be a pleasure to do all we can to help the needy of all classes, and God will pay us well for it. Trust in God, and do right. The coming of Christ is near, even at the door. Let us be all ready to meet him. Amen.

THEOLOGY.

In my former and preliminary communication on the theology of the day, I stated that there were fundamental errors in the various systems of Christian theology, which have, inevitably, produced discordant creeds, and obstructed the progress of vital, spiritual Christianity more than even what is termed the natural hostility of the human heart.

The first, and most fatal of these I deem to be the dogma of inherent immortality, expressed in the conventional phraseology of the day by the terms "deathless spirit," "immortal soul," "disembodied spirit," etc.; such doctrine being not only baseless, but directly opposed to the teachings of Revelation.

Having primarily accepted the Platonic heresy, theologians at once appreciated the importance of confirming the entire teachings of Scripture to their views. Hence it was foreseen that the Mosaic account of the creation—the starting-point of theology—must be so interpreted as to endorse the doctrine, and definitely set forth this, their preconceived and important article of belief, before the mind of the Bible student on the very threshold of inquiry. Consequently we find, in the translation of the Scripture narrative of the creation into the various dialects, the substitution of the word "soul" for that of "creature," the original in Gen. 1: 21–24, 30, and 2: 7, being the same word that is rendered when applied to animals, "creature"; to man, "soul." Fortified with this word "soul," by which a twofold nature was designedly given to man, they further claimed that the "breath of life," which God "breathed into" the nostrils of Adam, formed this duality, was an impartation of the divine essence, the breath of immortality.

Now what is the correct and common-sense teaching of the Mosaic narrative, but that all the creatures, man included, received their life, or breath, alike from the same Omnipotent Creator; that man was distinguished, and only thus, by the special provision made for the perpetuation of his existence in the fruit of "the tree of life," of which he was permitted and invited "freely" to eat, so long as he refrained from tasting of the fruit of "the tree of the knowledge of good and evil," or of "right and wrong," as it is more justly rendered. The real truth with regard to man's mortality undoubtedly is that it was, and ever has been, that of all other creatures, whether anterior to, or contemporary with, the human race. Man was not to be made mortal by disobedience, but only to continue so, even as he was created. "Dying thou shalt die"; that is, shall be left inevitably to die.

That the prolongation of the natural life of our first parents was contingent on their obedience, and continued access to "the tree of life," is unquestionably confirmed by the language of Jehovah recorded in Gen. 3: 22—"And the Lord said, Behold, the man has become like one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever, therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden," thus banishing him forever from the life-preserving fruit.

I deem the natural and correct rendering of the sacred narrative to be wholly destructive of the theory that man was created immortal; and further assert that the doctrine of man's inherent immortality has no warrant either in the Scriptures of the Old or New Testament, when rightfully interpreted; nay, more; that it is altogether opposed to their uniform teachings, which invariably declare that the grave is the land of forgetfulness, where thought and memory are extinguished and silence reigns; that "the dead know not anything"; that "in that very day [the day of death] their thoughts perish"; that "the dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into the pit"; that "if Christ be not risen, then they [even] that have fallen asleep in Christ are perished."

In my next I will endeavor to trace the origin and adoption of this heresy.

Be Honest.—Integrity of conduct, and a practical abhorrence of artfulness and disguise, will alone secure respect and success in our undertakings, both in public and private life.

If Jesus call you to suffering, bear it patiently. Did I say patiently? No, not patiently merely. Mount higher: bear it delightedly, affectionately, thankfully.

NEW YEAR.—We wish a happy new year in the Lord to all our readers. J. C. M. G.

THE OLD AND NEW YEAR.

Years are periods of progression—measurements of conditions, actions, and existences. Every thing moves through these periods in some condition or conditions. Nothing is stationary, nor can say to the lunations, You have come and gone, and we are not moved; but each hour carries all creatures and things onward its length, into the unfolding future. The revolving spheres and ticking clock tell the onward march of all things to some future position—some final destiny.

God has placed us on the great revolving wheel of time, which, propelled by an Almighty hand, moves on unchecked, unhindered, plunging all, every moment, into untried scenes,—some into woe, some into life, some into death.

The old year has just expired, wrapped in the darkness of its last hour, and buried in the vast grave of the mighty past. It was clearly seen by prophetic eyes long ago, then far in the obscure distance, rolling up into view portentous scenes of glorious significance to a waiting church, preparatory to the grand events of the world's last judgment. It came upon the stage of realities clothed with resistless power to accomplish all that the Ruler of worlds had given license and commandment to be done. It measured the orbits of the marching planets, and each one ran its appointed race. It allotted the obedience of loyal angels, and made its record of their fidelity to God and faithfulness to men. It delivered its limited license to Satan to bring all the train of evils upon a cursed world which the Divine government permits. It opened its historic page of earth scenes, and not one was absent at its roll-call. Its earthquakes, tornadoes, fires and floods, meet the divine appointment. Its prophetic enrollment of armor-clad warriors, with their increased and newly prepared armor, exactly filled the divine requisition. It filled a page of national history,—the march of empires, some to victory and earthly glory, some to defeat and infamy.

It wrote a literary chapter of the arts and sciences, and furnished its quota of books and publications; some will honor God, and many will corrupt men. It filled its cup of human woes—the pangs of birth and the agonies of death; the smart of the assassin's steel, the abuse of infancy, and the neglect of age.

It furnished its measure of worship; much of it worldly, pompous and damning; some of it pure, apostolic and saving. The great State churches have spoken boldly for sectarianism and bigotry, boasting of their divine right to rule the world. They have taken the sword to defend the faith of the Prince of Peace.

Every day of the departed year has witnessed the earnest prayers of the Spouse of Christ, while the plaintive note of her petition for help and deliverance has echoed from the closet and bower, under the sun-rays and star-beams, as the faithful have agonized for Christ-likeness, the salvation of the perishing, and the glorious appearing of Jesus, the Redeemer of a lost world.

Its history is written. Its page is full and sealed, to be opened by the Judge of all. The clock has ticked away its moments, one by one, until its months and days are all passed no more to return. Solemn thought! Not a moment can be recalled. Not a scene can be re-enacted. Not a step can be retraced. All is locked in deathless silence.

Memory opens its closed doors, and wanders among its hushed scenes, weeping over many, but rejoicing over a few. Many clasped hands and loving hearts were parted while treading its rough pathway.

The march of Omnipotence has been clearly seen, by the eye of faith, walking through its months and days, producing strange and wonderful events, the historian's account of which duplicates the inspired Record of last-day scenes. O Time! thy work is change, and thy march is ever onward from the beginning to the end.

But hark! The great bell is ringing. It tolls the death of the old year, and sounds a welcome to the new. 1876 has come, a stranger, in our world, to briefly pass the narrow neck bounded by its beginning and ending, and then plunge into the vast unmeasured past. It opens its mighty gates to admit our fallen world, with all its groaning creatures, disturbed elements, and tarnished glory. More than a billion of our race have already passed its threshold, and are firmly held by its resistless arms, subject to the grinding machinery of its curse, doomed to labor in its tread-mill, exposed to the ravages of its pestilence, war, and famine, borne into its vortex of flames, floods, and earthquakes, without giving any policy of insurance to those who are exposed to its fates.

It gives no head-light for its passengers. Every advancing step is in the dark. No one can tell where the flames will burst forth, or the floods overwhelm. Calamities and death lie in ambush, and the grave opens its mouth without giving notice. The kings cannot tell when their vast armies will be needed in the field of slaughter, for their political augurers cannot penetrate the darkness of coming days and tell when expected war and revolution will come. The busy multitudes in the volcanic regions know not what hour their homes and friends may be suddenly buried in a common grave.

The year will roll its wheel of fate heavily over the earth, and no one can tell who or when the next will be crushed under its resistless weight. The curse will fill it full of danger, while sin and Satan will coil their snares at every turn, to drag down to woe and eternal death the children of Eden's pair.

But will its dark cloud have no silver lining? Will not there be hours of sunshine mid the howling tempests? Will not fruits of blessings be scattered mid the blightings of the curse? Will not the darkness be penetrated by bright rays from some head-light? Will there not be some guiding star to cheer the hope of the distressed mariner? Will the Church of Christ be left to pass these dark and fearful days without hope or rest? Will the Friend, who led and comforted her through the darkness and threatening tempests of all the past years, leave her mid the greater dangers of 1876? No. The answering voice comes down from heaven—"I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." The Friend of all the holy, who accepted Abel's offering, guided the hand of Noah, walked with Enoch, called Lot out of danger, Abraham to test his faith, shielded Israel in their dangerous march to the promised inheritance, and has protected and saved the Christian Church amid kingly and satanic foes, will safely guard and carry his people through the perilous days of 1876.

The Word of God is the grand head-light to all who stand within the radius of its illumination. Its rays penetrate the darkness of coming days, and show the snares and foes in ambush by the way, manifesting the tokens of coming glory and rest long prayed for, falling upon and reflecting back the glory of the City of God now near at hand.

Christians, tread softly, for you are walking on the crumbling brink of a terrible precipice. Cling to Christ, for there is no other friend who can save you from the yawning gulf. Step into God's balances and test your Christianity every day. Do not be deceived. Trust not yourself in the open field. Hide in the Cleft-Rock, for the battle rages fearfully. The trump of doom may arouse a sleeping world to hopeless lamentations ere the opening year shall close its cycles.

Then let each of us stand at our post as faithful sentinels. Let each morning and evening find us in the Spirit, watching for the year of release. It may be the present year will wake the harp of jubilee and cheer us with the song of eternal deliverance. Father, sweep the dial of Time's clock, and toll the end of Satan's reign and the curse, and establish the kingdom of Messiah under the whole heavens, shall be our earnest prayer for 1876. J. C.

NEW YEAR.

The records of 1875 are now closed up to be examined at the day of judgment. Are there any things among those records we would not like to have presented to the public? If so, let pardon be asked at once, that those things may be blotted out, for what is not pardoned, must be exposed. It may be expected that this will be an eventful year. Great events are pressing to the front in religious, political, financial and commercial matters. The closing prophetic events, mentioned in the sacred Scriptures, are presenting themselves to our view, demonstrating the divine inspiration of the Bible. Every year brightens the evidence showing that our divine King is about to appear in glory, and set up "the kingdom of heaven." We have no other expectation than that the evidence in favor of this sublime event will continue to increase till our anticipations are realized in seeing the great Deliverer descending in "power and great glory."

This is to be a memorable year to the American people, because of the great gathering at Philadelphia to commemorate the Centennial of the declaration of Independence. Immense preparations are being made for the event. It is to be a national jubilee. Would that the year had come when all the saints sleeping in death, and all the living disciples of Jesus, might celebrate the jubilee of jubilees around the throne of God and the Lamb, in the New Jerusalem. If the American people, and the rest of the world, would make as careful preparations for the coming of Christ, as for the centennial at Philadelphia, glorious results would follow.

The present prospect indicates that this year will be one of great interest to the students of prophecy, especially what relates to the Turkish empire. The signs testify that the "Sick Man" can hardly live another year on European soil. The uprising of those opposed to Mohammedanism is very decided, and their prospect of success is encouraging. We may expect that the Mohammedan and Papal powers will come to their end about the same time, and that their fall will signal the return of Christ. Turkey is continually growing weaker, like one dying of consumption, and her foes are becoming bolder and stronger. The progress of events connected with this noted nation will be watched with thrilling interest by those who are careful students of prophecy. The great prophetic lines are rapidly approaching the grand focal point that centres in the coming of Christ.

As a new year unfolds, let us do all we can to lead sinners to Jesus, and to arouse the lukewarm from their perilous slumbers. This is the hour for earnest men, who are willing to sacrifice their time, home, ease, property, reputation, their all, to save the lost. Men are needed who will make no compromise with Satan, or turn to the right or left to secure the smiles of a wicked world; men who dare tell the truth, and defend the right at any cost.

This year, we, as a people ought to do more to spread the glorious truths of the Bible than ever before. Time is short. Sinners are perishing on every side. But few are making any efforts to save them, but but those who profess to believe we are near the great day of the Lord have no excuse for idleness. Their example of labor and sacrifice should be a model for others to imitate. They should exhibit the gentle, meek, quiet, patient, sweet, loving spirit of Jesus, beyond any other class of people. The more light and truth we have, the better should be the living. It is to be feared this is not always the case. Is there not need of a thorough heart reformation, in order to be ready to meet our coming Savior? Remember, there is no promise only to those who are "pure in heart." Mere theories will not give us the right to "the tree of life." We must be in Christ to be ready; clothed with his righteousness. He must be our all in all. Let us so live this year, that every moment shall find us ready to hail with joy the return of our blessed Savior. Let all backbiting, evil speaking, roots of bitterness, joking, fretting and scolding, and every other evil thing be forever laid aside. It is time to be in earnest about the matter of preparation, if we expect to be accepted when Jesus comes to gather his jewels. The situation will be awful, if not ready when he appears. It is necessary to proceed with great care and watchfulness, accompanied with much prayer. Satan is making special efforts to entrap the Lord's children if possible. If he can catch them off their watch, he makes a fiery onset to turn them from the narrow way into some forbidden path, where other snares are laid for their ruin. His full acquaintance with the weaknesses of human nature, and his long experience, gives him the advantage over careless souls, who do not trust in Jesus to keep them in the hour of temptation. In every conflict this year, may the Lord give the victory. M. G.

"NOW YE ARE CLEAN."

This is what Jesus said to his disciples, and must therefore be true, as "he knew what was in man." When he said persons were "clean," it was a fact. When is one clean in the sight of the Lord? Would he say an adulterer, a liar, a thief, a drunkard, was clean? Certainly not. What constitutes one an "unclean person?" Sin, and sin only. Then it follows that when one is clean he is "free from sin." So long as sin remains upon him unpardoned, he is unclean. This is the plain teaching of the Scriptures. As "God is no respecter of persons," then all may be made clean. David said, "Create in me a clean heart, O God." A clean heart is a "pure heart." Pure gold has no alloy; a pure heart is without sin. As this is a Bible doctrine, why does it receive so much opposition? There are two principal reasons. (1) wrong views; (2) a dislike to the subject. Some have been taught that we must live in sin while we remain in this world, especially till near the time of death. Such persons are shocked when they hear it talked that we may live without sinning. They suppose it is impossible, hence they consider him a fanatic who preaches that a man may live in a state of purity. They shun even the society of such a person, and warn people against his influence. Still the Scripture reads: "Whosoever abideth in him [Christ] sinneth not." If we could not abide in him, and be "clean," then the Bible is calculated to mislead honest souls. But it is still further stated; "Hereby we know that he abideth in us, by the Spirit which he hath given us." Then it follows, that as truly as we abide in him, just as truly we are free from sin, and "clean" because we dwell in him. As a man in a warm room is warm because of his position; so a man is clean because he is in Christ. When he sins, he steps out, and must repent and be forgiven before he can be "clean" again.

Another reason why some of this first class oppose the doctrine of christian purity, as attainable in this life, is because they confound sin with temptation, error, mistakes and infirmites. Any one who claims that he has arrived at a state of experience, in which he makes no mistakes, has no temptations, may be considered as a fanatic, or a deceived man, but he who teaches that a person cannot be clean—free from sin—will find himself in direct opposition to the plain teaching of the Bible. The best of men have errors and infirmities, make mistakes, and are tempted, while at the same time they may be free from sin. Paul gloried in his infirmities, but he said, "The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus, hath made me free from the law of sin and death." When one is free from the law of stealing, it is because there is no theft resting upon him at that time. So when he is free from the law of sin, there is nt that time no sin upon him, for if he was in sin, the law against sin would seize and condemn him; but Paul says: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit." Then he is clean.

The second class who oppose the doctrine of purity, do it because their hearts are not clean. A temperance man will not oppose temperance, nor a clean man will not oppose cleanliness; neither will a holy being oppose holiness; but it is natural for the impure to oppose the pure, or for the wicked to oppose the righteous, because the bad feel condemned by the presence and conduct of the good. There is probably no doctrine so offensive to Satan as that of holiness, as there is no other one so opposed to his doings, feelings, and conduct. Those who partake of his spirit would be inclined to find fault with the subject of holiness, and those who are its advocates, must expect to be misrepresented, and persecuted, for all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecntion." Sin and holiness cannot be harmonized. Those who oppose because their hearts are impure will continue their opposition till they are turned to Christ. But in no case will one push against the doctrine of holiness unless his heart is not right, or because he does not correctly understand the subject. The temperate love temperance; the virtuous love virtue; the wicked love wickedness; the pure love purity; and the holy love holiness. What we love we do not oppose, but embrace, cherish and defend. The clean person does not prefer that which is filthy, nor plead in its favor. Let the reader inquire of his heart, Am I "clean?" M. G.

THE POLITICAL SIGNS IN EUROPE.

The political signs seen in the great prophetic nations must consist in their political situation, and its agreement with the prophetic history given in the Word of God.

We consider the prophetic history of the great Roman Powers, in their political, military, and financial condition, during the last stage of their existence, very clearly stated and perfectly illustrated by God, so that prophetic writers have very generally agreed upon the main features of their closing scenes.

As this subject has been quite fully presented to our readers through the Crisis and other publications, we wish to keep before you the progress of important events, and the prospects of the immediate future, as presented by those best qualified to understand the facts and probabilities in the case. We present a few extracts from the best qualified political writers in the world, to give the facts as they are, requesting all to carefully notice the wonderful correspondence between their statements and those who have expressed what they understood must take place among those governments to fulfil the sacred predictions.

We will first give brief extracts from an editorial in the London Times:

THE GREAT MILITARY POWERS: RUSSIA AND GERMANY.

"From present appearances in Europe, we shall not be permitted to close the year 1875 with satisfactory prospects for the peace of 1876. Russia is preparing her forces for any contingency that may await her, or that her ambitious policy may bring about; and although the Germans find the cost of their vast military system oppressive, and are puzzled how to increase taxation without serious damage to their indus trial interests, the universal opinion is in favor of maintaining their aggressive as well as their defensive power. The Russian railways have been complaining of the quantity of unprofitable work thrown upon them by the Government demands for the passage of troops and stores, and yet requisitions of the same sort increase day by day. These railways have never been true commercial undertakings, as in civilized countries. The plans upon which the railway routes were determined, and the enormous sums borrowed to push forward their construction, have had for their primary object, not the development of industrial and peaceful arts, but the placing in the hands of the Czar a gigantic military system which no one living in its vicinity could view without alarm.

It is not as a precaution against France only, or at present chiefly, that the Germans have made such sacrifices of money they can ill afford, and of personal comfort and liberty, in order to have an army which Rome in the proudest days of her dominion could not have rivalled, and which surpasses anything the modern world has seen A home-loving, thrifty people would refuse to bear such burdens, were it not that the condition of Turkey renders it very doubtful whether the changes that threaten to occur can be adjusted without an appeal to arms. . . .

If Turkey succeeds in pacifying her insurgent populations by a combination of military measures and reasonable concessions, the danger will be put off for another day; but Russia has to keep up her prestige and her pretence of being the special friend of the Christian subjects of the Porte, and she has to encourage the very rebellions she might be glad to see suppressed at the present moment, that they might burst forth at a time that would be more convenient for her schemes. She is not ready for a great war, and the Germans are. If, moreover, they should find it impossible to come to an agreement with their big neighbor as to the course that should be taken if the Turkish difficulty increases, they might prefer a contest in the spring to one of a later date.

The English minister at Constantinople will doubtless join General Ignatief in urging good advice upon the Sultan if the object of Russia is really to promote peace; but unless the Turks show much more energy in their military proceedings, and great vigor in effecting reforms, the insurrection will not be quelled, but probably assume much larger proportions in the spring. . . . We did not, as Mr. Foster says, fight for the maintenance of Turkish rule in the German war as an ultimate object. We did it to stop an aggression on the part of Russia of a highly dangerous kind, and in that we succeeded.

The main point of interest seems now to lie between Germany and Austro-Hungary. If those Powers make a firm alliance for definite objects, the chief interests of Europe will be safe, whether peace lasts or war comes." Those governments have already come to an understanding with Russia upon the question. "We certainly shall not spend money or life in the vain hope of improving the Turkish government, or prevent it from suffering the consequences of its faults. If it does not soon manifest some healthy life, it will have to submit to reductions of territory consequent upon successful revolt. This might, and ought to, if it takes place at all, occur without embroiling the Great Powers; but it would be idle to say the sky is free from warning clouds."

The same writer in a later number of the Times, says:—

"The surprise occasioned by the sudden action of the British Government in Egypt has almost withdrawn attention from the progress of the insurrection in Herzegovina. Yet, if we may trust the latest telegrams, the rebels were never in a more favorable position than at this moment. It turns out that the victories of which the Turks have recently boasted were in reality defeats, while the opponents against whom they had to contend were for the most part Montenegrins. The latter fact is rendered all the more significant by a statement that Prince Nikita is rapidly preparing to take a decisive part in the struggle. A great battle is daily expected to be fought near his north-western frontier, and it is said he is arming 11,000 men to join in this conflict. He even informed the Austrian Government of his intention, and received the reply that he 'was the best judge of his actions.'

All the world knows the relations which exist between the Prince of Montenegro and the Czar." He is a Russian prince. "The former receives a liberal pension from the latter, and invariably acts in obedience to instructions from St. Petersburg. At the beginning of the rebellion he was most anxious to join the insurgents, but it did not suit the Russian Government that he should interfere too suddenly, and he was therefore compelled to hold in check the ardor of his subjects. It is hardly credible that he would alter his policy, and give full effect to popular sympathies, unless he had received a hint from his master that a demonstration against the Porte would meet with approval.

That the Turkish Government is alarmed may be concluded from the fact that it is displaying unwonted energy in connection with the proposed reforms in the discontented distiicts. It is about to communicate a draught of these reforms to the signatory Powers of the Paris Treaty of Peace, and is forming a special commission to carry them out. This vigor may be very commendable, but if Russia is really encouraging the Montenegrins to fight it will be of little use. Measures which might have secured peace six months ago can effect no good result now."

He continues the subject and says:—

"In Constantinople the purchase of the Khedive's interest in the Suez Canal has caused the greatest consternation. The Sultan has ordered a committee to be appointed for the inspection of the army, and to make preparations for war. The forts on the Bosphorus and the forts and the harbor batteries at Crete are being armed with Krupp guns."

The Editor of the N. Y. Witness presents the prophetic features of the subject thus:—

"There cannot be the slightest reason for doubt that at any moment the great powers of Europe may precipitate the fall of Turkey. None of the empires, Germany, Austria, or Russia, desires the death of the dying man just at present. Not one of them has any love for him and still less respect. These long years the organs of the Czar have at intervals burst into a wail of indignation and sympathy over the troubles of the Christian subjects of the Porte, and steadily kept alive the hostility to Turkish rule which now excites alarm. The Russian ambassador at Constantinople makes no secret of his views of the frailty of the tenure by which the Turk retains a foothold on the continent of Europe. He asserts that Servia and Montenegro could, at any time, be let loose upon the Turk; and the flames of revolt would spread to Bulgaria. This would be the destruction of the rule of the Turk. The Porte cannot delay the evil day. 'A liberal Sultan and a liberal Pope,' says a great French journalist, 'are equally impossible.'

Russia has no intention of being shut up in the Black Sea. It was seen that, when Great Britain bought up the Suez Canal, sent a strong fleet to the Mediterranean, and placed Gibraltar and Malta on a war footing, something had been left out of consideration in the Eastern Question. The speech made some time ago by Mr. Disraeli at the dinner given by the Lord Mayor of London is now worth reading over again. His prediction that peace would be probably maintained, and that British interests would be carefully guarded in case of the settlement of the Eastern Question, covered a world of knowledge. The purchase of the Suez Canal by Great Britain startled Gortschakoff from his repose, and brought him to Berlin. A new method of dealing with Turkey was the result of the visit to Bismarck. . . .

She now hopes that some complication may ensue which will favor a spring upon Turkey. The Russian people strongly sympathize with the provinces in Turkey presently in insurrection, and a war against the Porte would be very popular among all classes in the dominions of the Czar. With this Eastern Question ready like a mine to explode at a moment's notice, all Europe one large arsenal, and Great Britain contemplating making soldiers of her entire population capable of bearing arms, many express the greatest apprehension for the peace of the Continent, and the fear appears to be well grounded that the next European war will be terrible indeed.

We have no authority or desire to make any predictions as to the definite time when the decisive struggle shall come, but we do know that the present position of those governments and the indications, according to these writers, of what may be expected in the immediate future is exactly in harmony with what has been anticipated by us and many expositors of the sacred writings, for a long time. It is barely possible that the present perturbed state of the political elements may be pacified for a brief period; but every revolutionary wave that strikes Turkey, manifests more clearly the certainty that its doom is fixed, and that it is rapidly sinking in the embrace of political death; while every wave develops the onward march of Russia to Constantinople and the "Holy Places."

The little insurrection that commenced a few months ago in Herzegovina has more clearly developed the real designs and situation of the great Powers than any thing which has before happened. They have apparently made more advancement towards the final settlement of the Eastern Question in the last three months than in any previous ten years. All look upon it as being impossible to continue the discussion of the disturbing question much longer without a rupture, which must inevitably produce a change of government at Constantinople and Palestine. Such a change, we have believed and advocated for more than thirty years, is the last one found upon the prophetic page for the Eastern Roman Empire before the King Eternal shall come and claim all earthly kingdoms as his own.

The prospect for Jesus' friends is, therefore, brightening gloriously that redemption is at hand. The dawning of eternal day is already rolling up its heavenly radiance in the eastern sky, driving back the darkness of sin and despair behind the nearing hills of Paradise. The royal Prince of David's house is about to put on earth's royal diadem, and sweep his kingly robes through the blue portals, as the heavenly train approaches the purchased dominions of the Great Immanuel. Glorious day for Zion! Eternal jubilee for Israel! Earth's grand concert of holy ones! The coronation of God's Son! The nuptial feast of the King of kings! J. C.

THINGS I WISH TO KNOW.---NO. 2.

L. BOUTELL.

Dearly Beloved:—I shall spend but little time in discussing the next six questions touching the spiritual reign of Christ over the Gentiles in this dispensation. I would simply ask, are we not under the spiritual reign, rule, guide of Jesus Christ? Does not Paul say in Rom. 15: 12, in quoting Isaiah, "There shall be a root of Jesse, and he that shall rise to reign over the Gentiles. in him shall the Gentiles trust?" Then in Luke 19: 14, "But his citizens hated him, sending a messenger after him, saying, We will not have this man to reign over us," and this was before the return of the Nobleman to settle with them. And it seems to me there is a recognition of it in Matt. 28: 18–20, "All power is given me in heaven and in earth." Therefore he could say, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things which I have commanded you," and then adding, "Lo! I am with you alway, even to the end of the world," age, or dispensation.

There are laws, and a government, in all his commandments. And are we not required to be loyal to his government in order to have his favor? Is not here a spiritual reign of Christ, in which he is doing all he can through his agents, ambassadors, and the instrumentality of his word through the Spirit, to gain the confidence of the rebels and make them sweetly submissive to his government? Thus his voice is heard all through this dispensation saying, "Come unto me, all ye that are weary; come and accept my will, laws, and regulations. and become in complete subjection to my laws by the spirit and power of grace, and this will give you a right to glory, life, and immortality in the kingdom of God at my coming." And so we have a spiritual reign of Christ till he delivers up the kingdom to God at the end of this dispensation.

I now come to the fifth verse, and I only wish to know what the Bible teaches. I will now premise that John in the fourth verse had his eye on the living church under the bloody persecution of the saints; he saw them beheaded, killed in the most inhuman manner, because they stood up for "the word of God and the witness of Jesus." His eye sees only the living church first. under their persecutions; thence to the end of the age, or till the Lord comes, but he has not recognized the sleeping saints till he says, "But the rest of the dead lived not again until the thousand years are finished," and the little season added. "This is the first resurrection." What is the first resurrection? When the rest of the dead live. This is the grammatical construction of the passage, and seems to be in keeping with the Revelator. His eye was first on the saints living, loyal, and reigning like those sainted sufferers who were asked to renounce their allegiance to the Lord Jesus Christ and his law, as in the case of Polycarp. Giving him a little time to weigh the matter, he answers: "Jesus Christ is my best friend. I have served him many years; he has always done me good, and no hurt. I'll be loyal to his government, and if need be give my body to be burned." He could say, "My life is secured, or hid with Christ in God; I shall get it when the rest of the dead live, in the first resurrection, at the Lord's coming." "The dead in Christ will rise first; then with the living will all be caught up together in the clouds to meet him in the air, and so be ever with the Lord. housed with shut doors till the indignation is overpast.

PORTSMOUTH.

L. K. LYDSTON.

The Lord is at work in Portsmouth, under the labors of Sr. Jane Benson. The church is on higher ground and in better working order than I have seen it for years. Our sister came with us two weeks ago to preach one Sabbath. The house was full, and hundreds went away. She has had meetings every evening for two weeks, and will continue the meetings every evening through the week and over the Sabbath, and as long as the Lord blesses her labors. The church has prayed the Lord to send some one to wake up the people. We thought that Brn. Grant, Stockman, or Couch must be the ones, but the Lord has sent a colored sister, and he has worked through her. Thank his name! Every evening there is one or more starts for the kingdom. The battle is going well. Pray for us.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

THE CRISIS GIVEN AWAY.

Bro. A. Andrews takes hold of this matter in good earnest (he sends one hundred and ten names as the result of his liberal offer thus far), as will be seen by an article published in the Bridgeport (Ct.) Standard of Dec. 1875. AG'T.

TO BE GIVEN AWAY.—I want one thousand persons in the vicinity of Bridgeport to read the World's Crisis, a large $2.25 weekly religious paper, published in Boston, Mass., by the Advent Christian Publication Society. Said paper advocates the personal coming of Christ to change the living saint to immortality, to raise all of the dead, burn up all of the wicked, and make a perfect end of them, which is the second death, dissolve this earth, according to 2d Peter, 3d chapter and 10th verse; create a new earth, as foretold in the 65th chapter and 17th verse of Isaiah and 21st chapter of Revelations, which new earth is to be the everlasting kingdom of God, in which the righteous will then, and not till then. shine forth as the sun forever, as in Matthew 13th, 43d verse.

The above paper will be furnished free of all expense, weekly, for three months, through the post-office, by the subscriber, to all who wish to read it, if they will only give him their address, or leave it at his office, 40 East Main street. The Howe men are most especially invited to leave their addresses.

I want the names so as to have the paper commence the first week in January, 1876.

LETTER FROM BRO. R. H. GOODE.

Editors Crisis:—As a subscriber to your excellent paper, I beg the use of its columns a short time, while I attempt to say a few words in behalf of a good man. In the fall of 1874, Eld. J. A. Cargile, of Stevenson, Ala., visited this place by request. He was a stranger to the most of us at the time, but his gentlemanly deportment and christian zeal soon won for him the confidence of the people. Bro. Cargile remained upon this occasion several weeks, holding meetings at various places during the time, and while here no one had aught to say against him or his preaching.

Ministers of the Christian and Baptist denominations took part in these meetings, and manifested a becoming willingness to further the cause of Christianity in the community; but the Methodist ministers held themselves aloof. Not so however with the lay members of the church, many of whom were earnest and attentive attendants upon Bro. C.'s preaching; and we trust when the Lord comes to make up his jewels, they may be found worthy to receive the welcome plaudit—"Well done, good and faithful servants; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.'

Upon the eve of starting for home, Bro. C. promised a number of friends that he would return the following spring or summer, and establish an Advent church if so desired; but owing to circumstances he did not arrive here until Nov. 21st. In the meantime the devil was not idle. Word had gone forth that Cargile was coming back to organize a church, and something must be done to thwart the church organization, to alienate the affections of the people from C—, and trample under foot the truth of which he is an able and devout advocate. The step taken to accomplish this purpose was well worthy the satanic genius of Lucifer himself, and had the foul plot succeeded, a good man's name would have been shrouded in obloquy, and his influence for good forever destroyed in this community.

Bro. C. had hardly reached home from his first visit to us, ere the evil tongues of persecution commenced the work of detraction. He was pronounced crazy, and stigmatized an infidel; accused of preaching the Advent faith for money; branded as a renegade in politics, and thrashed by the Red men of the moon. He was held up before the community as an expelled member from the Baptist and Presbyterian churches for want of christian conduct, and so obnoxious at home as to be unable to get an audience to hear him preach.

These and kindred misrepresentations emanated from a Methodist minister of Ala., and were promulgated by Methodist ministers here at home, whose aim was the downfall of Cargile, and the perpetuation of the immortality dogma upon the minds of our people.

As soon as Bro. C. learned of these reports he hastened here, and like a christian gentleman went to work to prove them false. This he did by certificates from Baptists, Presbyterians and Methodists living in and around Stevenson, and from the Probate Judge and Sheriff of the county, and nearly every business man in the town of Stevenson. He also wrote his accuser word to meet him here and substantiate his charges, or like a christian acknowledge his error; but he failed to put in an appearance.

How strange that men, professing to be followers of Jesus and ministers of his Word, should so far forget themselves as to become instrumental in circulating statements wanting even the shadow of accuracy. Cain slew Abel because sin had entered into him, and men backbite each other to-day because of iniquity in their hearts.

Bro. C. immersed four the day before leaving for home; three of them were Methodists. Others will be baptized when he comes again. May God bless and prosper his work in the ministry, and shield him from the tongues of the evil-disposed.

De View, Ark., Dec. 24th, 1875.

FROM BRO. C. ANGLE.

Dear Brethren:—Many acknowledge the goodness of God to them in the Crisis, and I would like to tell the dear brethren and sisters what he has done for me. My health is feeble, and my days here must be few; but while we are on the earth we must have food and raiment.

My wife has been sick for the last year, and our case looked very dark. But we cried mightily unto God that he would not wholly forsake us, and he heard and answered prayer. Christian friends in this place have kindly provided us food, and fourteen dollars worth of clothing.

To the poor brethren and sisters let me say—"Commit your way unto the Lord," trust in him; he will graciously supply your wants through the christian benevolence of his friends. And to them he will say, "I was an hungered and ye fed me; I was naked and ye clothed me."

There is still a handful of corn in Prairie Ville. There are a few whom God can arouse to administer to the necessities of his poor.

Prairie Ville, Mich.

We heartily commend such acts of christian benevolence, where charity can be bestowed upon those with whom you are acquainted, and know they are worthy of your sympathies in their privations and sufferings. We do not always know that this is the case when sending aid to strangers; but we commend this home charity to all, believing that if in all places it was carried out according to the gospel, there would be but few cases where general donations from strangers would be required.

Let the brethren and sisters in each place look carefully to this matter, and those of you who are not rich could often send a loaf of bread or a garment to helpless sufferers, and have the satisfaction of realizing that God will give you great interest for such investments, and richly reward you with an eternal inheritance in his glorious and soon-coming kingdom. J. C.

NEW BEDFORD CONFERENCE.

The new year has introduced itself among us in the delightful weather of October. Yesterday I was with the Second Advent church in New Bedford. They are seemingly in a good working condition. They are anticipating a large gathering of those of like precious faith at the Conference next week, and I hope they will not be disappointed. Come, brethren and sisters in all this region, make the sacrifice and rally to this meeting. The preachers also, let them come. They are hoping to have the blessed privilege of welcoming you to their hearts and homes. Let there be a full representation. L. BOUTELL.

PRAY FOR HIS RECOVERY.—Bro. C. Goud is very sick. Has been confined to his house now over three weeks with a lung trouble which threatens his life. This accounts for his not filling his appointments. Brethren and sisters, who have faith in God, pray that Bro. Goud may be restored to preach and minister counsel and comfort to the church of Christ a little longer. I. C. WELLCOME.

Topsham, Me., Dec. 30th, 1875.

ST. GEORGE, ME.—The Lord is at work in St. George, Me. I was there in November, and there were but two who loved the Advent faith, and now there is a church of nine members. I baptized six in November and one in December, and there are others who ought to go forward, and will perhaps soon. Pray for the little church in St. George. H. S. MITCHELL.

Bowdoinham, Me., Jan. 1st.

CORRECTION.—The address of the Secretary of the "Beebe Plain Advent Campmeeting Association," Bro. L. C. McKinstry, is Richmond, P. Q., and of the Treasurer, Bro. C. L. Percival, is Massawippi, P. Q., instead of Marsawiffic, as published recently in the Crisis. J. C.

Obituaries.

HOLBROOK. At Worcester, Mass., Dec. 25th, 1875, of cancer, Roxy R., wife of Micah Holbrook, aged seventy-six years.

Having just returned from my mother's funeral, and knowing she was a constant reader of your excellent paper, and a firm believer in its teachings, I write to inform you of her death, which occurred on Christmas afternoon. Summoned by telegram, I hastened to the next train, and arrived in time to receive one more kind welcome; for she was conscious to the last, and knew she was going. As I sat watching beside her, she opened her eyes and said, "This is a blessed relief." Seeing her breathe fainter, I raised her on arm, and she peacefully fell asleep in Jesus.

She had been a good mother, ever watching over me with tender love, speaking words of comfort in times of adversity and misfortune, encouraging me with hopes of better days, and making life's burdens easier to bear, by the expression of her ever cheerful, ever hopeful belief that all things work together for good to those who put their trust in the Lord. She suffered intense pain during the last years of her life, but bore her sufferings with uncommon patience and resignation, sustained by an unfaltering faith and trust in her heavenly Father, and the hope of soon being relieved from pain, and entering that rest that remaineth for the people of God.

As we advance in years the less attractive does this world appear. Its disappointments, trials and sorrows are so intermingled with every-day life, that there is no permanent enjoyment, or freedom from care, pain, sickness, sin and sorrow, except for a few brief days, which may soon be followed by experiences more unpleasant than were those of former years. And yet, amidst the many vicissitudes and tribulations of this deceitful world, we see occasionally, here and there, bright examples of christian character, resignation, and patient endurance under the most severe afflictions—characters that shine out like the stars in the heavens, shedding a mild, calm and peaceful influence on all who behold them. Such was my good, kind, loving mother.

She was a most earnest, active member of the Advent church, many of whom gathered at her funeral, to take the last look of one whose voice they had so often heard in their meetings. A quartette of singers from their society sang most beautifully the hymn commencing—

"How blest the righteous when he dies"; and at the close of the solemn services, the very appropriate lines—

"Sleep on, beloved, and take thy rest.
Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast;
We love thee well, but Jesus loves thee best.
Farewell, Farewell.

Until the Easter glory lights the skies!
Until the dead in Jesus shall arise,
And He shall come, but not in lowly guise,
Farewell, Farewell.

Until made beautiful by love divine,
Thou in the likeness of thy Lord shalt shine,
And He shall bring that golden crown of thine,
Farewell, Farewell.

CHARLES W. HOLBROOK, Boston.

LEAVENWORTH. In Roxbury, Ct., Dec. 15th, 1875, Theodore W. Leavenworth, aged thirty-two years.

Some of our readers will remember a request in the Crisis of Dec. 8th, written by him, that the brethren and sisters should pray for his recovery. He desired life, but God had wisely ordered otherwise. He suffered much, but patiently. He felt that his affliction was not entirely for himself, but for his family as well. I asked him if, in his death God could be glorified and a reformation be the result, he would be willing to die? He was so anxious to see it himself that he felt he was not. My husband prayed with him, and he joined. Such earnest pleadings from a sick bed I never heard, and God gave him the desire of his heart; and before he died he had the privilege of hearing his father, mother and sister, call on the name of the Lord.

He received several letters from the dear ones in reply to his in the Crisis. He said, "I am not able to answer, but if you feel as if you could, I would like to have you." I trust this will answer the same purpose.

As the closing hour drew near his eyes became so dim he could not see, and he desired his friends to come near, that he might take each by the hand and print the last kiss of affection upon their cheek. Then saying, "Any more—come quick!" he died without a struggle. May God's Spirit abide with the family, they live a consistent life, and be ready, when Jesus comes, to meet the son and brother where death can never come.

S. E. TEEPLE.

PLACE. At Woodstock Valley, Ct., Nov. 27th, 1875, Bro. Geo. H. Place, aged twenty-eight years.

Bro. Place was converted nearly two years ago, and with his companion, united with the Advent Christian church in this place, of which he was a most worthy member at the time of his death. The death of one so young and capable falls heavily upon his dear companion and little ones, and upon the church and community. But we are consoled with the thought that our loss is his gain, for he is taken away from the time of trouble that is just before us. He rests in hope of a blissful immortality when Jesus, the great Lifegiver, comes. He leaves a wife, two little boys, and a large circle of friends to mourn.

"He sleeps, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

Words of comfort were spoken at his funeral by the writer, from Num. 23: 10. P. S. BUTLER.

DAVIS. In West Medway, Mass., July 22d, 1875, Mrs. Clarissa H. Davis, wife of Aaron Davis, aged eighty years.

Mother Davis was converted and united with the Methodist church in Natick in 1842. She was not always saying "Lord, Lord," but was a doer of his will. Her christian life was unquestionable. We shall not forget her many kind words and deeds.

Our sainted mother sleeps in Jesus,
All her cares and trials o'er;
In the glorious restitution
We shall meet to part no more.

Zion's Herald, please copy. J. BATES, JR.

BOLLES. In Brooklyn, Ct., Dec. 10th, 1875, Mrs. Alice Bolles, aged sixty-six years.

Mrs. Bolles was an exemplary christian, and a member of the Baptist church forty years. A sermon was preached by Eld. Terry on the occasion of her funeral, from Rev. 22: 5. May we meet her on the bright and happy shore of the world to come.

"In that bright world no tears will flow,
Death ne'er can enter there,
For all who gain that heavenly land
Will be as angels are."

M. W. ARNOLD.

BENNETT. In Abington, Ct., Nov. 30th, 1875, Mrs. Lydia Bennett, aged seventy-two years.

The funeral services were attended by Mr. Montgomery, Congregationalist. Text, Psalms 88: 18. We laid her away to wait the resurrection morn, when we hope to meet her in the deathless land. M. W. ARNOLD.

FOREIGN NEWS.

HAVANA, Dec. 20. There was an earthquake in Porto Rico on the night of December 8th and 9th, and the town of Arecibo was almost entirely destroyed. Of the churches only six remain, and they are so badly damaged that they may fall at any moment.

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 27. News has been received here of a dreadful calamity which occurred in the little village of Helikon in the Canton of Aargan, on Saturday. Christmas festivities were being celebrated in a school house, when the flooring gave way. Eighty persons were killed, and fifty more or less wounded.

MADRID, Dec 28. Intelligence from the Philippine Islands gives details of a dreadful hurricane there the 30th of last month. The storm was particularly severe in the provinces of Albay and Camarines, which form the southeastern part of the Island of Luzon. Two hundred and fifty lives were lost, and 3800 dwellings destroyed. Many cattle perished, and the crops in all directions were ruined.

BERLIN, Dec. 29. Austria's project for the pacification of the Turkish provinces, recently drawn up by Count Andrassy, the Prime Minister, has not yet been sent to the great powers for some reason unknown.

It is reported that while an agreement has been made with regard to the control the treaty powers should have, negotiations are pending between Austria and Russia as to what manner it should be exercised.

RUSSIA.

It is stated that the Russian Government is engaged in a fresh raid against Socialist agitators. Arrests have been effected in numerous places, among others at Moscow, Tula, Odessa, Riazin, and St. Petersburg. In one village alone, near Moscow, thirty working men have been seized by the police. Some of the prisoners attempted resistance. One, named Rogatcheff, and believed to be one of the principal leaders of the Socialist movement, defended himself so desperately that he had to be killed.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Dec. 27. A Hamilton, Bermuda, letter of the 22d inst. states that a fearful tornado passed over Tuckertown and St. David's Island on the evening of the 17th inst. The dwelling house of David A. Smith, a well-known pilot in Tuckertown, was blown into the harbor with all its inmates. Capt. Smith was hurled into a clump of trees and saved. His wife was carried across the harbor, where she was found clinging to a plank. She died in a few hours. Their four children were drowned. The wall and roof of a stone tank near the house were torn asunder. Several other buildings were demolished, but there was no further loss of life. Half of the boats moored in the harbor were destroyed, and on St. David's Island the storm leveled every thing. The tornado passed by Hamilton.

THERE was a $55,000 fire at Northampton, Ms., last week.

Notice---Baptism, or Rantism.

Orders for this work are coming in, but in order to ensure its publication, it will be necessary that they pour in sufficiently to warrant the cost of publishing an edition without loss, which cannot be afforded. The work will be of interest, I trust, as old ground will be re-explored in a manner to bring out all the truth we can discover, and new ground not yet much explored will be dug over for the sake of discovering the whole truth. It is as yet but little known what Rantism is, or what its relation is to Baptism, if any, and specially to the great atonement. Let all who would like the work, and will be willing to encourage its publication, send on their orders by postal card to me, to RICHMOND, PROV. QUE., CANADA. The work will be afforded as cheaply as possible. Please send on your orders, brethren and sisters. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen. THE CITY OF GOLD.

"And the city was pure gold."—Rev. 21: 18.

I love ofttimes to sit and dream
Of this fair world of ours;
Its golden light and evening shade,
Its birds, and fruits, and flowers;
Its glittering dews and mumruring rills,
Its shadowy vales and sun-clad hills.

I know there's beauty all around,
And Eden-like 'twould be,
Had sin not laid its withering hand
On every thing we see.
With rapture then that world I behold,
Where sin has not entered—the city of gold.

With walls of jasper, gates of pearls,
Foundations strong and sure;
'Mid wreck of matter, crash of worlds,
'Twill evermore endure.
The skill of its Architect can ne'er be told,
But it flames with his glory—that city of gold.

No night is there, but endless day;
No care, or pain, or strife;
The weary ones of earth find rest
By the side of the river of life.
Our loved and lost ones again we'll behold
In the home of the ransomed—the city of gold.

They hunger, thirst, and weep no more,
All tears are wiped away,
While everlasting joy is theirs
Through an eternal day;
And the light of that city, the Lamb, they behold,
Who walks 'mid the saints in the city of gold.

The good, the faithful, and the pure,
From every clime will come;
While angels bright, in robes of light,
Will bid them "welcome home";
And the song of redemption, which never grows old,
They will sing as they roam through the city of gold.

Then what are all earth's cares and woes,
Its flattering smile, or frown?
These all will be exchanged ere long,
For robe, and palm, and crown;
And a home in that land of rare beauty untold,
The home of the angels—the city of gold.

The music of that sinless land
Will then by us be heard;
And with its gushing melody
Our bounding hearts be stirred.
While the years of eternity will still unfold
The treasures so vast of the city of gold.

A VISION.

J. R. COOPER.

I would recall a vision which I dream'd,
Perchance in sleep—for in itself a thought,
A slumbering thought, is capable of years,
And curdles a long life into one hour.—Byron.

"And it shall come to pass in the last days, saith God, I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophecy, and your young men shall see visions, and your old men shall dream dreams."—Acts 2: 17.

I had just sat down, with Bible in hand, after a hard day's work, shortly after a late tea, to enjoy myself for a few moments in reading the Word of life, when, on opening the book, my eyes rested upon these words: "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Rev. 22: 12. I involuntarily closed the book, and, leaning back in the rocking chair, closed my eyes, to contemplate these thrilling words. Soon I was in a semi-unconscious state, when suddenly the room was filled with a bright light, and I sprang to the door to ascertain the cause; and, behold, a bright cloud, above the brightness of the full moon, was seen directly in the east, and written, in a semi-circle, in the midst of the cloud, were these words: "The time is fulfilled." "The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." Rev. 11: 15.

In a moment the street was thronged with people, and the housetops and windows presented a living mass. And while the people gazed in astonishment at the wonderful sight, a voice from heaven said, "This is the sign of the Son of man."

After gazing upon the strange scene for a few moments, the bright cloud disappeared, and the earth was left in total darkness. I stood looking in the direction in which this sign had appeared, a moment, saying in my heart, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly;" and was about turning around to go into the house, when an angel, as it were, touched me and said: "Come with me." I was immediately taken up bodily, and carried swiftly to a large mansion brilliantly illuminated and filled with people decked in the height of fashion. My companion beckoned me to follow him. As we entered the splendidly furnished parlor my attention was attracted to a bride and bridegroom receiving the congratulations of their friends.

"I wish you much joy and a long life," said one of the bride's companions.

"How can that be," she answered, with a sad countenance, "when Jesus is coming to-morrow? O the joy and pleasure I have been anticipating in the future is all blighted, for the heavenly Bridegroom is coming and I am not prepared to meet him. I am also one of those who are fulfilling the Lord's words when he said: 'For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.' Had I watched and prayed for the coming of Jesus as I have watched and longed for the coming of my own dear bridegroom, I could have met the Lord with joy and not with grief."

I was suddenly taken from here to a lonely cottage, nestled among a clump of trees on a river bank. Here lived a miser.

As we softly enter we find him seated at a table with his bags of gold before him, counting over the bright pieces, one by one. Hark! he speaks. "Jesus coming to-morrow? Oh! how sudden! And my gold I have been treasuring up for years to be destroyed. I will give one-third, yes, one-half of all my gold if he will not come in years. What good is all my gold now? How I have denied myself of everything that I might hoard up gold, and now I find it all to no purpose."

My companion answered: "Wisdom cannot be gotten for gold. It cannot be valued with the gold of Ophir. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom, and to depart from evil is understanding." "Riches profit not in the day of wrath; but righteousness delivereth from death." "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

So intent had he been on counting his gold, he had not noticed our entrance, and at these words we left him in mute astonishment.

Again I am transported to another scene. In a large tenement house, up several flights of stairs, we enter unobserved a dingy room. Upon a bed in one corner lies a poor emaciated woman, with the brittle thread of life nearly broken; and by her side are three children famishing with hunger.

"Ma, George will never come, and we shall starve," said a fair-haired boy. Hark! a footstep is heard upon the stairs, and here comes George, the eldest son, only twelve years of age.

"Mother, I have toiled hard all day, and have only been able to get one loaf of bread for you all," said the noble boy, with a disheartened look.

"No matter, my son," said the mother, "that will suffice, for to-morrow Jesus is coming, and will give us eternal life. Then these perishing bodies will be made like unto his most glorious body; then we shall hunger and thirst no more, and there shall be no more sickness or death. Glory to God! Welcome, blessed Savior, welcome!"

Once more the scene changes, and we enter an elegantly furnishsd room on Wall Street. Gathered around a table sumptuously furnished with the fat of the land, are seated the leading stock-brokers of the country, who have been holding a private council, and devising a grand scheme for adding thousands of dollars to their already over-filled purses. But in the midst of their meeting, they beheld the sign, and consternation reigns in their midst.

"What, Jesus coming to-morrow," says a grey-haired man who is worth millions. "What does it mean? Why, I have been a regular attendant at our church every Sunday for years, and never heard of such a thing as Christ's coming, personally. I have never found time to search the Scriptures much, but left these matters in our pastor's hands, and he never gave us any such instructions. What is to become of the great scheme we have just devised to make thousands of dollars to-morrow? What is to become of the millions I already have? What is to become of all of us, gentlemen?"

"Sir," said a shrewd business man, "we have played our part well, in this life's drama, as the world goes; but we are foiled at last. Satan has a claim on us. Our riches, our schemes, our all, is lost!"

"Gentlemen," said a hard-fisted broker, "this news is awful! Gold is at a discount! We are a doomed company! Had I spent one-fourth the zeal in serving God I have in serving mammon, this news would cheer instead of chilling me to the heart. It is terrible news. All, all is lost!"

My companion said in a deep, solemn voice: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days. Behold, the hire of your laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth: and the cries of them which have reaped are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton; ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter." "But woe unto you that are rich! for you have received your consolation." James 5: 1-5. Luke 6: 24.

Again we enter an "upper room," and here are gathered together a "little flock," who have been long waiting for the morning. They have been watching, and have seen the "signs," and are praising God. We listen a moment, and an old "pilgrim and stranger" rises up and says: "Brethren and sisters, the morning is about to dawn. Glory be to God! He who is our life is about to appear, and we shall be like him. Long years we have waited, and watched, and prayed, and loved his appearing, and now we can look up with confidence and exclaim—'Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation.'" Is. 25: 9.

An aged mother in Israel, who has laid to rest in Jesus a husband and several children, arose and said: "Jesus said, 'I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live: and whosoever liveth and believeth in me shall never die.' The dear ones who sleep in Jesus are coming forth. To-morrow our hope will be consummated; to-morrow the Life-giver will come—sickness, sorrow and death shall flee away; the curse will be removed; the meek shall inherit the earth; the knowledge of the Lord shall fill the earth as the waters cover the sea. Glorious day! for thee we have sighed, and groaned, and prayed. Come, Lord Jesus, come!"

Beloved reader, are you prepared to meet him now? Would you be glad to see the blessed Lord of life and glory to-day? If you would not, your heart is not right before God. May you trust in his blood to save you, is my prayer. Amen.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 1875.

PROPHETS AND ANGELS INTERESTED.

L. A. WHEELER.

"Which things the angels desired to look into."—1 Peter 1: 12.

What things? Grace, salvation, and time. Hear the apostle—"Of which salvation the prophets have inquired and searched diligently, who prophesied of the grace that should come unto you; searching what or what nanner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ and the glory that should follow; unto whom it was revealed that not unto themselves, but unto us they did minister the things which are now reported unto you by them which have preached the gospel unto you with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven. Which things the angels desired to look into." Unto those prophets it was revealed that not unto themselves, but unto others they ministered, when they foretold future events, yet they searched diligently to get an understanding of the grace that would be given to God's dear children under the then future dispensation. This they saw in Christ, the Holy Spirit being given to every saint.

In their time none but a favored few had ever felt the "powers of the world to come." But they had had enough to make them want to know more; for in it they saw a new era for the church. They were carried down still farther, and saw more glory, and a full and eternal salvation; and there they themselves were going to be recipients; not at death, but "at the revelation of Jesus Christ." V. 13.

Both of these then future events could not take place until the appointed time should arrive. This was just as much a matter of interest with them as was the events themselves.

But these prophets were not alone in their time in feeling interested about these things. When we see the indifference of so many that are struggling, weeping, sickening, dying, in regard to the "manner of time" of these events, our hearts are comforted to learn that those angels, who never felt a pang or dropped a tear, "desired to look into these things," and must certainly be in sympathy with all others who have the same desire.

I would much rather have the heavenly hosts on my side, even if it does place me among the minority of my fallen companions.

We read, too, that Christ has "sat down at the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting, till his enemies be made his footstool." Heb. 10: 13. By this we see that Christ is in a state of expectation, waiting for a specified time and event to arrive. Can he be pleased with indifference on the part of those who of all others are most concerned? No, never.

Plainfield, Mass, Dec. 5th, 1875.

BEARING ALL FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

MRS. V. D.

Dark is our sorrow when the heart is oppressed,
Bearing the burdens of wrongs unredressed;
Not daring to murmur when reviled and unblessed,
Seeking for strength and longing for rest,—
'Tis the trial of faith, bearing all for Christ's sake.

How long must we walk in life's shadowy night,
In a pathway where thorns are scattered and spread,
Lonely and watching for the glimmering of light,
And wondering at times that poor aching sight
Can scarcely discern the narrow way to be trod?

We toil in good faith, when sudden a blow
Trails our bright hopes in the dust below,
Leaving us stunned and stricken in woe,
With none save our God, who ever will know
How deep is the wound, how deadly the thrust.

Oh! heavy the cross, the trials how great,
How tired the feet, all brambled and torn;
Each step that we take seems the ending of fate,
When at the feet of the Savior our burdens we've laid,
Sweetly resting in Him who our sorrows have borne.

Dear Jesus doth know how to cheer and sustain,
In mercy and love he intercedes on his throne;
Not one of the least shall seek him in vain,
When stung by injustice and bitter the pain,
For he is our strength and refuge alone.

Though years of life may be holden with care,
And rugged the road to the golden stair,
Angels keep watch while we "pass under the rod,"
Noting the trials and reproaches we bear,
Tracing the tears before our Father in prayer.

DO YOU LOVE YOUR BIBLE?

Reader, love to the word of God is one great mark of a true christian. Give me leave to ask whether you know anything of this love? Is the Bible sweet and refreshing to your soul? Do you love your Bible?

There never was a man or woman converted, from one end of the world to the other, who did not love the revealed will of God. Just as a child born into the world desires naturally the milk provided for its nourishment, even so does a soul that is born again desire the sincere milk of the word.

Show me a person who despises Bible reading, or thinks little of Bible preaching, and I hold it to be a certain fact that he is not born again. He may be zealous about forms and ceremonies. He may be diligent in attending sacraments and daily services. But if these are more precious to him than the Bible, I cannot think he is a converted man.

Tell me what the Bible is to man, and I will generally tell you what he is. I have no notion of the Spirit dwelling in a man, and not giving clear evidence of his presence. And I believe it to be a signal evidence of the Spirit's presence, when the word is really precious to a man's soul.

Reader, what is the Bible to you? Is it your guide, your counsellor, your friend? Is it your rule of faith and practice? Is it your measure of truth and error, of right and wrong? It ought to be so. It was given for this purpose. If it is not, do you really love your Bible?—N. Y. Witness.

PERFECTING HOLINESS.

"Having therefore these promises dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." 2 Cor. 7: 1. Corinth was a wicked and luxurious city, and given to all manner of uncleanness; and when the gospel was planted there, the converts fell into all manner of sins; as Paul's letters plainly show; but in the preceding chapter they were reminded that their bodies were the temples of the living God, and that God said he would dwell in them, and walk in them, and be their God, and they should be his people. Therefore they were to come out from among sinners and be separate, and touch not the unclean thing, and God would receive them and be a Father unto them, and they should be his sons and daughters. On these mighty facts the Scripture is based, "Having therefore these promises dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

I. From all filthiness of the flesh. The Greek word sarkos, translated "flesh," means the human body, which the Jews supposed was the seat and occasion of moral imperfections, as inducing men to sin through the influence of the passions and appetites; that is, the proneness to sin which we find in our corporeal natures, which in our natural state would incline us to all uncleanness. Now we are to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh, that is, by the aid of divine grace, we are to have all the appetites and propensities of the body under the sweet control of reason and revelation. This implies:

1. Temperance in eating and drinking. That we shall eat such qualities and such quantities of food, as shall be for the health and purity of the body. Is not this the point where many good people are tempted, and where they fail and fall? They take on more fuel than their sanctified natures will bear, and so they excite unholy passions and desires, and bring themselves into condemnation. To cleanse myself then of all filthiness of the flesh demands that I should abstain from that kind and quantity of food which would stir up my nature to sin, and expose myself to the temptation of the devil. "Put a knife to thy throat if thou be a man given to appetite." Prov. 23: 2.

2. It requires that I fast once or twice a week to chasten my body and bring it into subjection, that I may have a perfect self-control. This has been the custom of the eminently pious in all ages. They have found it not only a duty but a privilege to deny the body, that they may hold it in their constant control. Witness Fletcher, Bramwell, Esterman, Rogers, Carvosso, etc. This practice of fasting is becoming almost obsolete, and it is time we were called to remember that it is put on the same basis in the sermon on the mount, as prayer. "But thou when thou prayest enter into thy closet." "But thou, when thou fastest wash thy feet and anoint thine head," implying that his disciples would fast as well as pray, and he only tells them how to do these duties acceptably. Think on these things.

3. It implies that I abstain from all those looks, desires, and acts which tend toward filthiness of the flesh. This forbids all such diversions as the theatre and the ball-room.

II. We are to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the spirit. The word translated spirit, here means the rational soul. The seat of the affections, thoughts, dispositions, and volitions. Hence we are to cleanse ourselves from all uncleanness of thought, imagination, affection, desire, motive or purpose. From anger, malice, pride, wrath, emulations, seditions, heresies, and love of the world. Now, to cleanse ourselves from these, is not only to deny ourselves of the indulgence in them when the temptation arises; it is also to seek an application of the blood of Jesus Christ that cleanses from all sin, even inbred sin. We can be clean; this wonderful purity is within our reach. We may cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, as we set our souls fully against them and call upon God to cleanse the thoughts of our hearts by the inspiration of his Holy Spirit.

III. "Perfecting holiness." Having all the mind of Christ in us, we see where we failed to fulfil the perfect law of liberty, where we come short again and again, but now having made thorough work in cleansing ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, we have a realization of positive purity, which has taken the place of all filthiness. And now our duty is our delight, and still we must perfect this holiness by carrying it to its height in all its branches. This is the glorious end of the gospel.

IV. All this must be done in the fear of God. In that spirit of holy reverence and adoration which is the foundation of all true piety. Setting the fear of God before our eyes, and constantly adoring him, and sweetly submitting to his will in a loving filial fear.

Mark how tenderly the apostle exhorts them to this glorious privilege, "Dearly beloved," as though he said, "Ye, dearly beloved," children of your Father, come with me and let us cleanse ourselves. Oh, how affectionate the gospel makes men—and how precious in the sight of God are all his children.

REFLECTIONS.

1. This text directly teaches us our exalted privilege. Glory to God, we may fully cleanse ourselves, and then enjoy perfect holiness.

2. How infinitely the gospel excels all human systems of philosophy. How vain are the teachings of Socrates, of Plato, of Kant, Feichte, Schiller or Hegel, of Carlyle or Emerson. They may entertain the head, but they can never satisfy or cleanse the heart.

3. The measure of the privilege is the measure of the responsibility. If I may cleanse myself from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, and perfect holiness in the fear of God, then I am in duty bound to do it, and am guilty if I neglect it.—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

AN APPEAL TO THE UNGODLY.

M. A. TIFFANY.

The days and weeks march on, and soon a new year will dawn on this strange world, and what great and wonderful events are slumbering in its bosom the Father only knoweth. Now the earth looks to us the same as ever, and the people around us continue in their varied condition, to develop their evil natures, and to pervert that which is pure and innocent; and as they heedlessly hurry through life, they lose sight of the true and the good, till, blinded and despairing, they curse God and existence, and die; never dreaming that there are loving arms stretched out to them, that there is a tender, true heart loving them, pitying them, and yearning to save them from the direful effects of a curse pronounced upon them; that in the dark, tumultuous storm there is behind the cloud a voice capable of saying to the raging elements—"Peace, be still." Or, if they have heard of such an one, it is but an idle tale in their ears, and unbelief hardens them.

O, there is a Father over all, there is a Savior, Christ the Lord, the only begotten Son of the Father; there is also the Holy Spirit, the Comforter, and if it were not for their long-suffering compassion, mankind would, ere this, be banished from existence; and the ungodly who have discarded their only friend, and despised his only Son, would not have the gracious opportunities to repent and believe, that are still offered them.

But, will God's Spirit always strive with man? Ah, no! Only think!—not always! Then mortal man, perhaps even now the door is closing that has been ajar for you so long. Perhaps soon you will call without, and Mercy will answer—"Too late." Angels may weep at the sound of those sad words, but the time of your salvation will have passed, and your fate will be forever sealed. You may then believe what has been said about your Lord, and cry, with agony, for him to let you in; but darkly upon your soul will come back the answer —"Too late—Too late,—Ye cannot enter in."

It is the saddest, most solemn thought that can come to you, that you stand on the threshold, and now may pass over; but perhaps cannot if you wait a moment longer.

Take hold of the hand outstretched to you now; look up to the Divine face bending over you, and give to him your life, however long or short it may be. Is it too much to give Him who has given so much for thee? Break now the iron fetters of the world, the flesh, the devil, and cast the past behind you, and now commence the new life stretching far away into eternity. Accept this priceless gift of immortality; for what glorious mysteries it will unfold for you and me, are past imagining.

God's work on earth is almost finished, and soon he will appear in the clouds of heaven to execute judgment upon the ungodly, and to gather his true children to their long sought rest.

What will you do in that day if you do not fly to him now? Where will you hide from the deluge of destruction that shall sweep over a fallen world?

God pity you; and help you now to see how foolish it is to delay a moment. We who now cling to his loving heart shall in that day be delivered from its terrors. But who shall spare you then, if, having rejected and despised this most Holy One, you come to the judgment day with your sins upon you, and darkness in your soul?

Father, Savior, Friend! All three sweet, true words, applicable to this one whom you neglect. O, what love, what wondrous love has been made manifest to us in that "God gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

IMPORTUNATE PRAYER.

C. COLEGROVE.

To all saints, beloved, and waiting:—All things come from the Father, through the Son. Infinite good is lodged in him, and of him we implore those precious blessings, without which all creatures are unspeakably poor. It is the sense of poverty, constant and oppressive, that impels to earnest prayer. Now, concerning prayer, the first element of prayer felt, is necessity, the second, faith. What is mere routine in the presence of such forces? How many are grievously oppressed in one way or another, and oppression is the mother of outcries. How many suffer from ill health, from hard labor, from want of genial companionship, from disappointment, from conscious imperfection, from fear of death, from temptation, from hope deferred, or some other, it may be, unspoken or unknown bitterness. And in such a case, we find a parentage of supplication which is never known, or offered, or uttered in prosperity, and moods of good feeling merely. Take the parable of the widow and unjust judge. It was the oppression or outrage of the adversary that wrung the woman's heart, and drove her to a tribunal or judgment seat of power, for redress. And like her, thousands are suffering some affliction. Hence there are secret suppliants who are crying to God day and night, and the Lord is pleased to call them his elect.

None but God knows the importunity, the pathos, the energy, the ascending, penetrating utterance of their prayers. None but God can know. For if I am not much mistaken, these wailing and impassioned cries sensitively prefer secresy and seclusion from human audience, seeing that another's presence may impair their fullest effect, by interrupting their concentration, or invading their sacredness.

None but God, I say—and he does know—he knows all, and this is the greater comfort. A routine of prayer may have some value, but what is it in comparison with the yearning, groaning, pleading, begging, crying, persistent, agonizing struggle of prayer that has the whole burden of its transaction with God only, through his Son Jesus? This praying employs all the means it can utilize or command. It seizes every consideration, it engages all logic, it uses every force of appeal. Not that God does not hear the smallest cry. But a little cry does not satisfy the petitioner. This will not ease his great burden. It will not satisfy his peculiar and indescribable want. The message is of such a magnitude, the exigency is of such a weight and greatness, no mere common or somewhat special earnestness will answer. It is a case of life and death. It is a question and burden of the gravest importance, and of a pathetic pressure of necessity. On his knees by the bedside, and with his face half buried in the pillow, perhaps,—there, the furnace-like intensity of his deep want and fervent asking is witnessed by the God of gods, heard, known, measured, understood, and attended to. The argument of Calvary is used, the argument of blood, of pain, of preciousness in Christ, the argument of God's own pity, of God's great plan, his greatness, his promise, his infinitude, his ability, every thing known and conceivable.

Well, now then, why? Why, if the issue can be described, if the crisis can be computed, if the exigency can be measured, and the interests involved explained, then the urgency of the prayer can be explained. But description is not quite so easy. The majesty of God is in this burden, his glory, the burden of his vast enterprise, with the coming of Jesus to inaugurate deliverance, and every difficulty in the way of the execution of a plan involving indescribably vast interests,—ah, these are the things to be sought. The whole is in some way connected with the deep want, which never, never can be satisfied while creation groans with hope deferred. In some sense such a praying saint represents the burdened kosmos, and pleads through the High Priest, Jesus, for the judgment to be executed which shall be one and the same with the saints' redemption. Or he pleads, as no tongue can tell, for his own redemption, help, health, happiness, rest, and all those precious things, in the way of whose realization, an adversary is interposed.

Here is a field for God's hand, the opportunity for his intervention. His hand is uplifted, the arm divine is poised, but not yet, not quite yet. God hears, but yet delays, an hour, a moment—from moment to moment, and the praying goes on, goes on! Be not weary, oh, imploring suppliant, for Jesus said—"shall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them?"

Secret prayer is thus seen to be in some aspect, very different from ordinary social or public prayer. Some will say, is not gratitude and joy inherent in the saints' petition? If so, why then cries of urgency and protestations of unspeakable want? I reply by asking, what does the parable of the widow's woe and appeal signify? What kind of praying among christians does it prefigure and illustrate? Does any one doubt that it relates to the time of Jesus' second coming? If this is the reference, then it must apply to the present time, or to a period yet future, when greater woes and heavier burdens of prayer will be laid on some portion of God's people. This is all the answer that is necessary.

Whenever we find religion an easy thing, we may be well assured that it is not the religion of Jesus Christ. That has always been a hard thing; a hateful thing, to the nature which it dooms to daily denial and crucifixion. Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way in which it leads, and few there be that walk therein.

LEAVES ONLY.

Flowers are not fruit. They look well, and excite pleasing expectations which are not always realized. At the time when the harvest should be gathered, leaves only are found. We like to hear good resolutions expressed. They are encouraging. They show that God is at work. Good desires are begotten by the Spirit. But to reap from them the benefit intended, we must carry them out. It should stimulate us to action to remember, that the same God who worketh in us to will, worketh in us to do of his good pleasure.

Make the effort to stretch forth the withered arm, and it will acquire strength. Do not wait for a better opportunity. A strong beginning is often half the battle. When Satan sees that a soul is resolutely in earnest, he does not give him half the trouble that he does when he is faint-hearted and irresolute. You must act, as well as purpose. You must do as well as say, or even your good desires will leave you. A christian should bear fruit—ripe, precious fruit, every day of his life.—Ex.

LINES.

J. BATES, JR.

My Lord, this moment let me come
To thee, the living head;
O wash me in thy cleansing blood,
And bring to life the dead.

In trespasses and sin I lie,
Covered with guilt and shame;
Condemned to die the second death,
O save, in Jesus' name.

Thy word can speak me into life,
Thy power is infinite;
Thy blood can cleanse from every stain,
I ask for truth and light.

Lord, unto thee I give myself;
Accept the sacrifice;
Apply the blood, the cleansing give,
The life that never dies.

Now all is thine; no more I claim
Aught that I have or own;
Purchased and saved with Jesus' blood,
All glory to the Lamb.

Natick, Dec. 29th, 1875.

"From Glory unto Glory."—A certain person, who was very changeable, went to a good old lady and asked her if she did not change sometimes.

"Yes," was the old saint's reply.

"Well, I thought you did," said the other, "for I suppose everybody does sometimes; occasionally they are up, and then down again."

To which the old lady said, "Ah, but that is not the way I change, my friend. Thank God! I change from glory unto glory."

It would be a grand thing if more professors of religion would change in the same way.

HOME AND HEALTH.

COLOR OF COMPLEXION.

In color we find important indications of disease. A really healthy color is clear and bright, not red, not necessarily florid, but clear and transparent, the pride of those few people who possess it. Any departure from this standard is an indication of ill-health.

The muddy complexion is the most frequently found. It has an indescribable hue; looks dirty and greasy, and indicates just such a condition of the blood and tissues. It exists in countless numbers of cases where the parties are in their usual health, or rather ill-health. It is not in itself a serious symptom, and is easily removed. It indicates usually a congested liver, with a torpid skin. If the scherotic of the eye is of a yellowish tinge, the liver is largely at fault; if the complexion is of a brownish hue, stomach and bowels, and perhaps kidneys, are involved.

But the disease is general, rather than local. It is essentially one of impurity. The blood and tissues have become foul because of failure in the actions of the organs of excretions, and they must become purified by restoring this action. This can only be done by building them up, by strengthening (not simply stimulating) them. Develop the lungs, bathe and manipulate the skin, knead and percuss the bowels and liver; eat only good food, drink only pure water, breathe only pure air, and wait on nature. When nutrition is improved, it is wonderful how readily the complexion clears out, and bright eye, clear skin, active mind, and hopeful expression take the place of dullness, gloom, and hypo.

Under hygienic treatment the complexion is usually the first indication to the physician of improvement. The change has been so complete in a short time, that some of our young women have been accused of painting. The clear complexion and rosy, well-filled cheeks were such a contrast to the previously sallow features, that art was supposed to intervene.

The pale complexion always indicates debility. It shows a poor circulation in the surface, and hence poor nutrition. It is not necessarily a serious symptom of disease; for it is found in many persons who do not claim to be invalids.

The pale but clear complexion belongs to persons who are slightly debilitated, because of indoor or sedentary habits, but who are not actually diseased. What they need to restore strength and vigor is chiefly out-door exercise.

The bluish pale complexion belongs often to consumptives, and is not an encouraging symptom when connected with cough, emaciations, expectoration, etc.

The yellowish pale complexion indicates primarily a torpid liver; but dropsy, kidney disease, dyspepsia, consumption, or the like may be connected with it.

The treatment in such cases must be as broad and comprehensive as the disease is general. And it should be treatment of the patient and not simply treatment of the disease. The constitution is to be built up, nutrition increased, circulation improved, strength evolved. This done, the patient is well and all his symptoms have disappeared. A cathartic to move the bowels, a tonic to steady the nerves, are destructive rather than otherwise; baths are not sufficient in and of themselves; diet alone will not answer; exercise is excellent, but it may be taken so as to be injurious. The true plan is to employ all health agencies, such as breathing, drinking, eating, exercising, sleeping, resting, social influences, etc., in a combination suitable to each case, and trust life and health to nature—the vis medicatrix naturæ. Nature must supply the force, the remedial powers cure; all that the physician may do is to supply the conditions, and wait.

The red face indicates irritation or stimulation, or both. Stimulation means increased flow of blood to the surface, and irritation causes an increased flow of blood to the nerve centres, of which the brain is one; therefore, wherever there is both stimulation and irritation, there will usually be high color of the complexion. Where the face is very red, irritation is being carried to exhaustion, and great debility may be manifest.

There is no symptom of disease more generally misunderstood than this one. It is often supposed to indicate a high state of health; when the truth is, it is frequently a very serious symptom of disease. The darker the color, unless it be caused by sunlight, the more serious. The florid complexion, if bright and clear, is usually indicative of health, but as it becomes dark and dull, the conditions of disease exist.

The true cure for an abnormally red face and of the diseases which it indicates, is: First, Abstinence from all irritating and stimulating substances, such as tea, coffee, spices, alcoholic drinks, etc, Second. The adoption of rational methods of treatment which shall equalize the circulation, improve nutrition, and purify the blood and tissues.

Pimples, blotches, etc., are indications of the presence of bilious matters in the blood. The liver is always at fault. The biliary matters are not taken up by this, the proper organ, and hence they are attempted to be cast out through the skin. Restore action of the liver, and the pimples will disappear along with all other results of impure blood.

Impurity of blood is a great cause of disease. It exists always as accessory to the exhibitions of the above symptoms. Indeed, it is found in some degree in all cases of disease, and hence how to remove impurity of the blood and tissues comes to be one of the most important subjects that can attract our attention. Because of its importance, quacks and imposters have long flourished. Blood purifiers have been advertised and sold ad infinitum, and impurity of blood has correspondingly increased. The people have been duped and too often cheated out of all that renders life endurable, even when life has been retained. This subject will be discussed in our next.—Science of Health.

Muffling the Throat.—"What is the best mode of protecting the throat from colds where a person is very susceptible to them?

The popular way of protecting the throat is to bundle and wrap it up closely, thus over-heating and rendering it tender and sensitive and more liable to colds and inflammations than before. This practice is all wrong, and results in much evil. Especially is this the case with children, and when, in addition to the close muffling of the throat, the extremities are insufficiently clad, as is often the case, the best possible conditions are presented for the production of sore throats, coughs, croups, and all kinds of throat and lung affections. It is utterly impossible to entirely exclude cold air from the neck, and if it is kept overheated a portion of the time, when it is exposed some form of derangement of the throat will be very apt to occur. The rule in regard to clothing the neck should be to keep it as cool as comfort will allow. By doing so you will suffer much less from throat ailments than if you are always fearful of having a little cold air come in contact with your neck. Any one who has been accustomed to have the throat muffled, should be careful to leave it off gradually, and not all at once.—Herald of Health.

THE WAY SHE CURED HIM.

"What brings you here, Mary?" said Truesdall to his wife, as she entered the liquor shop.

"It is very lonesome at home, and your business seldom allows you to be there," said the meek but resolute wife. "To me there is no company like yours, and, as you cannot come home to me, I came here to you. I have a right to share your pleasures as well as your sorrows."

"But to come to such a place as this?" expostulated Tom.

"No place can be improper where my husband is," said poor Mary. "Whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder."

"Surely you are not going to drink that stuff," cried Tom, as she was taking up the glass of liquor.

"Why not? You say that you drink to forget sorrow, and surely I have sorrow to forget."

"Woman! woman! you are not going to give that stuff to the children?" cried Tom, as she was passing the glass of liquor to them.

"Why not? Can children have a better example set them than their father's? Is not what is good for him good for them also? It will put them to sleep, and they will forget that they are cold and hungry. Drink, my children—this is fire, and bed, and food, and clothing. Drink; see how much good it does your father."

With some reluctance Mary suffered her husband to lead her home, and that night he prayed long and earnestly that God would help him to break an evil habit, and keep a newly formed but firm resolution.

His reformation was thorough, and Mrs. Truesdall is now one of the happiest of women, and remembers with melancholy pleasure her first and last visit to the dram shop.—The Morning.

THE BATTLE SONG OF THE CHURCH.

Fear not the foe, thou flock of God,
Fear not the sword, the spear, the rod,
Fear not the foe.
He fights in vain who fights with thee;
Soon shalt thou see his armies flee,
Himself laid low.

Come, cheer thee to the toil and fight;
'Tis God, thy God, defends the right;
He leads thee on.
His sword shall scatter every foe,
His shield shall ward off every blow:—
The crown is won.

His is the battle, his the power,
His is the triumph in that hour;
In him be strong.
So round thy brow the wreath shall twine,
So shall the victory be thine,
And thine the song.

Not long the sigh, the toil, the sweat,
Not long the fight-day's wasting heat,
The shadows come.
Slack not thy weapon in the fight,
Courage! for God defends the right;
Strike home! strike home!

HAVE THE GREAT PROPHETIC SYMBOLS OF DANIEL AND JOHN LOST THEIR SIGNIFICANCE?

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

If we are to judge by the manner that these are treated, and the neglect they receive, even by a large number of such as professedly are identified as Adventists, leaving out such as ignore the name, we should decide in the affirmative.

These great prophetic symbols in the early part of our history were studied by the servants of God, and their import set before the listening crowds from the charts prepared for that purpose, with great effect; producing conviction, and resulting in the conversion of infidels to Christ, and a firm belief in the divine origin of the Holy Scriptures and the establishing of the faith of many a wavering child of God. These symbols are from a divine source. Holy men of God, under the Holy Spirit's instruction, have described them, and they have been interpreted by angelic agency. While they have been of great practical importance to the church, both Jewish and Christian, in the past, they assume a more direct and vital importance to the last generation, and last stage of the Christian Church; and therefore their prophetic significance to us can hardly be overestimated. They should be studied and proclaimed by the church of God with more earnestness as we approach the end of earthly history and kingdoms, to which they directly point. It is a deplorable fact that there are those among us who preach Christ's second coming, and profess to believe it, who sneer at "heads" and "horns," and endeavor to cast odium upon this part of divine revelation. This produces a greater degree of popular contempt of this department of Bible truth than otherwise would exist.

Surely we are among the perils of the last days, and as Paul was, so are we "in perils among false brethren." "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure, having this seal, The Lord knoweth them that are his." I hope our Advent papers will give due prominence to this important part of prophecy, "whether men will hear or forbear."

The subject is by no means exhausted. There is light and benefit and comfort to be derived and imparted to those and by those who "study to show themselves approved unto God, workmen that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." The special instrumentality that God has chosen to sanctify (set apart) his people, and prepare them for his coming and kingdom is, the evidences of his coming drawn from his prophetic Word. And the faithful watchmen will continue to call the attention of all that have ears to hear to the evidences of the speedy coming judgment.

The burden of their cry will be, that God's great judgment day is impending, and those who are not moved by it to prepare will not be moved by anything else to effectually arouse them to duty and bring them into the waiting and expectant attitude that the church of Christ must be in, in order to welcome her descending Lord with joy.

Noah evidently stood out in direct antagonism to a scoffing world and an unbelieving church (for the sons of God married with the daughters of men), at a time when all flesh had corrupted their way before God. Noah alone was found with sufficient faith to announce God's purpose to bring the deluge of water over the earth, to destroy all flesh with the earth. Noah's action corresponded with his faith, and thus "he condemned the world, and became heir to that righteousness which is by faith."

God will have "faithful and wise servants" to announce his coming, to give the "household meat in due season"; but the "evil servants" will "say in their hearts, My Lord delayeth his coming"; but their portion will "be with hypocrites," where "there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth."

I think if our Advent churches, that are without a prophetic chart, were fully awake to the importance of the great prophetic symbols of Daniel and the Apocalypse—time measurements included—they would make no delay in furnishing themselves with such, that the banner of their faith may be hoisted to the view of all. The hieroglyphics taken from the divine Word, the emblems of the different nations and their history, should be read and considered by all who have an interest in the course of events in the past history of our world, and a desire to understand our present whereabouts and our future prospects.

The events that are coming up in the eastern horizon are growing more and more ominous as days and weeks move us forward. All the nations of Europe appear to be shaping their policy in reference to the great "Eastern Question," to leave the "Sick Man" to die unprotected and undefended. Well, let him die in this manner. Let him "come to his end with none to help him"; for "at that time shall Michael stand up, the great Prince which standeth for the children of thy people [Daniel's people]; and there shall be a time of trouble such as never was since there was a nation, to that same time; and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book."

O God, help us to see that our names are "written in the book" ere that day, which now is almost upon us, shall come. O Jesus, I look to thee, for thy blood was freely shed for me. Thou Rock of ages, cleft for me, I will hide myself in thee. Amen.

"SO MUCH THE MORE AS YE SEE THE DAY APPROACHING."

ANTHONY O. BUSCH.

Perhaps there is not in all Scripture a passage so precious to the Advent believer's heart,—certainly not one which so emphatically endorses the peculiar faith upon which he takes his stand,—as that contained in the 13th verse of the 3d chap., 2nd epistle of Peter. On this he may ground the whole body of his doctrinal views. On this he may safely repose his hopes for the future. On this he may boldly face the hosts of snugly winter-quartered orthodoxy, fully and sweetly assured that the hereafter he has entrusted to the God he loves, is no fabled myth, or "airy nothing," but a glorious, tangible reality. It is his privilege to strive, work and suffer for, patiently waiting the hastening day when his "Lord will come" and "every eye shall see him." Here is the patience of the saints to a great extent, for of all duties laid upon human frailty there is none which is harder than waiting.

But in the midst of all this encouraging and truly precious prospect, is there not a subtle danger of callousness to the equally essential truth that it is not all of our privilege to merely know these things theoretically?

The words of the chapter from which we quote urges this suggestion with marked emphasis. Says the divine writer: "Seeing, then, that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" We are a strong people in God's truth! But it is just here may lie our great danger, if we are not watchful; for Satan is not asleep these days, but, "knowing his time is short," is ever on the alert to entrap and snare.

It is a common saying among military men, that a fortification is no stronger than its weakest point. If there is a weak place the strong-hold can be taken. So Satan, acquainted with the weak places of the Lord's people, in a brief while is in complete possession of their mis-called *strong-*hold, and shortly lays it in ruins. This is the history of the whole church, in one brief sentence.

Brethren, be watchful, lest the seeds fall into stony ground. To grow, they must have "good ground," divine dews, heavenly showers, and the genial warmth of the "sun of righteousness." These things come not "by observation," nor yet by knowledge alone, but by a closer walk with God, who sanctifies all knowledge to his own glory.

Let us, then, be warned: these are days for true, christian zeal. We cannot afford to be lack or threadbare in this matter. We must have "godliness." Appearances—or, "a form of godliness, denying the power thereof," will not do. There is such a thing in the church as well as in the world.

From a close observation of Advent matters and things, I am assured that there is a strong lack of vital power. I say it sadly, earnestly, and reluctantly, but the Lord bears me witness I do not speak unadvisedly. Having been placed by circumstances in a position where I could not take an active part (latterly), in the work of the Lord, I have had ample opportunity to contemplete the subject in all its various aspects. The matter has been close to my heart, the one, next to my own and family's salvation, the dearest I know of. Something has strongly constrained me to pen these few thoughts,—perhaps my own feelings, perhaps a higher impulse.

Dear brethren in "the faith," let me solemnly enjoin upon you the momentous duty of a godly life. One that sometimes gets itself aside from the mere dogmatism of creeds, and walks humbly, yet withal joyously, "beside the still waters" of life. The Psalmist, singing his sweet song of private humiliation, says, "The Lord is nigh unto them that are of a broken heart; and saveth such as be of a contrite spirit." Ps. 34: 18. Let us not wonder if God sometimes signally blesses the labors of those who know so little of the vast depths of his truth. Wherever there are people richer in good works than we are, the Lord will bless such with his presence. I have yet to learn that God does not recognize such as his children.

We need strength and vitality. The two are inseparable. Without the last, our numbers will ever be few; without the first we can possess the other in but the most modified sense. Our pulpits, especially, are in need of the higher sanctifying influences. It is no license to perceptive liberty, simply because a man preaches the truth. The man who cannot keep his character above reproach, who is pursuing "the unfruitful works of darkness," is not fit to speak to any people as a chosen vessel of God. I am willing to throw the mantle of God's mercy over the most profligate of sinners, but I deny that a man can be truly, or profitably, or acceptably serving the Lord, and at the same time prosecuting the choicest work of the devil. Such an one is not without the pale of hope, but surely not the one to appear in the name of the Lord of Hosts. No man is blameless in the divine vision, but—"no man can serve God and mammon." This is the divine edict, and cannot be moved. The clear "water of Life" is not put into "broken cisterns," but into pure vessels, sanctified unto holiness.

The preacher who informs his people that he is not what he preaches (a frequent thing in my recollection) virtually subscribes himself a lover of lusts. Let the pastor boldly proclaim his calling, and feed his sheep with no such ambiguous food, but the word of light and a "good report." Paul, who in in the midst of his strong nature could cry, "O, wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" yet could say: "Therefore, seeing we have this ministry, as we have received mercy we faint not; but have renounced the hidden things of dishonesty, not walking in craftiness, nor handling the word of God deceitfully; but by manifestation of the truth commending ourselves to every man's conscience, in the sight of God." This is the position of the true servant of God. Thus could Paul "keep his body under, his "thorn" quieted, his heart right in his Master's eyes. "Looking for the blessed hope and the glorious appearing" of the Lord, all things sunk into oblivion and nothingness. When a man is truly on the watch-tower, he will have no spare time for Satan.

A flagman, watching for the approach of a "lightning train," in the dark shades of midnight, has no time or taste for trifling toys. With his glance bent keenly toward the uncertain gloom, his own little lantern trimmed and burning, his whole being is spent watching for the first lurid flash of that "flaming torch." "As the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of man be." The shades of midnight are deepening; the time is fast hastening. A flash, and all is done.

Brethren, would you be found worthy? Watch. Have an eye to your every day life. Let your walk and conversation be as becometh the servants of God; with "love one toward another, and toward all men."

Advent congregations, would you be instrumental in spreading the glorious truths you hold? Would you grow in favor and influence with God and man? Then assure yourselves that your example before the world is one of christian activity, humility, and zeal. Secure as your preachers men known to be consecrated to the work of the blessed Master; rich in piety, abounding in heavenly ardor, "approved unto God." Satan will try you in this direction. God's speaking trumpets are not always of pleasing sound to the carnal ear. They are invariably holy men; plain, earnest, and fearless! Be satisfied with no vague assurances of your pastor's fidelity. He that breaks the bread and pours the wine of sacred commemoration, should be "a living sacrifice" unto the Lord. It is a serious question, but it is a most important one; for it is one that comes most closely before the gaze of the world and the weak.

Finally, let us be watchful, "not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching."

May the Master confirm you in the truth, and in the riches of his grace; and help you vigorously to purge your hearts and pulpits of all "evil concupiscence," and hidden sin.

THE PRESENT DUTIES OF THE CHURCH.

R. B. CURRIER.

I believe it to be clearly the duty of the church to be united to God and each other more closely than ever. The world is growing more and more corrupt with tremendous rapidity. The church should grow more and more holy, like its Head. It should develop the fruits of the Spirit (Gal. 5: 22, 23), avoiding all appearance of evil. Everything which hinders the work of the Spirit should be buried—such as church fairs, festivals, tea parties, lotteries, readings from Shakspeare and other dramatic writers, theatrical performances, and all those things gotten up to please the cold formal professors and rich worldly men, who give liberally to support the church either for policy's sake or to ease their guilty consciences.

Instead of catering to please these men, or allowing them to hold any official position in the church or society (as is the case), put men of God in office, such as are spoken of in the third chapter of 1st Timothy; such will always be found at their post, because they love to be there. We need something more than a nominal consecration; we need an absolute consecration to God,—all on the altar.

Sectarianism! what ruin, distraction and trouble this has wrought. Resist it forever. May our Savior's prayer be answered as recorded in John 17th chapter. It is time for united, harmonious action—every man at his post, with banner unfurled, ready to follow at the king's command. We must be a peculiar people, zealous of good works. See Titus 2: 14; 1 Pet. 2: 9.

Do not let trivial things separate you from God's children. Open wide your hearts and take in all who love Jesus. Have confidence in their sincerity. Do not hold God's children off at arm's length because you see faults in them. Remember you have them yourself. Love your brethren. Try to please others and not yourselves. It is better to suffer for well doing than for evil doing. Let there be a union of hearts and hands in the work of the Lord. Present a solid rank for God. Remember, "in union there is strength."

May we all live so as to lift men up and draw them to Jesus, whose blood "cleanseth from all sin." "Whosoever will may come and take of the water of life freely." "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Remember, except we repent of all our sins we cannot be saved. None but "the pure in heart" can see God. But, thank God, the blood of Jesus makes us pure, if we will let it. May some unconverted person be persuaded to come to the "Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world," by reading this.

ABIDING IN CHRIST.

We seriously doubt if the church has yet taken in the full import of that wonderful declaration of Jesus: "If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." (John 15: 7.)

The union which exists between Christ and his followers, is set forth here under the figure of a vine and its branches. Christ is the vine, christians the branches, and the Father the husbandman, or vine dresser. This union is not natural, but gracious. Naturally we are wild, bastard growths, and need to be engrafted into the true vine. See this doctrine clearly explained in Romans 11th.

This union must be so perfect that the life of the vine may be freely communicated to the branches, else no life comes of the union. You may place a scion in the most healthy vine, and unless the adjustments are perfect, it is as certain to die as if it were placed upon a rock. Unless a perfect union exists between Christ and the soul, the divine life-currents are obstructed, and fruit bearing becomes impossible. Mournful as is the fact, it is nevertheless true, that there is very little genuine union, except in name, between Christ and the great body of professed christian believers. There is any amount of blustering, out-door piety, and worldly policy union, which spends itself in religious forms and a sound of words, but destitute of real heart union with Christ. The great mass of professed believers are little more than tied on to the vine by the cords of ecclesiasticism; consequently, no fruit is brought to perfection. "As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me." This is God's law of spiritual horticulture.

This union, in order to be productive of good, must be perpetual. We must abide in Christ. The reason why christians are no more faithful is because they are off and on, in and out, up and down; they do not abide in Christ. Their experience is not uniform. To-day they sing,

"I know that my Redeemer lives";

but, to-morrow it is,

"Am I his, or am I not"?

This union, to be fruit-producing, must, in an important sense, be mutual. Not only are we to abide in Christ, but his words are to abide in us. The truth of Christ must be in us. We must have our lives regulated by his doctrine. The man who has no special care as to what he believes, or how he believes it—who glories in a sort of slip-shod theology, is seldom found to be a fruit-bearing christian. The more clearly defined are our doctrinal views, the less likely are we to be turned aside by every wind of doctrine, and thus become "unstable as water." God's word should be in us. It should be meat, or bread, or milk, as the soul needs. We should live upon it, and it should be sweet unto our taste. We should hide it in our hearts, that we may not sin against its Author. Jesus says, "If a man love me he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him." (John 14: 23). This abiding in him, says Mr. Wesley, "implies such a large manifestation of the divine presence and love, that the former in justification, is as nothing in comparison of it." (in loco.)

If Christ is one with believers, and if the holy life currents of the divine nature are not obstructed or cut off by imperfect adjustments, but are allowed to flow, unobstructed, from the vine through the branches, then the strength of Christ—the might of God, becomes the strength of his people. And possessed of this power, what may not a christian do within the compass of the promises? What mountains may not be removed? What valleys may not be exalted? What foe may not be conquered, and what good may not be secured?

Of this mutual union Dr. Arnot says, "The vine holds the branch, and the branch holds the vine. These two are one attachment. The mother clings to the child; and the child, when danger threatens, clings to his mother. If the child were dead, the corpse would no longer clasp the mother; but neither would the mother continue to clasp the corpse. These two graspings stand or fall together. You must have both or neither. Such is the relation between Christ the Redeemer and christians the redeemed."

Beloved brethren, let us become one with Christ, and let our union become perfect.—Advocate of Christian Holiness.

THINGS I WISH TO KNOW.—NO. 3.

L. BOUTELL.

10th question. "If the dragon here which the angel says is the devil and Satan, symbolizes pagan Rome, how do we know there is any other devil?" I would simply say if there was no other account of him only in the 20th of Revelation, we should not know. But perhaps the use of him as a symbol proves there is one.

11th question. "If Pagan Rome is the devil of Rev. 20, when will the devil be cast into the lake of fire?" Answer: When "the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel." Here goes the pagan devil, and all other devils, with their whole progeny, who in this fire "shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power." And this defines its chronology, when Jesus comes. There is only one lake of fire; that is the perdition of ungodly men. That is the second death. "And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

15th question. "How is it that Christ can give the kingdom to God the Father before he has received it from the Father?" On the Scripture answer to this question hangs the whole structure. And letting the Bible speak for itself, with a right application the mystery is unfolded, and all, I think, made plain. Now we come to the pith of the whole question. Does Christ at his coming deliver up a kingdom to God, even the Father; or does the Father deliver a kingdom to Jesus Christ? On the Bible answer turns the argument. "Then cometh the end, when he shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, even the Father; when he shall have put down all rule, and all authority, and power. For he must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet" (1 Cor. 15: 24, 28.) What end is brought to view in this verse? We answer, the end of this gospel dispensation or age. The 22d verse shows it is at the resurrection. "As in Adam all die (go into the grave), so in (or by) Christ, shall all be made alive," or come out of the grave. The next verse shows the end brought to view is at Christ's coming. "But every man in his own order; Christ the first-fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his (Christ's) coming." When is the end? At Christ's coming. This is the same end as when Jesus says, "He that shall endure to the end, the same shall be saved." What is done at this end? Christ delivers up the kingdom to God.

Macknight renders this verse "Then the end, when he will deliver up the kingdom to God," that is, when he comes. What is it delivered to the Father for? For utter destruction? Yes, but you are ready to say Christ has no kingdom to deliver up. Has he not? One thing is logically true, if he delivers up a kingdom, then it is equally true that he has a kingdom to deliver up. "The Son of man shall send forth his angels and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend and them that do iniquity" (Matt. 13: 41.) Here is the kingdom delivered up, and Christ calls it his, and the offenders and workers of iniquity cannot be gathered out till it is delivered up to God, and when this takes place the Father takes his great power and reigns.

But has he not got it now? Nay, verily! he has given it to the Son. Hear his declaration: "All power is given me in heaven and earth," and in commissioning his disciples he says: "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel (good news) to every creature," assuring them that he would be with them to the end of the world to shield them. Why not longer? Because at the end he is to deliver up his kingdom and great power. Here is where the Father takes to himself this great power and reigns. Here chronologically is where the "seventh angel sounded, . . . and the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." This verse harmonizes with Christ's delivering up the kingdom to God, at the finishing sound of the seventh angel, for he has many days in which his voice is heard saying, "Behold, he cometh!" but when sounded, then the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord.

Who is our Lord? The Father; and his Christ is our Christ, "and he shall reign forever and ever." But when the kingdom is delivered up to God, then he takes his great power (Rev. 11: 17. 18), saying, "We give thee thanks, oh Lord God Almighty . . . because thou hast taken to thee thy great power and hast reigned." See how this harmonizes with 1 Cor. 15: 25. When he (the Father) shall have put down all rule, and all authority and power. For he (the Father) must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." The 28th verse makes it conclusive. "And when all things shall be subdued unto him, then shall the Son also himself be subject to him that did put all things under him." This plainly shows that the Father did put all things under him in the destruction of all Christ's enemies.

Rev. 11: 18 shows the time when judgment, reward, and destruction, and glory come, the and in Rev. 11: 15, of our Lord and his Christ." This and is as long as it takes the Father to subdue all things unto him. Then we come to the time spoken of by Daniel the prophet, in chapter 7: 13. "I saw in the night visions, and behold one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days (the Father), and they brought him near before him. And there (and then) was given him (Jesus) dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed." This is Christ's kingdom now because he has come in the clouds of heaven and visited the Ancient of days, and he has given him glory, dominion and a kingdom. The coronation day has passed, and he is "crowned Lord of all." Oh, hail him Lord of all! Now this verse in the first chapter of Luke is fulfilled. Oh, glorious event! "He shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God (Ancient of days) shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the honse of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Here commences the reign of Christ on the new earth.

This is the time of which John had a glimpse. Being in ecstacy he says, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth had passsd away." The day of the Lord, with its wrath and vengeance, has passed! The stone has smitten the image on the feet of iron and clay, and broken them to pieces. Then the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, were broken to pieces together and became like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor, and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them," and no "them" to be found. This must involve the resurrection of the whole image, and its utter destruction, before Jesus Christ commences his reign on the throne of his father David, and over the kingdom that has no end.

Then John saw the sunrising of the new creation, and with his heart filled with the love of Jesus, and lips responding, "Even so; come, Lord Jesus! come quickly!" He was looking for still more. "I saw the New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Here is the return of those recognized by the apostle Paul when he says, "The dead in Christ shall rise first; then we that are alive and remain shall be caught up in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air." They have been housed till the indignation is overpast; now they come down—the celestial company of holy ones, and the Lord is ready to welcome them by saying, "Come, ye blessed of my Father! inherit the kingdom prepared for you." "The tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people, and God himself shall dwell with them and be their God."

This is the beginning of immortal life, the new creation, for which the whole creation has been groaning. Tears have been wiped from all eyes, and there shall be no more death, nor sorrow, nor pain, "for the former things are passed away."

Now the voice of redemption is heard in full chorus in loud song, "'Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory. And every creature which is in heaven and on earth, and in the sea, and all that are in them heard I saying, "Blessing, and honor, and glory, and power, be unto him that sitteth on the throne, and unto the Lamb forever and ever." Amen! All saved, and enjoying eternal life, glory, immortality, and rest.

This consummates our blessed hope, and fills the earth with his glory. The weary pilgrims have found their home at last. Home, sweet home! Amen! Even so come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly! bringing the thrice welcome day.

THOUGHTS FOR THE NEW YEAR.

M. I. HERRON.

The old year has passed away, and a new year has come. Another mile-stone is reached in our weary pilgrimage, and we are so much nearer home. Let us pause awhile, and consider. What progress have we made thus far in our journey? and how shall it be with us in this next stage of it on which we have just entered?

As we look through memory's glass how the varied pictures come and go—scenes of joy and sorrow. On many a hearth rests a dark shadow, for Death has entered and pitilessly snatched away cherished ones. Poverty, too, has cast its chilling hand on many a once prosperous, happy household; cares have crushed many a brave heart, and sickness paled many a cheek. Bright pictures intermingle with the shaded, perhaps in the larger proportion, could our eyes but see rightly. Let us look at them.

Life has been continued; the snow and frost beauties of Winter, the beautiful budding of Spring, the bright blossom of Summer, the rich fruitage of Autumn, all pass before us in rapid succession. Food and raiment and a roof to cover us have been provided. Friends have been sent to cheer and aid in bearing life's often heavy burdens. God has been often near us and helped us to do his work, and endure his chastening, and poured out his loving kindness upon our heads. Many and precious privileges have been given; but have they all been improved? Have we done all the good we might have done? gained all the knowledge we could? advanced in holiness as we ought? Have we always opened our hand to the poor, and our hearts to the sorrowing? Have we always spoken a word for Jesus, when opportunity offered? Have we no wasted hours to mourn over? no neglect of duty to regret?

We all have our besetments; have we overcome them? We have our weaknesses; have they been overcome? Our passions, which often cause us to speak impatiently, and thus sin with our lips,—have they been brought into subjection? O, have we lived so near our Savior? have we discovered new beauties in his character that have made him much more dear than at the beginning of the last year?

This life is not ours merely to joy or sorrow in; we were made for work. 'Tis true, our joys will sweeten the labors that are sometimes so wearisome, and soothe the pains that are often so hard to bear. Our griefs may enlarge and soften our hearts toward God and man; but while we live here we must work, and do our duty; God will give us happiness, or strength to bear the trials patiently which it may be ours to endure.

Then let us, with hearts humble and penitent for all the sins of our past lives, with holy resolutions to serve God more faithfully, and live nearer to him, re-consecrate all we have and are to his service, with prayers for strength and guidance, and for patience under all the pain, care and sorrow which may be our portion. Let us "buckle on the whole armor of God," that we may fight against Satan and the allurements of the world, until Christ our Captain shall appear, when we shall, if faithful, be freed from sin, sorrow, and suffering, and win the "prize" and wear the "crown."

North Somerville, Mass.

AN AGREEMENT ON BOTH SIDES.

T. FITZSIMONS.

A great many of the statesmen, politicians and public writers of the day have asserted for the past two years, and still assert their opinion, that the world is upon the eve of a great crisis—a revolution and upheaval, that may not only alter the map of Europe, but the end of which no man can see. The following are but a few of the large number of distinguished men who, within the past three years, have publicly in their speeches, and through the press, made this prediction, viz.: Gladstone, De Israeli, Cardinal Manning, Thiers, and Victor Hugo. Now these men are statesmen and politicians, and arrive at their conclusion, it appears, from the present political stand-point.

There is another class—the servants of God—who also declare the same thing, but gather their information from prophecy, viz., Drs. Cumming, Elliott, Bickersteth, Baxter, Bonar, and a host of celebrated English divines; and in the United States, the Rev. De Witt Talmage, Cash, Newton, Seiss, Moody, Duffield, Hastings, Brown, Taylor, and others. Remarkable as it may seem, both these bodies of celebrated and well-known men, political and religious, arrive at and harmonize in one and the same conclusion, from their distinctive stand-points! It is an interesting question now, Are they mistaken? Wait another year, skeptic, and you will see what the Lord will do.

TRUST IN THR LORD.

N. B. GRANT.

"Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed."—Ps. 37: 3.

How sweet it is to trust in Jesus; to feel that we have a Friend to whom we can go in times of trouble. Though earthly friends may forsake us, Christ will never leave nor forsake us. He knoweth even before we ask what we need, and will give us such things as are for our good, if we ask in faith; for he hath said, "Whatsoever ye shall ask the Father in my name, he will give it you." Precious promise! The Scriptures are full of such. As I sat watching beside the sick bed of my only daughter, with no earthly friend to comfort me, these precious promises came to my mind and I was comforted. As I toil from day to day to earn my daily bread, I often get discouraged, and am sometimes led to murmur, but that still small voice whispers, "Peace, be still"; "trust in the Lord, and do good; . . . and verily thou shalt be fed"; and I can say with the poet—

"Sweetly I'm resting in Jesus,
Trusting my Savior and Lord;
Casting my soul on his mercy,
Leaning upon his Word;
Bearing the cross through toil and pain,
Counting as loss all earthly gain,
Knowing the faithful a crown shall obtain;
Sweetly I'm resting in Jesus."

Dear friends, one and all, let us trust in Jesus, put our hand in his, and be led by him; knowing that he will lead us just right, and is willing and able to give us all that is for our good. If we are sick, he is the best physician. If we are poor and in need, he is rich. The earth is his, and the cattle upon a thousand hills. He has ever cared for his children. He cared for Job when he was afflicted; for Moses, when cast a helpless babe into the river Nile; for Daniel, in the lion's den, and for the three worthies. He is the same God to-day. He changes not. His promises are yea and amen. We are not safe if we are trusting solely to our dearest friends; but though all others prove false, Christ is ever true. In him we find "a friend that sticketh closer than a brother."

Then let us trust him. Let us put away all murmurings, and act in the living present, with hearts full of gratitude for the mercies that we now enjoy, and full of hope that the same God that leads us to-day will guide and keep us to the end.

West Falmouth, Me.

When Lord Peterborough stayed for a time with Fenelon, he was so delighted with his piety and amiability, that he exclaimed at parting, "If I remain here much longer, I shall become a christian in spite of myself!" What a testimonial was that! and what a mighty power would our churches exert in the world, if the members generally were accustomed thus quietly to "shine" in their every-day spheres of life.

Some professors pass for very meek, good-natured people till you displease them. They resemble a pool or a pond; while you let it alone it looks clear and limpid, but if you stir it toward the bottom the rising sediments soon discover the impurities that lurk beneath.

BRO. MOODY is having remarkable success in Philadelphia, in leading sinners to Christ. Large numbers have been converted, and church members have been greatly quickened in christian life. Bro. M. deals faithfully with professors of religion, showing them that the standard of piety has been very low, which is one chief reason why so few have been led to Christ during the past few years; and even when converted they did not live long, because of the poor examples set before them by those who belong to the church.

The effect of the meetings held by Brn. Moody and Sankey in Brooklyn and Philadelphia has been excellent in other places. Many who have read the reports of their earnest labors have been stirred up to make persevering efforts to persuade men to be christians; and the Lord has bestowed his blessing, producing rich results. Many drunkards, and other wicked men, have found Jesus their precious Savior in the Philadelphia meetings. No one who has attended Bro. Moody's meetings, and understands revival work, can doubt but that the Lord is with him, and that sinners are being truly converted to Christ. M. G.

ONTARIO.—We began a second series of meetings in Ontario, N. Y., Saturday evening, Dec. 25th. We found a good interest remaining, though unfavorable weather had prevented a large attendance since the meetings held in connection with the dedication, Dec. 4th, and onward to the 12th. The prospect is now (Dec. 27th) very encouraging. The audiences are large and attentive. Quite a number are under conviction; among these are leading men in the town.

Jan. 4th. Since writing the foregoing, the meetings have steadily increased in power and interest. Quite a number have given themselves to Jesus, and many more are almost persuaded to be christians. Four were baptized last Lord's day, and about a dozen more are waiting for the next opportunity. We must leave to-morrow for Nevada, O. The meetings will be continued under the direction of Bro. J. E. Wells, the faithful pastor. Bro. Newell, from Darien, has been with us, rendering valuable assistance in the meetings. Members of other churches are uniting in the good work, and being blest. M. HARD TIMES.

There is much talk about hard times. The following is a statement from the New York Daily Witness, concerning the condition of the poor in Montreal:—

"The distress of the poorer classes in Montreal is very great, and may be compressed into six words—no work, money, food, or fuel. The sufferers are crowding round the City Hall, and pouring down like an avalanche on every charitable institution."

The future looks very gloomy for poor people. There is so much of selfishness and covetousness in the hearts of the rich, that the destitute look almost in vain for help from that source. The poor are neglected and forgotten, and left to shiver with cold, and suffer for the want of food. O how much we need the return of Jesus to introduce the new order of things. Till he comes we can expect no permanent improvement. Like a failing consumptive, the world is growing "worse and worse. All who wish to be saved must come out from its wickedness, and be ready to depart when our divine Lord appears. "Remember Lot's wife." It is now perilous to set our affections on the things in this world. We are fast approaching the Red Sea of the Gentiles, like that of the Israelites, as they left Egypt for the land of promise, and may soon expect to see wonderful manifestations of the power of God among the nations, and in behalf of his trusting people. Let all be on their watch-towers, waiting for the appearing of our great King. M G.

THE CITY HANDED OVER TO THE ROMAN CATHOLICS.

The Church of Rome has a faculty of over-reaching itself, which has been in lively exercise of late. Never, perhaps, were there more striking instances of this than in the Guibord burial case, and the tearing down of the Protestant Church of the Iroquois Indians at Oka, by order of the priests. In Ohio and New Jersey the hierarchy in like manner overreached themselves about the school question. And they have just done so more flagrantly in this city in making their pliant tools in the State and city government disband the sole Scotch regiment, whilst all the Irish Roman Catholic regiments are retained.

The Scotch Regiment, the Irish Protestant Regiment, and the American Regiment (the gallant Seventh), were almost the only security the city had in case of any masterful attempt on its liberties by the Church of Rome. The police are by a vast majority Roman Catholics. The Police Justices ditto. The armed and drilled militia ditto, ditto; so that a very great preponderance of forces of the civil government are under the control of the Romish hierarchy; and all this is in exact accord with the threats of their organs respecting the public schools. These organs have more than once intimated in the most truculent terms that they must have what they call justice, even if they have to fight for it; and the Church is evidently preparing for the fight, aided by Governor Tilden and the Board of Aldermen.—N. Y. Witness.

These facts show clearly that the Jesuitical wire-pullers are rapidly developing their political plans, and unconsciously drawing into their meshes hundreds of thousands, by which they design to triumphantly carry the Papacy to the seat of political supremacy. Americans must be in a state of semi-unconsciousness not to see the terrible snare and realize that the serpent's coils are already binding them in their fatal embrace.

The true christian hope sheds the only ray of light to cheer the overspreading gloom of coming darkness for our country and world. The present political and ecclesiastical aspect in all lands threatens more and more war and bloodshed. A mighty arbiter is needed; a strong central power which can command the world and hush the factious parties in silence is demanded. Christ is that Arbiter. The world needs him now, and the Church petitions that he may come immediately. J. C.

THE INQUIRY MEETING.

We are most fully convinced that the inquiry meetings are one of the best means of advancing a revival interest. Churches have run down to freezing point for want of work among the lay members. The preaching has its place and importance, like the plough in the field, but the assistance of the lay members is needed too in revivals as truly as the harrow to complete the work of the farmer. When a minister has a number of consecrated members, who are ever ready to unite with him in an inquiry meeting at the close of his sermon, he may expect blessed results; but when he has to do all the work, he may well feel discouraged, for it is of but little avail to have persons converted and unite with a cold, stupid, worldly-minded church. It is rare that converts live long in such a situation. As soon as a person is fully consecrated to the Lord, and filled with his Spirit, he longs to be doing something to save sinners. We cannot be wholly in Christ, and be indifferent about the salvation of others, because when the Holy Spirit fills the heart, it imparts to the individual the feelings of Jesus towards sinners, and leads us to put forth earnest efforts for their salvation. Unless aided by the power of the Holy Spirit, but little good is accomplished. We may work hard in our own strength, exhort and pray with great human zeal, and witness only a sad failure; but when living in the Lord, ready to do any thing he may require, and trusting alone in him for strength to do the work, we may expect blessed results.

The most certain means of leading the unconverted and backslidden to Christ is by personal effort, put forth in a kind, loving' earnest, sympathetic spirit. Such work, if continued, is sure of the highest degree of success. The more one labors for sinners, the more he loves them. When he does nothing towards leading them to Jesus, he cares but little about their salvation; but as soon as he begins to talk with them, he feels like praying for their conversion. Of all instrumentalities, we know of none that are so well calculated to build up a church, and lead others to Christ, as the inquiry meetings.

A few suggestions to those who have not taken a part in such meetings. Let the sermon be closed by prayer. Then, after explaining the work to be done, it may be well to ask those to rise, or raise their hands, who are willing to engage in the inquiry meeting. It may be advisable also to ask those to rise, or raise their hands, who wish to have a revival, and to desire to be its subjects. Then say that all who cannot conveniently tarry to the inquiry meeting can go when you commence singing. It is well, when practicable, to have frequent singing during the inquiry meeting by some good singers seated together, but not all about the room, as it interferes with the conversation in the inquiry meeting. If there are no persons to conduct the singing, then all can sing some familiar hymn, which will be the signal for the workers to leave their seats to commence conversation with all who may remain for religious conversation. The talk should be familiar, but very direct. If the person is under conviction, and will consent, bow down in prayer by the seat, praying in a low tone, so as to be heard only by the one with whom you are praying. Ask them to pray too. If they hesitate, it may be well to ask them to repeat after you words of prayer appropriate for one in their condition. This they will usually do, if their feelings are deep enough to cause them to consent to bow with you in prayer. It is important that they should ask for help with their own lips. One who works in an inquiry meeting should be able to present such portions of Scripture as are adapted to the seeker. If he cannot remember them, so as to quote them, let him have his Bible at hand, with marked passages, so arranged that he can turn to them at once, when needed. The words of the Lord are the best for such occasions. For instance, such as the following: Ezek. 18: 21–31; 33: 11, 14–16, 19; Isa. 55 1–3, 6; Matt. 11: 28–30; John 14: 6; 6: 37; Isa. 1: 18; 2 Cor. 6: 2; Heb. 7: 25; Num. 21: 8, 9; with John 3: 14–16; Rev. 22: 7. The seeker usually needs something to inspire him with confidence to come to the Lord; hence those passages containing invitations and promises to sinners are best adapted to one under conviction. Satan tries to make them believe the Lord will not accept them; that they must do something to make themselves better, before they can be pardoned, instead of coming just as they are "without one plea," only that they are sinners, and wish to be forgiven, and adopted in the Lord's family. It should be the special aim to persuade every one to decide at once to become a follower of Christ.

In case the seeker will not consent to kneel in prayer, ask him to close his eyes, and bow his head, while you pray a few words standing, or kneeling by his side. Also get him to promise to pray for himself when alone. In short, try all possible means to persuade him to take the steps necessary to become a christian. Be as earnest and persevering as you would to save a drowning man from temporal death. Such efforts, if any, will secure success. It is to be feared that but few are awake to the importance of the work of leading men to Christ. In comparison, every thing else sinks into insignificance. Those who engage in the blessed work will find it the most delightful part of christian labor, and affording a heavenly satisfaction to which those are strangers who have never tried to lead a soul to Jesus.

When practicable, it is well to have the inquirers go into a room by themselves, at the close of the meeting. They feel more freedom than when surrounded by some who are not specially serious, as may be the case, when the inquiry meeting is held in the audience room, at the close of the sermon. After conversation with the anxious, it is well sometimes to ask all who wish special help from the Lord, to go forward, and unite together in prayer. It is often a great help to those seeking Jesus, to bow down with others who love him, and can unite in prayer for those desiring pardon. It is easier to give up to the Lord in the company of his friends, than in the midst of his scoffing enemies. The skillful leader of the meeting will watch all opportunities and take advantage of circumstances, so that by all means, he may save some. In order to succeed, he should have courage, perseverance, earnestness, and sympathy. He should have no other motive at heart but to persuade the people to be christians. He should live so that no one can truthfully find fault with his daily life. His heart should be warm with love for Jesus, and filled with the spirit of holiness. Such will find the people ready to talk and listen. Let us all do what we can to lead the lost to the Savior. M. G.

THE SULTAN'S EXTRAVAGANCE.

The Sultan of Turkey is the most expensive monarch in the world. His servants at the palace number 5500, the kitchen employing 500, the stables 400, the menagerie 200, and other items accordingly. The menagerie is a special hobby of the Sultan's, and it is one of the most remarkable collections in the world. He pays it daily visits, and every man-of-war that visits foreign ports brings accessions of new beasts. The Sultan's wives and concubines number 1200. Wealthy Mohammedans, whenever they purchase a specially beautiful slave, send her with their compliments to the Sultan, and he never refuses. To take care of this harem are 50 doctors, 150 eunuchs, and 100 messengers. Seven thousand persons are daily fed in the palace, and the table alone costs two and a half million dollars yearly. The harem requires nearly a million dollars yearly to keep it up. The total private expenses of the Sultan for these and other purposes are eight million dollars a year, And meantime famine stalks abroad throughout Turkey, the slaving peasants are rising in bloody rebellion against the cormorant tax-gatherers, and the empire is falling to pieces.—Boston Journal.

Is it possible that any intelligent person can suppose that the enlightened christian nations of Europe will much longer suffer such a heathenish, abominable government to exist in their midst? they sending their representatives to such a court, and allowing such a government to offer for sale in their markets its promises to obtain funds to be expended for such diabolical purposes? It seems to us that any government, possessing all the knowledge that is now enjoyed by the people of Europe, of the crying sins of the Sultan's Court and the terrible oppressions it cruelly imposes upon millions who never willingly accepted its civil or ecclesiastical yoke of satanic servitude, which will now spend its treasures and blood to perpetuate such a monstrous fountain of wickedness and cruelty, is unworthy to retain the title "Christian," but should be branded with the more appropriate title "Heathen." It deserves to "fall to pieces," and none to help it, so that its iron heel shall no longer crush the hopes of toiling millions, or its lust be satiated at the sacrifice of the defenceless purity of thousands of wailing victims.

We rejoice to know that its day of blasphemy and unholy revelry is ending. We rejoice to hear the muttering thunders, which indicate the approach of the appointed storm of wrath that will sweep it back across the Hellespont, to find his God-selected grave in Megiddo's bloody vale. We rejoice, not only that wickedness and oppression are soon to cease, but we are more joyful that beyond the roar and dust of battle dawns the morning of eternal peace. When the bloody oppression of tyrants shall cease, then shall David's royal Heir sway the sceptre of earth's dominion over the redeemed tribes of God's triumphant Israel. Welcome day! we hail the rising of the morning star! J. C.

PLEASURE OR REWARD.

The human family has presented before it, as an inducement to lead a religious life, pleasure and reward; the pleasure to be enjoyed in this life, produced by worldly circumstances and associations; the reward to be received and enjoyed in the world to come, produced by circumstances and associations in the kingdom of God. Christ offers the reward, and Satan the pleasures.

Satan enjoys a great advantage in one direction over Christ in this matter, because the inducement he offers is much more attractive to men in the fallen state, as they view the subject through human eyes; because a present enjoyment seen through that medium is always preferable to an anticipated one. We instinctively say, "One bird in the hand is worth two in the bush;" so that our fallen natures will seek present enjoyments and neglect future bliss.

The reward offered by Christ is obtained by a wearisome journey, a fierce encounter, a stormy voyage. The pleasures of sin are unknown on the way to the future reward. Therefore we must forego the pleasures for the sake of enjoying the reward. God has decreed that no man shall enjoy them both.

One of the most important items in our experience, when we attempt to commence the service of God, is to make calculations how to bear the trials of our pilgrimage, so that we may "count the cost," and reckon that a fierce battle is to be fought, a heavy cross to be borne, fearful temptations to be experienced, opposition from the world to be endured; and thus escape the disheartening influence of sad disappointment in suffering reproach for Jesus' sake, instead of enjoying the glory and fame of the world.

If two men are starting to go from New England to California, and one should be induced to start, principally, by the hope of enjoying much pleasure in journeying, and the other was induced to undertake the journey because he confidently believed that he should obtain a million dollars of gold in a short time as a reward for his toil and expense in journeying, the discomforts and trials necessarily endured in the passage would effect the two very differently. The first would be very liable, by the heat, dust, unrest and want of home society, to soon become dissatisfied with the experience of journeying on that route, and begin to make some excuses to stop by the way, or return. The second, whose only inducement to undertake the journey was the hope of obtaining the treasure as a reward for the toil, expense and hardship to be borne, would be very much less liable to become disheartened by all the trying experiences of traveling.

So it is in christian experience. God's great effort in the plan through which men may be saved, is to place before them the true state of the case, so that intelligent beings may understand the situation and comprehend the conditions upon which the great reward, which all men naturally desire—eternal life—may be obtained.

The first, presents the reward in all its richness and glory, upon which true hope fastens, as the legitimate, stimulating motive to christian life. This motive is the only one known to humanity sufficiently powerful to carry men through all the trials of christian experience, even unto death, and ensure them the possession of the everlasting reward.

He next presents the path over which we must travel to reach that inheritance, showing the advantages and disadvantages, the flowers and thorns, the songs and groans to be experienced on the way, so that all may understand the general features of what they are to meet, before they commence the journey, thus saving the most fatal experience to christian perseverance—the sad disappointment of meeting trials not anticipated.

To prepare the church to escape this hidden rock, Jesus labored more ardently and explained more fully these sad experiences that his people must have than any other inspired teacher. He taught that those who would reckon on obtaining the crown of life, must bear the cross daily, and count it all joy when despised and hated of men for his name's sake. He forewarned them that if the world had hated him it would hate them also.

When he treated upon this subject at a certain time, a great congregation became indignant at his doctrine of requiring such apparent hardships and impossibilities of men, and scornfully left him with a solitary few, who were able to bear such stringent teaching for the sake of eternal life.

He not only presents the dark side to forewarn us, but to encourage us he presents the holy joy and divine communion to be experienced on the way to the heavenly Canaan.

Satan's great effort has ever been to reverse these principles, and turn the truth into a lie. The first object is to fit his theory to men's natural sinful desires, giving them pleasure where they demand it, opening such a way to obtain the great object of their pursuit as will give them pleasure in traveling it. To accomplish this he has introduced such a system of religion as will give men natural worldly pleasures in its observances. They desire present glory. He gives it. They ask for honor one of another. He grants it. They ask for self-indulgence. He permits their gratification. They desire worldly parade and pompous show in worship. This is all endorsed; and they are left to believe that they are God's servants while they are enjoying the world, its maxims, fashions, lusts and pleasures of sin.

This is the great reason why the multitudes crowd the broad way, and few find the strait gate. Satan offers present pleasures, while Christ lays upon them the heavy cross. Christ leads men to crucify the flesh, with its passions and lusts; while Satan allows them to gratify the flesh with all its sinful desires.

Here is found the secret why so many who profess to be converted to Christ so soon deny him. They are not sufficiently instructed in these things. The standard of a christian life has been so lowered, as to give men license to enjoy self and the world, while they are strangers and pilgrims here. Strange contradiction! They are made to believe that serving mammon is the service of God. Fatal infatuation!

Except a man deny himself he cannot be a disciple of Christ. The very genius of the gospel is to restrain men's fleshly lusts and natural fallen propensities, and causes them to live a live of constant self-denial. It requires us to keep up a continual warfare against the world, a worldly religion, worldly professors, and all satanic influences.

If our hope of eternal life is not much stronger than our desire for present happiness and pleasure, we shall certainly fall out by the way, and fail to reach the glorious Canaan.

Beware of that faith and hope which does not cause worldly men to look upon you, and separate you from their company, as they did Jesus Christ; for he has taught us plainly that they will treat his followers as they treated him. Do not believe that the world has been drawing near to Christ and to holiness, and so there is more harmony and less opposition between them than in the apostolic age. This is a fatal delusion. The great body of the church has gone down to the world, instead of the world coming down to Christ.

Be careful, ye faithful servants of the meek Jesus, how you join hands with those who are enjoying the friendship of the unbelieving world. In the name of Him who died for us on Calvary, we entreat you to come out from all those who love worldly honor, and are ashamed of Jesus' humble followers and of his words. The love of caste in society will damn its thousands. May God have mercy on us and save us; for it is an hour of fearful danger. J. C.

A CORRECTION.

In the report of the recent revision of the Constitution of the Adv. Chris. Association, there was a mistake made which should be corrected as follows:

Art. IX, as published in the revised Constitution, which says, "The President shall deliver an address at each annual meeting," etc., was not adopted, and should not have appeared in the report.

The following article, which was adopted, was omitted from the published report, and should be Art. VIII; and Art. VIII, as published, should be Art. IX:

Art. VIII. The annual meeting of this Association shall not be held in connection with any camp or other meeting for religious worship.

The reason of the above mistake is owing to the fact that the Secretary was obliged to leave the meeting before the revision had been entirely completed, and a Secretary pro tem appointed; and in making my report from his minutes (which, of course, were not as clear to me as though taken by myself), I made the mistake of inserting one article which was not passed, and omitting one which was. It is hoped the foregoing explanation may be satisfactory to any who may have noticed the error.

C. E. BARNES, Secretary.

THE THREE MONTHS' SUBSCRIPTION LIST.

The interest manifested in this benevolent department is worthy of all praise. It is one of the best ways I know of for doing great good with small means. Bible truth can thus be brought directly into the families of our friends, and the Crisis in most cases will be welcomed by the receiver, and its weekly visits will imperceptibly ingratiate its sacred utterances, by the Spirit of grace, into the favor and hearts of the readers, so they will see, receive, and come into sweet harmony with Bible truths and the faith once delivered to the saints.

Bro. Andrews, with many others, has responded nobly to the call; the example followed will make it a glorious success. I hope it will be carried out till the list of Crisis readers shall be doubled. It is the least objectionable method of introducing the truth, and spreading the good news of the Lord's soon coming, and the signs to prove it near, that I know of. Then let all be awake, and have a share in this good work. L. BOUTELL.

NO MAN is more likely to be himself mistaken than he who finds fault with others.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. R. Smith.

Dear Brethren:—The Lord is doing a wonderful work for the people of this place. Bro. Benj. Gifford, of Fairhaven, and myself, commenced to labor here Dec. 2nd, in the Methodist church. We commenced our labors by going from house to house, laboring individually with the people, preaching Jesus and the resurrection; and the power of God has accompanied the message.

When we commenced we found them in a pretty cold state, but the third day the ice began to melt, and three souls came to the anxious seats to be prayed for. The fourth evening the power of God came down upon the people, and seventeen more came forward, and the work is still going onward.

To the praise and glory of God I would say, there has not been a house that we have visited but what some of the family have been convicted of sin or have been converted to God; and in almost every house one or more have been hopefully converted. In one family that we visited there were four unconverted persons, and every one have been brought to a saving knowledge of the truth.

Bro. Leslie was with us a few evenings last week, tarrying with us over the Sabbath, and we had blessed, heavenly meetings all day. In the evening the power of God came down upon the people in a wonderful manner. The room was filled with the glory of God. The house was crowded to its utmost capacity. The galleries, entries and aisles and every foot of room in the house was filled. Bro. Leslie spoke on the resurrection, and the Lord helped him to speak his Word in demonstration of the Spirit and with power. Bro. Gifford and myself followed, and when the invitation was given to the unconverted, about forty rose for prayers. Between forty and fifty have professed a hope in Christ, and I think I never saw converts give brighter and clearer evidence of a real genuine conversion to God.

The people say they have not seen such a revival for many years. Bro. Smalley, the pastor of the church, is a true man of God, who believes in the personal coming of Jesus Christ to raise the dead and change the righteous living, and that the inheritance of the saints will be upon the new earth, and that Jesus will be the King of the world as revealed in God's blessed Bible. He was in perfect sympathy with us, and we have become very much attached to him. Don't forget to pray for him.

North Harwich, Dec. 18th, 1875.

From Bro. R. Mosher.

Brn. Editors:—Perhaps some would like to hear what I am doing, and how the churches are prospering where I have been laboring. I have been preaching at Lake George, N. Y.; Keene, N. H.; Castleton, Vt.; Pepperill, Mass.; and at Hoosick Conference, where I met Elder Munger, who preached two very instructive discourses.

I found the brethren at Castleton united, and much animated in prospect of obtaining their former pastor, Eld. Mathewson. God bless them in their reunion of pastor and church. I found the brethren in Keene seeking for the old paths, and reviving their former organization, so as to get in working order. God bless them in their effort.

I found the church at Pepperill, Mass., few in number, and much persecuted, yet they are struggling hard for victory. They have a convenient hall to worship in, and some excellent gifts in the church for prayer and exhortation. I gave them twelve discourses, and we enjoyed an interesting communion season. God bless them, is my prayer.

Sandy Hill church is waking up and exerting a more healthy influence. In October Brn. Waite, Ross and Munger visited us, and preached to good acceptance. Nov. 6th, at a business meeting, Elder Arthur Waite was unanimously chosen pastor of the church, and on Sunday, Dec. 12th, commenced his labors with us. Our meetings have come up gloriously. They are encouraging, and increasing both in numbers and in interest. Last week, at our prayer meetings, one was converted and two backsliders returned to their Father's house. Some few of our last prayer-meetings were the best we have had for years. The saints were made happy in the love and mercy of God. The church is well united and in good working order. Eld. Waite seems to be the man for this place. He is a ready speaker, and preaches the Advent doctrine as taught in God's Word, plain and pointed, and without fear. He is not a money beggar, neither does he compromise with sectarianism for the sake of friends or the applause of the popular. We feel much encouraged that truth will triumph over error in this place, and that many will yet see and believe that Christ is soon coming to judge the world and give rest to his weary saints.

Sandy Hill, N. Y., Dec. 31st, 1875.

From Bro. Ali Andrews.

Yesterday (Dec. 26th) Sr. E. A. W. was with us; and that was not all, for the Holy Spirit was as truly with us as he was with the early church, which contended for the faith once delivered to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Our prayer-meeting at 10½ A. M. was more than good. Preaching at 2 and 7 P. M. Subject at 2 was concerning the first advent of the Wonderful, the Counsellor, who was given unto us; and in the evening on his coming to live with us. After the evening services, we had a conference meeting for young converts, and more than a score arose to testify to what God had done for them in opening their eyes to see these great truths we love so dearly. One said he had had a name to live for five years in the —— Church, but had not been fed until he came to our meetings and heard the reasons of our hope, which had made a new man of him; so he claimed to be a young convert. A Baptist brother, who was in, caught the fire, and rose to testify for Jesus.

The good Lord is giving us favor with the people. We expect a large number will be baptized when Bro. G. L. White visits us the 16th of January. We feel confident all of the signs given us of the coming One are in the past; therefore we are waiting, like unto men that wait for their Lord. As it is written of this time, "Now the just shall live by faith."

Bridgeport, Ct., Dec. 27th, 1875.

From Bro. Edwin Burnham.

Brethren:—I have received various invitations, during several recent years of my ministry, to preach the Word to you, but have not found time to comply. I think I may have more time in the future. Please write to me freely at Newburyport, Mass., all who may desire me to visit you, and I will get at you as fast as I can. I want a great deal of work, and but little money, and no sectarianism.

Newburyport, Mass., Jan. 2nd, 1876.

IOWA MISSION TENT.

Brn. Editors:—It has been over twenty years that I have been doing mission work in Iowa. All the help from the East has been in tracts, etc. Ten years of this time I have had a tent, which was old and second handed when I got it; but by care I have been able to do some good work with it. It has now become necessary to replace a part or have a new one. I have a chance to get one cheap from the East, and hope to receive help from the brethren East as well as West to obtain it.

I purpose to make a middle 30 feet, and use part of the fixtures of the old, having two centre poles. The tent will be 50 × 80 feet. Then take the old top to make family tents for the preachers and the poor at the camp-meetings. With my help this all can be obtained for about $200, I think. Now, how light it would be for two hundred to put in a dollar apiece. A number have pledged even more than that. I hope that every one who reads this will feel it duty to invest a little in the bank of heaven in this way for the mission cause. Send on your pledge, and speak to others who may not read this, and thus aid the cause of Christ in Iowa.

Thousands have heard the truth under the old tent, and many now rejoice in the true light. If they would do as they have been done by, they will contribute to help this enterprise, that others may be brought out of darkness into the light.

Subscriptions may be sent to me, or to the Crisis Office, which will be duly credited and thankfully received.

Charles City, Iowa. P. S. W. DEYO.

REQUEST.—Dear Brn. in the Ministry:—Please write some articles in the Crisis on the atonement, or at-one-ment, as I have not yet heard anything satisfactory upon that subject. Tell us whether the at-one-ment is completed here; whether Christ makes or has made it, or if it takes Christ and man to make it. If conditional, how can he atone for the opposite, which is unbelief and impenitence? Is it the result of good works; or do good works bring us to an at-one-ment with God? I hope some one will feel disposed to write upon it, for I want some light in that direction. Yours in Christ,

D. B. HUNT.

Knoxville, Dec. 25th, 1875.

MANY persons are judged harshly by the world because they allow no eye to see into the inner sanctuaries of their hearts.

REVIVALS.—Where is the church that does not need reviving? The confession is general and true that faith among christians is too weak, love too feeble, zeal too cold. Of course, a revival is hence a duty and necessity. It is also practicable; the blessing is within reach; all can obtain and enjoy it. Thorough consecration will open the door to stronger faith, increase of love, and then power will come gloriously. We once knew a church that met the situation wisely. In conference they agreed that spiritual life was too low, and that they would take steps to become right before the Lord. Every night, for one week, they met to pray, confess, search their hearts, and make consecration. At the end of the week, all who then felt they had reached satisfactory consecration and spiritual communion, were asked to raise a hand. No hand was raised. Another week of heart searching, prayer and consecration was resolved upon. At the close, a few confessed to fulness of the Spirit, but many were still unsatisfied. Another week of heart-work was taken, and the subsoiling, deep heart-searching went on. The whole cry of the saints was for thorough crucifixion of self, and fulness of Christ. No effort was made to persuade sinners to repent, no sermons were preached; pastor and people gave all their thoughts to personal salvation, and the blessings came in like a flood. Before the third week closed, the unconverted began to press for the kingdom, and they kept coming for weeks and months. The fountains were opened, and poured out wealth like flowing wells, in ceaseless abundance. A similar course would bring like blessings to any people. When the old man of sin goes down, the tide of salvation rises; carnal crushing is always followed by spiritual revival—Union in Christ.

Washington, Dec. 29. The following interesting letter has just been received here:

"SAN DIEGO, Cal., Dec. 17.

HON. B. H. BRISTOW, Secretary of the Treasury:

Sir: It may not be improper to allude in this letter to the present trouble on the boundary line. On the 4th inst, a band of Mexican bandits, ten in number, attacked the Gaskill brothers at their store in Milquatay. Both the Gaskills were wounded, one it is feared fatally. The Gaskills killed one of the robbers, and, it appears, wounded three or four others. The bandits robbed the store of everything valuable. They also at the same time robbed three other settlers in the vicinity, and shot one of them, but not fatally. It also appears that the same gang of robbers, one or two days previous to the attack on the Gaskills, brutally murdered a Mr. LeClair and ex-Judge Sosa, who were on their way to this city from Lower California.

Much apprehension is felt by settlers all along the line. Two of the robbers were caught the next day after the attack, and taken in charge by the Sheriff of this county. That night the guard was overpowered and the robbers hung by unknown parties. Threats of retaliation have been made.

Lower California has long been a refuge for criminals and desperadoes. Within a short time nineteen men have been murdered near the boundary line, nearly all of whom were American citizens.

Of late it appears that a considerable number of Sonorians have come into Lower California. They are generally well armed, and many believe that they are the cause of the present troubles.

Rumors of political troubles and an impending revolution in Lower California are rife. However that may be, it is quite evident that the desperadoes there have organized for robbery and plunder, and there will be but little security for the lives and property of the settlers along the line.

The authorities in Lower California appear to be doing all in their power to crush out the gang. The citizens of this city raised a fund by individual subscription and dispatched a small party of well-armed men to Milquatay, there to remain as a guard for a time. Very respectfully,

W. W. BOWERS, Collector."

Obituaries.

PEARSON. In Webster, N. H., Nov. 27th, 1875, Sister Sarah Couch, wife of Paul Pearson, aged seventy-one years.

Sister S. was our eldest sister, and the first deceased of our father's children; myself being the youngest. She was a sister greatly beloved from the earliest dawn of our recollection; for her heart was sympathetic and true, her eye followed us anxiously, and her hands tenderly assisted us in the days of our helpless innocence. From the days of our childhood no unkind word ever passed between us; not a frown did we ever see upon her loving face, nor did her sisterly greeting ever fail us.

In her childhood she gave her heart truly and loyally to Christ, and kept the sacred covenant until the expiring hour came, when, in great physical agonies, but in the glorious triumphs of a saving christian faith, she calmly yielded all into the hands of Him who died to redeem her. She was an affectionate, faithful wife, a loving and indulgent mother, a tender and devoted sister, a quiet, retiring, but devout and true-hearted christian, beloved in life and lamented in death by all who knew her. We can submissively say, Sleep sweetly in Jesus, dear sister, and rest from thy toils and cares until the dawning of a brighter day shall bless thy waking eyes, and the glories of a deathless world shall give eternal raptures to thy ceaseless visions.

J. C.

HITCHCOCK. Fell asleep in Jesus, at Vernon, Ct., Dec. 12th, 1875, Lida D. May, wife of D. H. Hitchcock, of Springfield, Mass., aged thirty-nine years.

In youth she gave her heart to the Savior, and was baptized by Bro. Walter Pratt, of blessed memory. She was a great sufferer for many years, but the great Physician, with whom her life was hid, will raise her up in the morning, giving her a healthy body; for it will be immortal.

Chosen in the furnace of affliction, the purifying process only seemed to bring out the sweet, unselfish affection, that made her a personal friend to everybody. I have learned some precious lessons by her bedside, and her patience and uncomplaining submission while suffering such intense agony, revealed to me possibilities of grace after which I aspire with earnest longings. If I could not adopt the language of Martha, "I know" she "will rise again," my grief would be unendurable.

May the dear child, sisters and brother, and all who feel this bereavement, find consolation in Jesus, as does her weary waiting mother,

MRS. B. ELLIS.

WOODS. In West Farmington, Maine, August 10th, 1875, Mrs Betsey Woods, widow of the late Major John F. Woods, aged eighty-eight years.

Sister Woods had for many years been an humble and faithful follower of Jesus, loving his Word, service, and people, making her house a home for pilgrims, and the cause of Christ a special theme. She saw that the Scriptures taught the entire mortality of man, his unconsciousness in death, and the glorious hope of the resurrection of the dead at the return of the blessed Savior, and rejoiced in the prospect of Jesus' coming to give eternal life to his saints. She was the mother of seven sons and daughters, who are all yet living, and in advanced age. During the last seven years her home was with Bro. and Sr. Oakes, her son-in-law and daughter, where she was kindly cared for, and where she died in peace and in hope.

I. C. WELLCOME.

BRONSON. In East Kent, Dec. 1st, 1875, of consumption, Bro. Silas T. Bronson, aged sixty-eight years.

Another 1843 pilgrim has fallen. He was one of the first to embrace the Advent faith on East Kent Mountain, in a great revival, under the labors of Eld. S. G. Mathewson and others. His house was always a home for pilgrims, and he always contended earnestly for the faith once delivered to the saints. He leaves a wife and one son to mourn, but not as those who have no hope. His funeral was attended by a Congregationalist minister, Mr. Upson. He sleeps, but not forever.

IRA MORGAN.

JACKMAN. In Woodstock, N. H., June 21st, 1875, Julia A., wife of Jesse Jackman, aged forty years. Also, in the same place, Nov. 2nd, 1875, Jesse Jackman, aged forty-five years.

Death's first entrance into this family was to take a kind and faithful wife and mother, whose loss was deeply felt by the surviving companion for a few short months, when he, too, felt its sting and succumbed to its power. Together they rest till Jesus comes, while seven children drink the bitter cup of orphanage.

T. E. L.

THAXTER. In West Somerville, Mass., Jan. 2d, 1876, Sister Mary A. Thaxter, aged eighty-eight years.

She was a godly woman "of like precious faith" with those looking for Christ,—a consistent, modest, faithful christian. Cheered by the good hope, she fell sweetly asleep, to awake to life at the coming of her Master, and the resurrection of the just. The funeral was attended Jan. 5th, by the writer.

FOREIGN NEWS.

MADRID, Jan. 3. A decree has been issued by the Government convoking the Cortes, and ordering the elections under universal suffrage. The Ministry promise religious toleration, freedom of the press, a parliamentary monarchy, and a vigorous maintenance of order in Cuba and the West Indies.

PARIS, Jan. 6. Advices of a terrible catastrophe on the Island of Reunion, one of the Mascarene group, in the Indian Ocean, have just been received here. By the falling of an immense rock sixty-five people were buried, nearly all of whom were instantly killed, and at the latest accounts it was impossible to extricate the unfortunate victims, some of them being still alive.

VIENNA, Jan. 6. Advices from Celligne state that Montenegro has despatched troops to the frontier, contracted a large loan, and has ordered from a firm in America 10,000 rifles and 60 cannons to be delivered in March.

ROME, Jan. 6. King Victor Emanuel, in his New Year's speech at the court reception, mentioned the possibility of events transpiring in Europe which would require the co-operation of the Italian army.

A recent dispatch from Berlin gives the information that only one part of the Andrassy scheme for the pacification of Turkey had been adopted by the Great Powers. It has defined the nature of the control which the treaty powers should exercise. The manner of applying the reforms still remains to be decided by Austria and Russia; and very delicate diplomacy will be required to settle this matter.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

THE "school question" at Chitre, Panama, has assumed a dangerous phase. A teacher of a boys' school objected to two Spanish friars occupying nearly the entire time the school was open in religiour teaching, as no other knowledge could be imparted to the pupils. The friars next denounced the "godless" school, with the result of reducing the number of children in attendance ance from ninety to thirty. The friars also urged the Catholics to expel the foreigners, and seemed to copy the conduct of the priests who incited the horrible massacre at San Miguel. At the time the latest dispatches were received, a rising against the Protestants was apparently imminent. Such outbursts of ignorance, ambition and fanaticism are instructive.

THE father of the child to whom the Newport Roman Catholic priest refused burial rites because she was sent to a "Protestant school," has made an affidavit to the facts, and there is no longer any doubt of two things: first that the priest did so refuse for the reason alleged, and that he denied it afterward. An appeal was taken to the bishop, who sustained the priest as a matter of course.

FIVE States have already provided constitutional law against sectarian instruction in their schools. The States are South Carolina, Kansas, Arkansas, Nebraska, and Nevada. The people of no State have ever voted down the proposition.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF WISCONSIN.—This Conference having been separated from the State Campmeeting, will hold its next annual meeting at Arena, beginning on the evening of the 10th of February, 1876, and holding over the Lord's day following. We trust that our ministers will make timely arrangements to attend, and that the different churches will immediately appoint delegates, providing them funds to come with if they need aid, and thus secure a general attendance. Let not your ministers be kept away for want of funds to meet traveling expenses. Let not the hard times enter too largely into the interests of the cause of truth which we are trying to promote. Arena is on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R., Prairie du Chien branch, about forty miles from Madison. If it is impossible for any church or minister to report by delegate or in person, be sure to write a letter.

Work while the Day Lasts.

The Missionary Association formed at Pittsfield Campmeeting, Sept. 9th, 1875, proposed to procure a Tent for Mission work in the Eastern part of Maine, said Tent to be raised in one hundred shares, and all to be taken up by the first day of May, 1876. The Tent, with a small one to go with it, will cost only three hundred dollars. Dear Brn. and Srs., shall we not have one hundred shares, of $3 00 each, at once? Those who are not able to take one, can get several to club together, and send in a pledge by postal card, to be paid the first day of May, 1876, and help to send the gospel of the kingdom into some new places while time lasts. Working time is almost over. Shall we not have a response to this by mail from all who are able to help? We shall order the Tent made at once.

Direct to Jer. Carr, South Albion, Me.

For the Association, { O. S. FRENCH. JER. CARR.

Notice---Baptism, or Rantism.

Orders for this work are coming in, but in order to ensure its publication, it will be necessary that they pour in sufficiently to warrant the cost of publishing an edition without loss, which cannot be afforded. The work will be of interest, I trust, as old ground will be re-explored in a manner to bring out all the truth we can discover, and new ground not yet much explored will be dug over for the sake of discovering the whole truth. It is as yet but little known what Rantism is, or what its relation is to Baptism, if any, and specially to the great atonement. Let all who would like the work, and will be willing to encourage its publication, send on their orders by postal card to me, to RICHMOND, PROV. QUE., CANADA. The work will be afforded as cheaply as possible. Please send on your orders, brethren and sisters. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen.

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

"FOR UNTO THEE WILL I PRAY."

S. B. B.

What could we do in hours of dread,
When clouds foreboding o'er our head
No brightness show,
But darkly spread funeral haze
O'er all our path, o'er all the ways
Which we must go?

Where could we look, when to our eyes
Tear-dimning mists to blinding rise,
Shutting the light
Of gladness out, the light of day ·
Leaving a gloom whose every ray
Seemeth like night?

Where could we look in all our care,
But to that Friend who heareth prayer?
He bids us come,
Bringing our burden and our grief,
To find in prayer a sweet relief,
Dispelling gloom.

Light, life and joy, from love divine,
Is shed on this poor heart of mine—
This weary heart,
And more than idols taken, chastening given,
Earth's treasures lost, or friendship riven,
Love doth impart.

Riches, beyond our highest thought,
Joys, worldly toils have never wrought,
Treasures untold.
Help us to wait, dear Lord, and be Patient, submissive, till with thee
In thy safe fold.

Sheltered from sin; through thy rich grace
We come to see thee "face to face."
And then to know
That thou did'st lead us all the way,
Through sorrow taught us how to pray,
Thou lovest us so.

RAMBLES IN NOTTH CAROLINA.

J. J. SMITH.

As Bro. Cargile informed you, I consented to visit the dear ones that he had banded together in N. C.; but as my son had been ill with typhoid fever for a month, and I had no other help to do the out-door labor, it was with some hesitancy that I consented to leave my family so long, especially as my little crop was not yet gathered. But I had consented to go on the condition that my son should continue convalescent. I expected to gather the crop and get up fire-wood before I should leave, but, for a week before I left, it rained almost incessantly day and night. The time was up. The brethren in N. C. were expecting me, and they were to send a horse eighty miles for me to ride from the R. R. station. It seemed duty to go, and I trusted the Lord to take care of my family.

On the 4th day of Nov. I left them and went to Stevenson to see Bro. Cargile, and get information about the various points open to the truth in N. C. On the 5th, at 2 o'clock P. M., took the train for Johnson City, which I reached at 8½ A. M. next day. I found young Bro. Finley Coffey on hand with horses. He had been there since 3 P. M. the day before. The hotel keeper, having been carded that I was behind time, informed him, and he waited my arrival.

We set out up the Watauga river, a stream that threads its way through densely-packed mountains, sometimes crowding the stream into very narrow limits, which left no room for our road, but over some high precipice, that looked frightful. I found the weather in these mountains much colder than any I had felt this season. We rode on until into the night. The gloom was solemn; the stillness was broken only by the maddening roar of Watauga's waters as the sounds came rushing through the densely-dark forest of hemlock, white-pines, and mountain-ivy.

On reaching a summit we found a small dwelling, at which we called to inquire the distance to a house we wished to reach. A lady informed us it was about six miles. We asked if we could stay there, as it was late, and we were cold. She hesitated, saying her husband was from home, and there was no one to take care of the horses. At length she inquired who we were, where from, etc. As we were inquiring for the place where Bro. Cargile had preached, she seemed to suspect that I might be a preacher too. Having gratified her curiosity in that respect, she most cordially invited us to alight, and she would show us the feed for our horses. After the horses were fed, we enjoyed a good supper, and, after sitting half an hour, retired to rest quietly for the night. Long before day the man of the house, who had come in from seeking help to husk his corn, rose, made a big fire in his chimney, fed our horses, and had breakfast for us before day. He had heard Bro. Cargile preach, and was glad there were more of the same sort. Hoped to hear more of such preaching. He apologized for charging us twelve and a half cents for each horse feed, but charged nothing for ourselves. I learned from Mr. John Jones (for that was his name) that the people in that region had waked up to reading the Scriptures. Hope a good work is begun here.

Nov. 7th. Passing over this, the Blue Ridge, the highest of this range of mountains, at the head of Watauga river, we turn over to John's river, a tributary to the Catawba. Having been informed that this awful solitude was sometimes infested with horse thieves and highway robbers, I was meditating upon the chances as I passed a dark ravine thickly set with laurel brush. My thoughts were quickened when I saw a lone dog, which might indicate that his master was about, though invisible. We had a good horse and mule which we might ride but a little further. Suddenly thoughts were turned to the sound of horses' feet distant before me. A rough looking, stout man appeared in front of us. On approaching him Bro. Finley spoke to him, calling him by name. He looked surprised when I said, "It is Drury Coffey's son." He exclaimed, "And who are you?" When I gave my name, he said, "I thought so. I want you to call at my house, get your dinner, and feed your horses, and be sure and give me a two days meeting at my house before you leave the country." He gave his name as Reuben Coffey. I complied with both his requests, as I will relate in its proper place.

At o'clock at night, after riding over this rough country a distance of about eighty-five miles in less than two days, we arrived at Bro. D. D. Coffey's, worn out, every muscle in limb and body sore. I have not made as hard a ride on horseback in twenty-five years. I rested one day and began the work of my mission.

Sunday, Nov. 9th. Preached for the brethren at the new church, near Colletsville. Had a fair assemblage, who seemed to hear with interest the Word from John 15:18. Bro. J. J. Presnell was received as a member. At night had a prayer-meeting at Bro. Henry Coffey's. Brethren and sisters testified for Jesus. We had a precious season; the Lord blessed us.

Nov. 10th. Visited Bro. I. Coffey's family, where our very dear Bro. Otis F. Goodwin's wife lies prostrate with lung disease. We yet hope she is not past recovery. All that man's skill can do for her seems to be done. How sad to see that sparkling eye and lovely countenance dimming and paling before the inroad of disease.

Nov. 11th. Preached again at the new church to a small congregation. Some out that would not come to hear Bro. Cargile, because they had said that they would not hear him.

Nov. 12th. I was called upon to marry Bro. J. J. Presnell and Sr. Horton. Had a pleasant social gathering. 13th. Rested, my lungs being sore. 14th. Rode to Curry's Grove, six miles, and preached. The people seemed to drink in the Bible doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead. After I had left, they held a consultation that resulted in an invitation for me to preach there again before returning home, which I agreed to do. At night preached again, at the new church.

Nov. 15th. Preached twice at the new church. 16th. Preached at the same place, to a fair congregation for a rainy day. At night preached to an assembly at Bro. Joel Crisp's. 17th, rested, my lungs hurting me very much. Thus far I have had all the labor to bear alone, only as Bro. Goodwin has helped me a few times, not being able to leave his afflicted wife, only as occasionally relieved by others.

Nov. 18th. Preached again at Curry's Grove. The day was wet and cold, but many were out, and seemed to be much interested.

Nov. 19th. Went up Mulberry River to Elijah Moore's, who furnished me with a horse to ride to my appointments up the John's River and at Blowing Rock. 20th. Preached at the Globe school-house. 21st. Rode through a heavy rain-storm, going up, up, up, up the Blue Ridge on a steep ascent of four miles to an elevation of more than four thousand feet above the Atlantic Ocean. Here is Blowing Rock, a point around which Bro. Cargile labored to good effect. My first appointment was at Bro. Morris'. Here I made the acquaintance of Bro. Thomas F. Nelson, a Baptist minister of ability and high standing in his denomination. He is liberal toward us, and has been for months, reading the Bible with a new interest. He now professes to see clearly that eternal life is only attainable through Christ; that the church is not the kingdom of Christ; that the kingdom is to be set up at the second appearing of Christ. He has the care of four churches, and has ably argued these three points before one of these churches, and has convinced some of their error in holding to the contrary. He wants books and tracts, which he is not able to buy. He will make good use of them, I think.

Nov. 22nd. Preached twice in Bro. Shirrell's house. There appeared to be much interest. The Lord helped me to make the truth plain. 23d. It rained and fogged all day. It was a dark day from fog. But the people came out to hear again. I think the truth is taking hold here. There are many around Blowing Rock P. O. who want tracts. Should the lovers of truth have books or tracts that they are willing to give to honest inquirers, they will please to send them by mail to Rev. Thos. F. Nelson, Blowing Rock P. O., Watauga Co., N. C.

Will give some interesting accounts in my next. Yours in the labor of love.

BYOOKLYN, N. Y.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

We began meetings here Nov. 28th, in Everett Hall, 398 Fulton St. The expectation was that we should bring together old believers in this city, who are strong in the Advent faith, some of whom have been formerly connected with meetings here, and some in other places; and, at the same time, that we should bring strangers to hear upon the precious truths which we inculcate; also that we might labor for the upbuilding of the cause in every particular required by the Master. It was felt to be desirable that this should be done to the satisfaction of all, who have a real interest in the second coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

We have succeeded well thus far, and the friends feel very much encouraged, at least, by the attendance, and also by the religious aspect of the effort we have made. Our congregations have been very good in numbers, and composed of intelligent people. Our meetings have all been excellent. The prayer and conference meetings especially have certainly been of a first rate order. It is a remarkable fact that in every meeting of this kind, whether on Sunday forenoon, or week-day evening, all the time has been improved, and well improved, with the experience and general testimony of those who love the Lord and love the truth; while exposition, with abundant and warm-hearted song, has qualified the exercises. Really, the hymnal part of the devotions has been very elevating. The effect of all is salutary.

Our preaching has been of the plain and practical kind, we trust; somewhat, we have thought, like Paul's, "expounding and teaching concerning the kingdom of God"; and, also, as duty and disposition have demanded, we have dwelt upon the prominent and palpable signs of the times. They are cumulative. They are at present looming up most grandly. Awfulness pertains to every great, new fact.

We have in these two grand departments a field for work which should now employ the mightiest minds, and which is calling into action the energies of a thinking class who will not be silent, as well as awakening the slumbering faith of the church through the length and breadth of the land.

A disposition to aid in the expense has been manifested, giving us more flattering prospects than we at first anticipated. There is a spirit of harmony and union among us, and a disposition to work for the good cause, without attempting to introduce side issues, or make a test of questions which are many-sided, and upon which the best of brethren entertain conflicting views. We wish to work together in love, for the promotion of the true ones who are looking for Christ and seeking a preparationto meet him.

All seem imbued with the importance of the old message—the long-lived work of the "flying angel." The veterans are revived, while new people, coming in with us, are rejoicing in the wealth of their affection for the old Bible truth of the kingdom of heaven. The interest, we hope and believe, is a permanent one. We are sure God is at work with us, and we most confidently expect that we shall be able to establish the word of faith, and bring men to Christ.

ANOTHER HALL.

The gentleman who let us Everett Hall having broken the contract, by intruding a temperance [order] meeting upon us, abridging our time, we have left, and are without a place since Wednesday eve, 15th; but we shall soon obtain one, for there is a determination to press onward.

UNCLE DANIEL AND THE DOCTOR.---No. 2.

C. COLEGROVE.

Rat-tat-tat. Uncle Daniel is at the doctor's door about seven P. M., on a star-lit November night. In the fashion of these unceremonious times, the doctor calls out in round and hearty tones—"Come in!" and the bent and wiry form of our honest old uncle is straightway revealed. The well worn cap is removed, and the dim but restless gray eyes of the visitor look from beneath a pair of shaggy brows straight into the doctor's face.

Doctor. "Ah, how do ye do, sir! Wife, give uncle a chair. Take a seat by the fire this frosty night. How is aunty?"

Uncle. "All well as common, thank'ee. I reckon you must be pretty stiff with your long jags now-a-days. I see the old sulky drive up an hour or two ago, and thinks I, I'll give the doctor a call. The fact is, that are soul question keeps a working on my mind, and I wanted to ease up my brain with a little talk again."

Doctor. "All right, uncle. Glad to see you every time. It is impossible to run in all the ruts of popular or prevailing opinion. A man of independent habits of thought is unwilling to wear a yoke that does'nt fit his shoulders, at least, until he sees whether it is God's yoke of truth, or Satan's yoke of error."

Uncle. "Just so, doctor. Some of these things that most every body thinks must be so, don't ree'ly seem to bear a thorough searching. I declare, I am worked up and ashamed to think almost the whole mortal world of Adam's posterity, think they are in'ardly immortal,—believe they are alive arter they are dead, believe they know a wonderful sight when the Bible says they don't know nothing, believe they dart up to heaven like an arrow, when they just go down to the grave, and wait till Jesus comes, before they can ever stir a finger out of that sleep."

Doctor. "Well, uncle, I remember you quoted a passage just before you went out the other evening,—'The living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything.' That is one of King Solomon's 'antithetic parallels.' The force of the latter clause is intensified by its sharp comparison with the first. Now in this case, is the first clause true—'the living know that they shall die?' Nobody disputes it, except a few who hope in God's Providence they may live to see Jesus coming bodily in glory. Every son of Adam knows he must die. He knows so much because he has seen men die, or lost all sight and sign of men that are dead,—he sees death busy everywhere,—he sees the villages of the dead growing in population,—he feels infirmities himself,—he knows the dead are in uncounted millions among beasts, birds, fishes, insects, and the minutest animated atoms. If he is not a fool, he knows by an inexorable law, he must die. Very well; if this is true, so is the other saying true, "the dead know not anything." Why not admit it? Why distort, or pervert, or contradict a plain declaration?"

Uncle (with a nervous hitch)—"Just so exactly. I believe just what the Bible says. A dead man is just what he looks to be. His eyes are closed, his hearing is gone, his heart has stopped beating, and his brain hasn't the faintest notion of an idea in it. Death is a great enemy, but it don't lie, or leastwise, the looks o'nt don't belie it. And I'm sartain God meant what he said, though when the living know something and know they must die, they think they know they won't be really dead when they are dead. They think they will know they are'nt dead when Scriptur' says they won't know anything. I declare it's provoking to common sense, any way." And with that uncle Daniel dealt a vigorous blow with his right hand to his right leg, just above the knee.

Doctor. "People would n't exactly think of throwing Ecclesiastes from the Scripture canon for the sake of getting rid of the asserted unconsciousness of death, which it contains. But I once heard a man maintain in discussing this subject, that what the preacher meant, was the undeniable unconsciousness of all the dead beneath the sun. He claimed that this was a modifying phrase restricting mental oblivion to the dead on earth, but as the souls of saints were beyond the sun in heaven, or paradise, of course their knowledge there, was indisputable."

Uncle. "Wall, I declare!" looking straight at the doctor.

Doctor. "But you see the fact is, I wanted this gentleman to produce the first Scripture that asserted or intimated that the souls of dead men had ever ascended into an ultra-solar region, or ever reached a point in space that should leave our majestic orb of light, a mere speck or point in boundless vastness faintly visible behind them. And then again, taking the view he did, there was an utter end to the prevailing idea that the souls of friends re-visit earth. For athwart a space included within the sun's orbit, or the earth's orbit around the sun, a region nearly two hundred millions of miles in diameter, even immortal souls must have undergone all suspension of intellectual functions. But then, the fact is, 'the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth,' 'the perfect shall remain in it,'—'no man hath ascended up to heaven' save the Lord Jesus, and 'the meek shall inherit the earth.' There was much Scripture of the same kind. It is a settled fact that the dead know nothing under the sun, and there is no warrant for supposing they get beyond the sun, certainly not before a resurrection. Even then they rise to meet a coming Lord, who from far above all heavens, has come through labyrinths of immensity to receive them."

Uncle. "I don't suppose it's a good plan to speculate much, but then, if the souls get beyond the sun, they are still within the airths orbit, until they travel another hundred million miles or so. But then the simple fact on't is, the dead know nothing forever, until Jesus comes, and that makes every thing all right, for he is the resurrection and the life, and the life comes arter the resurrection."

Doctor. Well, now I was speaking a moment ago, in regard to the book of Ecclesiastes, as inspired and undoubted authority. And just here I might quote from a very able work by Prof. E. P. Barrows, of Andover Theological Seminary, entitled 'Companion to the Bible,' which says 'the canonical authority of the book of Ecclesiastes remains as a well established fact. It always held a place in the Hebrew canon, and existed there in its present form in the days of Christ and his apostles.' Still, I suspect there is a lurking doubt in some minds, and less respect for the good book than for some other portions of Scripture."

Uncle. "Yes, yes! And that isn't all. You don't often hear these passages read in public, that call a dead man dead, and I declare, I reckon they are not really liked first-rate, but I go in for the truth, no matter how straight it goes agin some popular idee."

Doctor. "It seems to me in a future age of pure and perfect intelligence, it will seem wonderful to contemplate in the retrospect the common error of opinion in regard to the dead. How heathenism became so fastened like a parasite on the truth, how error like a huge barnacle, or cluster of barnacles, clung to the gospel keel, retarding the motion of the good ship."

"Of course," replied uncle Daniel, glancing off at some object in the wall, and with nervous quickness looking straight back at the doctor;—"and the Lord only knows how much this notion of men's having such a mighty sight of sense, when their sense is all gone, keeps the world back in the devil's power, for he don't come to set things right, and the fact is people ought to ask him to come and do it. But they think so much of a man's having his glory before the Lord comes, that I don't know but he stays back, till there's a different state of mind among 'em," and uncle Daniel's long, gray eyebrows worked up and down over his dim, gray eyes.

Doctor. "Well, uncle, I hope the time will come soon when people will be honest and candid enough to believe the positive assertion of God's word that in sheol there is no intelligence or memory, or any function of intellect at all. They must come to this. The declaration covers the whole ground. It is simple and decisive. The language is so comprehensive and categorical, as to admit of neither evasion nor denial. There has got to be a revolution of opinion before the church's theology is even Scriptural. The alleged consciousness of the dead is perpetually occurring to the common mind, or dominant in it, and the influence of educated men is constantly strengthening that belief," and the doctor delivered his sentiment with certain vigorous inclinations of his noble, intellectual head.

Uncle. "There ain't many things that hold a harder grip on a man than an old religious opinion, or an old religious tradition. A lie that's sacred is a hard lie to shake off. But there ain't much sacredness in a lie any way—to my way of thinking," and uncle Daniel rose to his feet quickly, and moving his chair a few inches nearer the doctor, sat down again.

Doctor. "Well, uncle," and the doctor spoke in a subdued and earnest tone of voice,—"let us remember this subject in our prayers, and beg of God to change the face of creation, both in things natural and things theological. There is power in prayer."

Uncle. "That's what I believe, doctor," and the old man gave a sudden hitch, and made a pass with his hand across his eyes so rapidly, that a stranger would not have known it was done to brush away a tear. "I believe it, I believe it!" And here the conversation ended for that night.

THE POOR.

My heart is aching always
For the wretched, suffering poor;
For the ragged, hungry children,
Begging bread from door to door;
For the puny, pallid infant,
For the shelterless and old,
Who faint beneath the scorching sun,
Or shiver in the cold.

The rich man passes idly by,
Nor heeds the piteous tale
That breathes of human sorrow
When the winds of winter wail;
But he hastens on unheeding,
And leaves them to their fate,
To reach his glowing fireside,
Where warmest welcomes wait.

O, could you for a moment see
The shivering of that form
You leave in want and misery
To brave the pelting storm,
Or mark the bitter anguish hid
Beneath that tattered veil,
The faces round your pleasant hearth
Would glimmer wan and pale!

For your eyes would feel a dimness
And a sudden overflow
Of pity for that suffering child
Of penury and woe;
And at the portals of your heart
You'd hear an angel's plea:—
"O, save this houseless orphan,
And I will dwell with thee!"

When pleasure's fairest flowers shall bloom
Without the storms of sin,
And justice, truth and charity
Their happy reign begin;
Then universal love shall rule
Throughout the glorious earth,
And every child of destiny
Rejoice in that new birth.

Correspondence.

From Sr. Mary L. Tower.

Brethren and sisters in the Lord:—Since the last October Conference I have been very busy, striving with an eye single to the glory of God, to faithfully perform all the tasks he has given me. I have traveled nearly two hundred miles to fill my several appointments, and twice by invitation have visited the little church in Woodford, Vt., where Bro. Higley has labored with good success. He has an interesting Sunday-school, and although the weather was stormy when I was there, a goodly number came out to hear. Two arose for prayer the last afternoon I was there.

It seems to me that there is a very defective system of cooperation between our preachers. When men are laboring alone and without much compensation, it would be cheering indeed if others who are differently situated would occasionally exchange with them. It would also be beneficial to the people. Many times it is a fact that preachers of other denominations are more ready to exchange than our own when pay is small.

My brethren, these things ought not so to be. I have labored in some churches that do not belong to any conference, and some of the people who watch the movements of things say, "If the conference can only raise money enough to pay two or three of the leaders to stay in one place, or visit wealthy parishes, it is useless for small and poor churches to join," and thus some good, honest souls are left like sheep without a shepherd, and sinners are saying, "No one cares for our souls.

"Where are the watchmen, faithful, true,
Who sleep not all the dark night through?
Who love the flock, and not the fleece,
Who'd rather work than take their ease?"

Thank God, there are a few Joshuas left who will bear the blood-stained banner of Jesus amid the hosts of sin! I have by the special earnest request of several visited East Savoy, Mass. Only two evening meetings had been held there in one year. The chapel was well filled, and good attention paid to the word preached, after which several spoke, among whom was a man who had been living in a backslidden state for several years. There was once quite a church there, but from various causes the people are scattered now. O for men of the cementing love that will bind people together instead of scattering them.

At the New State Chapel I have tried to speak words of truth though in much trembling. I trust some seed has been sown which will be recognized in the great harvest day. Bro. Teeple has visited them a few days, and his earnest, truthful preaching was like water to thirsty souls. May the Lord reward him is my prayer.

It seems to me that there is a wide field for missionary labor in almost every direction. O that God would send faithful laborers that would proclaim the truth with power so that sinners might inquire the way, and be converted to him. "Blessed" says the Psalmist, "is the man that maketh the Lord his trust, and respecteth not the proud, nor such as turn aside to lies." Yes, there are a few of this kind, a peculiar people zealous of good works, cheerful, joyful, sanctified souls, who have been purified by obeying the truth through the Spirit unto unfeigned love of the brethren.

May God grant to increase the number, and hasten the time when the meek shall inherit the earth, when oppression shall cease, and the peacable reign of the King of righteousness be ushered in, where all the tired and tried ones will rest in that beautiful land so free from all sorrow and pain, and all earth's long parted friends, with songs on their lips, and with harps in their hands, will greet one another again. O hail, happy day! May you, dear reader, and I, be there.

North Adams, Mass.

From Sr. A. Clifton.

Dear friends of Jesus:—God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. I believe that all the friends of Jesus are passing through fiery trials. Now is the time for us to keep the word of his patience, that we may be kept from the hour of temptation which shall come upon all the world, to try them that dwell upon the earth.

Jesus, our long looked for Savior, is soon to come. Then there will be no more sickness or death. Our loved ones that sleep in Jesus we soon shall see. Happy day to those that are ready; but to those who are not ready, what tribulation, what anguish. God will laugh at their calamity, and mock when their fear cometh. I want to be ready.

I am sick. Have been for years afflicted with a complication of diseases, and for two years, I have, at times, been brought very low; but the Lord has been very gracious unto me, as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. Bless his dear name! He is our best friend. Without him we can do nothing. The times we are living in are trying to our souls.

God sometimes uses wicked men and women to try us and to draw us nearer to him. While we are passing through these fires it may seem as though some strange thing happened to us, and all be dark; but though the furnace may be heated seven times hotter than it was wont to be, yet God is in the midst, guiding us safely through. Though it may take our right hand or right eye, and we have to cast them from us, though we be left alone, sorrowful and sad, to drink deep of the bitter waters of affliction, the Lord will not leave us if we are his children.

If there ever was a time when we should cry earnestly unto God that we may be kept by his mighty power, it is now. I feel that we are living in dangerous times, but we must be without spot or blemish.

O dear Savior, help, save, or we perish. I am weary. I long to see Jesus. I hope to be saved through his merit. We must strive with all our might to do his will, to deal justly, love mercy, walk humbly with God. The precious blood of Jesus can cleanse from all sin, and keep us in perfect peace, if we trust in him. Pray for me.

East Holderness, Vt,

From Sr. E. S. Bartlett.

To the dear people of God I would say, if you only knew how much good your heart-cheering words do me and many others, you would be encouraged to continue sending your words of comfort and warning.

I have been a reader of the Crisis for a number of years. Next to my Bible I prize its dear pages. Even while I write I stop and read, from the pen of Bro. Leslie, earnest, faithful warnings to a backslidden church, and thoughts of praise and love from that dear afflicted sister in Christ whom not having seen we love for her works' sake. The piece entitled "Jesus," by J. W. Thomas has directed me to send that paper to my unconverted son, now on the coast of Africa, hoping that name may find and melt his heart.

I am earnestly trying to be a true, consistent christian. May the Lord bless editors and writers, and help us all to buckle on the armor anew. He has not taken his Holy Spirit from the world yet. Praise his name! How my heart rejoices to hear of his power in other places, and his blessing on the labors of Brn. Moody and Sankey. I am praying that this winter may witness an abundant outpouring of the Spirit of God all over our land. May we all work with increasing earnestness till Jesus comes!

From Sr. J. Taft.

Dear Brn.:—Our Savior is coming. Poor earth-bound captives that we are! how strange that so few feel the joyous thrilling of the heart when reading the blessed tidings that our "redemption draweth nigh." What sorrows fill the soul of the believer when looking at the trials, and disappointments around; but only have the courage to lift the eyes heavenward, how quickly light dispels the gloom. How unsatisfying the joys of earth when looking into the glorious future. How reviving to weary, toiling ones, to feel the precious truth that can raise drooping souls and bind up the broken-hearted. We shall see him as he is. "Come, Lord Jesus," that we may be where thou art!

Praise the Lord for the Crisis! It comes laden weekly with good tidings of the increasing numbers of those who are buried with Christ in baptism, causing joy, we trust, in heaven, over sinners that are repenting.

THE WILL UPON THE ALTAR.

The will which constitutes us free moral agents must be given back so entirely to God as to make us subjective to him. We may not cease to be free moral agents, but must completely submit our will to the will of God. We must have no will against the will of God. Faith like a grain of mustard seed will remove the highest mountain you will ever meet, if you trust in God. Forward under his command is better than eating manna in the wilderness.

This yielding of the will is the complete surrendering of self to God. It implies that your will to do wrong is gone. That you can no longer oppose yourself to God. Since you cannot take the world with you, and no will but God's will, no foes can harm. Shrouded in a cloudy pillar by day, and a fiery one by night, devils will know God's symbol, and understand him to say, "Touch not mine anointed, and do my prophets no harm." Dead to the world, earthly possessions are not needed to fulfil the promises, and when granted are only to prove whether true riches can be intrusted to us.—Christian Standard.

LOVE OF CHRIST.—The knowledge of the love of Christ is perfect peace. We sit down and let this love breathe freely into us, and straightway all is calm. Each storm has gone to rest; each gust has died away. Love beyond all loves, in greatness, in freeness, in efficacy! Gifted with strange power of soothing, and healing, and comforting! He who has possession of this love has got hold of a hidden spell, mighty to charm away all heaviness of the heart, all bitterness of the soul.

HOME AND HEALTH.

DEGENERACY CAUSED BY TOBACCO USING.

Peculiarities of taste are often seen to be transmitted by parents to their children, such as preferences for particular articles of food or aversion to others. If preferences for various articles of food, for which the appetite is easily governable, are transmitted to offspring, how much more likely it is that such almost ungovernable appetites as those for tobacco and rum should be imparted to them. Hence the children of tobacco-using parents will possess a latent appetite for the noxious weed, and a very limited use of it will be sufficient to awaken the appetite to an uncontrolled activity. Such children, if they use tobacco, will impart to their children a still stronger predisposition, and every generation of tobacco users will be succeeded by a generation of those more strongly disposed to its use, till the passion will become irresistible and all will use it, boys and girls too. If tobacco using is to continue to increase, and generation after generation continue to use it, the time is not far distant when young children and even infants will clearly manifest an inborn appetite and relish for it. There are youths now born of tobacco-using parents, who say they liked tobacco the first time they tried it, and were never made sick by it. In each coming generation there will be more of such, until nearly all are thus tainted.

But there are other effects of tobacco-using that are handed down to the children from the parents. It impairs the nervous functions, rendering the person more excitable, more irritable, and subject to a long train of nervous affections. It impairs the nervous constitution and transmits these impaired constitutions to children. Such children are feeble, excitable, and liable to be cut off by any serious disease. Often they do not thrive well, are stunted in growth, and do not attain to the stature of their parents before them. If they take up the habit of tobacco-using early in life, as very likely they will, their growth will be still more interfered with, and they will present a curious spectacle of the lineaments of old age mingled with the features of youth. Already a noticeable diminution of the stature of our people is observable. The general average of height is less each generation. Men of full six feet in stature are far less common in proportion to the number of inhabitants than they were thirty or fifty years ago. A like falling off in height is observable among the females. Among other causes, tobacco-using by the parents, often continued from early youth, is a prominent cause. It is a cause that is powerfully working the degeneracy of the vital powers and arresting development.

This habit also exerts an influence over the brain as well as over the nerves. It obscures the perception and deadens the sensibility. Tobacco-using students make less advancement than others in their studies.. The permanent impairment of the intellectual powers will be proportionate to the degree of indulgence and its duration. If continued through several generations, there can but result mental degeneracy. Its excessive use impairs all the bodily organs, arresting development and enfeebling the natural powers; and its direct tendency is to produce degeneracy of the race. Already its work has begun; and if not desisted from, it will complete its work and ultimately leave a race of driveling idiots. He who loves his fellow man, let him raise his voice against this foul practice.—Science of Health.

EATING TOO FAST.—Eating too fast, generally involves eating too much; more than is really needed for the support of the body, and the reason for this is, that the organs of taste which are our guide in this matter, are not allowed sufficient voice; they are not allowed time to take cognizance of the presence of food ere it is pushed past them into the recesses of the stomach. They do not therefore have opportunity to represent the real needs of the system, and hence allow the crowding of the stomach. I hold that thirty minutes should be spent at each meal, and spent too, in chewing the food a good portion of the time, and not in continued putting in and swallowing, but in pleasant chat and laugh instead of a continuance of the intense nervous pressure of the office or library. If you lay out to spend thirty minutes in this way at your meals, you may rest assured you will not eat too much, and that what you do eat will be in the best conditions for appropriation to the needs of your system. You will be healthier in body, happier in mind, and more vigorous of brain—for there are few things that so clog the brain as a meal of half eaten food put into the stomach.—Dr. J. H. Jackson.

THE DAY.

"Ye see the day approaching."

Steadily, sternly, it marches on;
At each sun's setting a step is won;
At each sun's rising 'tis nearer yet;
We cannot its sure approach forget.
For the long procession is filing past,
And soon will it come—the great, the last.

We see it coming; our shrinking eyes
Are drawn to its splendor across the skies.
We fain would hide from its blinding glare,
Or hinder it by a wild, sad prayer;
But ever relentlessly on it comes
To our shadowed hearts and our darkened homes.

What though we banish with mirth and song
The sound of its coming? It sweeps along.
It will not stay for our many fears;
It will not halt for our many tears;
And every season of blessedness
Is making the distance ever less.

But why should we tremble and fear the day?
Christ is in it, he comes this way.
Little of all the pompous show,
The gloom, the splendor, our eyes shall know,
For we shall see in the heaven above
The Friend we long for, the Lord we love.

Then let us sing, as we pass along,
A cheery measure, a hopeful song;
Better than all the times shall be
That glorious time when the King we see.
So let us watch, and wait, and pray,
For the approaching of that day.

"BEHOLD HE COMETH WITH CLOUDS."—Rev. 1: 7.

R. P. ELDRIDGE.

Never has the writer's mind been so deeply impressed with these words as of late. When gazing upon the blue heavens, so sensibly have I felt the force of these words, that I have often exclaimed—"Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him."

While thinking of these words, and the great meaning they contain, I have asked myself the question, Should the Lord of life and glory soon and suddenly appear, am I prepared to meet him!

Would it not be well, my brethren and sisters, for us all to ask ourselves the question, Should our blessed Lord come this day, or this week, or this month, could we with joy exclaim—"This is our Lord, we have waited for him, and he will save us"? We profess to love him, and often say—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly"; yet do we really mean what we say? Let us examine our hearts, and see if they are all right before God. Can we say, like Peter, "Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee"? If our hearts' best affections are placed upon him; if we love him supremely, then we shall certainly love his appearing. It cannot be otherwise.

We all have earthly friends whom we dearly love, and we have all felt sad when parting with them; but should one of those dear ones at parting say, "I must go away, but I will come again"; and should they also tell us that we must get ready for their return, for when they came it would be in their power to make us perfectly happy; though they might not state the exact time of their return, yet how very anxious we should be to make all needful preparations for their coming; and how eagerly should we watch and wait for their return. How we should long to behold the face of those absent ones.

Now Jesus, our blessed Savior, the very best friend we ever had, or ever can have, has gone away; but before he went away he said unto his disciples—"I go to prepare a place for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also." Precious Jesus. Dear absent One, we love thee, and will praise thee, for such a sweet and precious promise. If the return of a dear earthly friend gives us such great joy, we will try, by God's grace, to be in readiness to hail thy return with still greater joy.

We want to behold thee, and be made like thee. We want a home in thy coming kingdom, to go no more out for ever. We are strangers and pilgrims here, but our eye of faith is fixed upon "a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." We want to go to that glorious home of the saints,—that home made new, where sorrow can never enter. Jesus will be there, and we shall "be made like him, for we shall see him as he is." "I will come again"! how soul-cheering to the waiting and watching ones.

Like the multitudes of professors of the present day, I had never given the subject of the soon coming of the Lord much thought until some two years since, when my attention was called to it by Bro. J. R. Smith, who had himself embraced the doctrine of the soon coming of the King. He left with us the Crisis, asking us to read it for ourselves, which we did carefully, and with interest; and by so doing it led us to search the Scriptures. Our eyes were opened to behold things in a different light. Our minds have been enlightened, and by the fulfilling of the prophecies and the signs of the times, I can not see why we may not reasonably expect the return of that same Jesus who went away soon, at any moment.

O that every watchman who stands upon Zion's walls would sound aloud the cry—"Behold he cometh with clouds." Let us have our lamps trimmed and burning, ready to go in unto the "marriage supper of the Lamb."

Chatham, Mass.

BRIEF EXPOSITIONS OF PROPHECY.

B. BRONAUGH.

The great image of Daniel, chap. 2, was symbolic of four great kingdoms, which should successively "bear rule over all the earth," as it was then known. See Luke 2: 1. The head of gold represented the Babylonish or Chaldaic Empire under Nebuchadnezzar. Said the prophet to him, "Thou art this head of gold." The second kingdom, represented by the two arms united in the breast of the image, was the united empire of the Medes and Persians, which overthrew Babylon and succeeded to its dominion. Dan. chap. 5: 30, 31; 6: 28; 8: 20. The third kingdom of brass (chap. 2: 39), was Greece, which conquered Persia. Chap. 8: 21.

The fourth kingdom of iron (chap. 2: 40), was that empire which overthrew the Grecian kingdom and succeeded to its power. This fourth kingdom we therefore know to have been Rome; one leg of the image representing the Eastern and the other leg representing the Western Roman Empire. The ten toes on the feet of the image symbolized ten kingdoms into which Rome was to be divided: in the days of which ten kingdoms "shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed." Chap: 2: 43, 44.

The four great wild beasts seen by the prophet in his vision, as recorded in chap. 7, stood for these same four earthly kingdoms. The lion represented Babylon; the bear, Persia; the leopard, Greece; and the fourth great beast symbolized Rome. The ten horns upon the fourth beast represented, like the ten toes of the image, the ten kingdoms that should arise out of the Roman empire. Chap. 7: 23, 24.

This division of Rome into ten kingdoms, took place in the fifth century after Christ; they were the kingdoms of the Franks, Burgundians, Visigoths, Ostrogoths, Vandals, Suevi, Alani, Anglo-Saxons, Lombards and Heruli.

The other "little horn" which came up among these and "before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots" (chap. 7: 8), represented another king or kingdom, which was to arise after and among these ten kingdoms, and should subdue three of them (verse 24). This little horn kingdom was to be diverse, or different from the others, in this, that it should not only claim civil or political dominion like the others, but it should likewise claim supremacy in spiritual and religious matters, and make war upon those saints who would refuse to submit to such dictation in matters of conscience. Verses 21, 24, 25.

In A. D. 533 the Emperor Justinian, by an edict, created the Bishop of Rome supreme head of the church, and from thence originated the civil and ecclesiastical power of the Popes of Rome, or the Papal Roman Empire; before whom the Heruli, the Lombards, and the Ostrogoths were subdued, and their kingdoms were plucked up by the roots.

The Popes have spoken "great words against the Most High," in arrogating to themselves such titles as "His Holiness," "Most Holy Father," "The Light of the world," "The King of Glory," "The Lion of the tribe of Judah," "Our Lord God the Pope," etc. They have "changed times;" for our present Calendar was arranged by Pope Gregory, XIII. in A. D., 1582, by which the change in reckoning time from the "old style" to the "new style" was established. They have "changed laws," even the law of God himself, by introducing five new sacraments into the church; and out of twenty-nine catechisms, in use in Europe, the second commandment has, by Papal authority, been totally omitted in twenty-seven of them, whilst in two it has been mutilated, and only a portion expressed. As for persecution of the saints, it is estimated that fully fifty million christian martyrs have suffered death at the hands of Popery.

The duration of the persecuting reign of this little horn kingdom was limited to "a time and times and the dividing of time" (verse 25) or, as it is expressed in Rev. 12: 14—"a time, and times and half a time," or 1260 days (see verse 6). So many literal days would only make three and a half years of 360 days each. So, also, the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14, if taken as literal days, would make a little less than six and a half years. But as these 2300 days were to cover the entire history of the nations mentioned in the eighth chapter, these days must necessarily have been intended as years. So, also, the "one week" of seven days mentioned in chap. 9: 27, was fulfilled in the seven years war of the Romans against the Jews. Thus it is sufficiently established that the "time times and dividing of time" means 1260 years.

Beginning A. D. 533, they ended A. D. 1793; and accordingly in the revolutions which swept over Europe during the several years from A. D. 1787 to 1815, the papal civil power received its death blow, and then began that gradual consuming and taking away of its power predicted in Dan. 7: 26; until now Pope Pius IX. rules nothing, politically, outside of his household, but pays taxes to the government of Victor Emanuel.

Yet it was foretold of this power that it should make war upon the saints, and prevail against them, until the time came that the God of heaven should set up his eternal kingdom and the saints should possess it. Verses 9 to 15, and 21, 22, 27.

Our Lord, in Luke 19: 12, likened himself unto a nobleman who went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and to return; and Daniel here describes the exact time in the history of the world when he foresaw "one like the Son of man," who came with the clouds of heaven, and there was "given him dominion and glory and a kingdom" (verses 13, 14); and "the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom" (v. 22), and that time follows immediately upon the destruction of the power of the kingdom symbolized by the little horn (v. 27). See also Acts 1: 6–12.

The goat of Dan. 8: 21, representing Greece, the horn in its forehead was Alexander the Great, who, having conquered the then known world, died. His wife and children were murdered, and his kingdom, instead of descending to his posterity, was divided into four parts between four of his generals. Ptolemy took Egypt, Lysimachus took Masedon, Cassander took Greece, and Selucus took Syria. Dan. 8: 22, and 11: 3, 4.

The kingdom symbolized by the little horn of chap. 8: 9–13 and 23–26, is again identified as Rome pagan and papal, by the facts that it is said of this horn it magnified itself "to the prince of the host," or, as it reads in the margin, "against the prince of the host" (v. 11), which is Christ, whom the Romans crucified; and by them the daily sacrifice was taken away when Jerusalem was besieged; and they set up the transgression of desolation when they encompassed the holy city with their armies. Compare verses 11 and 13 with Matt. 24: 15, 16, 17; and Luke 21: 20, 21.

This same little horn kingdom which was to take away the daily sacrifice, and place the abomination which maketh desolate, that is Rome, comes before us again (chap. 11: 31), exalting and magnifying himself above God, and speaking marvelous things against him (v. 36), and persecuting and destroying his saints (v. 33–36), "even to the time of the end."

The kingdom intended in verses 40–45 inclusive, is universally understood by our standard commentators to represent Turkey, "the sick man of the East," now so near its end; which Mohammedan power has so long ruled over Egypt and the Holy Land, with the Libyans and Ethiopians at its steps.

But it is here declared by Daniel that when Turkey shall come to its end (v. 45), that there shall be a time of trouble such as never was before among the nations, and that then the resurrection of the dead shall take place. Chap. 12: 1, 2. Compare 1 Thess. 4: 16 and 2 Tim. 4: 1; 1 Cor. 15: 22, 23, 24, 51, 52. Millions of men have within the last few years been withdrawn from the peaceful pursuit of agriculture on the continent of Europe to be converted into armed soldiers. Read Joel 3: 9 to 16.

Our Savior, in answer to the questions put to him by the disciples in Matt. 24; 3, went on to portray that same terrible persecution which should be visited upon his saints, of which Daniel had written, and then proceeded to tell his disciples what should be the signs of his coming, and of the end of the world (see also Luke 21: 25), and he informed them that the generation of men who should see the beginning of these signs should not pass away until all would be fulfilled. Luke 21: 28, 32. He likewise instructed his disciples that these signs should begin to be given immediately after that tribulation ceased. Matt. 24: 29.

Four of the principal crowned heads of Europe, by common consent, declared, in April 1780, that martyrdom for religious opinion's sake must cease. On the 19th of May, 1780, the sun was darkened miraculously, since science wholly fails to account for the phenomenon. Immediately thereafter began "distress amongst nations with perplexity," such as the world had never before witnessed, even the "Reign of Terror," and revolution has followed upon revolution in rapid succession the world around ever since. By consulting the American Encyclopedia (title, Meteors), it will be observed that since 1780 there have been some fifteen remarkable fallings of the stars, while before that in all history only three such occurrences are recorded. "The sea and the waves thereof roaring." Luke 21: 25. The year 1874 exceeded any previous year on record for the number of shipwrecks and marine disasters; but 1875 has been marked by a yet greater number.

Reader, prepare to meet God, for assuredly the day of judgment must be near at hand.

JESUS WILL COME.

R. M. RINES.

And he said, "Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation; for at the time appointed the end shall be. For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak and not lie. Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come, it will not tarry." "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come and will not tarry." "When the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth?" "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise, as some men count slackness, but is long suffering to us ward, not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance."

Lift up your heads, ye saints of the living God, rejoice, for your redemption draweth nigh. The words of the Savior to his disciples will be fulfilled, and Jesus will come again. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.

Boscawen, N. H.

RETRIBUTION.

"Vengeance belongeth unto me, I will recompense, saith the Lord."—Heb. 10: 30.

More than 1800 years ago a meek and lowly man was arraigned before a Roman Governor on a charge of conspiracy against Cæsar. He offered no defence; and yet the governor was fully persuaded of his innocency, and of the malicious envy of his accusers who were resolved to have him put to death, because they could not use him for their own purposes. He was also warned through his wife to have no hand in the prosecution of the accused concerning whom she had had a dream which caused her much suffering. But Pilate was more influenced by political considerations than by justice, and though he was inclined to liberate Jesus, he was not disposed to offend the Jewish rulers. He, therefore, parleyed with them, until at last they said, "If thou lettest this man go thou art not Cæsar"s friend," and this determined his course. He gave sentence that Jesus should be crucified as they had required. But before doing so he took a basin with water, and washing his hands before them said, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person, see ye to it." They answered, "his blood be on us and on our children."

Pilate was conscious that he was yielding the cause of justice to the demands of an envious and wicked mob, led on by their priests and rulers, and he wished in some way to ease his conscience on the subject. Conscience is sometimes stifled in the commission of a crime by a very little thing. How absurd to suppose that washing his hands with water would cleanse his conscience of guilt! His crime was a base prostitution of justice, at the demand of the wicked. He sacrificed an innocent person to the infuriated passions of a mob, that he might retain his political power. What became of Pilate we know not; but if tradition may be credited, a fearful retribution followed him. He was banished by the Emperor, and ended his wretched life in despair.

But if Pilate was overtaken by the just retribution of heaven, what became of those who said, "His blood be on us and our children?" It was not only the individuals who uttered that fearful imprecation, that were involved in the guilt of crucifying the just one. It was a national crime, and demanded a national retribution. Passing over the untold miseries of those whose consciences goaded them to say to the apostles, "ye mean to bring this man's blood upon us;" consciences which sought to shelter themselves behind the Roman power; I pass to the contemplation of the national retribution. In a few years after the crucifixion of Christ, the Jewish people became more and more distracted by internal dissensions and the prey of oppression and robbery, until at last, though divided among themselves, they broke out in open rebellion against Rome. This brought on a war for their subjection which terminated in their destruction. Infatuated by the hope of Divine interposition in enabling them to overcome the power of Rome, they persisted in their rebellion until multitudes perished by famine in the siege of Jerusalem; over a million were killed in the war, and ninety-seven thousand sold into slavery. The horrors of the siege exceeded belief, and the sufferings of the people were extreme. No wonder that Jesus, knowing what would befal them, on account of their rejection of him, wept over that devoted city.

Thus ended their nationality but not their tribulation. As a people they have been preserved and still exist, though despised, degraded, oppressed; a by-word and a reproach among all nations.

The condition of the Jews in every age since the desolation of their city and country, is a phenomenon which can only be explained on the ground of a national retribution for the rejection and crucifixion of Christ. That cry, his blood be on us and on our children, has been answered by such a fearful and long tribulation, as never was before and never will be again. And in their history and condition there is a complete illustration of the text.

As intelligent moral agents our responsibility is commensurate with our privileges. So the Lord by the prophet compares Israel to a vineyard, which had been planted and cultivated with the greatest care; but when he looked for grapes it produced wild grapes. This complaint lies against all who have the word of God and do not live in accordance with its principles and precepts. In the context having proved the priesthood of Christ, and shown the excellency of his all atoning sacrifice and intercession, Paul in Heb. 10: 22–25, exhorts us to a course of conduct appropriate to the wonderful provision of grace, that we may be saved from sin and glorified with Christ. And then he shows Heb. 10: 26–30, what would be the effect of an opposite course.

Hence it is not the Jew alone who rejects and crucifies Christ; but every one who having received a knowledge of the truth respecting his mediation and sacrifice, presumptuously and wilfully goes on to sin. He in effect rejects the sacrifice of Christ; despises the gospel calling, treads under foot the Son of God, and counts the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified an unholy thing. He in a manner justifies the sin of the Jews by repeating it as far as he can do it in substance.

But while we must warn and admonish the sinner of the fearful penalty of sinning wilfully under such circumstances, we do not assume the province of judgment. This belongs to God alone. He will recompense the way of the transgressor upon him.

There are recompenses which are sometimes manifested in this life, but these are mixed in their character; and are oftentimes designed for correction and salvation. But in the future God will render to every man according to his works. Seeing it is a righteous thing in God to recompense tribulation to them that trouble you, and to you who are troubled, rest, etc.

The day of retribution is coming. It will be ushered in by the second advent of Christ, and he who stood at Pilate's bar, will judge the world in righteousness.

In the meantime, God is by the gospel taking out of the nations a people for the glory of his name; this people consists of all who believe and obey the gospel during this dispensation, who shall, with all the redeemed of former dispensations compose his elect church,—his peculiar people.

To you the gospel is preached and you may by faith in Christ and obedience become one with him and an heir of his glory. To as many as receive him he gives power to become the sons of God.

The gospel is to such the savor of life. It saves all who believe. But to the disobedient it is the savor of death. Which is it to you? It is one or the other. And you are treasuring up blessing or cursing; life or death; glory or shame, for the day of retribution.—Prophetic Times.

PROPHETIC STUDY PROFITABLE.

There are some that ought to know better, and who did know better once, who seldom refer to students of prophecy without something like ridicule. They seem to have one or two date fixers on their thoughts, and because of their positiveness and obvious failure, would discourage the diligent study of the prophetic Scriptures. They contrast students of prophecy with earnest laborers, as if none of the latter were found among the former, and found there, too, before some of these caustic critics were born. They overlook such men as George Muller, Henry Craik, and scores more whom we could mention. Surely we should be careful, as Bishop Hall says, "not to let one duty appear before God stained with the blood of another." It is as much a duty diligently to study the book of Daniel and the Apocalypse, as it is to "preach the gospel to every creature." "Who (says Mr. Bickersteth) is so rich as to be able to afford to lose the blessing spoken of in Rev. 1: 3? While Daniel is highly commended in other respects, he is commended most for his diligent study of the prophetic word, and for his earnest desire after more light as regards its meaning (see Daniel 9: 20–27; 10: 19, 20; and especially the last chapter.") Happy are those who like him "do the king's business," yet "keep the matter in the heart." . . . If the great Scripture facts of speedy judgment and of coming glory are really believed, they will prove an antidote to worldliness, and an incentive to diligent and loving testimony.

It is a solemn thing for any one to take upon himself to put the personal coming of the Lord and the resurrection of his saints far off into the distant future, and to substitute in their place human progress, Christian effort, and the happiness of the soul in a separate state. . . . We always find Christ and his apostles setting forth the second advent, and the gathering of the church to him, as the great objects of hope to all believers; we never find them dwelling complacently on human progress, or encouraging the hope of a gradually dawning millennium. Paul, Peter, Jude and John all foretell that the present gospel dispensation will end in apostasy and judgment. Like the angel's first words after the Lord's ascension (Acts 1: 9–11,) and Peter's bold testimony in Acts 3d, they all point to the second advent as that which should be most earnestly expected and lovingly desired.

Of course it seems most desirable to human reason and most flattering to human greatness, that there should be gradual progress, and that man should be the instrument to bring in millennial blessing. It seems also especially desirable that there should be no such great break up of the present state of things as the Lord's personal coming implies. But what says the sure word of prophecy? To that we do well to take heed. Everything else, however specious, will only delude. . . . No proof texts for a millennium before the advent have yet been produced, nor do we believe that any can be found in all God's word. We believe that this wrong expectation has done much toward lowering the tone of christian doctrine, though many meant not so. But though we may differ as christians respecting these points, let us unite to seek a real personal revival, and to retain it. Let each one of us look to his own oil, and be careful of his own salt. We want a religion, not as some say, in agreement with "the spirit of the age," but one, in some respects at least opposed it. We want godliness in its power. We require a religion that will be able to bear the brunt of the battle with skepticism and superstition now becoming so imminent; a religion which will save its professors from that worldliness which we fear is chrushing thousands in its embrace, notwithstanding their cloak of profession. Whether the means now being used will raise up such a race of christians to fight out the coming battle, God knoweth. Let us beseech him to direct us to the right means, to make us very dependent on himself, to use us to gather out a people for his name, and to prepare us and our children for the days of trial which are surely coming.

But while, like the apostle, we expect God to do as he hath said as regards his words of threatening (Rom. 9: 29, 33), let us seek grace to imitate him in endeavoring by all means to save some. (1 Cor 9: 22; Rom. 10: 1–3.) How dear were truth and souls to the great Master and his apostles! Let both be very dear to us. If we mutilate, hide or add to the truth, we shall do little good to souls, and the work over which there was much exultation may not bear very well the strain to which it must be subjected.—Rev. John Cox, of England, in Herald of Life.

WHAT OF THE TIMES?

Our country is in a dreadful uproar; bankruptcy, ruin, deception, drunkenness, swindling, gambling, robberies, arson, murder, etc., etc., speak of the true condition of this would be christian country. What is the reason? None but that religion has died out of the hearts of the multitude. Crops have failed, factors are in despair because the farmers cannot settle their accounts; merchants are dismayed because their customers are not able to pay. Creditors are watching debtors, ready to make the first pounce on a falling man, lest some one should get ahead of them by assignment or mortgage. Broken merchants, tradesmen, farmers and others are rushing headlong into the whiskey bottle or whiskey shop expecting relief; some are using opium, morphine, chloral or other poisonous drugs to stupify trouble, and but few seeking a loving, comforting Christ. Alas! alas! the tale is to be told not long hence before Him who is now denied.

What will save us from the current of ruin? Not the vast numbers of Jesuits that are flocking to our country because Bismarck nobly stands up for religious liberty. These but add fuel to fire, and will hasten on the grand decision of him that ruleth. Our destiny is in our own hands. God must be worshiped or we, as a people, must bear the punishment. Read the three chapters of Joel prayerfully, and there you will find the curse and the promise. What can be done? "Sanctify ye a fast, call a solemn assembly, gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the Lord your God, and cry unto the Lord, alas for the day! for the day of the Lord is at hand, and as a destruction from the almighty shall it come." Joel 1: 14, 15. We need more Holy Ghost preaching; the sword of the Spirit has been thrust into the scabbard by many, and the sword of man drawn in its stead. Rhetoric, oratory and soft words will not convince the people of their sins; the two-edged sword must be tried again and again. God will not be ignored. "Thus saith the Lord" is the power to slay and make alive; no other power can prevail, no other will be honored by God.

Would there were more Rowland Hill's. When Lady Erksine was passing the great throng that had gathered to hear Mr. Hill, she instructed her coachman to drive as near as possible to him, that she could hear the renowned orator. Mr. Hill soon learned who was one of his hearers, and said, "I have something to sell at auction to the highest bidder. It is worth more than the crown of Europe—it is the soul of Lady Erksine. Who will bid for her soul?" Satan bids. "What will you give for this soul?" "I will give riches, honor, pleasures, the whole world for her soul." "I think I hear another bid. Who bids?" The Lord Jesus Christ. "What will you give for this soul?" "I will give peace, joy, comfort and eternal life." Turning to Lady Erksine, Mr. Hill said, "You have heard the two bidders for your soul, which shall have it?" Pushing her footman aside, she went through the crowd weeping, and exclaimed, "The Lord Jesus Christ shall have my soul if he will only accept it."

How many poor, wretched sinners would come to Jesus to day if the terms were made plain and easy. The pulpit is the place to commence a reform. A true Christ, a living Christ, a soul saving Christ, offered in the pulpit, on the street, in the market, and especially around the fireside, would bring a change that would make us all rejoice. Brother christian, leave off fretting about your business, your family wants, your fine coat, your soft places—let us cheerfully do the will of God and leave the balance in the hands of a compassionate Father. Doing anything cheerfully, is half the battle. God will feed us, if we work honestly. No man can be a true child of God who pines and frets at every unfavorable circumstance. God works by means. He calls men to do his work, if they fail he calls others. Souls for whom he gave his Son are perishing—who will help to reform a country of dying men? God in mercy bring about some means.—Christian Neighbor.

Take Aim.—Jesus wrought for a purpose. The gospel was given for a purpose. The Spirit aims to save. Christians are the chosen agents to execute this purpose. Ministers, especially, are sent to save. Their work is definite, their hearts should be fixed upon it, their studies, plans, efforts, should all aim at it. Every man that is fit to preach can win souls if he aims at it, but will not win them without that aim. Revivalists are simply men who study to save the lost, and learn how to do it. It is not superior nor peculiar talent that gives them success, but attention to and use of the conditions of success. Those who determine in their hearts to save souls will learn how to save. The Spirit always imparts the gift to those who have hearts to use it; the wisdom is sure to come where there is eagerness to do the work, for God giveth it liberally to those who ask it.—Universal Church.

Christ's people are a willing people. They come willingly, with all their heart and soul. Not only do they flee willingly from wrath, but they flee willingly to Jesus Christ; they choose to be saved by him rather than any other way. If there were ten thousand other Savior's they would still choose Christ; for he is "the chiefest among ten thousand," and they feel it sweetest and best to be nothing. Christ may be all in all.

MORTALITY OF THE HUMAN RACE.

S. S. BREWER.

"Man that is born of a woman is of few days." This solemn truth is constantly before our eyes. Change, decay and death are written for the fallen posterity of Adam amid the mutations of time. "We all do fade as a leaf." "The rich, the poor, the base, the brave, in dust without distinction lie." The present life's fitful dream was so vividly impressed upon the mind of the Empress Maria Theresa that it is said she "caused her own mausoleum to be erected, and, accompanied by her family, frequently visited with serenity and composure a monumental depository, the idea of which conveys such painful apprehension to almost every mind. Pointing it out to the observation of her children, 'Ought we to be proud or arrogant,' says she, 'when we here behold the tomb in which, after a few years, the poor remains of royalty must quietly repose?'"

"There the wicked cease from troubling; and there the weary be at rest. There the prisoners rest together; they hear not the voice of the oppressor. The small and the great are there; and the servant is free from his master." Job 3: 17-19.

"Low lies the head, and still is the tongue
Of those who fought, and spake, and sung."

"I never shun a grave-yard; the thoughtful melancholy which it inspires is grateful, rather than disagreeable to me. It gives me no pain to tread on the green roof of that dark mansion whose chambers I must soon occupy; and I often wander to the place where there is neither solitude nor society. Something human is there; but the folly, the bustle, the vanities, the pretensions, the pride, of humanity are gone. Men are there; but the passions are hushed, and their spirits are still; malevolence has lost its power of harming; appetite is sated; ambition lies low; anger is done raging; all disputes have ended; all revelry is over, and the bitterest animosity is deeply buried by the thickly-piled clods of the valley; vice is dumb and powerless, and virtue is waiting in silence for the voice of the archangel and the trump of God."

The following extract from an article upon the mortality of the human race presents a solemn picture to the thoughtful mind:

"We hear much said about the uncertainty of human life, but we are apt to ignore the fact that it is only to man's individual existence that this uncertainty attaches. Nothing is more conclusively established, for example, than that the dread reaper's scythe cuts a clean swarth over the surface of our earth every thirty-three years, garnering into eternity, during every century, so to speak, three full successive crops of humanity. Thus every year, as it wings its flight, takes note of the death-throes of thirty million mortals, who, at the rate of one in every second of time, or ninety thousand each day, experience a change of worlds. Their places are supplied by births in equal number, and this new growth springs up to meet its fate from the same sickle's inexorable sweep.

One quarter of all who are born die before reaching seven years of age; only one-half pass their seventeenth year. There is, therefore, a natural law of mortality, the operations of which, while they may appear eccentric, uncertain and irregular, as to individuals, are fixed, systematic and calculable, when applied to masses or communities of men. For instance, an English writer has asserted that out of one hundred thousand persons born at any particular time, a certain number will yield up their life in each year; in other words, the aggregate will be diminished in an increasing but regular proportion till none are left alive. Of the entire number named, only one-half will reach forty-five years of age; 60,941 will live to the age of twenty-nine; and out of the survivors exactly one in a hundred will die in the following year; 37,996 will live to be sixty years old, and 1,121 will die in their sixtieth year."

Some years since I clipped the following from a daily:—

"Population of the Globe.

A distinguished professor of the University of Berlin, Herr Dietrich, estimates the (then) present population of the globe as follows: Population of Europe, 272,000,000; Asia, 720,000,000; America, 200,000,000; Africa, 89,000,000; Australia, 2,000,000. Total population of the globe, 1,283,000,000.

The average number of deaths per annum, in certain places where records are kept, is about one to every forty inhabitants. Supposing that the earth, as Herr Dietrich estimates, has a population of 1,283,000,000 inhabitants at the present time; the number of deaths in every year would be about 32,000,000. At this rate the number of deaths per day is about 87,671; the average per hour about 8,653; the average per minute about 61! Thus at least every second a human life is ended. As the births considerably exceed the deaths, there are probably seventy or eighty human beings born per minute."

At this rate, what an immense number must necessarily cross the line of accountability every minute. In my very humble opinion, real scriptural conversions are very rare, in comparison with the number that are incurring responsibility, and steadily urging their way to the moment of destiny that must soon be reached, according to all prophetic testimony.

With the above computations, mercy, love, benevolence, sympathy, and every attribute of compassion, is longing to see the wickedness of the wicked come to an end, and sin and "him that had the power of death, that is, the devil," extirpated. The long-predicted and ever to be desired moment is steadily approaching, and will soon arrive, when "the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then [Oh, yes, then, praise the Lord!] we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus.'

"O! for a shout of holy joy
To join the trumpet's thundering sound.
The angel herald shakes the skies,
Awakes the graves, and tears the ground.
Ye slumbering saints—a heavenly host—
Stands waiting at your gaping tombs;
Let every sacred sleeping dust
Leap into life, for Jesus comes."

O, come quickly.

WAR PROSPECTS.—The prospect for war in Europe grows more and more threatening.

"The Vienna correspondent of The Standard reports that all men in Vienna who are liable to serve in case of war have been ordered to hold themselves in readiness to join their respective corps on forty-eight hours' notice." M. G.

"STAR BEAMS, OR RAYS OF LIGHT," by J. W. Thomas. This is a neat and interesting volume, containing 363 pages. It treats of various christian topics which are well calculated to inspire confidence in the Word of God and kindle the spirit of devotion in the believer's heart. Those wishing to avail themselves of the advantages of reading it can do so by addressing J. W. Thomas, 12 Arnold Street, Providence, R. I. Price $1.00. J. C.

ROCHESTER.—On our way from Ontario to Nevada, O., we spent one evening with the church in Rochester. During the day we had several delightful visits at the homes of the Lord's dear children, and found them steadfast in the christian pathway, looking for the consummation of their "blessed hope."

Satan has made special efforts to overthrow the faith of some in Rochester, but we trust he will be utterly disappointed in all such attempts. Although the night was rainy, about every seat in their hall was full. Some twenty-five spoke afrer the sermon. It was an excellent meeting. Some requested prayers. Bro. Sergisson has been preaching there of late. It is proposed to have a series of revival meetings as soon as arrangements can be made. M. G.

MORE AND MORE.—Let us do more this year for Jesus than ever before. It should be the aim of all his children to persuade others to become christians. No effort should be spared that will assist in producing such results. Eternal life is of more value than all the gold the world contains. One effectual means of reaching people and causing them to be interested in the plan of salvation is to send them "our paper." If they can be persuaded to read that for a few weeks, they usually have an appetite for more. To accomplish this result let us have a multitude added at once to the three months list. Every subscriber may thus be the means of leading one, or even many, to Jesus in this way. By a little self-denial, all can save enough to send the Crisis at least to one for three months. Send at once.

M. G.

NEVADA.—We arrived in Nevada, Ohio, Thursday P. M., Jan. 6th, in season to attend the opening of the meeting of the State Conference. We found the church in good condition, under the pastoral care of Bro. E. McCulloch. It is proposed to continue a series of revival meetings after Conference business is closed. We are expecting glorious results, by the help of the Lord. The people seem anxious to hear about the coming of Jesus, and to learn what to do to be ready to meet him in peace.

Later.—The revival meetings in Nevada, O., are rapidly increasing in interest. New ones come to Christ every evening. There were about one hundred and fifty who remained to the inquiry meeting last evening, Jan. 12th. The Spirit of the Lord is moving powerfully upon the minds of the people. The house was crowded, and several standing. A glorious work is also going on in the hearts of professors. Several have received the gift of the Spirit, and are filled with perfect love and peace. Many are astonished at what the Lord is doing. Pray for us. M. G.

"A CHRISTIAN CONVENTION" of all evangelical ministers, editors of evangelical papers, and properly accredited christian laymen," is called by Bro. Moody, to meet in Philadelphia Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 19th and 20th, at the Depot Buildings, Thirteenth and Market streets. The following are some of the topics to be examined:

Wednesday, Jan. 19.—10 to 11 a. m.—"Evangelistic services: how conduct them." 11 to 12 a. m.—"How to conduct prayer-meetings." 12 m. to 1 p. m.—The usual noonday prayer meeting. 3 to 4 p. m.—"Inquiry meetings: their importance and conduct." 4 to 5 p. m.—"Training of young converts and lay-workers," to be followed by questions and answers on practical work. 8 to 9 p. m.—The usual preaching service by Mr. Moody.

Thursday, Jan. 20.—10 to 11 a. m.—"How shall the music be conducted in the Lord's work?" 11 a. m. to 12 m.—"How to expound and illustrate Scripture." 12 m. to 1 p. m.—The usual noonday prayer meeting. 3 to 4 p. m.—"How to get hold of the non-church-goers." 4 to 5 p. m.—"Our young men: what more can we do for them?" to be followed by questions and answers on practical work. 8 to 9 p. m.—The usual preaching service.

Bro. Moody will conduct the services, and Bro. Sankey the singing. No doubt this will be a convention of great interest and importance. M. G.

AMERICAN POLITICS.—Those who are well posted in political matters are expecting a revolution within a year. They are convinced that there must be an entire new deal, because of the great dissatisfaction with the present political corruptions. The people demand a change. They are in earnest about the matter. Touching this point the Springfield Republican of Jan. 7th '76, says:

"The central, vital fact of American politics to-day, the fact which it vitally concerns parties and politicians to perceive and comprehend in all its bearings, the fact on which the presidential canvass is going to turn as upon a pivot, is this: the people are tired and restless, and they have fully made up their minds to have a change. They want, not merely a change of men, but a change of methods, of temper, of tone, of tendency—a real and radical change, in a word. And they are bound to have it—on whatever conditions and at whatever risks. Argument and expostulation will be quite thrown away on them."

This feeling is becoming world-wide. It is not confined to the American people. A general upheaving may be expected within a brief period. As Prince Bismarck says: "We are drifting toward perilous times." He lately said to leading members of the liberal party, "that social democracy had of late made enormous progress in Germany—far greater progress than the liberal members had any notion of—and that the next general election would yield results of the most startling character to all lovers of order and upholders of the rights of property."

M. G.

ENGLAND AND RUSSIA.

The "Northern Bear" growls threateningly at the "Western Lion" because the Lion has laid its paw very quietly, but firmly, on the ancient land of Pharaoh. The Bear feels as if the Lion had prematurely taken too many ribs from the body of his expected victim.

God presents these beasts, or governments, as deadly foes in earth's last fearful conflict, so that their roaring, and the snapping of their teeth becomes a cheering sign to the weary traveler; for those were to be the last sounds he should hear before passing the gate of the city of eternal peace.

The London Times presents some of the discussions of the troublesome question thus:—

"In consequence of the English proceedings in Egypt, the difficulties incidental to the Oriental question have, says the Moscow Gazette, been considerably aggravated. England's step gives rise to questions of the most delicate and complicated nature. There is no precedent of a Government acquiring a share in a joint stock enterprise on foreign soil, and thereby virtually extending its own territory. The fact of the canal being an international concern adds force to this reasoning, though even if the canal were purely Egyptian, the transaction might give rise to difficulties. Luxemburg was intended to be sold, but the sale was not allowed to be completed. As the crowning feature of all, Egypt is not even an independent State, but the vassal of a Power, itself the client of European guarantors. Egypt is Turkish territory, and the canal concession is based upon a firman of the Porte. Has the Khedive a right to sell a portion of his territory—that is, to partition out the property of his Suzerain. It is doubtful whether the Sultan himself would be entitled to take any such step without the consent of all Europe. Were the Sultan to claim an independent right to sell the harbor of Constantinople or the port of Batum, or the Turkish fleet, would England allow such a claim to be legitimate? But we remember reading in an English journal that there would be nothing to prevent the Sultan ceding his navy to England in payment of the interest upon his national debt." J. C.

COMING EVENTS.

The prophecies, with their fulfillment, and the signs of the times, indicate that we are reaching the neighborhood of great events, that will astonish the whole world. The impression is deepening that things cannot remain as they are much longer. The corruption of governments and the people is so shocking, that a change seems absolutely necessary, as in the days of Noah. We know not whom to trust. Covetousness and selfishness rule to an alarming degree, and are rapidly increasing. The old earth is like a sinking ship It is time to prepare for escape. He who holds on to it, must sink to perdition. Give it up, and take Jesus for your portion. Make no delay. There is barely time to prepare for the world to come.

The following is a report of some of Dr. Cumming's sayings in London, on the last night of 1875:

"Rev. Dr. Cumming officiated at the Scotch National church. In the course of his sermon he told the congregation to make ready for the advent of the millennium. He quoted largely from the sermons of Rev. Dr Talmage, acccording to whom and to Dr. Cumming, Christ's second coming on earth will happen between the month of September in the year 1875 and the month of September 1876. 'Great things are to happen,' says the Caledonian prophet, within the period of the year 1876. The Jews will return to Judea. There will be great commotion among the nations of the earth. It will thus be seen that he agreed with Zadkiel, the almanac astrologer. Dr. Cumming also quoted Mr. Moody as authority for the belief that the millennium 'must come' during the year 1876. 'The Turks, as a nation,' are, according to Dr. Cumming, 'ready, as foretold in the Apocalypse, to disappear from the face of the earth; for the Turks are as the river Euphrates of the Scriptures, that was dried up. Therefore the Jews must get their own, the territory of the holy land again.'"

These men may be disappointed in not seeing all they expect this year, but it seems certain we shall not have to wait long before we shall see Jesus. Let us all keep ready, and occupy faithfully till he comes. M. G.

THE SITUATION.

The situation of the Eastern nations is continually becoming more critical and complicated. It is difficult to see any escape short of a terrible war, that must involve all the great powers of Europe. The rumbling thunder of the approaching tempest may be distinctly heard in the distance. It is steadily advancing and spreading.

Says the New York Daily Witness, Jan. 6th, 1876:

"All Europe appears to be living during a period of armistice of uncertain duration. The wisest statesmen do not know how soon the thunders of cannon may call the nations to engage in a deadly struggle. In almost every country there is a financial crisis approaching, which impels its rulers to seek some way of reducing the present costly armaments. An attempt has been made to place Europe upon a peace footing by mutual agreement, and it has failed. One power hesitated to begin before another, and no beginning was made. But neither Russia nor Germany nor Austria can afford to sustain much longer the enormous drain upon industrial resources by the present huge armaments. . . .

One almost trembles to think what will be the effect of an outburst of war in Europe. The storm which is long in gathering, is long in dispersing. Beside the ordinary causes serving to produce war, it is impossible to shut one's eyes to the fact that the strife once begun the religious element will enter largely into it. Utterances in unguarded moments by Papal dignitaries like Cardinal Manning have shown that the Vatican is plotting for the restoration of the temporal power of the Pope; and Bismarck and Gladstone are of the same opinion."

Says the London Times of Jan. 5th, 1876:

"All information from official and unofficial sources, confirms the opinion that not only is the Austrian occupation of the insurrectionary provinces determined upon, but that some foreign occupation is absolutely necessary as a precaution against a most probable massacre of the Christians wherever they are unarmed and helpless."

The insurrection in Turkey is progressing with a firm tread, and bids fair to be a complete success. The whole civilized world is watching the progress of events with thrilling interest. There seems to be but a short space of time between the present and the coming of Christ. All should live in continual readiness for the wonderful event. It is our privilege to so live in Jesus, that we shall long for the dawning of that blest morning, when the saints shall be made immortal and be glorified. M. G.

POPE'S ANATHEMAS.

According to the Pope's anathemas, all Protestants are under his curse. The following are specimens:

"If, therefore, any one shall say that it is not by the institution of Christ our Lord himself, or by divine right, that blessed Peter has personal successors in the primacy over the whole church, or, that the Roman pontiff is not the successor of blessed Peter in this primacy, let him be anathema."

"The Roman pontiff" has "supreme authority to govern the universal church." "And since, by the divine right of apostolic supremacy, the Roman pontiff presides over the universal churches, we also teach and declare that he is the supreme judge of the faithful." "The decision of the apostolic See, above which there is no higher authority, cannot be reconciled by any one, nor is it lawful to any one to sit in judgment on his judgment." "Therefore, if any one shall say that the Roman pontiff holds only the charge of inspection or direction, and not full and supreme power of jurisdiction over the entire church, not only in things which pertain to faith and morals, but also in those which pertain to the discipline and government of the church spread throughout the whole world, . . . let him be anathema."

"When the Roman pontiff speaks, . . . he possesses, through the divine assistance promised to him in the blessed Peter, that infallibility with which the divine Redeemer willed his church to be endowed, in defining a doctrine of faith or morals, and therefore that such definitions of the Roman pontiff are irreformable of themselves, and not by foce of the consent of the church thereto. And if any one shall presume, which God forbid, to contradict this our definition, let him be anathema."

The foregoing is the conclusion of the infallibility dogma, dated July 18th, 1870, being the 25th year of the pontificate of Pope Pius IX, who was chosen June 16th, 1846, and crowned June 21st, 1846. The more carefully the Papal system is examined, the worse it looks. It is a stupendous counterfeit of christianity, and yet it claims to be the only true church of Christ. It is a system by which no one can be saved, unless he goes beyond its teaching. It teaches that infant sprinkling is baptismal regeneration, and that by this act the Adamic nature is changed and made pure. The Catholic church says: "Justification . . . is not remission of sins merely, but also sanctification." And then says: "The instrumental cause" of justification is "the sacrament of baptism, . . . without which no one ever obtains justification." Theirs is justification by works; whereas the Bible plan is justification by faith. The Scripture reads as follows: "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Rom. 5: 1.

The following shows how Catholics look upon Protestants. It is a part of a Papal bull;

"We excommunicate and anathematize, in the name of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and by the authority of the blessed apostles, Peter and Paul, and by our own, all Wickliffites, Hussites, Lutherans, Calvinists, Huguenots, Anabaptists, and all other heretics, by whatsoever name they are called, and whatsoever sect they be; and also, all schismatics and those who withdraw themselves, or recede obstinately from the obedience of the Bishop of Rome; as also their adherents, receivers, favorers, and generally any defenders of them; together with all who, without the authority of the Apostolic See, shall knowingly read, keep, or print, any of their books which treat on religion, or by or for any cause whatever, publicly or privately, or any pretense or color, defend them."

This bull has been declared to be "an eternal law in Christendom," therefore, it now stands against all Protestants, and had the Catholics the power they once possessed, we should fare no better now than did the million of martyrs, slaughtered by the authority of the Roman "woman," that became "drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." Rev. 17: 6. But her days are now numbered, and she must soon be "given to the burning flame."

The great day of the Lord is at our doors. Are we ready for the sublime event? Is the heart pure? Is every thing consecrated to Christ? If not ready, there is no time to be lost. Submit at once to Jesus, and covenant to be entirely his for ever. Do not hesitate. Let it it be done now. Cut off every bad habit; ask pardon for all wrongs; submit to do and bear everything required by the dear Savior. Let the will give absolute, and unconditional obedience to all his commandments. Then he can take full possession, and fill the heart with the Holy Spirit. M. G.

INCREASE OF CRIME.

We find an article in the N. Y. Witness, taken from the Observer, in which is given an extract of the history of the execution by hanging of Dr. Dodd, in England, for a $20.000 forgery in 1777. We think the Observer's correspondent's remarks pertinent and just, exhibiting one prominent reason why crime is so fearfully increasing at the present time. Dr. Dodd was an eminent clergyman of London, who had a fashionable wife, and whose wishes corresponded very much with his own tastes, and this so increased their expenses that he felt compelled to obtain means in that unlawful way to meet those wicked expenses. The jury recommended him to mercy, and a petition, signed by over twenty-three thousand citizens of London, was presented to the King for a pardon; yet the government would not yield, because it considered the moral and financial interests of the nation in great danger if such criminals were suffered to go unpunished. The correspondent says:—

"Then, as now, commercial business, that exchange which requires the constant use of paper and signatures, was the life-blood of social and national prosperity. To tamper with public confidence in the bonds of individuals or corporations was to taint the blood of the community, poison the springs of wealth, derange the circulation, and damage irreparably the laws of healthful trade. A forger might have personal friends to intercede for him, but government and society looked upon him as a pirate, an outlaw, a thief of the meanest kind, justly meriting the heaviest punishment the law inflicts. It was therefore held to be the duty of the King to interpose no obstacle. The condemned clergyman became very penitent. His "Thoughts in Prison" and "Reflections on Death" are still extant, and indicate the sentiments of an educated clergyman in view of the scaffold. And so he died.

Even more emphatically now, than a hundred years ago, the business of men is carried on by the means of paper, and the confidence felt in the genuineness of signatures and the honesty of transactions, is at the basis of daily and hourly intercourse. We give and receive promises to pay, we make our deposits in banks, take certificates, bonds, mortgages, relying on the honesty of somebody, for not in one case out of a hundred, in the affairs of every-day life, is a man able to go back to the original parties, and know that it is all right. He takes it for granted, because of his confidence in human nature generally, and certain men in particular. And this confidence has become so large and business habits so loose in consequence of it, and greed has grown with the ease of getting, and money has cheapened by its adulteration, as rags take the place of precious metals, until it has now come to pass that crimes like that of Mr. Dodd and crimes in the same line with his, are of daily occurrence, to the ruin of individuals and of that trust which society has a right to feel in its representative men. I do not say that all bankruptcies are criminal, though they are always failures to pay obligations honestly due. They are oftentimes the result of misfortunes, the crimes of others, and events that no human foresight could anticipate. But, so far as they come from imprudence, recklessness, greed, haste to be rich, improvidence, inattention, extravagance, speculation, or an over-sanguine temperament, they are criminal, and merit punishment by law.

All defalcations are crimes. All breaches of trust are crimes. All uses of other people's money without their consent are crimes. Yet it is not unusual, in our times, to look upon a defaulter in a bank or counting-room as a generous fellow, who intended to put back the money he stole so soon as he had made enough by gambling to warrant him in turning himself into an honest man. It does not occur to me at this moment that we have punished a defaulter in this city during the last quarter of a century. I have no doubt there have been more than five hundred detected in their crimes.

There is a law in the United States requiring the publication annually of the names of defaulting officers, with the amounts they severally stole. Since 1865 the law has not been complied with. It is a good law, but it would be better still to put the defaulters invariably into the penitentiary. One year of righteous justice would save the country millions of money in the future.

When such treasurers as Mann, of Saratoga county, are caught in their abuse of trust, they should be sternly held in the hand of justice. It is earnestly to be hoped that the professor of religion, Pond, of Worcester, may be compelled to hard labor in State Prison till the last day of his life on earth. And there are other men whose names have stood high in the church and whose false pretences have beggared thousands, yet these financiers are clothed in fine linen and fare sumptuously every day, while their victims are hungry and cold. These are serious matters, and big with future ills.

It is not desirable to revive capital punishment for crimes against property. Let it be granted that the law condemning Dr. Dodd to death was wrong, and was wisely modified. But the crime, and all similar crimes, by which the money of others is taken from them by forgery, or defalcation, or breach of trust, or carelessness, or deception or fraud, ought to be punished as crime—not compromised, covered up, excused, and so encouraged.

Here is the weakness of the public conscience in this dawn of a new century of the Republic. This is the failing link in the social chain at the present day. Men look upon money crimes as venial sins. One hundred years ago, Bill Tweed and Connolly and Sweeny, and all the men who took the people's money for work they never did, would have been hung; Harry Genet and Tom Fields would have graced the gallows (they never graced anything else). How is it now? It is impossible to discover a public feeling that demands the punishment of official thieves. A hundred years ago the men who let Tweed escape would have been hung by law or without law. The latter would have been worse than their crime, but now there is no official virtue nor popular indignation to make even an inquiry into the matter a possibility.

To what is this tending? Each advancing year increases the desire for wealth, diminishes the security of property, enhances the number, the pay, and the opportunities of men holding judicial places, weakens public conscience respecting stealing, blurs the eighth commandment in the Decalogue, magnifies the influence of riches, rewards success in getting money without scruple as to the means, and puts honor on men who should be dressed in striped woolens, breaking stone instead of the laws, in the prisons of the country.

Children in school and in the family should be taught "it is a sin to steal a pin, much more a greater thing." I do not wish to see the gallows made a punishment for stealing. But, with the incoming of the second century of the Republic, I would be rejoiced to see a revival of common honesty. Things would then be called by their right names, and treasurers, clerks and trustees, directors and traders, bankers, and all who have the watch and care of other people's money, would understand that the meanest thief in this world, meaner than the sneak thief who climbs into the window while we are asleep and steals, meaner than the man who steals his neighbor's sheep in the night, is that professedly honest christian who has the custody of another's money and puts it to his own use, or the man who abuses the confidence of his fellow men by forgery or fraud.

It is a fact that crime is rapidly increasing, not only in this country, but through all civilized countries, while the public conscience is rapidly becoming more flexible, yielding to the whimpering cry of every hypocritical villain who approaches justice, and ready to excuse every one who has worn the garments of Christianity, or occupied some place of honor and trust, when they are accused of the most flagrant crimes. A government that will punish its own trusted officers, after having stolen millions from the national Treasury, who were bound by oath to faithfully protect those funds, by from five to fifteen months imprisonment, and open the prison doors to others, to steal still larger sums from the pockets of the people, as has been the case with some of the whiskeyring thieves, and others, does not guard the public interests, or protect the moral character of the nation.

It is but little use to attempt to specify the particular crimes which are increasing, and the apparent causes, for the whole framework of human society seems to be deranged, and anarchy is taking the place of order, and crime of loyalty. The divine laws alone will be able to establish right order, and Christ is the only efficient Executive. J. C.

AS IT SHOULD BE.

L. BOUTELL.

I have just returned from a flying visit to Kennebunkport, Me. On arriving Saturday I found a meeting appointed at the Advent Chapel at 2 P. M. With Bro. Mitchell I attended, and found the Baptist, Methodist, Congregationalist and Advent ministers all together, earnestly engaged in the work of revival. They seemed to be "of one mind and in one place," and fulfilling the Savior's prayer, that they all might be one, even as he and the Father are one. The work of revival was progressing gloriously, and many were converted and new songs put into their mouths, even praise to the Savior.

The meetings commenced in the Advent Chapel, by Bro. Adams (Methodist) soliciting the privilege of uniting and preaching in their Chapel with them. It was soon evident that the Lord approved the course, and thus commenced the revival of that religion that knows no party lines; and there is a wonderful movement in progress. All the place is stirred by the power of God. From the Advent Chapel, it becoming too small, they have held meetings at all the meeting-houses in the place. At present the afternoon meetings are at the Advent Chapel, in the evening at the Congregationalist house, that being the largest in the place, and even then there are more than can be seated. Sunday they all had their respective meetings; no one house would hold the people. But the partition walls were completely broken down—swept away; so much so, that you could not tell but that they were all Adventists, or Methodists, or Baptists; and were so baptized by the Spirit that Scripture utterances, however strong, would put no chill on the meeting, or the movers in this godlike work of reformation.

Bro. Adams (Methodist) exchanged pulpits cordially with the Advent preacher, Sunday, part of the day, welcoming our faith to his people, and he preached sound doctrine to our people—the literal coming of our Lord and the resurrection of the dead. It was blessed to hear such bold declarations of important truths. I could but bid them God speed with all my heart. I confess I have seen nothing like it since I have been preaching this reproach-bearing message of a soon coming Savior. I have seen the union of sects, but this seems to be as much higher as the heavens are above the earth—the union of hearts, where all are baptized into the same body (Christ's), that knows no schism, all having the mind of Christ.

The last evening I attended, between ninety and one hundred testimonies were given in for Christ. More than twenty came forward for prayers. It was a harvest time for Kennebunk. Let none neglect this great salvation by grieving the Holy Spirit of God.

Correspondence.

From Bro. I. Simmons.

EDITORS WORLD'S CRISIS:—My dear Brn. in Jesus:—I wish to say to you and to the rest of God's little ones scattered abroad, that we have been greatly blest in this part of the Lord's vineyard. Our dear brother, J. M. Judson, from Norwalk, has been with us for some time past. May our father continue to bless him in his labor of love, as he has done lately in our place. Many families are now praising God, and are in full faith of a speedy redemption through our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; and some of them have said to me, I thank God that I have ever seen and heard Eld. Judson.

He has lately baptized eight young converts, and others will soon follow. Eighteen in all have, by his preaching the gospel in so plain a manner, been led by the help of our God out of darkness into his glorious light. The Bible is a new book to them, and they are now reading it with joy, and at the same time praising God for the promise of eternal life through faith in Jesus, who is the promised seed to bruise the serpent's head. God is truly taking a people from among the Gentiles for his name, as Simeon and James have declared that God would do. Acts 15: 13, 17. And to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written—"After this will I return and will build again the tabernacle of David which is fallen down, and I will build again the ruins thereof; and I will set it up, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord who doeth all these things." James may truly say, "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world."

I would say to all who believe the gospel of the kingdom, Press forward. Remember Lot's wife. The judgment is at hand. Look not behind you.

Elyria, Jan. 3d, 1876.

From Bro. W. H. Huls.

Dear Editors of the Crisis:—Will you allow me for the first time to write a short article for your valuable paper. I am a subscriber for both the Crisis and Times. I have been a faithful reader of both papers for several years, and I think I speak with judgment when I say they are surely teaching more sound doctrine, more Bible, true philosophy, and common sense, than any other religious paper I have ever seen. While meditating this Christmas evening concerning the coming of our Lord and the awful influences of sin all around us, I thought it duty to write to my dear brethren, hoping it may encourage some one to live nearer to our blessed Master.

Dear brethren, we who believe in the speedy coming of our Savior should live in such a manner that the world can say we live as we believe—our works harmonize with our faith. Our business transactions, our daily walk and conversation, should be in advance of all other christians who are living without believing in the speedy coming of our Master. We have a divine right to believe we are living in the very last days. We feel glad and rejoice in this blessed hope. Scripture on scripture, and signs upon signs, speak to this generaton in thunder tones, calling on all to believe, repent, watch, pray, and be ready to meet our Savior on the way.

We love the subject of our Lord's coming. We do not feel ashamed to tell it. It sounds well to our ears. It is sweet to our taste. It is refreshing to our memory. It is heart-cheering, stimulating and sanctifying. We will venture to say, all who believe in the speedy coming of our Lord, and have a Bible knowledge of these truths, will shape their lives in a manner that will be pleasing to our heavenly Father.

Be encouraged, dear brethren, for surely we will very soon get home. Our warfare is almost ended. Our persecutions are almost over. Our blessed and adorable Jesus, who now leads us, who keeps us, who saves us, will soon be present personally with us. Thanks be to God, these are facts, and not fables; but meat to the child of God in these last perilous days.

O that all could have an ear to hear these solemn warnings which are now due to Adam's living race, sounding forth the last great message to dying men; and surely all who neglect or reject this message will be lost, and that forever. Dear wanderer from God, let me entreat you to prepare for judgment. Call on the Lord while he may be found, that he may pardon your sins, and that you may be able to stand when the evil day comes. The children of God are praying for your salvation. The watchmen, knowing your awful and dangerous condition, sympathize with and exhort you to turn to the Lord and be reconciled to him. If you stay away from God, you forfeit your eternal life in the world to come, and will never receive "the gift of God," but "the wages of sin," or the harvest of eternal death. Holy angels would rejoice if you would return to the Lord. God loves you, and willeth not that you die the second death. Christ suffered for you, and now bids you look unto him and be saved.

Dear brethren in the Lord, continue to write your good, cheering letters. I read many with tears, yet rejoicing that the time of separation can not be long, and the time of being eternally together will soon be here.

Rockbridge, O., Dec. 25th, 1875.

From Bro. O. C. Gorden.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I am confined at home this winter taking care of my dear sick father, who is probably on his death bed. He is coming down to the grave like a shock of corn fully ripe. He experienced religion when a young man, and has always found Jesus a refuge in every time of trouble. Now he is sweetly resting in him, patiently waiting for the change that awaits him.

I sometimes long to meet with my brethren in the conference and prayer meeting, but have to be content to stay at home and pray for God's blessing to rest upon them, and bless the efforts put forth to save souls from destruction. I feel that the end of all things is at hand. It is high time to awake out of sleep, if we expect to reign with Jesus when he comes.

How often has my heart been pained within me to hear of so many who profess to love the Lord, and take a part in meetings, going hand in hand with the world. They leave their religion in the prayer room till the next meeting. They seem to put it on as they would a garment. They go to the Christmas festivals, and all such parties, play all kinds of foolish plays, and bring up the children that have been entrusted to their care to do such things too. We have been commanded to bring up our children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Is this the way to do? Would you like Christ to come and find you and your family at any of these places, or at home playing foolish games? Do you think he would say, "Well done"; "Come, ye blessed"?

I beseech of you, get out of the poor sinner's way. Perhaps some poor child is looking to you for a pattern. You say you love the Lord, but you dress in the latest style, go to places of amusement; and of course they think if christians can do these things, it is no harm for them. Perhaps you will say, Our minister takes the lead, and his wife and children always dress fashionably. God have mercy upon them then, and open their blind eyes. Let them see how a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus ought to live in this present evil world.

I am weaned, bless the Lord, from all the foolish things of this world. I am living by faith on the Son of God; and when he comes I expect a crown of glory which all will have who live faithful to the end.

"I had rather be the least of those Who are the Lord's alone,
Than wear a royal diadem
Or sit upon a throne."

Wayne, Me.

From N. Andrews.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I take this way to inform you of what God has been doing here in St. George, and is still doing. In Nov. 1875, Bro. H. S. Mitchell came here and preached the word of life to us, which was the means, in God's hand, of awakening sinners, and causing some to believe the Word, and come to Christ, and find peace and pardon.

While Bro. Mitchell was here, he organized a church of nine members, and there are now others waiting to go forward in baptism. We have a convenient hall, that will accommodate over one hundred persons. We feel very weak in ourselves, but strong in the Lord who helps us. We sustain regular meetings three times a week, and the Lord by his good Spirit blesses us, and we have refreshing seasons.

When we first commenced our meeting here we were all very weak in spiritual things, but through God's blessing we are gaining strength daily, so much so that we have some powerful exhortations and heart-searching prayers. We have some persecutions, but rejoice under it all, and claim the blessings of God. If any of God's watchmen of the Advent faith should feel constrained to come this way, we should be very happy to receive them. Come and preach the good word of the Lord to us, and build us up in the most holy faith.

Dear brethren, pray for us, that we may be sustained by the grace of God, and that we may hold out till Jesus comes to give immortality and eternal life in his kingdom.

Clark's Isle, Me.

BRO. J. CLIFFORD writes:—"The Crisis is very much liked in this place. The editorials are rich, I think, as also the letters and other articles which fill its columns. The meetings in Bangor have increased in interest of late. I expect Jesus will come soon, and my heart rejoices."

THIS GENERATION.

A recent number of the New York Tribune contained the names, birth-places and ages of one hundred and nine persons residing in that State who are more than a century old. Twenty-two of these were born in Ireland, and only two in New York City. The oldest of them is one hundred and fourteen years. There are twenty-seven more females than males. There are twelve colored persons and two Indians in the list.

All these are included in the generation that Christ said should not pass away before all the things he had been speaking of should be fulfilled. Taking N. Y. State as an average, we may safely calculate that there are at least one thousand persons in the United States who were living when the sun was darkened. We believe the Lord will keep some of that generation alive until he comes again. D. N. SMITH.

STAR OF HOPE MISSION.

Brn. Couch and Grant:—As many have wished me to let them hear from me through the Crisis, I would say to all who are interested in our great work among the poor and sick, that the times are so hard, and so many of our folks are suffering for the want of nourishment and fire, and having no clothes to come out to the hall, we have concluded to dispense with our Sunday meetings, and hold our meetings in localities where they are the most needed and the most good can be done. The Monday night meeting will be held in Manitta St.; the Wednesday night meeting in West 33d St., near the spot where we had so many converted in 1865 and 1866; the Friday night meeting will be in York St.; and as we have good workers, we expect to reach certain ones whom we could not in our hall. We gave up the hall the first of January. Our work will now be truly in the lanes, alleys, highways and hedges. All letters should be sent to 231 West 22nd St. All barrels or parcels to 115 Sullivan St., New York City.

LANGLEY. In Alton, N. H., Dec. 21st, 1875, Bro. J. H. Langley, aged fifty years.

Bro. L. many years ago gave his heart to Christ, and became a very conscientious, devoted christian. He was very independent in his interpretations of the Scriptures, and exercised the most uncompromising faith in the truthfulness of God's Word. He was for many years a firm believer in the speedy advent of Christ, and waited with true christian longings for the glorious appearing of earth's Redeemer. He raised the christian standard high, and would make no compromise with worldly, fashionable religion, but contended for the apostolic faith and worship. He had very clear premonitions of coming death, and made the most thorough preparations, temporally and spiritually, for the solemn hour. He looked into the grave fearlessly, for he had sweet assurance that Christ would soon appear and awaken him to the glorious realities for which he had hoped and prayed. His sleep will be an undisturbed rest until the undulating tone of the Resurrector's voice, with its mighty revivifying power, shall vibrate in the deaf ear, and call him to glory and peerage with angels.

His widow's affliction was extremely bitter, for her earthly head, with whom she had lived in sweet peace and heavenly union for twenty-four years, has been removed from her embrace; but God wonderfully magnified his grace in giving her as perfect resignation and sweet submission to the divine will as we ever witnessed. May all his relatives and friends enjoy a happy reunion with him in the kingdom of God, where death can never separate. J. C.

SMITH. James P. Smith, of Victory, N. Y., died March 12th, 1875, aged sixty-seven years.

Bro. Smith embraced the doctrine of the personal and soon coming of Christ, with the other doctrines that we as a people prize so much, nine years ago. He was a constant reader of the Crisis, and it was prized next to the Bible by him. Death has claimed him for a victim, and our sister and an invalid daughter are left lonely and sad; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. Our brother's sickness was short, but he was a great sufferer, yet not a murmur escaped his lips; and when told that he could not live, he said he should soon be where there would be no more death. His hope was in the resurrection, when Jesus comes. On account of the absence of Bro. Miles, Eld. Perkins, the Baptist preacher of the place, attended his funeral at the Baptist church. Text, 1 John 3: 2.

Praying ones, pray for the afflicted family.

C. D. KNAPP.

FISK. In Candia, N. H., Dec. 2d, 1875, Eliza A. Fisk, aged sixty-three years.

Mother has long been a servant of the Lord. She has been a member of the F. W. Baptist church for more than forty years. She was always ready to give a reason of the hope that was in her. Her hope was strong in the Lord, and she died in the faith of Jesus' second coming and the literal resurrection of the dead. She firmly believed that then she should get a crown of everlasting life. We expect, if faithful, to meet her in the morning of the resurrection, clothed with immortality. She selected her text from St. John 11: 25. Words of comfort were spoken by our pastor, N. C. Lothrop.

"Home is not home, for mother is not there;
Dark is her room, empty is her chair.
Now will she rest from her labor and care,
Till that morning so fair.
Sleep, mother, sleep, with your hands on your breast;
Poor weary hands, they needed their rest:
Well have we loved you, but God loved you best.
'Tis thy God giveth rest."

E. P. FISK.

DIMICK. In Bridgewater, Vt., July 2nd, 1875, of congestion of the liver, Ann M. Dimick, aged thirty-six years.

She was a great sufferer for a number of weeks, but patiently endured to the end, and the promise to such is "a crown of life that fadeth not away." The hope of the christian seemed to be very dear to her, and she calmly entered the dreadful conflict with death while leaning hard on the arm of her Beloved. She leaves a companion who deeply mourns her absence. His home has become sad and lonely, for she was its light and joy. She also leaves two daughters, father, mother, brother and sisters, who gaze at the vacant chair, and weep as they think of the one that they loved so well. The services were attended by Eld. Gurnesey, of Woodstock, Vt. ALLEN DAMON.

PICKETT. In Bourbon County, Kansas, Dec. 13th, 1875, our son, Clyde Pickett, in the ninth year of his age.

For the first time the enemy death has been permitted to enter our happy family, and lay his hand on one we least expected. Clyde was the life of the household, and though young, was a firm believer in the doctrines of the Bible, and often talked of the things concerning the kingdom of God. Oh, how hard it was for us to say, "Thy will be done." But we have laid him away for a little while. We trust he will soon come again from the land of the enemy. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. Foote, from 1 Thess. 4: 13. GEO. PICKETT.

POTE. In Portsmouth, Ohio, Nov. 7th, 1875, my mother, Rachel Pote, aged eighty-one years.

Mother had been a professor of religion nearly forty years; and since 1854 had been a believer in the speedy coming of Christ, and fell asleep believing she should soon be awakened to die no more. She had been out of health for a number of years, and most of the time a great sufferer; still she hoped to live till the Master should come, but was resigned to the will of the Lord. Her five children mourn, but not without hope.

MARY A. CRAIG.

KNOWLTON. In Wilmot, N. H., Friday, Jan. 7th, 1876, Bro. Shurburn Knowlton, aged ninety-one years and three months.

Our brother was a firm believer in Christ's soon coming. He leaves an aged widow, who is deeply afflicted with a cancer, and a great sufferer. May the Lord be her support in this deep affliction. Words of comfort by the writer, from 1 Thess. 4: 18. D. EASTMAN.

BLISS. In Wilbraham, Mass., Jan. 5th, 1876, Mrs. Lucina Bliss, in her seventy-sixth year.

She was a member of the Baptist church for the last thirty-two years. For the last thirty-three years she has been looking for the appearing of Christ. The hope was her joy and song. For the last twenty-five years she has attended campmeeting every year. She was very devoted, constantly speaking of her love for Jesus and his coming, and was exceedingly happy in her last sickness. Her last words were, "I am going home." She chose her text, which was very applicable, "I have fought a good fight," etc. She fell asleep as a little child in its mother's arms, without a struggle. The Lord grant that the children and the church that mourn her loss may live so as to meet her with Christ when he comes to make up his jewels. G. L. TEEPLE.

NUTTING.—In Pittsburg, N. H., Dec. 25th, 1875, Mary A. Nutting, wife of Lyman H. Nutting, aged thirty-four years.

She leaves three children to mourn her loss. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from 1 Cor. 7: 29, 30. Truly time is short. We have only a little while to work for God, amid tears and sorrow. I am led to exclaim many times, How long shall the tyrant reign? How long will mourners go about the streets? Lord, speed the day, and bring the morning of life, is my prayer. D. N. CHADSEY.

SHAW. In Mattapoisett, Mass., Dec. 21st, '75, Sister Lizzie, eldest daughter of John and Emma Shaw, aged fourteen years.

Our dear sister was attacked with the membranous croup, and after a few days of intense suffering, fell asleep in Jesus. Her words, "I'm not afraid to die," indicated a precious hope of rising again clothed with immortal youth and beauty. Words of comfort were spoken by Eld. M. Batchelor.

WARRINER. In Feeding Hills, Mass., Nov. 27th, 1875, Willie S. Warriner, aged eight months. Also Dec. 4th, Vinia M. Warriner, aged two years and ten months, children of Wilson J. and Mary A. Warriner.

To the mourning ones the words of the prophet are applicable: "Thus saith the Lord, Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded saith the Lord, and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. GEO. L. TEEPLE.

MILES. Fell asleep, in Farnumsville, Mass., Dec. 22nd, 1875, Ella Mabel, only daughter of James and Ella E. Miles, aged six weeks and two days.

In Chestnut Hill, Blackstone, Mass., Dec. 23d, 1875, Clara Bell, eldest daughter of Wm. and Rachel Miles, aged four years, seven months.

"When we see our precious blossoms
That we've tended with such care,
Rudely taken from our bosom,
How our aching hearts despair.
They will sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

ELLA E. MILES.

FOREIGN NEWS.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 7. The Austrian Ambassador to this Court has semi-officially communicated to the Grand Vizier Count Andrassy's scheme for reform in the Turkish provinces. The Grand Vizier, in reply, is represented to have rejected the idea of foreign mediation, and to have said that the Sublime Porte would give the peoples of the provinces all necessary guarantees for reform.

LONDON, Jan. 10. A dispatch from Delhi reports that during a parade in that city on Saturday, Lord Napier was thrown from his horse and had his collar bone broken. He is doing well.

The Berlin dispatch to the News says it is reported that the Turkish Ambassador at Paris endeavored to influence the Duc de Cazes against the ratification of Andrassy's note, and consequently it is inferred that the Porte was assured that Great Britain would reject it.

It is rumored that 40,000 Austrian troops are concentrating with a view to the occupation of Bosnia.

PARIS, Jan. 10. The Turkish Ambassador has officially informed Duc Decazes, Minister of Foreign Affairs, that the Porte will accept nothing prejudicial to the interest of Turkey.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 10. It is reported that a serious disturbance occurred at Charlerot last night. The military were obliged to interfere, and a number of persons were killed or wounded. A battalion has gone to the scene of the trouble.

BOMBAY, Jan. 10. A serious riot occurred among the natives in Hyderabad yesterday, during which one person was killed and several injured. The military were called out and a charge made upon the rioters. Order was finally restored after a number of the ringleaders had been arrested.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 11. In the Senate today a bill was introduced imposing a fine of fifty dollars for taking the name of God in vain.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 13. Capt. Josiah Briggs, of Coxsackie, his wife and two children were drowned in the Hudson river near Coxsackie last night. They were returning from church, the mother and the children on a hand sled, which the captain was shoving across the river on the ice, when they all disappeared through an air hole which was not suspected. The bodies have not been recovered.

We trust that our ministers will make timely arrangements to attend, and that the different churches will immediately appoint delegates, providing them funds to come with if they need aid, and thus secure a general attendance. Let not your ministers be kept away for want of funds to meet traveling expenses. Let not the hard times enter too largely into the interests of the cause of truth which we are trying to promote. Arena is on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R., Prairie du Chien branch, about forty miles from Madison. Work while the Day Lasts.

The Missionary Association formed at Pittsfield Campmeeting, Sept. 9th, 1875, proposed to procure a Tent for Mission work in the Eastern part of Maine, said Tent to be raised in one hundred shares, and all to be taken up by the first day of May, 1876. The Tent, with a small one to go with it, will cost only three hundred dollars. Dear Brn. and Srs., shall we not have one hundred shares, of $3 00 each, at once? Those who are not able to take one, can get several to club together, and send in a pledge by postal card, to be paid the first day of May, 1876, and help to send the gospel of the kingdom into some new places while time lasts. Working time is almost over. Shall we not have a response to this by mail from all who are able to help? We shall order the Tent made at once.

Direct to Jer. Carr, South Albion, Me.

For the Association, { O. S. FRENCH. JER. CARR.

Notice---Baptism and Rantism.

Orders for this work are coming in, but in order to ensure its publication, it will be necessary that they pour in sufficiently to warrant the cost of publishing an edition without loss, which cannot be afforded. The work will be of interest, I trust, as old ground will be re-explored in a manner to bring out all the truth we can discover, and new ground not yet much explored will be dug over for the sake of discovering the whole truth. It is as yet but little known what Rantism is, or what its relation is to Baptism, if any, and specially to the great atonement. Let all who would like the work, and will be willing to encourage its publication, send on their orders by postal card to me, to RICHMOND, PROV. QUE., CANADA. The work will be afforded as cheaply as possible. Please send on your orders, brethren and sisters. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

GRAVE, WHERE IS THY VICTORY? DEATH, WHERE IS THY STING?

A. PERKINS, JR.

The shades of death are overcast, creation groans in pain;
The brightest, fairest sons of earth lie numbered with the slain;
But soon the morning's dawn will break, and Christ will bid them sing,
"Oh! grave, where is thy victory? oh! death, where is thy sting?"

A child upon its mother's breast, its body wrung with pain,
Must close its little eyes in death. All human aid is vain.
But soon the morning's dawn will break, the child will sweetly sing,
"Oh! grave, where is thy victory? oh! death, where is thy sting?"

A maiden in the bloom of youth, her sun gone down at noon,
The death-damp gathering on her brow, lies mould'ring in the tomb.
But soon the morning's dawn will break, and she will learn to sing,
"Oh! grave, where is thy victory? oh! death, where is thy sting?"

A strong young man with dauntless brow, in manhood's glowing prime,
Is by this dreadful enemy swept from the shores of time.
But soon the morning's dawn will break, with the redeemed he'll sing,
"Oh! grave, where is thy victory? oh! death, where is thy sting?"

A mother feels the shafts of death, but heedeth not her pain,
She prays for helpless children left—is numbered with the slain.
But soon the morning's dawn will break, she'll with her children sing,
"Oh! grave, where is thy victory? oh! death, where is thy sting?"

A father falters in his steps; his children's tears are vain;
He feels the icy hand of death—is free from toil and pain.
But soon the morning's dawn will break, he'll with his loved ones sing,
"Oh! grave, where is thy victory? oh! death, where is thy sting?"

A SPECIAL LETTER FROM BRO. COLEGROVE.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Permit me to call your attention to a subject of great importance, in the present exigency, and in view of the peculiar demand for special labor at this most interesting and important period. I wish all who have any gift of teaching, will give their particular attention to a few words I wish to present. Please recall the extraordinary commission of Christ to his servants in Luke 14. "Go out quickly into the highways and hedges and compel them to come in." Here is the great charge to every man or woman who can teach. It is a commission for the very last days of this dispensation. Brethren and sisters, open your eyes to see and ears to hear. Do you want to do good? Do you want to win souls to Christ, and prepare a people for the Lord? Now is your time.

Let me tell you of the encouraging example of a brother in Scranton, Penn., not a preacher, but a layman. What has he been doing? I will tell you. He has gone out into neighborhoods adjacent, and gathered together as many as he could find willing to hear; and he has taught the truths of the Bible in a plain, earnest, simple manner, and he has gained a goodly number to Christ. The success seems to be owing to a strong conviction of the truth, together with a straightforward, faithful, earnest manner of teaching. Now this is a special call and encouragement to all who have a talent to use it for the Master. Let us awake from our unbelief and lethargy, and press the battle to the gate. We must be active; we must be agressive. There is a special work to do, and a work to do now. Let each brother or sister with a teaching gift imitate the example of the Scranton brother, and go forth into the harvest field and reap; for the fields are white for the harvest. Who does not want to win some, who might not otherwise be gained, for the Lord of the harvest?

Let me make some simple suggestions in connection with this subject, which may be proper and timely. When we go out into this blessed and glorious work, let us simply look out for a promising neighborhood, and go armed and prepared with the word of God only. Let us go praying. Remember the duty of secret prayer. Let us go believing. Christ is able and willing to bless. Go in the Spirit. Have a single eye. Let the object be to teach and save men, and gain them to Christ to the glory of God. Have a spirit of humility. Be wise. Beware of an unkind spirit. But be very faithful, be bold, be true to God. Be persevering too. Do not be discouraged at temporary want of success, but labor on, undaunted.

And let us be careful that we teach the truth without mixture of error, as far as we can. Do not try to teach too many things at once; but teach every thing thoroughly, varying the subjects, as occasion requires. Let every thing be timely, and in its proper place. Recollect the coming of the Lord is the pivot truth, the central fact, and bring out all the connected truths. Do not undertake to fix or declare any positive time of the advent, which might ruin your success, or injure it, but teach it near, even at the doors. Let your teaching show that you believe yourself what you teach. Finally, remember that you also may have something to learn, and this will check a spirit of overweening or self-confidence. But be confident in the truth.

And now, children of God, here is your work, here is your opportunity. Let the whole army of God arise for the work of filling up the Master's house, for he has said, it shall be filled. In doing this work, you are hasting the advent. Let no one excuse himself—either man or woman. Even the least may perhaps privately persuade some one. Excuse-making—leave that for those who were invited, and would not come. I have said what I wanted to say, and I will stop. But I think this is the time to work. Does not God call to his people to engage in this work? Be wise, be faithful, and be earnest.

Mill Creek, Luzerne Co., Dec. 29th, 1875.

P. S. Perhaps I should mention the name of the brother referred to,—Truman Finn. He has taught, by gathering into Bible classes, and talking familiarly and plainly the word of God. He has no fellowship with tradition, nor with the churches that teach tradition. He thinks the whole orthodox system is fearfully corrupted, and he thinks we should not, cannot, must not fraternize with the churches, whose whole structure is unscriptural, in an alarming degree. "Come out from among them, and touch not the unclean thing," is his motto. Perhaps other papers may think this subject of importance sufficient to render it worthy of being copied. I will just add that a church is formed here with encouraging prospects, and I am laboring to help the cause. Meetings occur every Sabbath at Mill Creek Plains, Luzerne Co., Penn.

IN MEMORIAM.

Eld. Silas P. Babcock was born in Tolland, Tolland Co., Ct., Dec. 31st, 1806.

His birth occurred on the last day of the year, the last day of the month, the last day of the week, and the last hour in the day. He was married on Dec. 8th, 1828, to Miss Elleanor Fairman, of Stafford, Ct., who survives him as his widow. He died at Woodstock Valley, Ct., Dec. 4th, 1875; thus making the period of his mortal life sixty-nine years wanting twenty-seven days, and that of his married life forty-seven years wanting four days. He was the father of eight children, four of whom are living.

A few years after his marriage, while living in the town of Monson, Mass., he was converted, and with his wife united with the M. E. Church, of which he was an active member for many years. In 1841–2 he listened to lectures on the speedy advent of Christ to this earth; the truthfulness of which he readily saw, heartily embraced and firmly believed until the close of life. Soon after, in consequence of his change of faith, he severed his connection with the M. E. Church, and identified himself with the Advent people. He was ordained a preacher of the gospel about 1859, since which time he has labored as a pioneer in the cause of truth.

He spent the last years of his life in N. J., living in the town of Malaga until, February last, he came to Boston to consult Dr. Green in reference to a cancer located on his left cheek. It had been cut out a few years previous. But, finding a cure impossible, he submitted to his condition with christian fortitude and patience, and calmly waited the result. He spent the remainder of his life at the home of his youngest daughter, Sister A. M. Bancroft, in Woodstock Valley, Ct., where there were kind hearts and ready hands to administer to his every want.

Much of the time for the last weeks of life his sufferings were intense. We visited him many times during his long sickness, and, notwithstanding his great sufferings, we ever found him cheerful and hopeful, and ready to converse on Bible themes, especially the near coming of Christ and the resurrection; thus demonstrating the truthfulness of God's promise—"I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." He was much emaciated in body, yet his mind remained apparently unimpaired to the last. He made all necessary arrangements for his funeral, even to the choice of his bearers, and finally yielded his life without a struggle, leaving his dear companion, four children, and many other dear friends, to mourn.

Thus another standard bearer has fallen. And while one after another is called to leave the field of active service, we ought to pray the more earnestly that God would send forth more laborers into his vineyard; for truly the harvest is great, and the workers are few.

His funeral was attended by the writer. At his request words of comfort were spoken from Rev. 14:13. P. S. BUTLER.

"LET US LAY ASIDE EVERY WEIGHT."

MARY A. ELLIOTT.

It was by a sister lending me her paper, that I ever became a reader and subscriber of the Crisis. And as it has been my lot many times to be where I could not attend social meetings of any kind, the paper has been like a cup of cold water to a thirsty soul. From time to time, I have been encouraged and strengthened by reading the experiences and letters of my brethren and sisters. We can do nothing of ourselves, but through Christ strengthening us we can do all things. We often say, and hear it said, that it is no cross to stay away from places where we once resorted for worldly pleasures; but there are crosses to be borne if we follow the leadings of the Spirit, and obey our conviction.

I have often read of brethren who gave up the use of tobacco, and the sisters some idol fashion. Two years ago, while at Alton Bay, I knew of some who gave up their tobacco, and some of the sisters who put off their flowers. I began to examine myself, to see if I was not indulging in something that was wrong; when I was convicted it was not right to use "Hair Restorative." I resolved, by the grace of God, to discard the use of it forever. God blest me.

If there was more self-denial among those who are looking for the speedy coming of the Just One, Bro. Cargile and others, who are denying themselves of the comforts of life and home for Christ's sake and "the blessed hope," would have more tracts to distribute to help on their labors, and meetings could be sustained better. May God help "us to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh," and lay aside the fashion of the world. The judgment is near. It is a solemn thought to think of standing before the Judge of all the earth. May we all be ready in that day to hear the "Well done."

Lowell, Mass.

2 CORINTHIANS 5: 19.

God was in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself.

J. P. MARQUAND.

On this subject how many conflicting views of the Deity we have; and it arises from the fact that the foundation or basis of argument is wrong.

The Bible expressly says there is but one God, and there is no other; and that he will not give his glory to another. We must therefore make all our theology harmonize with this truth. It will not do for us to say there are two Gods or three Gods. It is not so. There may be many and different manifestations of the Deity, but God is a unit, and will forever remain the head of the universe—God over all, blessed forevermore.

We see a principle of intelligence and life running through all organic matter, and behold wisdom, skill and adaptation in all the works of God; but all these things, whether visible or invisible, are only the fruits of his power and majesty. He still remains intact behind the throne, working according to the counsel of his own will.

Christ was "the express image of his [the Father's] person," and was the ambassador sent from heaven. The Father dwelt in the Son for a wise purpose, to bring back poor lost humanity. O that men were wise and would turn from their sins by righteousness and their iniquities by turning unto God! The Father seeks to reconcile mankind to goodness and truth, and therefore sent his Son to be an example and a pattern, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him."

Now comes the question, How did God the Father dwell in his Son? The answer is plain, by his Spirit. See Isa. 11:2; 61:1; Luke 4:18; John 1:32; 3:34. Jesus said to his disciples, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father"; that is, he was the embodiment or expression of the Father; and God by his Spirit dwelt in him and helped him all through his mission and work, until he came to the cross, and then he deserted him for a wise purpose. Christ cried out—"My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" He died, and gave up the ghost. But did the Father leave him in the tomb to see corruption? Nay; he sent his Spirit and quickened him into life again. He rose triumphant o'er the grave. Death hath no more dominion over him. He liveth forever, as the first fruits of the resurrection; and he says to his true followers—"Ye believe in God, believe also in me." "Because I live, ye shall live also." "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid." "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth." John 15:16, 17.

Now the Father is reconciled to humanity through his Son; and therefore salvation and redemption are conditional. God can be just and the justifier of all who believe in Christ and pattern after him. There is no goodness or life outside of Jesus Christ,—no strength, no wisdom, no immortality, no eternal life. Then let us all seek to become acquainted with him, become followers of God as dear children, walking in all righteousness and truth. Soon the reaping time will come.

O sinner, agree with thine adversary (God) quickly, while the door of mercy is open to you. Give up your foolish, vain pleasures, your self-will, your headstrong disposition and bad temper. Make your peace with God by giving to Jesus Christ your heart, and obeying his commandments. Begin to-day, this very hour, and ask for his Spirit to help you. O, be wise to-day! 'Tis madness to defer!

CHRIST, REMEMBER ME.

L. J. B.

When thy jewels thou shalt gather
In a radiant setting, Savior,
When upon thy brow of whiteness
They shall shine with fadeless brightness,

Whence the thorns once drew the healing
Of our woes, thy love revealing,
Matchless love, that sinless gave thee
Death from sin and death to save me.

Though the least of all in shining,
Though the most I need refining,
Saviour, do not then forget me,
But upon thy forehead set me.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. Alling.

Dear Brn.:—It is so long since my name has appeared in the Crisis, that some may begin to think my faith is so much diminished in the truths we as a people cherish, that I have become weary, and consequently cast away my confidence in the blessed hope. But, thank the good Lord, this is not the case. It is true, I sometimes feel weary of the ills and labors of mortality; but this only sharpens desire for the return of our long-absent Lord, to take to himself his waiting Bride, and make her like his own glorious body.

The evidences in favor of its speedy realization were never clearer or more abundant than now, and shut out doubt.

Recently our little church has been revived and strengthened by more than two weeks' labors of our much esteemed Sister Stoddard, who closed on Wednesday evening last. Her efforts were blessed by the quickening power of the Spirit, as witnessed in our members, and also in lovers of truth from other churches, and likewise in the conversion of some precious souls to the truth as it is in Jesus.

For many years our town has not been so much aroused to hear upon the great subject of the speedy coming of Christ, and I am confident the word spoken will accomplish good; but how much the final day alone will disclose. It is a great pity that one so competent and so full of the Spirit of God should be kept out of the field on account of domestic duties and means of support for herself and family. Those having the means should see this debility removed.

Her closing discourse was deeply interesting and timely—upon "angelic agencies" of both good and evil that superintend, and minister to, and govern and control the two great classes, the righteous and the wicked, of earth's inhabitants. In speaking of the angels that had sinned, that were cast down to hell, reserved in "chains of darkness" (2 Pet. 2:4), she was particularly happy. She gave the usual interpretation of their locality, i. e., "earth's atmosphere." This being their place of habitation, it was an easy matter for them to communicate to and through their willing subjects (mediums), personifying deceased friends. This point was made so plain and so forcible that all could see it; and I trust some were made to realize their danger in giving heed, in any wise, to their seductive influence, and good will be the result.

As I have further contemplated the subject of the locality of these fallen angels, I see more clearly than ever before these two two points, viz.:

1. The danger to which the church is exposed, through their influence and power, derived from the unknown ages of past experience and demoniac hatred to Christ her living Head, who is to be their destroyer. These thoughts were heightened by the remembrance of tricks of legerdemain I once witnessed in New York, many years ago, from a celebrated conjurer who had the power of throwing an influence over a large and an intelligent audience, so as to deceive all and make them see things exactly the reverse of what they were. Now, if man can obtain and exercise this power over his fellow man, and thus deceive and lead astray, is it incredible to believe these spirits, that are enthroned in and govern "the principalities and powers" of earth (Eph. 6:12), should have a like power to deceive and lead astray? I think not; and hence the necessity of putting on the whole armor, provided by the Master, lest we fall through their devices.

2. As the devil is "the prince of the power of the air," and has impregnated every portion of it with poison, so that all sentient existences that breathe it inhale death, how essential it is that it should be cleansed, or purified. As the waters of the flood failed to accomplish the work effectually, we must wait and look for its fulfillment when "the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." This alone will do the work so that the transgressors "shall not rise again."

This work of purification or dislodgment of these spirits commences, as I believe, under the incipient stages of the seventh vial, which is to be poured out into the air (the place of their locality), which of course will give them great disquietude, causing them to exert all their power upon the elements, producing atmospheric phenomena similar to those we are now beginning to witness. Hence I am inclined to the belief that we are now witnessing the early events of this vial. If this is so, how fearful is the future! Who can fail to pray for the long-promised deliverance? Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, is my prayer.

Norwalk, O., Dec. 26th, 1875.

From Bro. B. Spaulding.

Dear Brn. Editors:—Permit me to say a few words in the World's Crisis. I am infirm with age, and my nervous system is run down by overwork, so that I am in a state of depression of spirits. But I hold on to the promises of God. I believe they that trust in him will never be confounded.

"His love in times past,
Forbids me to think
He will leave me at last,
In troubles to sink."

For a year past I have done more than my nature would bear, so now I am suffering the penalty. Well, I trust in God, and I shall yet praise him. Yes, I do praise him to-day for his great goodness to poor me.

From my youth up I have enjoyed his favors and mercy, and I remain firm in the doctrines I have believed and taught. I ought to have gained some in knowledge with the advantages I have enjoyed, and I trust I have.

Some have said they thought we had got to the end of the Bible;—that there was nothing more to learn; but I think we have much more to learn. Many prophecies remain yet to be fulfilled. They are not of private interpretation. We may understand them. They were written for our learning.

Let us keep our minds open to conviction, willing to hear, willing to learn, and bring forth from the word of God things new and old.

Let me say to the brethren, Be watchful; be prayerful; be pitiful; be courteous; be kind to those around; bear each others burdens, and overlook each others imperfections. Walk together as heirs of the grace of life.

I am sorry there are so many discords and divisions prevailing. We must bear and forbear, forget and forgive, and try to hold on to each other, though we may not think alike on some minor points.

While we enjoy the privilege of thinking for ourselves, we must grant the same right to our brethren. If this is done, we can have good meetings, good christian society where there are different views.

Now, brethren and sisters, write to me. I am a lonely man; no wife; children all settled away from my home, and I feel rather desolate. Letters from brethren and sisters are like cold water to a thirsty soul. I am acquainted with hundreds and thousands, all over the country, who can remember me. Will they write to an aged, infirm brother? If they will, I will answer them. I cannot do much but write, and I do enjoy it.

My general health is good, but I am infirm with age, being seventy-six years old. The grave must soon become my home, unless Jesus comes very soon. I do not dread death. It has no terrors for me, neither has it any charms. I do not believe it is the gate to endless joy. No; the resurrection is the gate to endless joy, and I do hope to have a part in the first resurrection; on such the second death will have no power.

My love to all. I remember with pleasure and gratitude the kind hospitality of friends all over the country. God bless them is my prayer. And may we meet in that blessed new earth, where the follies of youth, and the weakness of age will not be known. Pray for me. Remember me. Write to me.

Editors Crisis:—If you will allow me a short space in your columns, I will give you and the reader of your paper a short sketch of the encouragements, crosses and difficulties enjoyed and endured by persons speaking truth in this part of the south. Since Eld. J. A. Cargile's last visit here we have had a visit from Eld. J. J. Smith, of Ala., who came about the 10th of Nov., and stayed and labored in Caldwell and Watauga counties faithfully, traveling through the rain and snow. Bro. Smith is a man sixty-seven years of age; but, notwithstanding his infirmities of body, he traveled during the month with us three hundred miles on horseback, and preached twenty-eight sermons. He had no contention with any native brother, but had good order, and the undivided attention of the audience wherever he went.

The over-zealous Immortal-soulists are becoming more reconciled, and are concluding it best not to make the difference a test of fellowship. It is to be hoped that the truth will prevail, and love and friendship abound, and all good christians unite in one band to awaken sinners, and have them equipped, ready for the coming of the Lord.

We received a bundle of tracts to distribute. If you can send us some to this office, we will be thankful.

Collettsville, Ala.

From Bro. F. Mayo.

Dear brethren and sisters in Chist:—I wish to relate to you some of my experience, and tell you about my Savior and his love to poor unworthy me.

Two years ago I was going down the path of sin and destruction, as fast as Satan could drag me; but the blessed Savior interposed. He took me out of the mire and clay, carried me to a fountain filled with his own blood, washed me, and made me every whit whole. Praise his holy name! Soon after this, my wife joined hands with the Savior, and we have come to this conclusion, viz., We will serve the Lord. O praise God, and give him all the glory. I feel that I am Christ's and he is mine. I have taken him as my Savior and my friend. He has won my heart and melted it by his Holy Spirit, and I have submitted myself unto him, and find his yoke easy and his burden light. A day in his courts is better than a thousand in the pleasures of the world. I had rather be a door-keeper in the house of the Lord, than to dwell in the tents of wickedness. I love God's faithful children. I love them because they love my Savior, and because their conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ. I do not love them because they are great, or wise, or rich, or honored; but they are the children of my Heavenly Father. With me old things have passed away, and all things have become new. I am a new creature. As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so my heart pants after God.

God bless you, dear brethren and sisters, and may you be kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation, having your loins girded about with truth, your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, your lamps trimmed and burning, with oil in your vessels, having on the wedding garment, all ready to enter in to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

From Sr. A. Dinsmore.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ:—As the perils of the last days thicken around us let us not be discouraged, but look up, and lift up our heads, for our redemption draweth nigh. Let us gird on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. "Stand, therefore, having our loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace; above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith we shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God."

Peter says—"Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you, but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when the glory shall be revealed, you may be glad also with exceeding joy, who are kept by the power of God, through faith, unto salvation, ready to be revealed in the last time, wherein ye greatly rejoice, though now for a season if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations, that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise, and honor, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

We must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God. Jesus says—"In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world." God grant that we may have it said unto us, when Jesus comes, "These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

Editors of World's Crisis:—I have been every week greatly refreshed during the past year by reading the communications in the Crisis from brethren and sisters of like precious faith. Your valuable paper, with the Banner, is all the preaching we have in this place. I am a lonely pilgrim here, striving to stand up for the truth as it is in Jesus. The mass of church members are blending the service of God with the service of mammon. The gentle voice of Jesus has called me to "come out" and be "separate"; therefore I stand out here alone with Jesus against all church sociables, fairs, and the like, and am trying to live a life of holiness, that I may win some souls to Christ and be ready to meet him at his coming.

Dear friends in the faith and truth, pray for this place, that some souls may be made ready for our coming King.

Cairo, Greene Co., N. Y.

From Geo. E. Loomis.

Dear Brethren:—The judgment day only will reveal the good the Crisis has done me. How regularly it has come each week, filled with precious reading. I feel that I cannot do without it. When I last wrote I did not believe the doctrine that it taught, but I was seeking after the truth. I read and prayed over it, until at last the light came; and now, thank God, I do believe the precious truth that it advocates.

O, how precious those truths are to me. If we would let the Bible interpret itself, we could not help believing that man dies, and if he ever lives again he must be resurrected. Paul says—"If the dead rise not, our hope is vain"; and "if in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable." How glad I am that I have found the blessed truth, and I am endeavoring to let my light shine. It costs something to be an Adventist; but God's grace is sufficient. I take the Bible for my creed, and am looking daily to Jesus for help, that I may live aright.

Brethren, let us work faithfully, leaving nothing undone that should be done; for time is short, and what is done must be done quickly.

Clayville, Oneida Co., N. Y.

From Sr. S. M. French.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have taken my pen for the first time to address you through the Crisis. Although separated far from those of like precious faith, yet my love for the coming of Jesus is not in the least abated. No! no! It is more precious to my heart than ever. I long for the gathering time to come, when my loved companion, now sleeping in Jesus, who walked with me in life's journey, will come from the land of the enemy, no more to sicken and die. That voice so long silent will once more sing praises to Him who redeemed him from the grave. With such a hope as this, I will toil on, bear life's burdens and trials a little longer, if I may but win Christ and wear a crown. O, who could not well afford to share in the conflict here, to be an heir with Christ? for he has said, "If we suffer with him, we shall also reign with him."

The dear Crisis is all the Advent preaching I have. I prize it next to my Bible, as many isolated ones have said before.

Dear brethren and sisters, may we live by faith on the Son of God, that at his appearing we shall receive eternal life.

Adrian, Mich.

LETTER FROM BRO. T. FINN.

Dear brethren and sisters in Christ:—We read in Galatians 3:27: "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye are Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise."

We learn that when we are in Christ, we are Christ's; we are not our own. We are bought with a price; and that price was the precious blood of Christ, poured out as he hung upon the cross. The spear that pierced his side let out his life-blood, that you and I might live. Oh, what a price! the life of the blessed Son of God!

My dear friends, the life of Jesus Christ is the price paid for you and I. We belong to Jesus Christ—our time, our talents, our money, and all that we have belong to him. We hold them only as stewards, and we shall all have to give an account of our stewardship in the great day of reckoning. We may deceive our neighbors; we may deceive ourselves; but we should always remember that the eyes of an All-seeing God are upon us. We cannot deceive him.

We are commanded to present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, and acceptable unto God. How shall we do it? By departing from all iniquity, leading holy and godly lives. If you have been following any of the lusts of the flesh, leave them at once. I beg of you not to do anything that will bring a reproach upon the cause of Christ. You who have been buried in the watery grave have said to the world that you are dead to sin. And Paul says, "How can we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" "The works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulation, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revilings, and such like. They that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law. And we which are Christ's, have crucified the flesh with all the affections and lusts." "If we live in the Spirit let us walk in the Spirit." "Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth; but that which is good." "Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking be put away from you, with all malice."

Let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ. Let the mind be in you that was in Christ Jesus, that you may be blameless, without rebuke; the sons of God in the midst of a crooked and perverse generation, among whom ye shine as lights in the world, holding forth the words of life: forgetting the things that are behind, let us reach forth unto those things which are before, and press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

As ye have received Christ Jesus, the Lord, so walk ye in him; rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith as you have been taught, abounding therein in thanksgiving. Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the traditions of men, after the elements of the world, and not after Christ. Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness and long-suffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any one have any complaint against another, even as Christ forgave you. And above all things put on charity, or love, which is the bond of perfectness. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, and let the words of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another with grace in your hearts unto the Lord.

And whatsoever ye do, in word or in deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks unto God the Father. By him knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance. For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared unto all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. Let patience have her perfect work, that ye may be perfect and entire, wanting nothing. If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask God who giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not, and it shall be given you.

Always remember that pure and undefiled religion before God is this, To visit the widow and fatherless in their affliction, and to keep yourselves unspotted from the world.

Finally, brethren, be ye all of one mind, having compassion one of another, loving one another. Be pitiful, be courteous, not rendering evil for evil, or railing for railing, but contrariwise, blessing. Knowing that ye are thereunto called that ye should inherit a blessing. For if you love life and would see good days, refrain your tongues from evil, and your lips that they speak no guile. Eschew evil and do good; seek peace and ensue it; for the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous, and his ears are open unto all their prayers. But the face of the Lord is against them that do evil. Who is he that will harm you if you follow after that which is good? And if you suffer for righteousness' sake, happy are ye, and be not afraid of their terror, neither be troubled. But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts, and be ready always to give an answer to every one that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear. Having a good conscience, that whereas they speak evil of you as of evil doers, they may be ashamed that falsely accuse your good conversation in Christ. As every one hath received the gift, so minister one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God. If any man minister, let him do it as of the ability that God giveth. That God in all things may be glorified, through Jesus Christ, to whom be praise and dominion forever and ever.

HOME AND HEALTH.

REFORM.

GEO. A. STREETER.

Bro. Gunn of Greenwich, Mass., has used tobacco for over fifty years. About one year ago he left off chewing, but continued smoking. It was the first thing in the morning and the last thing at night, and several times during the day. One morning, about eight weeks ago, he arose after having a troublesome dream (we have had some conversation with him upon this subject), took his pipe to smoke, but laid it up, and at noon told his wife that he never should smoke again as long as he lived; and now the very smell of tobacco is offensive to him.

His appetite is good, and his health much improved; and his dear wife is not obliged to suffer the annoyances arising from the filthy habit. What a relief! She can have it clean behind the stove, and does not have to endure the disagreeable smell of tobacco from an old pipe or from his breath. God is honored, and let us all rejoice.

Now let me say to tobacco users, Follow this example. Abandon it at once and forever.

Sister Gunn is so well pleased about it, that she wanted I should write it for the Crisis. God bless him in his endeavors to overcome the evil. Next to rum drinking is the evil of tobacco using. Whatsoever we eat or drink, let it all be for the glory of God. Amen. God help us to walk so that we may be a pattern for others. Yours in faith, hope and charity, and the love of God.

SPREAD OF TRICHINOSIS, OR PORK POISON.

The Transactions of the Indiana State Medical Society, 1875, contains a report on Trichinosis, by Dr. George Sutton, of Aurora, Ind., which contains the following alarming observations:

From microscopic examination of pork killed in southeastern Indiana, we have found from three to sixteen per cent. of the hogs affected with the poison; the number of hogs diseased varying greatly in different localities.

Over five millions of hogs are annually slaughtered and packed in the western States, not including those which are put up for family use by the farmers; if four per cent. of this pork is diseased, which we believe to be a low estimate, we have two hundred and twenty-one thousand, four hundred and eighty-four diseased hogs put annually upon the market; or of an average of two hundred and ninety-six thousand, eight hundred pound of diseased meat, every ounce of which, under favorable circumstances, is capable of producing disease.

"That from the cases of trichinosis that came under our observation, and the post mortem examinations, and the effects upon the dogs fed on the diseased meat, we have come to the conclusion that ninety per cent. of disease produced from eating poisoned pork appears either as a gostroentiritis, or as diarrhœa or dysentery, and not more than ten per cent. probably appears as the fully developed form of trichonosis, or pork poison in which the muscular system becomes affected.

"That as diarrhœa, dysentery and enteritis rank high as causes of mortality in the United States, (these diseases causing thirty one thousand one hundred and fifty-three deaths in 1870, as shown by the last census reports) and as we have seen that a large amount of trichinous pork, capable of producing these diseases, is among the principal articles of food in our country, we think it more than probable that trichina has a much greater influence in this class of diseases than has been recognized by the profession.

"That it is highly probable that, when the fact becomes more generally known that so large a per centage of pork is swarming with trichinæ, capable of producing disease, it may have an effect upon the use of this meat, and consequently affect the sale, to some extent, of one of the principle articles of commerce in the west."—Ex.

VENTILATION.—Sextons need a lesson about these times. They often forget that people breathe. A church full of people will breathe the air all over in about thirty minutes, and convert it into stupefying poison fit to breed typhoid fever and pneumonia. The contagion is often spread, and the sexton is responsible. The pastor and deacons ought to teach him to provide generously for fresh air. It is important to be well warmed in church, but still more important not to be poisoned. School teachers need instruction also. Many of our school houses are pest houses every winter. Why so stingy of the air? The Lord has made it plenty; it sweeps around every house, rushes in at every crevice, open window, or door ajar, to pour its life-food into all lungs, without stint, and free of charge. Let it in, teachers, let it in freely; it is better than medicine; life for the blood; good for the brain. Fresh air is the one thing needful when we wake and when we sleep; in kitchen, parlor and bed-room. It imparts warmth, life, health; repels disease, and keeps us from poisoning ourselves to death. Be wise, and open the gates to the rich, inspiring generous air.—Baptist Union.

LINES.

ELLA M. LUNT.

I'll bear the cross, for Christ hath said,
"My friends ye cannot be
Except ye do yourselves deny,
And walk by faith in me."

A form of words will not avail,
For Christ our hearts doth read;
And if we are his friends at all,
Let's be his friends indeed.

The testing time will soon appear,
Then comes the morn so fair;
But only they whose hearts are pure,
Have any portion there.

If trials come we will not shrink,
Yea, count them all as joy,
If we at last may live and reign
In a world without alloy.

If scarlet doth our sins arise,
Oh, then to Christ we'll go;
"Come let us reason, saith the Lord,
I'll make them white as snow."

Then bear the cross, and murmur not,
Until the cross shall cease,
And Jesus comes to crown his saints
With everlasting peace.

SECOND ADVENT GLIMPSES.

The sign of the Son of man may be distinguishable from the actual apocalypse of his person to the whole world. Just as it is recorded of his appearance to Saul and his company on the way to Damascus: "The men which journeyed with him stood speechless, hearing a voice, but seeing no man;" and again, in another narrative of the same event, "They that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me." Acts 9: 7, and 22: 9. That is, Saul of Tarsus heard and saw what his companions heard not and saw not. They all heard a mighty sound, but Saul heard the words which were spoken; they all saw a dazzling light; but Saul saw the person of the Lord Jesus. We seem especially invited to regard this as a type by the apostle himself. 1 Tim. 1: 16.

I venture, therefore, to suggest that "the sign of the Son of man" is a glory visible from pole to pole; a glory which shall usher in the day of the Lord; but that, at first, his divine power will be revealed only to his own believing people, and to the Jewish nation, of whom we read: "They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and shall mourn for him." Zech. 12: 10. Perhaps this may be the threefold distinction observable in the words, "Behold he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him" (may not this be true, in the first place, only of those who are Christ's at his coming?) "and they also which pierced him" (the Jews); "and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him." Rev. 1: 7.

I have lingered the longer over this, as it is "the blessed hope, even the unveiling of the glory of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ," for which we look. Titus 2: 13.

The rapture of the saints to meet the Lord in the air. Of this the apostle's words leave no room for doubt. "The dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." 1 Thess. 4: 17. That this holy meeting takes place in the air, that is, in the immediate precincts of our earth, and yet not on the earth, seems here only revealed; but it is revealed so distinctly as to foreclose all controversy.

Such appears to be the first great act of this glorious advent. Does then the reign of Christ on earth immediately follow his personal coming in the clouds of heaven, or are there certain events which Scripture leads us to expect will still intervene before the setting up of his kingdom? It would certainly appear from the word of prophecy that there is such an interval to which the second group of events I indicated must be assigned.

Our Lord foretells a time of unexampled convulsion and trouble before his return, and bids us watch and pray, "that we may be accounted worthy to escape all those things which shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Luke 21: 25-36.

Now if, as we saw reason to believe, the saints shall taste of the beginning of this sore trial before they are caught up to meet the Lord in the air, it follows that there must be some space of time in which the worst of this tribulation takes place on earth. It seems impossible that such sore trouble can be compressed into a minute, or an hour, or a day. And many wise and cautious interpreters have thought that a period of three and a half years of unparalleled trial for the world is predicted in the word of God.

Again, we are here led to pray that we may "stand before the Son of man," and St. John tells of the marriage supper of the Lamb being celebrated before the great day of battle. Now, it is difficult to imagine these things taking place in a moment of time. It seems that while translation, being an act of power on God's part, may well be instantaneous, communion, being an act of conscious response on our part, must needs be more prolonged. It is not in the twinkling of an eye that we hold converse with Christ now. His love kindles ours; thought follows thought; confidence begets confidence; joy leads on to joy. Can it be otherwise in that supremest crisis of the Bride's felicity.

I believe, therefore, that while the great tribulation is progressing on earth, there will be the fruition of heavenly communion betwixt Christ and his church in the air. Let us look for a few moments at this "our gathering together unto him" first, continuing to enumerate the events as before suggested.

The saints meeting the Lord in the air, and standing accepted before him. Oh, the unutterable joy of that bridal summons to his own! To the midnight cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh! go ye out to meet him" (Matt. 25: 8), they will answer, "Lo, this is our God! we have waited for him." As they rise in their glorified bodies, they will be conscious that they are his, and he is theirs. They will hear his voice quelling every fear; they will meet his eye beaming upon them with unutterable love; they will look up into his blessed face until it writes its impress on their own; they will fall low at his sacred feet in adoration and holy delight.

His own hand will raise them; and they shall stand before the Son of man. The Scriptural usage of this expression by no means of necessity implies standing for judgment. "The Lord," we read, "separated the tribe of Levi, to bear the ark of the covenant of the Lord, to stand before the Lord to minister unto him, and to bless in his name." Deut. 10: 8. So the Queen of Sheba exclaimed to Solomon, "Happy are these thy servants which stand continually before thee, and that hear thy wisdom." 1 Kings 10: 8. It rather implies priesthood in the tabernacle and service in the royal court. That the saints will indeed be judged is certain from Scripture. Rom. 14: 10-12; 1 Cor. 4: 4, 5; 2 Cor. 5: 10. It is necessary to state this positively, as some, alas, in our day deny it. But this judgment may not be till the great white throne is set up after the millennium; and the standing before the Son of man, of which our Lord speaks, seems equivalent to standing accepted and approved. The saints will be clothed in their blood-washed garments of salvation, and covered with the robe of righteousness. Isaiah 41: 10. Christ will present the bride to himself in glorious beauty, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but holy and without blemish. Eph. 5: 27. She shall be arraynd in fine linen, clean and white. Rev. 19: 8. Then shall be fulfilled the prayer of our Advocate with God, "Father, I will that they whom thou hast given me be with me where I am, that they may behold my glory." John 16: 24. Then shall he say of his church, "Thou art all fair, my love; there is no spot in thee;" and she shall answer from the depths of her glowing heart, "I am my Beloved's, and my Beloved is mine." Song 4: 7, and 6: 3.—Signs of Our Times.

JESUS IS COMING AGAIN.

A. DINSMORE.

What is there that so cheers the christian's heart as to know that his Redeemer is coming back to remove the curse, destroy death and him that hath the power of it, and take his children home where we shall not fear that death will ever part us. In that home we shall need no sun, or moon, or light of a candle, for the Lord God and the Lamb will be the light of the city. How I long to be there. O it is joy to me to know that if faithful I shall soon change faith for sight, and know as I am known. It is not a mere fancy, as some seem to imagine, but a reality. A real Savior is coming, not to atone for sin, but to redeem those that have believed on his name; those who have been willing to be counted fools for his sake.

Are you of that class dear reader? Can you say

"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee?"

Have you made the full consecration? Can you say, My all to Christ I've given? If not commence at once, while the door of mercy is open; for soon he that is filthy will be filthy still. Remember God has said, Thou shalt have no other God beside me. Jesus says, He that loveth father or mother, son or daughter, more than me, is not worthy of me. Is there any idol that you have not given up? Do not ask God to tear it from you, but if you know what it is, deliberately lay it on the altar. If you do not know what it is that holds you from being free, just ask God to make it known to you, and he certainly will, if you believe. Behold, the Judge standeth before the door, and he will render to every man according to his work.

Dear reader, you will want a hiding place then from the storm. Some are going to cry for the "rocks and mountains to fall upon" them, and some are going to exclaim, "Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him." In which class will you be? This is the time to decide. Jesus says, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." "He that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." "Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." "Let us take heed to ourselves, lest at any time our hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon us unawares." "Let us watch therefore, and pray always, that we may be accounted worthy to escape all these things, and to stand before the Son of man." "Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb."

TEKEL.

"The first in his own cause seemeth just, but his neighbor cometh and searcheth him."—Prov. 18: 17.

J. B. COOK.

My desire is to notice the pamphlet of B. D. Haskell, in the spirit of truth. It is neatly gotten up, appears well to the eye of the stranger, and ought to have been replete with the facts and words of truth. Its title is "Tekel." Its matter is drawn from "reason, philosophy, science, and revelation," in about this order. The first taking the pre-eminence; as it seems sustained by the prevailing opinion of mankind, "who know not God"; or who, "when they knew God, glorified him not as God, but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened. They became fools, and changed the truth of God into a lie, and worshiped and served the creature rather than the Creator." Rom. 1: 21-25.

He employs some sentences expressive of reverence for revelation and its author, which we would gladly employ and which I would quote if space allowed. But on the main subject of his little book, he has yet to learn, it seems, what the Bible contains, or we believe. As the leading minds of Christendom move in a prescribed circle of thought touching baptism, the second advent, the resurrection of the dead, end of the world, etc., so this writer starts from the philosophical view of "the man proper," or, as he puts it, "his proper personality"; and hence he proceeds on the plane of an inveterate Platonist, in the heathenish darkness of 2300 years ago. Yet, strange to say, he seems as sure of his ground as if there had been no advanced revelation by Jesus—his death and resurrection—by which "he hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light [made it clear] through the gospel." 2 Tim. 1: 10.

With thanks for the pamphlet, I return the courtesy by noting the salient points, with a correction. From these the reader may learn the character of the whole.

I. He quotes, as from us, that "man has no spiritual nature, but is entirely material." p. 1. Suffice it to say in reply, that such words may be qualified by the terms and drift of the whole sentence in which they occur; or that they do not cover the ground, and leave the thought incomplete (as is often done). Nay, I will not contend for what words I or my brethren employ, aside from Holy Scripture; but Bro. Haskell doubtless should know that we all quote that "the Lord is the God of the spirits of all flesh" (Num. 16: 22; 27: 16); and this embraces "all flesh—fowl, cattle, beast, and creeping thing—all in whose nostrils is the breath of the spirit of life." Chap. 2: 7; 6: 17; 7: 21, 22. We believe all such scripture. Amen.

In these and other texts we have the strongest terms that express the presumed immortal soul (nismath, ruah, chayim, and nephesh). Note, the terms of the texts embrace all animals, even to creeping things, in common with man. Butler's Analogy recognizes this fact, and says—"There is no evidence that animals ever lose their living powers." Then lice and lizards are everlasting as angels, and mice and maggots as immortal as men. But a theory that involves such extremes of untruth must be altogether fallacious.

The term nephesh—"soul"—occurs over seven hundred times, inclusive of the corresponding Greek word in the New Testament, and over five hundred it applies to the person, or creature in view. "The first man Adam was made a living soul." Gen. 2: 7; 1 Cor. 15: 45. The man, Adam, was himself the "living soul." Hence, if "soul must be expressive of "a spiritual nature," then Adam had and was all that, and there could have been no death to reach him, nor could he have been contrasted with Christ—the quickening spirit"—nor could all other creatures (Gen. 2: 19) have been "living souls" except also with an immortal nature. Surely, Bro. H., you have lost your reckoning to begin with. The Bible you so far unwittingly abandon.

II. You say, p. 17—"It is not of Pagan, Hebrew or Christian origin; it is indigenous in the mind of man," etc. Yes, I reply, Romanism preceded Protestantism; Paganism preceded Popery, and the Platonic philosophers of the Pagan world in all this did but echo the primal idea of the devil—"Ye shall NOT SURELY DIE." Gen. 3: 4; John 8: 44; Heb. 2: 14; 1 John 3: 8; Rev. 20: 2, 3.

III. You say, page 17—"Reasoning still further, he might infer this unseen state; it would not be unreasonable to infer that the spiritual part of his being dropping the material habiliment at death would enter this unseen state. Now this is substantially the source and substance [note, substantially the substance] of what some would style 'the light of nature.'" Yes, this inference of an inference is all "the light of nature" that remains to "the world that lieth in the Wicked One." 1 John 5: 18, 19; 2 Cor. 4: 4. You add—"It is a great inference, from incontestible facts common to the race." Yes, the delusion and darkness and debasement that was induced by the devil's lie have been but too common to the race. All false philosophies and religions have it in common; while "the Hebrew and Gospel revelations" notice it to expose its sinful, satanic, and accursed source, with its terrible range and end, in judgment.

IV. Now you add, Bro. H., as if unaware of your three-fold inference, that, "if Christianity be not designed for the restoration of a lost spiritual nature, we search in vain for any evidence of design therein." pp. 17 and 27. But you seem not to see that what man "lost" is not still possessed. And I will fain hope that my neighborly service, in searching you out, may not be "lost" upon you. Each page of "Tekel" abounds, like this, in such signal misapprehensions, that may be as easily exposed. But I am bound to brevity.

V. You seem to make out "many absurdities" from our faith in the above noted primary and abounding Bible statements touching man's sleep and varied capacities of mind and body. pp. 19-27. In reply, I need only remind you that sleep, thought and intelligent action are predicated of "the soul" only as they apply to the PERSONAL being, the creature, man. You write as if this fact, with its overwhelming proof, had escaped your notice. As if the capacities of the horse, for instance, to sleep, work and forage must belong, not to the horse, as a creature of God, but to a "spiritual" horse. Or, if this will not answer your presumed difficulty, I ask if the angel, as an organized being of "greater power and might" than man, may not be endowed, as such, with all the angelic attributes; without presuming that there must be an inner mystical angel, in which the angelic attributes inhere? Please read the record of God's creation, where the varied orders of being are made with endowments to fill the sphere assigned them, respectively. Gen. 1: 11, 22.

"The soul" is primarily the self-hood. "My soul doth magnify the Lord." Luke 1: 46. "My soul" and "thine Holy One" are both used of Jesus' person, in hades and resurrection. Acts 2: 27. "MY SOUL," saith God, "shall have no pleasure in him." Heb. 10: 38. Some score of times this term "soul" is used of God, and the ever blessed Son of God; and as such it belongs to God himself, and of course to man himself. But in no instance to a more subtle, spiritual "personality." That is inferred, and inferred, until it is exalted into a great inference! p. 17. Do consider how great must be this "light of nature," that denies man and other orders of being alike of their proper attributes as living souls—creatures of God. Such is human wisdom. And "God knoweth the thoughts of the wise that they are VAIN; wherefore let no man glory in men." 1 Cor. 3: 18-23.

VI. In what doctrine does the difference consist, that divides the worthies of Heb. 11, and the apostles, from the idolatrous and apostate world? Please think of this point. The believer takes God's record of man, the living soul, his subjection to moral law, and by sin his mortal state, ending in death. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die"; but the blessed hope of future "life and immortality" is by the coming of the Lord and the resurrection, or change from mortal to immortality. The resurrection is made essential. 1 Cor. 15: 15-58. In contrast the idolatrous and apostate try to assure themselves that they are immortal; that they do not die, but go to glory when emancipated from the body, etc. Hence "they mocked" at St. Paul. Acts 17: 32. (This error takes varied forms.)

Let us, Bro. H., take our stand with all those ancient worthies, and admit that the Hebrew and Christian Scriptures embrace the primal falsehood, only as they instruct us in its satanic source and deadly power to destroy. Gen. 3.

VII. As the ant and the bee are competent to build their home and provide their sustenance without an inner ant or bee, or a spiritual entity, why not man, as God's creature? Each has its (or his) proper endowment and sphere of action.

In conclusion, I remark that nothing can be gained by the assumption of a spiritual, immortal personality, because you thus add nothing to man's endowments, or capabilities; but on the other hand you contravene and contradict the gospel plan of God, and the motive that should constrain us to "seek for immortality." Rom. 2: 7. Man's present state, however honored, is "mortal." Immortality is provided for by Jesus and the resurrection.

You ignore the hope and authorized consolation we give to the dying and the weeping friends. Please read Titus 2: 11-14; 1 Thess. 4: 13-18, and learn to look for that blessed hope; and to quote the command to "comfort one another with these words" as to Christ's coming and the resurrection. Amen. If you can be led to give such gospel consolation to the bereaved in Christ, you may be constrained to confess that you mistook and wrote, while weighing "the doctrine of the Lord," "TEKEL" over the wrong end of the balance.

With good will I desire thus to encourage you to rely on God, not on blinded reason. Then you may quote and echo God's truth as to "life and immortality" through Jesus and the resurrection.

FALSE HUMILITY.

What we think is humility, is, after all, frequently only pride turned wrong side out. You say, "I believe in Christ, but I am so unworthy that I do not dare to believe that I am a saved man." Unworthy? Most assuredly you are. And if you live to be the veriest saint, you will be so still. And that is the reason why God has chosen to save you by one who is worthy. It is not a question of what you deserve, but what Christ deserves. And for you to refuse to take the place which God assigns you in redemption, because of a sense of unfitness, that is not humility, but unbelief. It is putting self in the place of the cross. And that is always to set aside Christ. I care not whether it be a proud self or an humble self; a self-righteous self or a self-condemning self; the moment you put it in the way of the cross, you throw the atonement into eclipse, and Christ is made of no effect to you.

It is a fact that we are slow to comprehend, that the gospel is designed and just fitted to meet men at the lowest point of their moral degeneracy. It names no degree of improvement that we must attain before it can help us. It prescribes no dispensation of self-preparation; it has no betterment act which must be enforced, in order to get us ready for calling on Jesus. It stipulates to take men at their worst or at their best. And it matters little which. It has to do the same work for both. It costs the government just as much to uniform a well dressed recruit as it does a ragged one. In either case the recruit must put off his citizen's dress, and put on the army suit. And so it is not worth while for a volunteer to spend his labor and pains to get a new suit to enlist in. There is likewise no necessity for a sinner's waiting to get a better moral garb, a more respectable wardrobe of frames and feelings, before he may come to Christ. For in any event he must put off the old man with his dress, and put on the Lord Jesus Christ, who of God is made unto him wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption.—Banner of Holiness.

THE BOOK OF DANIEL.

Not to the superficial reader of this prophecy will be discovered God's intercourse with his people, and the workings of his hand in the evolutions of centuries; but to the devout student, whose faith will be confirmed in the reality of the divine interposition in human affairs, and his immediate and constant control of all events for the accomplishment of his will in subduing all things to himself.

The genuineness and inspiration of the book of Daniel (excepting the parts mentioned in our previous article) can be clearly established by the historical fulfilment hitherto of the two most remarkable predictions contained in it; that of the great image in the second chapter with its supplementary expansions, and the familiar prophecy of the seventy weeks; the former stretching through two thousand four hundred years, and the latter through four hundred and ninety years. If these prophecies can be shown to have been fulfilled in exact accordance with the signification of the terms in which they were revealed, any objection to this book founded upon the minuteness with which other less extended prophecies have been fulfilled, must be deemed altogether futile.

A great metalic image of polished brilliancy stands before us; his head gold, his arms and breast silver, his belly and thighs brass, his legs iron and his feet iron mixed with clay. What means this image? Is it merely a fancy picture? or is it a divinely constructed embodiment in vision of successive earthly empires, having their beginning indeed in the days of the seer but extending through continuous ages down to the present? Appended to it is the interpretation given by the inspired prophet at the time, applying the different parts of the image to four great empires which should succeed each other in the dominion of the earth, and passing through several indicated phases extend to the end of the world.

Again in the seventh chapter these empires are the subject of another vision of four beasts, the lion, the bear, the leopard and one of anomalous character having ten horns, among which sprang up another little horn and displaced three of the original ones. In this horn were human eyes and a mouth speaking great things.

By the prophetic interpretation these horns represented kingdoms which should spring up in the fourth empire. And the little horn represented one of diverse character—a politico-religious kingdom which, subduing three of the ten, should claim and be allowed by the others special jurisdiction over the saints of God, and wear them out by cruel oppression and relentless persecution for a time, times and half a time, during which they would be delivered into his hand.

These visions and their interpretation have their exact fulfilment in the four great empires of Babylon, Medo-Persia, Greece and Rome, and the Papal hierarchy. Babylon, the head of gold, first of the series, was at the zenith of its power and glory at the time of the vision nearly two thousand four hundred years ago, but after a few years was succeeded by its Medo-Persian conquerors, the breast and arms of silver, which in turn succumbed to the Macedonian, Alexander the Great, who established the Grecian empire, represented by the belly and thighs of brass. Next arose the Roman empire, the greatest and most powerful of the four—the iron legs—but in process of time, divided into many kingdoms represented by the toes of iron and clay, which not adhering together, indicated that while retaining much of the strength of the old empire these kingdoms would not cohere.

These kingdoms in the second vision are symbolized by the ten horns of the fourth beast. And answering to the little horn that rose up among them is the Papal hierarchy—which becoming possessed of the territory of three of the ten and assuming divine prerogatives, claimed dominion over the faith of the saints, and has grievously oppressed and persecuted them for about one thousand two hundred and sixty years.

Thus the fulfilment answers to the prediction as face to face in a glass. Had the book been written in the present century, in simulation of prophecy, what could it contain more pointed than what it does contain, of what has actually come to pass? The divine inspiration of this prophecy is then placed beyond dispute.—Prophetic Times.

A SCREW LOOSE.

J. H. F. VARNEY.

In setting up and regulating sewing machines I have often found that a loose screw will cause considerable trouble. If the needle screw becomes loosened, the needle is displaced, and sometimes may make a stitch, but oftener fail to do it. It may work and may not.

Just so with the church, with which God has designed to bless and save mankind. Where it is in perfect order, each member in its place, and willing faithfully to perform its part, then glorious work is done, and the most blessed results will be accomplished. But when one of the ecclesiastical screws get loose, or, in other words, when any of the members refuse to do the part which God designed for them to perform, then the machinery is disarranged, and if work is done at all it is meagre in amount, and poor in quality. Of course there are more of these than I can stop to enumerate now, but let me speak of one or two.

When I see ministers quit the gospel field for a more lucrative employment, if indeed their circumstances will admit of their remaining in it, even at the cost of all but the bare necessaries of life, then I know the trouble is in their own hearts, which have been invaded by covetousness or love of the world. But when I see others, men whom I know love the Lord, and love him so much that they are willing to forego all of life's luxuries, honors and enjoyments, to preach Christ to a fire-doomed world, leave the blessed work for the mill, shop, or farm, then I know there is a screw loose somewhere, and I find it in the covetousness, thoughtlessness, or ignorance of those to whom they minister. Nor can I believe that the church is alone to blame, for I know that preachers do not show the relation which the church and minister sustain to each other as they ought. They dare not do it lest they incur the charge of "begging," which every true man will dread.

Not being in the field at present, of course I can speak out on this subject, and not fear such a result. I know that some are covetous, but there are other noble souls, who, if they really understood duty in the matter, would cheerfully make any sacrifice which the Lord requires.

It is supposed by some that a man who is called to preach requires no time for thought or study, but has only to ascend the pulpit, and God somehow sends the sermon right down from heaven and it hits the preacher, and bounces out on the congregation. The fact is, preachers need time for study now as well as in the days of the apostle, when he said "study to show thyself—a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." For if you draw from a cask continually without replenishing you will soon get it empty instead of drawing pure water. I know that some have labored through the week, and then on Sunday, feeling the "woe" upon them, have preached the word as best they could. But to prepare to do so, the preacher has studied, wept, and prayed, while others were sleeping, and then on the Sabbath, the day on which others may rest, he repairs to the house of God with exhausted energies and a languid step, and performs a day's labor more severe than any in the week; but, owing to both mental and physical exhaustion, he is thought to be lacking in spirituality or intellectual acquirements, and he goes home to a noble, sympathizing, praying wife, almost disheartened, feeling that he can never preach again.

I suppose that immortality might bear such a strain, but no mortal man can, and some have stopped to rest, and mend up broken down health, while others have gone to their long rest under the daisies, and others still have quit the field at least for a time, feeling, perhaps, that they have made a mistake in supposing that God ever called them to preach his gospel.

I have a case in my mind now, where a preacher of undoubted piety and ability was obliged to leave the gospel field in New Hampshire for a Massachusetts shoe factory; and yet, there is probably not a church here that does not suffer to-day for just such labor as he can bestow.

I do not object to a preacher's doing a certain amount of manual labor, indeed, I think it for his health; but to be obliged to give all his time, strength and energies to it is quite another thing. None of our eminent men, either of our own or past time, have ever become so by giving all their time to building brogans, or raising potatoes.

Again, it is thought by others that if a man is called to preach God will take care of him and his family somehow, and so throw off all responsibility, shut their eyes and ears to their needs, however pressing they may be. It is true that the blessed Lord will care for his people, and it only remains for each member of the church to secure their part of the reward by cheerfully aiding in the work of doing it. For be it remembered that the days of Elijah are past, and it pleases God in these days to employ his church instead of the ravens to feed his servants. He not only requires his ministers to faithfully minister to the spiritual wants of the church as its servants, but also binds the church to provide for the temporal wants of the preacher, thus making a complete equality between them. "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the gospel should live of the gospel." 1 Cor. 9: 14.

Preachers and their families need food, clothing, houses, fuel, very much like other poor mortals. Not a superabundance of these things, but enough to make them comfortable. I do not ask the pastor to live upon his flock, but simply with them; and I am sure that no man of God will ask more than this.

Where is the mechanic that can support his wife and three or four children on six dollars per week? And yet many of our preachers are paid even less than that; and out of about three hundred dollars per year, they are expected to pay traveling expenses, provide house rent, fuel, food, and clothing for themselves and families. The consequence is, some quit the gospel field for one where they can get the means to supply the pressing wants of their family. Some have tried to earn a little money in some business which would not require them to stop preaching, and the result is scarcely less ruinous.

Thus their work is hindered by the cares of the present and the anxieties of the future, and alas! too, their influence is crippled; for many suppose them to be actuated by mercenary motives, while they are driven to this course in order to keep actual want from their dwellings. This state of things exists while brethren with plethoric pocketbooks, respectable bank accounts, and well filled stores and shops, good health, and remunerative employment, tables groaning with good things, barns and store-houses almost bursting with the golden bounties of Him who hath said, "inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto me" are looking on, professing to be almost listening for the pealing of the trump of God, and the rushing fires of the last day.

Church of the living God, while as his stewards, he will not hold you guiltless if you squander his money on unworthy objects, yet what a privilege he has given you to win stars for the crown of your rejoicing by winning souls to Christ.

This you may not do by personal effort, but remember that God and his people are coworkers, and if you are not called to go out and face the storm as a public servant, you can do as much at home by aiding those who are thus called.

Let them go like flaming fire through the land, all free and untrammeled by debt, worldly care or anxiety; and if they go thus, backed by your sympathy and prayers, be assured they will not return empty handed; but in the glorious morning will come, "bringing their sheaves with them," in the garnering of which you may bear a joyful part.

May the blessed Lord help us to all bear our part of life's burdens, and then we shall hear Christ say, "Well done."

POWER.

We do not so much need additional churches, or congregations, or choirs, or talent, as the endowment of power from on high. Satan cares not how many steeples tower up toward the sky, but he trembles when he knows a fervent prayer is climbing toward the throne. He does not mind how large the attendance in the houses of worship may be, if he can but keep the multitude out of the narrow way. He is delighted with the glittering array of pompous ceremonies, but his cheek pales when he sees the flashing of the sword of the Spirit. We have enough machinery; what we want is the power to move it, to make it effective. We have enough skeletons—we want the breath to give them life. A church without the gift of the Holy Ghost is as useless as an engine without the steam; a mill-wheel without the water; a cloud lacking the rain. One man who knows the way to the throne, and has the girding of the Spirit, is worth more for aggressive warfare upon the forces of darkness than a whole church full of those who are ever guessing and hoping they are disciples, but always lacking the present fullness. Two hundred armed men can guard ten thousand unarmed prisoners. Place them upon an equality and they are instantly overpowered.

When a church has the panoply divine, the armor of God, they are triumphant, and their enemies flee before them; but rob them of that, and they are powerless as other men. When they have the might of the Holy Ghost, every shot goes into the ranks of the enemy impelled with a double force. O that the entire church might receive this! Let it be sought prayerfully, persistently. This is the artillery under which the walls of sin shall crumble; this is the shower from whose influence the harvest shall spring forth; this is the reservoir from which the the streams of life are to be supplied which shall encircle the world.—Earnest Christian.

ON THE LORD'S SIDE.—The lines between the church and the world have become very faint. They must be retraced and distinctly marked. All who will be on the Lord's side must step over from the world and stay there. On this subject the pulpits of the land must give no uncertain sound; and out of the pulpit a strong, steady, but merciful hand of discipline must be felt by all who are living too near the world. Many are, perhaps, afraid to administer discipline. Well, to all such God speaks in his word. If we see the sword coming, and fail to warn, we must bear the blood of the slain. Only a pure church can be a strong church, and a church can be pure only when its members live far away from the world and very near to Christ. "There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit." "Be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Reader, have you not been living too near to the world?—Ocean Grove.

THE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.—It was our privilege to attend the great "Christian Convention," held in the depot buildings, corner of Market and Thirteenth streets, Philadelphia, Jan. 19th, and 20th. It was a blessed occasion, and must result in great good to the cause of Christ. We may say more about it next week.

NEVADA.—The revival tide in Nevada, O., is rising very rapidly. We have rarely seen so much accomplished in so short a time. The meetings have now (Jan. 17th) been in progress eleven days, and some seventy have been converted, and many more are under conviction. We have from one to two hundred in the inquiry meetings every evening. Fifteen were baptized by Bro. McCulloch yesterday, and a number of others have decided to imitate their example next Lord's day. Fifteen united with the church last evening. The young converts have gone to work faithfully to persuade others to come to Christ. To-day the company of "workers" composed of the experienced christians and the young converts, have been visiting all the houses and places of business in the town, amounting to about four hundred. The present prospect for a great work is very promising.
M. G.

WHO NEXT?—We are delighted at the sight of the "Three-months'" column. Our Brn. and Srs. are doing nobly. Let the tide keep rising. Pour in faster and faster, till every subscriber has sent at least one paper for three months to some person. Are there not some others who will imitate Bro. Ali Andrews' example, and supply those in their town with the Crisis, who may express their wish to read it by giving their names to the generous persons, who are ready to make a sacrifice to help others to see the blessed truths expressed from week to week in the columns of the Crisis? We believe money thus expended will afford better results than bank stock. Who will try it? Let us all do more for Jesus this year, in every possible way, than ever before. Soon he will come to give the saints the kingdom. Let those who wish to hear him say, "Well done," be earnest workers in his vineyard.
M. G.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

The European war clouds look more and more threatening. The Turkish question is becoming one of very serious interest, and apparently, must be soon and finally decided. There is very little chance for Turkish success. Her mene tekel is very plainly written upon her harem walls. The London Times of Jan. 17th, says, "The Sublime Porte was never before in so critical a state. When referring to the condition of Europe, in relation to the "Eastern Question," the Times says: "If the opportunity Count Andrassy's note offers for settling the Eastern question is allowed to pass, Europe may soon be forced to apply rougher methods to a wider area."

Russia is said to be active in war preparations. This is true of all the great powers in Europe. They are exhausting their treasures in order to be ready for the great day of battle. The rising war clouds indicate not an ordinary storm; but a tempest, a hurricane that shall level all high objects. Men of might are trembling at the omens of coming events.

The Scriptures inform us that just before the coming of Christ, "the spirits of demons" will "go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them to the battle of the great day of God Almighty." It appears that this is one of the last things in the great prophetic programme. The closing scenes in the history of this dispensation are to be noted for gigantic military movements, great wickedness, and terrible conflicts on the battle-field. Such events are evidently at our doors.
M. G.

WHAT IS NEEDED?

In view of the fact that we are near the great day of the Lord, we think all must admit that every christian should be most actively engaged to persuade as many as possible to get ready for the sublime event. All available means should be employed that may help the people to seek and obtain pardon for their sins. No sacrifice is too great to make to secure such an object.

Hence christian workers are needed, who are willing to engage in personal efforts by conversation, prayer, and earnest entreaties, to lead the people to the cleansing fountain. Men and women are needed, who will labor in inquiry meetings, and go from house to house, talking and praying with every family. Cold formalists, and worldly professors have no heart for such work. Like the unconverted, they are blinded by the spirit of the world, and do not see their perilous condition. They have scarcely any realizing sense of the value of the christian religion, consequently are doing nothing to save others. They have no love for sinners, or anxiety for their salvation.

What is needed is an army of holy men and women, all consecrated to the Lord, filled with the Spirit, who will enter heartily into the work of leading men, women and children to Christ. Will you be one of them? Say yes; and if not all given up to Jesus, do it now, and say, Here am I Lord, send me. There is a great lack of laborers. Truly the harvest is great, but where are the workers? Men are perishing in multitudes for the want of help that might be rendered by those with whom they daily associate. Day after day professors of religion mingle with their unconverted neighbors and friends, but do not say a word about Jesus, and the way to be saved. They do not even intimate that christianity is a good thing. The subject is treated as one of six-penny value. Is it any wonder no more are converted? Many sermons are preached without a single entreaty to the unconverted or the backslidden. Is there not need of a reform in the pulpit, as well as outside? During the little time remaining, let us spare no effort that will tend to lead sinners to Christ.
M. G.

THE SPIRIT OF PAPACY.

During the last century, some propositions were put forth by those who did not submit to the Papal power, and teachings. Among these were the following:

"The reading of the Scriptures is for all." "To snatch the New Testament out of the hands of Christians, or to keep it closed to them, by taking from them that method of understanding it, is to shut the mouth of Christ against them." "To interdict to Christians the reading of the Sacred Scriptures, especially of the gospel, is to interdict the use of light to the sons of light, and to cause them to suffer a certain kind of excommunication."

After quoting these, among other propositions, the Pope speaks thus in his bull:

"We, by this our constitution, destined to be in effect for ever, declare, condemn, and reprobate all and each of the previously inserted propositions, as false, captious, ill-sounding, offensive to pious ears, scandalous, pernicious, rash, injurious to the church and her practice, and contumelious not only to the church, but as also to the secular powers, seditious, impious, blasphemous. . . We command all the faithful in Christ of both sexes not to presume to think of the aforesaid propositions."

In an "encyclical letter," given by Pope Gregory XVI., May 8th, 1844, when speaking of the Protestant "Bible Societies, he says:

"We . . . condemn them. . . . reprobate by name and condemn the . . . 'Christian Alliance,' constituted last year in New York, and other associations of the same sort. . . . Be it known that all such persons will be guilty of a grave crime before God and the church, who shall presume to give their name, or lend their help, or in any way to favor any of the said societies."

He continues his address to his "venerable brethren," and reminds them that it is their duty "to endeavor to turn away the faithful sheep from the society of the 'Christian Alliance' and its auxiliaries, as also from all other Bible societies, and from all communication with them. At the same time it will also be your duty to seize out of the hands of the faithful, not only the Bibles translated into the vulgar tongue, published contrary to the above directions of the Roman pontiffs, but also proscribed or injurious books of every sort."

Such is the spirit of Papacy to day. It changes not with centuries. Its decrees, and the decisions of its Popes and councils are considered infallible, hence, there is no ground for retreating. It never submits to Protestantism, only out of policy. Whenever it speaks well of any thing that is not in harmony with the Roman Catholic church, we may know it is only for the purpose of blinding the mind, to secure an advantage in favor of Catholicism. It is for ever a sworn enemy to all Protestant interests. It flatters only to devise means to ruin. The spirit of Satan is its controlling element. It has no room for the Spirit of Jesus.
M. G.

"THE VERY SICK MAN."

For some few years Turkey has been called "the sick man," but now, "the very sick man." The symptoms of approaching death are quite certain. The eyes of the world are turned with special interest to the death struggles of this once terrible power, that has been one of the strong foes of Christianity. It has been very oppressive toward the followers of Jesus, but its last days seem to be at hand. A correspondent from Constantinople, writing to the New York Tribune, says:

"Careful inquiries made in various parts of this country show a condition of affairs so desperate that I suppose there is but little reason to expect the Sultan to pass safely through the present crisis. At Erzroom, in Armenia, the tax-gatherers are pressing the people with all manner of violence to pay 'arrears.' These arrears may or may not have an actual existence. For instance, a widow is called upon to sell her household furniture in payment of the military exemption tax due from her husband for the ten years since his death. In Cappadocia a correspondent assures me that the people are now being called upon to pay taxes which will not be due till 1877. In the same region the people are but just gathing strength again after a two years' famine, and are being forced mercilessly to pay up the taxes 'forgiven' them on account of that famine.

The fact is the financial situation is one of such great and pressing necessity that the government is obliged to gather money by fair means or foul, and in doing it is even ready to kill the goose which lays the golden egg. The people are well-nigh driven to desperation."

Dark clouds hang over this world. Its "wickedness is great," and still increasing, with no ground to hope for anything better till Jesus comes. His people are getting ready. They are more and more impressed and convinced by the signs of the times, that the end of the present dispensation is at our doors. Even wicked men are looking for some great event soon to transpire. What a sublime period is this in which we are living! This is the hour for prayer and watchfulness.
M. G.

WHERE ARE WE?

In the Herald of the Morning, published by N. H. Barbour, we find an article with the above heading. In answer to the inquiry, he says—"The six thousand years from Adam ended in the autumn of 1873." He goes on to say—"The day of the Lord began, chronologically, in 1873, where the six thousand years ended; and the 1335 days and the jubilee cycles ended in February and April, 1875. . . . The resurrection of the dead in Christ has begun. . . . The resurrection may go on with no natural, or physical demonstrations." Elder Barbour says—"I fully believe" "Christ" "left the holy place" in "the autumn of 1874." In another place he says:

"The main facts, in support of which this paper is published are, first, that the 'harvest,' which 'is the end of the age' [or world], began in the autumn of 1874; that the resurrection began Feb. 14th, 1875, where the 1335 days of Dan. 12 ended; that Christ left the 'holy place' on the 'tenth day of the seventh month in 1874; that the harvest will end in the spring of 1878; and the 'times of the Gentiles' extend forty years into the 'times of restitution of all things' (Acts 3: 21), and therefore reach forty years beyond the beginning of this present Jewish year; and that the kingdom of God is to be set up while the Gentile governments are in existence, and, therefore, during this coming forty years.

Each and every one of these positions can be proven beyond all successful contradiction; and any position in relation to the resurrection of the saints, or personal presence of Christ, in harmony with these scriptural views, is with me an open question.

I believe Christ left the 'holy place' on the tenth day of the seventh month of 1874, because of the clear scriptural argument marking that as the time when his coming out was due; not that I have seen any manifestation."

Such is the answer to the inquiry, "Where are we?" Thus one error makes room for another, till darkness is the only light left for a guide. If we have no other, let us not follow an ignis fatuus. Let us have a "thus saith the Lord" for our foundation, and then we have nothing to fear. When we depart from that to human speculations, fanaticism is quite sure to follow. It matters not how wild and fanciful the opinions advocated, some may be found who will accept them and assist in their promulgation. The more wild the theory, the more zealous its advocates. All else seems eclipsed and of but little consequence. It is strange that honest souls can be led to believe such wild notions as those to which we have just referred. Well, what next?
M. G.

A FALSE HOPE.

The hope entertained so generally that human government or society can reform itself without foreign or divine aid is as unsound as it is false. We might as well hope that a fire would quench itself, or that a criminal would put himself in prison, or a man lift himself from the earth with his own hands.

God has humbled proud nations by dashing them in pieces by revolution and conquest, or bringing them down by floods, pestilence or famine. Individuals never reform themselves without some judgments or special favors of divine grace.

That the moral standard of national and social life is going down in Europe as well as in this country, and that the rulers and leading men in society are alarmed and are anxiously inquiring what can be done to stay the fearful tide, and that they trust in their own wisdom and power instead of God's instrumentality, appears to be clearly developed in the German Parliament as presented in an editorial in the London Times as follows:

THE NEW GERMAN PENAL CODE.

Some information is afforded in a notice just issued by Herr Madai, the director of police, concerning the state of things existing in certain parts of Germany, which it is intended to put an end to by the passing of the Penal Code Amendment Bill, now before the Parliament. He says:—At all the nocturnal fires which have desolated Berlin for some time past, a deplorable state of things has been witnessed; noisy masses of idle spectators assemble at them and appear to make of them a sort of periodical popular recreation, disturbing the public repose, impeding the firemen in their efforts to save property, and replying by insults and hisses to the injunctions of the agents of the authority. Scarcely a week passes without some church in the environs of Berlin being broken into and pillaged by thieves who seem to be organized in a band. One day it is the turn of the church of Blendorf, canton of Niederbarnim; after, those of Hernesdorff and Stralau. Another fact, not less serious, is the frequency of robberies by children, which are increasing daily. How is such a state of things to be remedied?—how are populations, which appear to be so profoundly demoralized, to be curbed and regenerated? By the school, answer some; by the church, say others. But the Socialist propaganda on the one hand, and the ecclesiastical conflict on the other, have for a long time past deprived the church and school of all moral authority. That task consequently devolves on the Government, which alone possesses the means of causing itself to be obeyed, if not respected.

Vain hope that their penal codes can "put an end" to thefts, fires and murders originating in the deep fountains of last-day wickedness, now opening its craters in every land and among all classes of men.

God has appointed his Son as the mighty Reconstructor of human society, and he has undertaken the work and promulgated his laws, and has determined that at an appointed time all who have not voluntarily and loyally submitted to obey them shall be punished with everlasting destruction, so that "demoralized" society shall be "regenerated."

O that men would see that He alone can do this emphatically important work for our fearfully degenerated race; then they would pray, "Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." Amen.

SCRIPTURAL SIGNS.

A sign is "that by which anything is made known or represented; that which furnishes evidence; a mark; a token; an indication; a proof." Webster. A scriptural sign is some foretold event or manifestation, represented as indicating some other event as past, present, or coming. These signs may be presented in two general classes: the first, supernatural, miraculous events; the second, events which naturally transpire in the progression which results in the signified event.

Of the first class Mr. Webster says: "An event, considered by the Jews as indicating the divine will, or as manifesting an interposition of the divine power for some special end; a miracle; a wonder." Of this class was the passing of the Red Sea, the fall of Jericho, the conception of Isaac and Christ, the giving sight to the blind, and raising the dead. The second class may be seen in the preparation made by the Hebrews to depart out of Egypt. Their taking their staves in their hands, and binding their sandals on their feet, and depositing their jewels in their packs, were natural indications, and therefore became signs that the divinely appointed time had come for them to make their exode from the land of bondage.

So it was when the Roman army invested Jerusalem. It was a natural, military movement, but naturally threatened the destruction of the place, and became a positive evidence or sign that it would terminate in the overthrow of the city; not because it was a miraculous movement, but because it was predicted as immediately preceding the downfall of the sacred city.

The Savior seems to intimate that many of the signs of his second advent will belong to this second class, by his illustration of them in the parable of the fig-tree. The putting forth of the leaves is a natural development in their progression, and this development always takes place immediately preceding the advent of summer. So the great Teacher instructs us that certain specified earthly scenes will transpire, which may be recognized by his people as those he had foretold, by which they (the church) might "know" that the kingdom is at hand as certainly as they could know that summer is near when the trees put forth their leaves.

The great signs given by Christ as indicating the speedy change of earthly government may not therefore be expected to be exclusively stupendous miracles, but many of them natural results from the march of scientific development and the spontaneous changes in human associations.

At a specified point in these changes in the physical, ecclesiastical, political and moral departments of our world, God has declared the great transition from temporal to eternal scenes shall take place. The last of the temporal scenes described must therefore become the signs that the final change is approaching. As the regular work and experiences of Saturday are signs that the week is about to end, so the work and positions of men, as described by God, of the last generation, must become the signs that the gospel is about to end.

All natural signs indicate by their nature and tendencies the character of the events they foreshadow. Peaceful and tranquilizing circumstances never indicate approaching war. Joyful and harmonious associations never become signs of approaching divisions. We may always learn the nature of the natural signs of an event by learning the nature of the event they signify. If the event is to be war, the signs will be strife and antagonism. If war is to exist between certain specified parties upon certain questions, then contention between those parties upon those questions will be legitimate signs of its approach.

If we wish to ascertain the natural signs which will indicate the approach of Christ's second advent, we must ascertain the nature of all the events connected directly with it, and then look for those things which would naturally result in such scenes, which should be received as signs of Christ's speedy coming.

Christ's second coming is prophetically located at a certain specified point in serial prophecy; and, therefore, the last items given in those prophetic lines, before the event transpires, must become signs of its approach. If a person should watch the motion and position of the planets through the hours of a cloudless night, and should see the morning star arise, he would look upon it as a joyful sign of approaching day. So the well instructed prophetic student will watch the unfolding history of the great Gentile nations, as written upon the prophetic page, and will mark carefully the fulfilment of the last specifications given by the inspired seers, as omens of coming judgment.

He will see upon the painted canvas the golden Babylon, with all its imperial greatness and glory. Following it in stately magnificence and bloody ferocity is silver Persia; while brazen Grecia, swift and fierce as a leopard, raises itself up with imperial dictation to rule the world. Each occupies its appointed period; but their sun went down, and their allotted time ended ere the dawning of Messiah's day had swept the darkness of Gentile dominion away. The appointed Roman eagle had not then wielded its iron sceptre over the down-trodden millions. The wolf family must occupy the throne before the crowned Lamb can become ruler of the holy tribes. The divine pencil evidently described and painted the present condition and purposes of the fragmentary Roman kingdoms, as the very last items in this serial line before Christ shall take his great power and reign.

God exhibits the very last state of the Roman history as being in a confused, perturbed condition, semi-divided, and yet manifesting unity, like the apparent union of iron and clay, which, by a stroke or strain, would immediately exhibit a want of adhesion. Such a state could only be produced by a factious, jealous, insubordinate spirit, which would cause nations and parties to determine to accomplish their own purposes, if it should require the overthrow and demolition of all others. This would naturally cause all to prepare, not only to defend their position, but to make an aggressive war to gain their supposed rights. The tendencies of such circumstances must be to produce general war. Such a war is predicted as a closing scene in man's probationary existence.

We learn therefore that increasing jealousy, with general political perturbation in society, and upheaval of the social elements, threatening great revolutions, are clearly defined scriptural signs that the gospel age is about to end.

The most prominent signs that indicated the overthrow of Babylon, Persia and Grecia were naturally manifested at the capitals of those governments. So we understand it will be when God's judgments shall sweep away the Roman kingdoms as the last Gentile powers to rule the world.

Rome had two imperial heads, located at two capitals—Rome and Constantinople. We may expect therefore that the two powers occupying the two seats of empire will manifest, in the particular circumstances surrounding them, just before their last overthrow, the most positive and clearly defined signs of the approaching end of the iron kingdom, and the establishment of God's eternal kingdom. The prophecies appear to fully justify us in this conclusion. Rome is occupied by the boastful Harlot, while Constantinople is the seat of the King of the North—the sick man—who shall "come to his end and none shall help him."

These powers are represented in prophecy as being destroyed at the same time, in the last battle at the coming of Christ. Therefore when we find the Papacy speaking the foretold "great words," stirring up the kings—civil governments—to warlike opposition, and Turkey at the same time struggling in the agonies of death, dependent upon other powers for the continuance of its existence, we may understand that those circumstances are exactly what was predicted by holy seers as signs that the day of the Lord is at hand.

Is not the Papacy now stirring all the civil governments of the world in deadly opposition to its monstrous pretensions of a divine right to usurp ecclesiastical authority over the secular, thus producing world-wide antagonism between church and state, just as predicted? And is it not a fact that just at this time when the Roman church is drawing the last lines of its foreshadowed picture, that Turkey at the Eastern capital, is on its death-bed?

The eyes of all the world are turned in the most exciting expectancy to see two grand apostates sink under the waves which are now threatening to engulf them in eternal death. The last page of Roman history is evidently being written. While church and state are being arrayed in fearful hostility, and the "Sick Man" is reaching forth his dying hands imploringly for help, the rich men are beginning to howl, as the laborers combine for relief and revenge upon their oppressors, as long ago written in the sacred Book.

Truly this is "an age on ages telling." It seems to be the grand focal point to which all the prophetic lines converge. The heavens and the earth seem to be lighted with prophetic fires. God's index points to every convulsive throe of nature and the great revolutionizing schemes and movements of the present age. He calls for faithful watchers to guard the interests of Immanuel's espoused Bride, as she passes through the fearful scenes of the world's death spasms. O the wonders of this age! The indescribable scenes to be witnessed by this generation! God has spoken, and who will heed his warnings? He has hung out his signs, and who will announce them? He has warned the world, and who will heed his warning and escape from impending wrath? O Jesus, Master, teach us thy signs, and hide us under thy sheltering wing, until the storm of time is past, and all thy loyal people are gathered to thy home of eternal rest.

LIGHT INCREASING,

Editors of the Crisis:—Dear Sirs,—You will no doubt be encouraged, working as you are to spread the knowledge of Christ's soon appearing, to hear that there are in Boston three, and I think more, Episcopal clergymen who are looking for and preaching the speedy coming of the Lord. But the one whom I would especially mention is the Rev. Edmund C. Colman, the Rector of St. Luke's new Episcopal church, which has been formed recently by various members of the Episcopal church here who protest against the alarming inroads of Ritualism.

Mr. Colman is a man of great natural ability, and one who is thoroughly in earnest. He seems to know naught but Christ and him crucified. Wherever he has been stationed he has always awakened in a wondrous manner the people over whom he has been placed, and also added by his preaching many to the church, and caused them to rejoice in the thought of soon beholding the Lord in all his glory.

He has been in Boston but a short time, but in that time, although having met with opposition on the part of the clergy, he has succeeded in infusing into the Episcopal church here a new spirit, especially in the city mission, which was until he came entirely defunct. Already large crowds of men and women, many of whom for years have not heard a sermon, are flocking to listen to his eloquent appeals for his divine Master, whom he represents to them as soon appearing to call them to judgment.

Truly the Lord has everywhere, among all denominations, faithful watchmen who will not hold their peace, or preach flowery sermons to please the itching ears of a perverse generation, while men go down to destruction unwarned and unprepared.
A READER OF THE CRISIS.

STILL PROGRESSING.

I have just received a line from Bro. W. H. Mitchell, of Kennebunkport, saying the blessed work of God's grace is still progressing with power in the reformation and conversion of men from darkness to light, from error to truth, from idols to the living God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. The union meetings continued at the Congregationalist house to the end of the week. "This week [which was last week] we divided up, and each went to their church; since which the tide on our side [at the Advent Chapel] has been rising higher and higher. Some of the best meetings I ever attended we are having. On the other side of the river the interest continues good. Sunday we had a revival meeting all day. Wanderers confessed their backslidings, sinners come forward asking prayers, and it was one of the most blessed days I ever witnessed. Meetings every night. Last evening between eighty and ninety prayers and exhortations."

Surely the Lord is indeed among that people, and pentecostal seasons are being had. To God be all the glory. Amen. I pray the Lord this living fire may spread all about among our churches, and we preachers echo the joyful sound, that angels may rejoice with us over returning prodigals, and sinners repenting and turning to the Savior of their souls. Bro. George Sederquest has gone to their help. He is in the work, and you may expect to hear of greater things. O, how I long to see a rousing up of all our people by the Holy Spirit of God. I do hope to see the converts brought into such sweet love and harmony with Jesus as to love his Word, his Spirit, his will, and his soon coming.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The East Maine Missionary Association met according to notice, Dec. 30th, and continued over the following Sunday. But four preachers were present, on account of the bad traveling, but a goodly number of brethren from other places came in to help. The meetings increased in interest and numbers to the last. The church here was much quickened and encouraged; two backsliders confessed their wanderings and started anew to serve the Lord; others are under conviction. Lord, save them, is my prayer. We feel just like praising God for the privileges and blessings of the last few days.

At a business meeting held Saturday P. M., it was voted to change this Association to that of East Maine Campmeeting Association, thereby placing ourselves in nearly the same position as before this Association was formed. But all pledges of money, made at the last campmeeting, will be devoted to the purpose then and there arranged, and should be sent to the Treasurer, Eld. Jer. Carr, South Albion, Me. Eight shares to the new East Maine Mission Tent were subscribed.

It is thought advisable to hold a business meeting of the Campmeeting Association about the first of June, at the call of the Secretary.

Correspondence.

From Sr. M. Moulton.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—I have been thinking of my past experience in the christian warfare; and perhaps it would be well for me to relate a part of it.

About four years ago Jesus called me by his loving Spirit, but I would not yield. I could not leave the pleasures of this world, I loved them so well. Not many loved the world better than I did. I did not love God, his Word, nor his people. I loved the fashions and follies of the world better than I did anything that was good. I had a companion who loved all such pleasures as well as myself. I lingered under this burden of sin a whole year, after being convicted of sin. When I would feel the influence of the Holy Spirit I would try every way to drive it away.

At last my dear companion was taken down with the typhoid fever, that terrible disease that carries so many down to the grave. O, what a struggle I had then! I had no hope in God's mercy, and no where to go; no friend on earth to comfort me. As I sat by his bedside when he was dying, I called upon God for help, and oh, how willing he was to receive me! What peace he gave me! What a friend I found in Jesus! He has promised to be a help in every time of need, and, praise his name, I believe it is true. I can never forget the goodness of God then. No words of comfort could be spoken only by God. There, and then, I yielded my all to him. I have never been sorry. It was hard to part with the best earthly friend I had, but I have found a friend in Jesus better than all earthly friends can be. I have tried to be one of his children ever since; though perhaps many times I have not lived so humble as I ought, but I am trying to be an overcomer.

Dear reader, when I got the love of the blessed Savior down deep in my heart it took the love of the world out—the love of fashions and all the pleasures of this world. I can truly say, the things I once hated I now love, and the things I once loved I now hate. I have never had any desire to go to any place of amusement since I gave my heart to the Master. It is true it is a cross-bearing and self-denying way, but I am willing to do anything if I can have a home in the blessed kingdom when Jesus comes.

I long for a home where sickness, sorrow and death can never come. We are living in a terrible time. We can only be kept by the power of God. We cannot stand alone one moment; but by the help of the Lord we can stand. Let us be watchful and prayerful, live down humble at his feet, and when he comes we shall hear him say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."
Rome, Me.

From Sr. L. H. Larrance.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—After a long silence, I thought I would once more write a few lines for our much beloved paper, the Crisis. How welcome are its weekly visits to our humble home, laden as it is with precious tidings of the near approach of our King. The world is dark and gloomy. Thick clouds overhang the sky, but with an eye of faith I can see a ray of light beyond.

Behold the tumult, the commotion in the land! What meaneth it? It is Jehovah's voice speaking in thunder tones, "Behold, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh"; and gladly does my aching heart respond, "Even so, come, Lord Jesus," and bring again our loved ones from the land of the enemy. Give to thy waiting Bride immortality, eternal life.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us hold on faithfully, and be very watchful, for Satan is busy, knowing that his time is short. "Watch and pray" is a very appropriate admonition.

I long to see death conquered. He has taken two darling ones from us in the past year, and I desire to see them released from his grasp. I believe that he who once overcame death and rose triumphant from the grave will soon return and set the prisoners free. Glorious hope, so soon to be consummated! "Cheer, my comrades, cheer." Pray for me and mine.
Rippey, Greene Co., Iowa.

From Bro. C. Mendenhall.

Dear Editors:—A glorious work has begun here under the auspices of Bro. Grant; conversions every night, conviction everywhere manifest; christians stepping out upon the "fulness there is in Christ Jesus." The inquiry meetings are largely attended; the whole town is stirred, the interest being on the increase. Personal work with sinners, pleading with individuals, results greatly to the glory of God.
Nevada, O., Jan. 13th, 1876.

From Bro. J. B. Paine.

Dear Brn.:—My heart is made glad by the weekly visits of the Crisis. Glad to see the three months' list increase so fast, and I would be glad to help it along, but cannot only by prayer that the Lord would set the truth home to the hearts of those that read it.
Suncook, N. H., Jan. 10th, 1876.

From Sr. V. R. Miller.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I thought I would like to write a few lines for the Crisis. I have been a reader of it for more than six years. I love to read it more and more. I have obtained much knowledge of Bible truth from it, and have derived comfort in reading the letters of the brethren and sisters. I love Jesus, and I believe he is soon coming, and earnestly desire sinners to come to Jesus. I want to be saved in the kingdom. Pray for me, that I may meet you there.

Belgrade, Me.

From Bro. J. H. Harding.

Dear Brn.:—I thought I would say to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad that I am still striving for the kingdom, and am still looking up to the clouds for Jesus to come. I love to read the pages of the Crisis, of which I have been a subscriber since May 1st, 1854. Especially I love the letters from brethren, telling of their journeyings to and fro, and of their trials as well; also the editorials, filled with interesting matter concerning the signs of the times. May God bless them for good, is my prayer.

From Sr. E. E. Towslee.

Brn. Editors:—My health is very poor, and I desire the prayers of God's children for my recovery, and also for my sick mother, who has been confined to the bed most of the time since last August. She has faith in God's promises, and desires the prayers of the faithful.

Pownal, Vt., Jan. 17th, 1876.

A SUGGESTION.

As many are receiving the Crisis now that have never read it before, and probably never heard any Advent preaching, would it not be well for some of our able writers to present from time to time the evidences on which we build our hope of soon seeing Jesus, and other points connected with it? It might do the untaught much good, and it would not do those that are familiar with them any harm to review.

L. A. WHEELER.

THE VERIFICATION OF PROPHECY.—The Philadelphia North American (a business and commercial Journal) thus speaks from its foreign advices of the present condition of Europe. It says:—

"We continue to hear that the British labor market is depressed, and emigration is starting anew for Australia and other colonies; while attempts to reopen some mines have failed, and ship building and manufactures are depressed, and many workmen are unemployed in all trades. Belgium is seizing British trade in Holland and Italy, and France is trying to supply her own wants. Germany sympathizes with Austrian depression, and the possibility of war on the Turkish frontier lends more gravity to Turkish bankruptcy, and a partial failure of some crops causes new fears. Although a severe famine recently existed in portions of Turkey, the whole Crimea is in a state of stagnation and suffering. The warehouses of Odessa are full of grain; but there are few ships arriving; there is no employment for labor; property has fallen three-tenths in value in the city, and bankruptcy is general. Thus we have continual business stagnation, and continuing political agitation in Europe."

SIGNS.—"The Political Signs in Europe.— An editorial in the World's Crisis, of Jan. 5th, under the above caption, is worth reading. The writer presents unmistakable evidences of the speedy downfall of the Turkish government, which is likely to involve all Europe in one general war. The evidence adduced shows very conclusively that a general war is anticipated on the Eastern continent, and that it is quite possible that it will commence in the spring. Those of our readers who are familiar with our prophetic lectures are aware that we have for a long time been anticipating such a war, and that it will culminate into a universal war, known in the sacred Scripture as "the battle of that great day of God Almighty," or "Armageddon," (Rev. 16: 14-16), which will fulfill the prophetic word, and consummate the affairs of this world. Brother christians, are you prepared for that day?"—Burrough's Journal, Raymond, Iowa.

BY TELEGRAPH.—"The telegraphic dispatches bring tidings of an affray in Ireland between a number of Protestants and Catholics. The trouble was brought on by the marriage of a Protestant girl to a Catholic, and resulted in the killing of a number on both sides, and the severe wounding of several others. In this case the Protestants seem to have been the prime cause of this bloody rupture, as they attacked the house in which the newly married couple were stopping and completely demolished it. Such deeds are worthy of the dark ages, and would be disgraceful to the veriest heathen. But when performed in the name of the Christian religion, they become doubly detestable and sickening."—Burrough's Journal.

HARRINGTON. Fell asleep in Jesus, Dec. 26th, 1875, my mother, Mrs. Miriam Barnes Harrington, aged eighty-four.

Mother had been for a long time the Lord's, active in his service, and enjoying his house and worship. For some time she was deprived of health, and suffered much, but the graces of submission to the will of the Lord, humility, thankfulness, and other fruits of the Spirit were marked. Her trust in God was sweet and strong. She felt keenly the thought of leaving an only child,—an invalid, fatherless, motherless, the last one of the family—alone; but said to her in the last hour, "It is but a little while. We shall meet again." "Blessed and holy are they who hath part in the first resurrection.

"She will sleep, but not forever,
There will come a glorious dawn;
We shall meet to part, no, never,
In the resurrection morn."

SLYTER. In Lincoln, Wis., Dec. 26th, 1875, Fred. W. Slyter, in the twentieth year of his age.

He was a good son, a kind brother, and respected by all. His sufferings were very great, yet he bore them patiently. He was the oldest son of a widowed mother, who feels her loss deeply; but she mourns not as others having no hope, for we trust he sought and found Christ to be precious to him during his sickness. Loving hands have laid him to rest until the resurrection morn. May his early death be an admonition to his brothers and only sister to seek Christ, so that when the summons shall come to them, they may be prepared to meet it. And may the God of all comfort sustain the lonely mother in this hour of bereavement and sorrow.

"Sleep on, dear one, and take thy rest,
Lay down thy head upon thy Savior's breast;
We love thee well, but Jesus loves thee best.
Farewell, farewell."

SMITH. In Cabot, Vt., Dec. 6th, 1875, of pneumonia, Calvin Smith, aged twenty-six years.

He leaves a Christian wife, and daughter of four years. He found peace in Christ, and earnestly prayed for his youthful friends that they might seek and find the same blessing. He listened to the last sermon, from the lips of the writer, at the funeral of Sr. Hill, Nov. 21st, which found way to his heart. By his request we were called to our native town once more to invite the youth to seek the Lord, which we tried to do in the use of words found in Matt. 11: 28. Many of the youth were present from adjoining towns.

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, Jan. 20. The Times publishes a letter from Vienna containing the following details in regard to matters in the northern provinces of Turkey:

In consequence of the Turkish operations on the Montenegrin frontier the Prince of Montenegro has summoned a war council of Senators and military officers, which resolved that if the concentration of the Turkish force on the frontier is to take such proportions as to really carry into effect the reported plan of blockading Montenegro on that side, it will be considered a casus belli, and the Prince should summon all Montenegrins liable to duty, and march into Herzegovina; that in the meantime Montenegro will keep an expectant attitude, and will not disturb the peace if the Turkish operations develop nothing more serious than the present situation. This resolution, it seems, was chiefly taken for its moral effect on the Sublime Porte and the Montenegrins. The latter are highly dissatisfied with what they consider the undecided and timid policy of the Prince.

LONDON, Jan. 21. A special dispatch from Vienna to the Standard reports that Ligubobratich has issued a proclamation resigning the leadership of the Herzegovinian insurgents. He says his continuance in the chief command would lead to irremediable disputes. He advises the insurgents to persevere until the Turks are expelled from the province.

The Deutsche Zeitung reports that Habmayer, leader of the insurrection in Northwestern Bosnia, has been murdered by a supposed agent of the Servian Government. Liubobratich and Habmayer are both Austrians. The present leaders of the insurgents are Montenegrins, and it is said that they were appointed by their Prince. A report is current that the railway officials in Croatia have received notice to prepare for the transportation of troops.

ORAN, Algeria, Jan. 13. A violent gale occurred in the western Mediterranean to-day, and swept the Algerian coast with great fury. The damage to property here is estimated at $100,000.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Ottawa, Ont., Jan. 13. A faction fight occurred at Gatineau Point, on Wednesday night, after the close of the polls, between the Scarfs and the Rocques. About twenty persons received dangerous wounds. The weapons were small bags filled with lead. Half an acre of ground was covered with blood.

SIGNS IN SOUTH AMERICA.—Peruvian advices report that the money crisis has been still further aggravated.

Letters have been received at Lima, dated Cusca, Dec. 11th, which announce the complete destruction by earthquake, on the 4th, of the town of Aboncay.

Telegrams announce a severe flood in Valparaiso. The business part of the city was inundated, two lives lost, and $1.500,000 of property destroyed. The flood was caused by heavy rains and stormy winds on the 10th ultimo.

ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF WISCONSIN.—This Conference having been separated from the State Campmeeting, will hold its next annual meeting at Arena, beginning on the evening of the 10th of February, 1876, and holding over the Lord's day following. We trust that our ministers will make timely arrangements to attend, and that the different churches will immediately appoint delegates, providing them funds to come with if they need aid, and thus secure a general attendance. Let not your ministers be kept away for want of funds to meet traveling expenses. Let not the hard times enter too largely into the interests of the cause of truth which we are trying to promote. Arena is on the Milwaukee and St. Paul R. R., Prairie du Chien branch, about forty miles from Madison. If it is impossible for any church or minister to report by delegate or in person, be sure to write a letter.

Notice—Baptism and Rantism.

Orders for this work are coming in, but in order to ensure its publication, it will be necessary that they pour in sufficiently to warrant the cost of publishing an edition without loss, which cannot be afforded. The work will be of interest, I trust, as old ground will be re-explored in a manner to bring out all the truth we can discover, and new ground not yet much explored will be dug over for the sake of discovering the whole truth. It is as yet but little known what Rantism is, or what its relation is to Baptism, if any, and specially to the great atonement. Let all who would like the work, and will be willing to encourage its publication, send on their orders by postal card to me, to RICHMOND, PROV. QUE., CANADA. The work will be afforded as cheaply as possible. Please send on your orders, brethren and sisters.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.
Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

PSALMS 119: 1.

"Blessed are the undefiled in the way, who walk in the law of the Lord."

GOULD CROUSE, JR.

Blessed are the undefiled,
 Who walk the heavenly way;
The law of God is in their hearts,
 They serve him every day.

They tell of Jesus' dying love,
 And bow the suppliant knee;
The closet is a blest retreat,
 'Tis there they love to be.

The consecrated cross they bear
 That they may wear the crown,
And triumph in victorious grace,
 And let their songs abound.

They stand secure while many foes
 Assail on every side;
They fearlessly withstand them all,
 And look to Christ their guide.

They patiently endure reproach,
 For Jesus says they must,
That they may gain that blissful home,
 Prepared for all the just.

Their hope is in the Lord of hosts,
 On him they do rely;
They journey on with eager feet,
 And mercy is their cry.

They're pilgrims and sojourners here,
 As all their fathers were;
They'll stem the storm till Jesus comes,
 And then his glories share.

I see them in that city bright,
 Long time ago foretold;
And with the holy angels walk
 The streets of burnished gold.

Methinks I hear them sing the song
 Of Moses and the Lamb;
And see them rest from all their cares,
 In Canaan's happy land.

There they shall see the God they love,
 And Christ who died to save;
There the dear saints will die no more,
 When ransomed from the grave.

RAMBLES IN NORTH CAROLINA.

NUMBER TWO.

J. J. SMITH.

Dear Brethren:—After my visit to Blowing Rock, and returning the horse I had borrowed, I went up to Reuben Coffey's, where I had promised to hold a two days' meeting, which I did, preaching three times each day (the 1st and 2nd Dec). The weather being quite unfavorable, our congregations were not very large, but were much interested in hearing, as was evinced by the many questions propounded after the meeting. A Baptist minister aided in the service. I was surprised to learn that he had earnestly been investigating the nature and destiny of man, and that he now teaches that eternal life is to be attained only through Christ.

After the meeting, I rode six miles to the top of the mountain, and stopped for the night with Bro. Nelson, whom I found intently searching the Scriptures, being as he said "determined to know the truth for himself." He says the Bible is a new book to him. Its beauties shine where all was dark. The doctrine of the resurrection, formerly of little interest, is now all to him; every hope of the future hangs on the resurrection. He seemed willing to spend the whole night in conversation about these things, and his intelligent and amiable wife was no less interested.

Dec. 3d, rode about thirty miles to Lower Creek, where they locked Bro. Cargile out last summer and compelled him to labor in the open air, which he did most successfully, judging by the results. While it had rained a warm, gentle rain on this high mountain the last night, I was surprised to find, as I descended, that the lower part of it and all the adjacent lower mountains were covered with ice. A north-east wind prevailed below, and a south-west wind above.

I had lost the names of the brethren to whom I had been referred as friendly to us, and as Bro. Cargile had been shut out, I did not want to fall into the hands of his oppressors. I inquired of some persons for the friends of Bro. C. Could hear of none, but was informed that a Bro. Joseph Powell (Baptist) was a gentleman who would treat me kindly. Calling at his residence I introduced myself, and inquired if I could find a lodging with him for the night, to which he replied emphatically, "Yes, you can." I felt at once as if the Lord had provided me a home with one of his children. I found him to be a liberal-minded christian and hospitable gentleman.

Dec. 4th, the weather was rainy. The Baptist Church was open, there being no objection that I heard of. The gathering was not large, owing to the rain, but I soon learned that those who came out were anxious to hear the "new doctrine."

I preached the Word, the Lord helping me. After service accepted the invitation of Bro. Sion J. Shirrell. Spent the time very pleasantly talking of the things pertaining to the kingdom. Bro. S. is a young man of liberal mind and education. He is earnestly seeking to know the whole truth. Paid me $3.00 for the World's Crisis six months and for books and tracts, which I have ordered to his address at Lanoir, N. C.

Bro. Shirrell's mother-in-law is, and has been for years confined to her bed,—is sorely afflicted. Beside she seemed to fear that she had lost all her interest in the Savior, and was passed recovery. I tried to show her how the loving Savior clings to those who cling to him. I hope she has ere this recovered from her despondency.

Dec. 5th. It rained all the morning, and very few came to church. We proposed to defer the service till three o'clock, at which time a goodly number of persons were out, who gave attention to the words spoken. I have been informed that Eld. Moody, who so violently opposed the truth when preached there last summer, now advises his brethren to let us alone; that he wished he had done so at Colletsville. At any rate his churches are now pursuing the peace policy towards me. I am informed further that there is much more Bible reading going on in this section than ever before. God grant that much good may result.

Dec. 6th, rode to Colletsville, twelve miles, thence eighteen more to Blowing Rock, through deep mud, over heaps of stones, fording John's River about twenty-five times, and ascending four miles to the top of Blue Ridge, at an elevation of four thousand and ninety feet above the Atlantic Ocean.

Dec. 7th. I expected to preach at Boone, in Watauga county, but it rained hard until late in the afternoon, and my lungs being sore I thought it my duty to stop over with Bro. L. Estes. Bro. Nelson coming in, we occupied our time profitably with his amiable family.

Dec. 8th, I rode to Boone. A few country people, some from ten miles distant, with a few of the villagers, made up our congregation for one o'clock P. M. Here I had to preach in the Court House. We had no fire, although the weather was the coldest of the season. Addressed the people again at night, and the day following at 11 A. M. Although so cold and without fire, yet our congregations increased to the end. They evinced a deep interest. Many of them gave me money for "Scripture Searchers," which I have sent to Bro. Geo. T. Adams with addresses, etc.

I was told that some prominent business men of the place had said that "they never would hear the heresy." These were men professing godliness—some of them ministers. They did not come out, and some of the more timid, fearing their disapprobation, kept aloof likewise. I heard of some trying to find out public opinion before venturing out. Esq. Council, with whom I found hospitable entertainment, though not professing to be a christian, showed much zeal in trying to get the people out to hear for themselves. He assured me that if I or Bro. Cargile should re-visit Boone in warm weather, after giving him time to publish the appointment, we would have the Court House full to hear us.

Boone is said to have been the residence of the celebrated Daniel Boone, the frontier adventurer. The site of his dwelling was pointed out to me. It is said to be the most elevated village east of the Rocky Mountains in the United States, being by actual survey three thousand two hundred and forty-two feet above the Atlantic Ocean.

After preaching I rode eight miles through a snow-storm, to preach at three o'clock at Bro. Estes'. I found a small assembly in spite of the storm. It was rather a hard day's work for an old man. My lungs began to feel the effect. After a pleasant night's rest at Bro. Nelson's again, I took final leave of this highland country, having had many urgent solicitations to re-visit them. Long will I remember many of the loved ones in this section.

Dec. 10th, I descended the mountain to the warm region on the south side. This time I left the top all ice-bound, but did not proceed more than two miles, about half-way down, when I was in a warm climate where there was no sign of ice. How different from last week.

Arrived at Bro. Henry Coffey's much fatigued. Dec. 11th, somewhat rested. I called to see Brn. I. Coffey and Goodwin's families. I feel sad. Sister Goodwin is fast sinking into the cold embrace of death, and her ever-devoted mother is almost prostrated with watching and care. But Sr. G. is a pattern of patience, full of hope in a resurrection to life eternal. She said in her sickness, "Jesus has been my stay and support, and however it may go with me, I feel that all will be right." Blessed hope! It is worth living and suffering for, to have this hope when all others fail. With such expressions, and a gentle pressure of her hand, we parted till the great gathering day. May God sustain the mother and husband, and care for the little ones.

Dec. 11th and 12th. Met with and spoke to the little band at the new church. On Sunday I preached on the second coming of the Lord and the glorious future of his faithful ones. The Lord helped me much, and made the occasion a blessed season to many. I bade them adieu, perhaps till Jesus comes. It was hard to part. Many tears were shed as we gave the parting hand. Long will that parting be remembered by many. May the Lord bless and keep these loved ones in the good and the right way.

I have now been a month in this State; have rode on horseback over three hundred miles. Have preached, including two sermons on my way home, thirty times; have forded Watauga, Yadkin, Catawba and John's rivers over one hundred times. I have made all my journeys alone, passing through the most wild, romantic and desolate scenery I ever beheld. The Lord protected me from the robbers, the dangerous precipices and turbid waters, and all other dangers. I praise his holy name for such care. I have gained five pounds in flesh since coming into this State. Excepting soreness in my lungs, occasionally, have been entirely well.

On the 13th of Dec., I set out for Morganton, sixteen miles, where I took the train for Old Fort. I have not heard a train's bell or whistle in thirty days. At Old Fort, I took stage and went over the Blue Ridge. The wind was high, the night was cold, but we reached Ashville at two o'clock in the morning without much suffering.

I preached at Ashville a number of times one year ago. Here I met with that untiring Bro. R. H. Gresham, now of Turnpike, Buncomb Co., N. C. He had walked sixteen miles to meet me here, and confer with me as to the things concerning the kingdom. I waited over a day with him, and in the evening addressed a few people in the City Hall, which had been rented at $5.00 for the evening.

Bro. Gresham has found in Macon county, N. C., a very desirable location for a colony of health seekers from the North. A few of like precious faith are gathering there. I met in Ashville Bro. Jas. Soper, of Northern Penn., with part of his family. They came all the way with a wagon. They are going to the High Land colony. His wife and little ones will come by rail soon. Dec. 15th, took the stage to Marshall, where I stopped and preached to a large congregation. This place has many kind-hearted friends, who love to hear the truth.

Dec. 16th, went by stage to Wolf Creek, Tenn. Col. Sam. D. Tate, President of the W. N. C. R. R., gave me a half fare pass on his road. At the request of Bro. Otis F. Goodwin he sent a half fare pass to Bro. Cargile, and proposes to do the same for all our preachers that may come that way, if properly vouched for. Mr. Weddin, State Agent at Ashville, agrees to pass us to and from Old Fort for $2.00 instead of $3. Mr. W. P. Blair, proprietor of the Stage line to Wolf Creek, forty miles, agrees to furnish half fare passes on his line, viz., $2.50 to Wolf Creek. The E. Tenn. and Va. R. R. agrees to furnish us return tickets free, for full fare one way, but with no stop off. Many thanks for such favors. Dec. 17th, reached Chattanooga, but not making connection, did not get home until the 18th. Found my family all well, except my son, who was ill when I left home. He had a relapse after I left, but is now on his feet again. He has not been able to do a day's work in over two months. My little girls have done much of the hard labor during my absence, even to the chopping and drawing up of the fire wood. They have done it cheerfully to save their little means to supply other wants. I expect soon to meet other calls. The work is widening in this State as well as in N. C. Yours in hope of rest in the sweet by and by.

Long Island, Ala.

P. S.—I hereby acknowledge the receipt of $10.50 received from the friends in N. C. over and above the actual expenses of the trip; also two dollars since my return, sent me by mail from a sister in Mass. The Lord bless the kind donors. J. J. S.

A RELIGION WHICH WILL NOT SAVE.

There is a religion which will not save us;—a religion which is too sincere for hypocrisy, yet too transient to be profitable, too superficial to reach the heart, too unproductive to proceed from it. It is slight, but as far as it goes it is not false. It has discernment enough to distinguish sin, but not firmness enough to oppose it; compunction enough to soften the heart, but not vigor sufficient to reform it. It laments when it does wrong, and performs all the functions of repentance excepting forsaking sin. It has everything of devotion except the stability, and gives everything to religion except the heart.

This is a religion of times, events and circumstances. It is brought into play by circumstances, and dwindles with the occasion which called it out. Festivals and feasts, which occur but seldom, are much observed because they occur but seldom; while the great festival which comes every week comes too often to be so respectfully treated. The piety of these people comes out much in sickness, but is apt to retreat again as recovery approaches. If they die, they are placed by their friends in the saints' calendar; if they recover, they go back into the world they had renounced, and again suspend their amendment as often as death suspends his blow.

The true christian should be diligent. He has a great work to do. Every branch of benevolence, of reform, demands his attention. The world is so full of sin and misery that he must be perpetually at war, battling against it. His time to work is short, and hence he should work while the day lasts. Slothfulness is a great discouragement to the brotherhood. One indolent brother will often destroy the flock. How often the devoted pastor has been discouraged, and his usefulness hedged up by the backwardness of his members. His preaching flies back into his face, his prayer meetings are dull and thinly attended; no prayers go up for him from the family altar or the closet, and he feels as if wind and tide were against him. He faints under his burden. But where there is diligence the Word has free course, the prayer room is a sacred place, and from the closet goes up such entreaties for the success of the truth that it seems that an invisible hand drives on the car. Diligent ministers are a comfort to the people. Small talents with great diligence triumph over formidable obstacles; but great talents and little diligence sink under the weight of a straw. Let us all be diligent.—Selected by C. A. Wiles, Troy, Pa.

ENCOURAGING.

N. WHEELER.

The Conference at Melvin Village, N. H., was well attended, and the most perfect harmony prevailed among the preachers and people. The efforts put forth were calculated to arouse the slumbering, and invite the careless to make their peace with God before the door of mercy is closed forever. Brethren in the ministry came with their seed-baskets well laden with the good word of life, and they did scatter it bountifully, well bedewed with tears, among the people. The last evening eight were out for prayer, four of whom were returning unto the Lord, and four seeking a pardon of their sins. Their testimonies told that God's mercies were resting upon them, and that their hopes were brightening. As we bowed in prayer with them, we felt that the saving power of God was present, and abode with us as we separated. It was evident that many more were "almost persuaded Christ to receive."

We hope to hear that God is doing a great work in Melvin. Bro. Sutherland and others remained with Bro. Piper to still point the convicted ones to that fountain which cleanseth from all sin.

Preaching by W. W. Sutherland, D. Eastman, L. Allen, J. Parsons, C. R. Parsons, and N. Wheeler. Bro. J. J. Smith was with us at the first, and assisted with Bro. Piper in the meeting. The brethren and sisters manifested great benevolence in sustaining the meeting and caring for those who attended. May the Lord reward them according to their works.

SALVATION.

J. W. THOMAS.

"Great salvation."—HEB. 2: 3.

Men need salvation. All are lost, for all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God. None are fit for heaven until they are saved from sin. Men need to be stirred up to see their true condition, for they will not seek salvation until they see that they are lost.

A vessel is sinking; some of the passengers are asleep. They are unconscious of their danger. Would you have them escape? Then go and wake them up. A man has taken poison. He is not aware of his danger. Would you save him? Convince him of his mistake, that he may take an antidote. A house is on fire. Some persons are dancing in an upper room. Would you have them escape before it is too late? Warn them of their peril. Men are on the road to perdition. Would you save them? Then show them their need of a Savior. Convince them of their sinful condition.

Men naturally are in the dark, they see not the awful precipice just ahead of them. They need light. Go and preach the gospel to them. Jesus said, "I am the light of the world;" that is, he came to show men how to be saved. The gospel is light. Wherever it is spread it shows men their lost condition, and reveals to them the way of life and salvation. Jesus came into this world to seek and to save the lost. Having crossed the line that separated humanity from Deity, he went to earth's lowest depths of sin and misery, and brought up trophies of victorious love and grace. Looking around one day on the helpless multitudes that surrounded him, he exclaimed, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest to your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Christ alone can save. None ever came to him in sincerity, and were turned away without receiving comfort. He has saved the chief of sinners. Mary Magdalene, the thief on the cross, Saul of Tarsus, Mary, who wept at his feet, all of these, and thousands like them, have been gloriously saved. Christ saves from sin now. The blood that was shed on Calvary over eighteen hundred years ago is still efficacious to cleanse the foulest stains. Christ, who died, is the Christ who lives to-day in heaven, and who has power to save to the uttermost all who look to him for salvation. "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God." "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." "Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." How shall men believe in him whom they have not heard? "And how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?"

Ministers are the heralds of salvation. The gospel is the message of salvation. What men everywhere need is salvation. It requires a saved ministry, and a saved laity to save a lost world. They who stand on Christ, the solid rock, can reach out a helping hand to those who are sinking. Let us work earnestly for salvation. All praying, preaching and singing that does not have salvation in it is not worth a straw. It is free for all—full, complete, present, and eternal. "Whosoever will, let him come." There is only one way to be saved, and that is in God's way. "Salvation is of the Lord." Submit to God, and let him save you in his own way. Are you saved or lost? Wake up, wake up.

AM I READY TO MEET JESUS?

L. B. WEAVER.

This is a question that every child of God ought to ask at this time, for now we are in the very last hours of probation. May the Lord help us to examine our hearts and our lives, and see if we are ready to welcome Jesus back to earth. May the Lord by his Spirit show us ourselves, so that we may not be deceived, and be left out of the kingdom at last. When we are so near the end of all things, how necessary it is for us to look into our hearts every hour, for how easy Satan creeps in sometimes in the form of light and trifling conversation, and by giving way to it, draws us into his snares at once, for jesting and joking never become a member of Jesus' church, and nothing will kill out vital godliness quicker than such things; and how it grieves the Spirit of God to indulge in these things.

When we get Jesus into the heart, and have his presence with us, then we know we are all ready for his coming, and we can rest so sweetly, so trustingly, and know every moment we are his. It is sweet to sit at the feet of Jesus and feel he is ours. May the dear Lord help us to keep ready for his coming. May we be holy in heart, in word, in deed and in thought, for without holiness no man shall see the Lord.

How I do love the pure-minded, whole-hearted child of God; and I love the poor sinner too; and I long to see the inside of the kingdom of God. Are we ready for the coming King of kings? May the Lord help each of us to keep ourselves in the love of God and in the patient waiting for his Son from heaven. Bless the Lord, we can know whether we are ready to meet him or not. May God help us to see to it that we are ready to meet the Judge of all the earth, and be able to stand when he shall appear.

North Dana, Mass.

GOSSIPPING.

There is no vice more common in our church at the present time. There is scarcely a neighborhood in any part of the country but what is more or less affected by it. From every quarter almost, we can hear some slanderous report about some preacher or prominent member of the church. It seems to be the disposition of a great many people of the present day to make special inquiry into everybody's affairs except their own. The first thing heard when a preacher gets to his work, is some slanderous report on the preacher preceding him on the work; that he is guilty of falsehood, swindling, drunkenness, or some other crime too horrible for the imagination to depict or language to describe. Yet they are talked of in the family circle, the most sacred place on earth.

Mr. Editor, I have heard all of the above accusations brought against preachers who were laboring to spread gospel holiness, and that too by members of the church. Brooklyn, it has been said, "breathes scandal," but Brooklyn is not alone. Go to any community if you wish, and you will hear some low, scandalous report upon some preacher or member of the church.

Parents, you ought to be careful how you speak about a member of Christ's church. Every time you speak evil of such an one in the presence of your children you weaken their confidence in religion; and no doubt that the members of the church have been instruments in the hands of the devil in damning more souls and causing more infidels by this than by any other way. The unconverted will take up slanderous reports, and, like a ball of snow, the farther they are rolled the larger they get, until a mountain of slanders so vile and dirty that, were it possible, the devil himself would bow his head with shame at the horror, at the undermining advantages that are taken to injure preachers and members of the church. If you make inquiry after those reports, to try to adjust matters, all the satisfaction you will get is that "they say so!"

"They say" is the greatest dealer in falsehood the world has ever produced. O, my God, will people continue to talk after "they say?" May God forbid it! He that offendeth not with his tongue the same is a perfect man. "They say" has caused more hatred, more bloodshed, more strife, than any other character on earth. There is nothing so base, through the coinage of the most evil and inventive mind, but what "they will say" it.

"They say" Christ cast out devils through Beelzebub. "They say" that Christ was an imposter! "They say" brought false accusation against Paul. In fact, is there any thing too base for them to say? Yet we find that some would-be respectable people will talk after "they say." Fellow christians, do not talk about your preachers; do not slander one another, but love God and one another; perfect love casteth out fear. It is the want of love to God and his church that causes all this wrangling. May the Lord help us to be religious.—J. M. Truitt, in Texas Advocate.

LOVE NOT THE WORLD.—1 John 2: 15.

O love not the world, ye who hope for a crown
 When your Lord shall descend from above;
Seek not for its honors, its fame or renown,
 They are trifles unworthy your love.

O love not the world nor its glittering toys,
 Which dazzle to lead you astray;
From its uncertain riches and perishing joys
 Turn your hearts and affections away.

O love not the world, for its end is at hand,
 And its glory must soon pass away;
Your treasure should be in that heavenly land,
 Which knows neither blight nor decay.

O love not the world, for your home is not here,
 You are pilgrims and strangers at best;
But look to the future and be of good cheer,
 The weary will soon be at rest.

Then love not this world, but the one yet to come—
 The land of the good and the pure,
Where the pilgrims shall rest in their beautiful home,
 And its glory shall ever endure.

OUR RECORD.

How much better to have our record kept on high than here. Then it will be kept correctly, and no mistakes made. Records kept by men are apt to be onesided; often giving more credit than is due, or withholding that which should be given.

Many keep their own record, and give to the world an account of what they do for Christ. Others get their record kept for them by those who will keep it most to their advantage, giving flattering notices and praise for benevolent and christian acts.

Now it may be well to record at times what the Lord has done by us, and thus give him glory. It may be our duty to do this, and so show forth the wonderful work which he does for the children of men. A record kept of the Lord's doings will be for his glory always, but one kept for our own gratification, benefit or praise, may not glorify him. Better let the Lord keep our record, while we acknowledge his power and work, leaving poor self out of sight as much as possible.

Brethren, let us not try to glorify ourselves, but the Lord. He will exalt us if we exalt him; but if we seek the praise and exaltation of men, he will abase us. This he has said he would do. Let us exalt him, and trust him with our record.

DISTRICT MEETING REPORT.

The First Quarterly Conference in connection with the Advent Christian Conference for the Province of Quebec, for the present year, was held, according to appointment, in the Farnham district, commencing Thursday evening, Dec. 23rd, 1875.

The meeting was well attended, considering the almost impassable state of the roads. The representations from various parts of the district were good. Preaching during the conference was most excellent, and the social meetings were characterized by devotion, earnestness and harmony, most heavenly.

The business session on Saturday, P. M., was a most harmonious one, all taking part freely, and each expressing a desire to do only that which should benefit the church of Christ. Campmeeting interest formed a subject for brief consideration, and, considering the disaffection expressed and manifested among Adventists, it was thought advisable to prepare the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, It is known that a severance of religious sympathy has been occasioned among the Adventists in the Province of Quebec, and that a few outside the conference (except one or two) have organized a body for the purpose of instituting and carrying on a campmeeting at Beebe Plains, contrary to the desire and action of the Conference, as well as a large majority of Adventists in said province; be it therefore

Resolved, That this Quarterly Conference knows of this with deep regret, and that the action of the General Conference in regard to Campmeeting interest has our fullest sympathy and confidence, and we hereby pledge ourselves to do the utmost of our ability to sustain and build up the Campmeeting interest at Magog.

Several herewith pledged themselves to build tents upon the ground (D. V.) the coming summer. The meetings on Sunday were pleasant and profitable. The Lord's supper being administered after the afternoon discourse, a most excellent season was enjoyed. May the Lord ever direct in all things, and finally bring us to his everlasting rest. E. G. Chadsey, Dist. Sec.

HANDS OFF.

And now from far away Iowa the cry rings out, "Hands off!" Under that striking caption the Mille County Chronicle sensibly says:

"We stand forward as advocates of no particular sect or creed. We urge war upon no denomination for its belief in religious matters. Whether effusion or immersion be the proper mode we care not to discuss. Whether the bread is the actual body or not of our Lord Jesus Christ is a matter between us and our God. Whether the Pope is infallible, as a religious dogma, we are alike indifferent to; but when the issue is the destruction of our proudest monuments; when the attempt is made to do away with that proud boast of America—free schools; when an attempt is made by a certain sect to separate and break up the system which lies at the basis of our nation's prosperity, then we say, Hands off! The public school funds must be handled by the public for the public, and not by sects for sectarian purposes. The church of Rome must stop in its career. Americans cannot permit this invasion of their rights. The free-school system is American, and foreign potentates must not seek to subvert it. We say to you that the people of this country can never become the tools of an intolerant priesthood. Italy, rising from her ashes, has spurned your control, and republican America, while she will not opprss you, still will not suffer you to put the heel of oppression upon her neck."

THE PRAYING CHILDREN.—An early Reformer, named Melancthon, was once very much distressed and cast down about the cause of God; but one day, when taking a walk, he heard some children's voices, and, listening, found they were engaged in praying for the great work of God. He at once returned to his brethren, and, entering the room where they were assembled, exclaimed, "Brethren, take courage, for the children are praying for us!"

A WORD TO SINNERS.

One word to the unconverted sinner who may read this: Do not allege the imperfections of believers as a hinderance in the way of your coming to Christ; for you have to do, first of all and at once, with the perfect One, Christ himself. If you perish, it will be because you fabricate an excuse, which the Judge will at once detect and disallow. Only think of your folly: the sins of other men made a reason for your resolving to perish. We who have come to Christ, and our friends, and millions who went before us, all met with the same stumbling-block, but it did not turn us aside. O that we could show you the perfect One in all the fulness and richness of his salvation! And make haste; for otherwise you will soon find yourselves perfect sinners—complete sinners in every sense—and the voice of the Judge shall bid the heralds cease to sound the silver trumpet, and shall command the gates of the City of Refuge to be closed. "He that is unjust, let him be unjust still; and he that is filthy, let him be filthy still."

PRAY FOR ME.

L. D. HARRINGTON.

"Have pity upon me, have pity upon me, O ye my friends; for the hand of God hath touched me."—Job 19: 21.

An invalid of four years and more, though convalescent in some respects I trust,—fatherless, motherless, the last one of the family—alone—I ask the prayers of all who have faith. The burden of the past few years has pressed heavily. The cup of trial and suffering has seemed oftimes well nigh full; now it is overflowing. I suffer keenly the loss of a praying mother, who a few days ago fell asleep in Jesus. At times I am supported by strength from on high. Often sorrow surges over me, and I almost refuse to be comforted. Pray that Jesus may abide with me and lead me.

I long for consecration—the cleansing blood of Christ in me—and the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Pray that all may prove for the glory of God, that the Son of God may be glorified thereby.

HOME AND HEALTH.

A SOUND MIND IN A SOUND BODY.

This was the motto of the ancient Greeks; and it led them to give to the maintenance of health a degree of attention seldom equaled in either ancient or modern times. The physical culture which they derived from their gymnasia and public games did more than simply strengthen their muscles; it developed them into a nation of poets, orators, and philosophers, whose intellectual feats astonish the world and rival competition even in this cultured age.

It is not denied that vigorous mental activity may sometimes exist in connection with physical debility, or that, in occasional instances, a brilliant intellect may scintilate for a time in a feeble body; yet it is confidently claimed that the most powerful, efficient, and harmonious efforts of the human mind can only be manifested when generated and reinforced by a sound physical organism.

The brain is the organ of the mind. Whether the latter be, as claimed by many scientists, merely the product of the activities of the former, or whether it be a distinct entity which uses the brain as an instrument, as generally believed, we will not discuss here, since the conditions requisite for healthy action remain the same in either case. Impairment of the brain, either as the active organ or the passive instrument, has the same effect upon the result—mental activity.

The great majority of great thinkers, statesmen, generals, philosophers, discoverers, have been men of robust physical constitutions. Washington, Webster, Wellington, Humboldt, and scores of kindred names attest the truth of this. Yet there have been such prodigies as invalid philosophers; but these rare exceptions only prove the rule.

The only way in which to have a sound body, is to conform to the laws of health. A man who violates the laws of diet will soon suffer from indigestion. Badly digested food makes a poor brain, poor nerves, poor muscles, and poor bones. A poor brain produces poor, disjointed, and disconnected thoughts and ideas. Perhaps a diseased stomach is responsible for quite a share of the illogical reasoning, absurd theories, and visionary projects in the world.

Insanity, melancholy, hypochondria and imbecility arise from disease of the brain, either of its structure or its function. Unsoundness of some other organ is the usual cause of brain diseases. A man has a torpid, inactive liver. In consequence, the gross, irritating matters which ought to be strained out by the liver are left to accumulate in the blood. The great blood supply of the brain carries much of this material to that organ, which is thereby impeded in its work. Dullness, headache, vertigo, and melancholy are the result.

"Softening of the brain," as the term is popularly used, is nothing more than a local disturbance produced by inactivity of the liver and indigestion. To be truly wise and happy, and strong in body and mind, a man must observe all of nature's laws respecting health.

If students and literary people generally would attend to even the commonest rules of health respecting physical exercise, diet, and sleep, they would never suffer from softening or congestion of the brain. They usually suffer far more from bad food and too little muscle work than from excessive mental labor.—Health Reformer.

IMPURE CONVERSATION.

The readiness aud minuteness with which companies of both sexes, in parlors and public places, talk of the scandal which disgraces and curses the age, is one of the very worst features in the moral condition of the world. In our boarding houses and places of public resort, on the railways and by the seaside, things which the apostle said were not to be named among christians, become the staple subject of conversation. How comes it that this practice of free talking on objectionable subjects has grown to such proportions in our midst? There was a time when young men and maidens blushed to the tips of their ears at the mention of sins against the seventh commandment. In other days, decent men and women scorned any one who would dare intrude such forbidden subjects into any circle of their acquaintance. But now-a-days there are no such scruples. And how can it be otherwise, when we consider the nnmber of foul papers and books which are scattered over the land? These are bearing their natural fruit. Do parents attend vigilantly to the character of the papers and the books which their daughters and sons read? We fear not. Not one family in a thousand has regard to the adulterations of mental food which come into the home circle from public libraries, booksellers and periodical venders.

One of the most sorrowful things in our cities where large libraries exist, is the character of the books which are kept and distributed for the destruction of the rising generation. Five or six copies of the worst books have to be obtained to supply the unwholesome demand. This is one reason why so many young people, without a particle of modesty, talk on subjects forbidden by every high authority. Some one who has seen more clearly than others the enormity of this mischief, has expressed the opinion that some of our library associations are a nuisance, which for the sake of our children and country should be abated.

It seems to us that the march of our "progressionists" is away from the Scripture. We take up readily with "isms" only to discover that the devil and unutterable trouble are concealed behind the glittering bait. What superhuman efforts have been made in certain quarters to conceal something? Work for repentance has been going on there for years. The figure which eminent men cut in harboring false doctrine and loose practice makes one's heart bleed. It is time to throw aloft again the Christly banner with the inscription on it: "Wise as serpents, harmless as doves." It is befitting that we familiarize ourselves more with Christ's counsels from the mount, and know the priceless value of purity and clean hearts and lives. Without these we cannot see God; without these we are creatures of disease and despair.

There are many papers, claiming respectability, published in our cities, which should be publicly burned. There are plenty of Bible burners; where are the burners of infamous illustrated weeklies and other impure sheets? No head of a family who has any love for pure and lovely things, or any regard for the welfare of his children, should suffer these papers to pass his door. They are the angels of death, temporal and eternal.—Daily Witness.

A MILK DIET.

I find by experience, says Dr. E. N. Chapman, that lime water and milk is not only food and medicine at an early period of life, but also at a later, when, as in the case of infants, the functions of digestion and assimilation have been seriously impaired. A stomach taxed by gluttony, irritated by improper food, inflamed by alcohol, enfeebled by disease, or otherwise unfitted for its duties, as is shown by the various symptoms attendant upon indigestion, diarrhœa, dysentery and fever, will resume its work, and do it energetically on an exclusive diet of lime water and milk. A goblet of cow's milk, to which four tablespoonfuls of lime water have been added, will agree with any person, however objectionable the plain article may be, will be friendly to the stomach when other food is oppressive, and will be digested when all else fails to afford nourishment. Of this statement I have had positive proof in very many cases. The blood being thin, the nerves weak, the nutrition poor, the secretions defective, and excretions insufficient, the physician has at hand a remedy as common as the air and as cheap almost as water. In it all the elements of nutrition are so prepared by nature as to be readily adapted to the infant or the adult stomach, and so freighted with healing virtues as to work a cure when drugs are worse than useless.—Ex.

"HINDER ME NOT."

MRS. H. B. BEEGLE.

Hinder me not! for fast the sands are wasting,
And months and years are quickly hurrying by;
A sinful world to its sad doom is hasting,
And winged moments now so swiftly fly:
The nations and the thrones of earth are reeling,
And men are filled with dread perplexity,
While God in mighty power is revealing
The blood of Christ to set the sinner free.

Hinder me not! for I would hear the story,
The precious story of redeeming grace;
Would learn of Him, the Lord, the King of glory,
And in his presence find a resting place.
Fain would I hide me in his bright pavillion
Until the storms of life be overpast;
In him, my life, my hope, my faith concealing,
Sheltered in safety in his home at last.

Hinder me not! the clouds at length are breaking,
The morning's glorious dawn will soon appear;
The Word declares, and signs there's no mistaking,
Proclaim aloud the great Messiah near.
Hinder me not, for I would fain be watching,
Watching and waiting till the hour shall come
When, in the clouds of radiant glory beaming,
He shall appear to call his chosen home.

THE ADVENT WATCHWORD.

By the Rev. E. H. Bickersteth, Vicar of Christ Church, Hampstead.

At the season of Advent the church of Christ especially looks back to Bethlehem, and forward to Olivet; back to Bethlehem, with an ever stronger faith and deeper love, as every year adds its witness how blessed and abiding is that salvation of which angels made shepherds the first ambassadors; and forward to Olivet, with an ever holier fervor of expectation, as the little while is swiftly and hourly diminishing betwixt her present standpoint and her full and final felicity.

The sky is ominous with portents, with dark lowering clouds, and far flashes of light on the Eastern horizon. On the one hand, the consummated apostasy of Rome in ascribing infallibility to her Pontiff, so that he now as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God; the vast calamities which in rapid succession have befallen the chief sources of the pomp and power of the Papal church, from that day when the angel of the Lord smote her because she gave not God the glory; the ever-rising tide of scepticism among the learned of this world, who in their wisdom knew not God; and the contemptuous question ever gathering strength in the schools which affect to worship the immutability of law, while denying the Lawgiver his throne, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

And on the other hand, the proclamation of the gospel, unprecedented since apostolic times, in regions overcast with the shadow of death; the closer drawing of heart to heart among those who love the Lord Jesus in sincerity; the compassion shown to Zion and Jerusalem, first-fruits of that ingathering of Israel which shall be life from the dead to our fallen world; and the trumpet-note of joyous warning which now for the space of a generation has rung in the ears and hearts of the faithful watchers for the advent, "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh: go ye out to meet him." All alike tell, "The night is far spent, the day is at hand."

Alike to rebuke the incredulity of the world and to sustain the faith of the church, the beloved John, at the close of his prophecy, is moved by the Holy Ghost to repeat once and again, and yet again, the Master's watchword, "I come quickly." The great promise of the Advent stands in the very forefront of this last oracle of God: "Behold he cometh with clouds, and every eye shall see him." Rev. 1:7. And the note, either for warning or encouragement, is struck no less than six times in the addresses to the seven churches of Asia (Rev. 2: 5, 16, 25; 3:3, 11, 20), those addresses which form the historic platform, the point of departure from the present to the future.

But it is noteworthy that when we enter on the strictly prophetical portion of the Apocalypse, this warning cry does not recur again till the sixteenth chapter. In the fourth to the fifteenth chapters we pass from vision to vision; seal after seal is opened, trumpet after trumpet is blown, vial after vial is poured forth; and there is no repetition of the watchword. It is not till we are far on in the events foretold by the sixth vial, amid the gathering of the armed nations for the battle of the great day of God Almighty, that the old familiar watch-note is heard once more, "Behold, I come as a thief; blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments." Rev. 16:16.

The very silence of the apostle seemed to intimate that the day of the Lord was not instant, and should not come till the great falling away had first been accomplished, and the Roman Antichrist been revealed; that the Son of man was gone into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return; and that the advent of the Master might be delayed until the cock-crowing, or even until the break of day.

After this alarm-bell for the world is rung, we have in the seventeenth and following chapters of Revelation the fall of Babylon, the marriage supper of the Lamb, the revelation of Christ and of the armies of heaven following him, the blessed millennial Sabbath, the last rebellion, the judgment of the great white throne, the vision of the holy Jerusalem, and of the crystal river of life forth-flowing from the throne of glory. This is the climax of the Revelation of the ages to come; but now a divinely inspired postscript is appended to the divine prophecy, and in it we have the watchword repeated thrice.

(1) It is first connected with holding fast the prophetic word: "Behold I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." It is interwoven with a blessing. Now the beatitudes of the Apocalypse are as remarkable as any portions of this mysterious book. It only needs to compare them with the blessings pronounced in the Psalms, or even by our Lord in his sermon on the mount, to see how unlike they are to the other benedictions of Scripture. They are seven in number, and by this very fact may betoken a perfect cycle of blessedness.

The first (Rev. 1:3): "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein," tells of the felicity of those, learned or unlearned, who give heed to that more sure Word which shines as a light in a dark place till the day dawns.

The second (Rev. 14: 13): "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth: yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them," lifts the curtain for a moment that veils the paradise of the holy dead.

The third (Rev. 16:15): "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments," etc., is closely connected with the patience of the church, which holds on and holds out till he who will come comes.

The fourth (Rev. 19: 9): "Blessed are they which are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb," expresses the highest joys of heavenly communion in language borrowed from the deepest mysteries of human love.

The fifth (Rev. 20: 6): "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection," etc., tells of the glory that shall be ours when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, and of the royal priesthood of the saints in that millennial kingdom which is the dawn of the day of eternity.

The sixth (Rev. 22:7): "Behold I come quickly: blessed is he that keepeth [ho teroon, or 'he that holdeth fast,' see Rev. 3:8, 10], the saying of the prophecy of this book," declares once more the felicity of the faithful adherent to the prophetic word, in immediate connection with the promise of his Master's return.

And the seventh, the last (Rev. 22:14): "Blessed are they that do his commandments" [hoi poiountes tas entolas auton], or the more probable reading, "they that wash their robes [hoi plunontes tas stolas autoon] "that they may have right to the tree of life, and enter in through the gates into the city," discloses an eternal Paradise, far transcending that of Eden, in the very heart of the heavenly Jerusalem.

But reverting to the sixth beatitude, which is intertwined with the Savior's watchword, "Behold, I come quickly," we ask ourselves, In what does the peculiar felicity of the faithful student of prophecy consist? And I would answer that it consists in several particulars.—Signs of Our Times.

BODY OF CHRIST.

C. RICHARDSON.

I wish to introduce a few ideas in relation to the mystical body of Christ, the church, temple, house. First, then, we read, Heb. 3:6—"But Christ as a son over his own house; whose house are we, if we hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." 1 Pet. 2:5, "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." Eph. 2: 19–22—"Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto an holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."

Again, Eph. 1:22, 23—"And hath put all things under his [Christ's] feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church, which is his body, the fulness of him that filleth all in all." Eph. 4:16—"From whom the whole body, fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth, according to the effectual working in the measure of every part, maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love." Chap. 5:27—"That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish." 1 Cor 12:12—"For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body; so also is Christ." Says Paul, "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular" Truly this is a mystery.

(1) This house is a spiritual house.
(2) This house is built of lively stones.
(3) This house or church is holy.

This church is made up of holy members; not a bad pillar or defective timber in the temple. Does any one know of such an organized church on the earth? If not, why not? Is it because there is no such timber? Says one, It is a mystical body. Yes; but may it not be a literal one too? Turn to Cor. 10:3. It reads—"And did all eat the same spiritual meat." Was it not literal too? Was not the drink literal? Was not the Rock literal? And that rock Christ; i. e. represented Christ.

This is a mystery. How are we to become members of this body? By baptism. Baptized by the one Spirit into one body.

2 Cor. 7: 1—"Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and Spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." Put away all filthiness, foolish talking and jesting. "Put off concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts; and put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."

The gospel prophet, Isaiah, in chap. 62: 10, says—"Lift up a standard; cast up the highway; gather out the stones"—dead stones. Dear brethren in the ministry, there is a lack here somewhere. While there is great care taken to keep the ministry pure, the church is greatly neglected. It is far beneath the standard. If Christ has given us a correct pattern, or model, of his church, why not come up to it? It is our privilege to come up to the gospel standard, and to let the righteousness thereof go forth as brightness, and the salvation thereof as a lamp that burneth. I pray that the watchmen may not keep silent in this matter. The day of vengeance is just upon us. All outside of God's order or plan of salvation will be left out—burned up. "All the proud, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts." The way to life is strait and narrow, "and few there be that find it." "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." "Either make the tree good and his fruit good, or else make the tree corrupt and his fruit corrupt; for the tree is known by his fruit."

May God help us to be pure and holy, for without holiness no man shall see the Lord.

THE NEW YEAR.

M. P. GOWEN.

Another year has passed away, and is now numbered with the things that were. Three hundred and sixty-five days gone, one after the other, and each one filled to the brim with human woes, pain, sorrows, trials, cares and distress, and also joys, peace, comfort and rest. They are gone, never to return. What a solemn thought! Gone, past our recall. And how have we improved them? The year has been one long to be remembered by many. Some will remember its days with pleasure, others with pain. To some it has been the happiest year of life, for in it they have sought Christ—the Savior of sinners, and in him found rest and peace; old things have passed away, and behold, all things have become new. Life has a new meaning. Though there be no less trials, or temptations and afflictions, losses or crosses, they have learned with Paul that "these light afflictions work out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Blessed experience! Many can date their entire consecration to God and consequent entrance upon the higher life, in the year that is past; but these are in the minority. The great mass find but little to look back upon that is pleasant to remember; while "without hope and without God in the world" they rush heedlessly along in their mad career, seeking pleasure, riches, and honor, or the vanities of this world, and finding nothing but husks; and all the while there is a fearful looking for of something which they are wholly unprepared to meet.

Among this great mass is an undercurrent composed of those who have become outcasts through intemperance and divers lusts, and are hunted by the law, not daring to associate with their fellow men. With what pain they look back upon the year, as the one when they stepped aside and committed crime against God and man. But whatever is past, we cannot change. Deeds done, opportunities neglected, privileges abused, all, all are gone, and the year 1875, wrapped in its mantle of death, has passed away.

But God in his infinite goodness and mercy has seen fit to let another new year dawn upon the world, arising, Phœnix like, from the grave of the old, while it dawns upon the world as an untried future. Each day opens before us like the blank page of a tablet, upon which will be inscribed, as in the past, all deeds, whether good or bad. Upon it let there be recorded noble deeds of self sacrifice, trials borne to God's glory, yielding peaceable fruits of righteousness; temptations resulting in victory over sin through faith, and closer walks with God, for this may be the last. It will also be blotted by crime, and dark and bloody deeds as before.

How merciful is our Father to give us this new year that we may repent, and that the ugly blots of the year past may be removed, that they may not be remembered against us any more forever. While the blank pages of the new year unfold, we have opportunity to watch and pray, that evil be not written again; and as we walk carefully before God, our hearts will yearn after others, who rush madly on to ruin. To those I would say, This new year is for you too, and it may be the last. The Judge is at the door. Time flies rapidly, and will soon bring the judgment. But should the Judge tarry, death is in the land. Life is uncertain. To-morrow even is not ours. The invitations are out. "Come; for all things are now ready." "To-day, if you will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." "Come unto me, all ye that are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Come! O come! Jesus invites you to come to him. In him is life—eternal life. Without him there is no hope. O flee to Christ, who has power on earth to forgive sin, and is also able to keep you without spot and blameless. The Lord help you to make this year the happiest of your life is my prayer.

WHAT OF THE NIGHT?

If ever there was a time for true watchmen it is now. Now is the time for true men. Men who will be faithful to duty and stand firm at their post. We know that it is not a time of war but of peace, and all the signs tend to lull the careless into quiet rest. This calm, now brooding over the world, weighs down in awful gloom.

The moral darkness was never so great. True, no battle cry comes from the hills, no moan of anguish comes from the field of blood. But this dead calm, who can interpret it? Men's hearts are filled with dread. The gloom thickens, and the swift current seems to be hurrying us into a dense cloud of blackness.

Kings on their thrones tremble. Philosophers are amazed. Moralists stand speechless before the revelations of disloyalty, corruption and wickedness in high places. The great heart of humanity is burdened beneath its load of grief. Men who once stood upon the watch-tower and cried: "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh," are now indifferent and still. Their voices are hushed in this universal calm, which holds the winds of judgment. The night has been long, the waiting weary, and the church and world are wedded in the same quiet repose. The cry of peace and safety, and "my Lord delayeth his coming," has become the opiate. All are asleep. The days of Noah have returned. Sodom again repeats its shame and defames God. Iniquity abounds—the love of many has waxed cold. Formality has taken the place of earnestness, and conformity to the world answers the demands of the church. Infidelity is bold and defiant, and flaunts its treason into the very face of heaven. Christianity is rocked in the world's cradle, and is made secure by fair promises.

A change must come. This suspense cannot last. There must be a crash. Justice will not sleep forever, neither will jugdments always slumber. "Behold the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity." The cry from the desert, and the prayers of the humble, have arisen as incense to the throne, and from the altar in heaven there will soon gleam the awful lightnings of judgments staid. The words of the watchman yet ring in solemn warning, "What of the night?" The answer is ever ready, "The morning cometh, so also the night." The morning of peace to the humble, trusting child of God; but the night of death, to him who is not shielded beneath the pavilion of mercy.—The Restitution.

THINGS THAT TROUBLE ISRAEL.

"Art thou he that troubleth Israel!" was the language addressed to Elijah the prophet by Ahab, a wicked king in Israel. But Elijah answered, "I have not troubled Israel: but thou, and thy father's house, in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord, and thou hast followed Baalim."

There was trouble in Israel, and there was a cause for the affliction which they suffered. The chastening hand of God was heavy upon them. Three years and six months there had been neither dew nor rain. This was a fearful judgment, and Ahab ascribed it to the prophet of the Most High, and held him responsible. But the prophet met him boldly. "Thou and thy father's house" have brought this calamity upon Israel, "in that ye have forsaken the commandments of the Lord." The record of Ahab is that he exceeded all that were before him in wickedness. When the law of God has been set at naught there ever has been trouble, and such will ever be the result of its violation.

In this interesting portion of sacred history an important point is illustrated. It is that great and continued wickedness will be followed, sooner or later, by judgments. The destruction of the old world by the flood, and the fearful doom of the cities of the plains, together with the fate of empires and cities that once flourished, and were notorious for their wickedness, but have now passed away, afford unmistakable evidence that sin will not go unpunished. Whatsoever is sowed that also must be reaped. Like causes produce like effect. If the curse of God at different periods has rested upon the world because of sin, is it strange that such should be the case now when the earth groans beneath her load of accumulated crime and moral pollution? And not only is Israel troubled, but the world at large is reaping the whirlwind and the storm. There are calamities by sea and by land, drouths and floods, famines and pestilences. Then come the armies of grasshoppers, leaving desolation, want and ruin in their wake. Truly they are a burden, and men's hearts fail for fear and for looking after the things that are coming on the earth.

What do these things portend? Has God ceased to be gracious? Are nature's laws reversed? or do all these things happen by chance? Nothing of the kind. There is an almighty and gracious Ruler who holds the reins of universal government, and who does not permit even a sparrow to fall to the ground without his notice. He is long-suffering to us ward; but when mercies are slighted and trampled upon, when no just return is rendered, and when light is rejected until it becomes darkness, then in the end the judgments of God will overtake the guilty.

"Oh, that thou hadst hearkened to my commandments! then had thy peace been as a river, and thy righteousness as the waves of the sea." Thus does God address his erring and rebellious people. And the mission of the church is set forth in the following words of the infallible Teacher: "Ye are the light of the world; "the salt of the earth." The church, the Israel of God, were to receive and reflect the true light from the great Head. But the church has conformed to the world, to its spirit and its practice, until the line of demarkation, once so clearly defined, is nearly faded out. And yet the church has increased in popularity until she feels that she has need of nothing. Not long ago, one of the eloquent, popular teachers of the day said," Another hundred years of religious prosperity like the past, and this world will all be converted to Christ." Oh, blind indeed, to the teachings of the sure word of prophecy. Iniquity abounds, and the love of many waxes cold. And yet the cry of "peace and safety" is heard on every side.

Teaching for doctrines the commandments and traditions of men, and thus making void the law of God troubles Israel. As it was in the days of Elijah and Ahab, so it is now. Sin, which is the transgression of the law, and a reproach to any people, is the cause of all our trouble. Every pang that has ever wrung the human heart has been in cousequence of the violation of law. Handling the word of the Lord deceitfully, putting darkness for light, and light for darkness, teaching that the law is abolished and fables for truth; these are what trouble Israel.

What, then, is truth? and where found but in the word of Inspiration? Where, then, is the objection to that law which is holy, just, and good? The objection is found only in the carnal mind which is not subject to it, neither indeed can be. Let the old leaven of iniquity be purged out, and Christ formed within the hope of glory, and our eyes will be opened to behold wondrous things out of the law.—Banner of Holiness.

"WHOSOEVER WILL."

J. BICKFORD.

The fact is obvious to all who have had experience in the things of the Lord, that we must submit to his way; "for it is not by power or might, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." The work must be accomplished by him if anything is affected at all, which brings him in a position to either submit the will to the requisition of right or to oppose.

We feel as though the time has arrived when this call is going for the last time to the world—"Whosoever will, let him come." The divine spirit is working upon the minds of men in an especial manner; and to resist in any wise is worse than folly; for our eternal interests depend upon how we decide.

Whosoever will, may be for Christ; and if Christ be our all, worldly aggrandizement will sink into insignificance. It will not be, How shall I please myself? but, How shall I please Him who hath called me? We would to God this were the position and feeling of all who profess faith in our blessed Master. It would elevate scripturally the standard of christian piety. "Whosoever will" let them come to this standard, and be for Christ; stand by him, and bear the reproach of the cross.

Thank the good Lord for what he is doing in this vicinity. In the various churches he seems to be blessing by a revival of his work, and the Advent body is receiving a share. Although we have been afflicted and torn, yet the Lord has had mercy, and applied his balm, and in a great measure the health and prosperity of his well beloved has been restored. He has given us the addition of several new members and greatly revived his work in the hearts of many. Still the door is open. "Whosoever will," let him come. Oh ye dear ones, almost discouraged by the buffeting of Satan, take courage, for the day star has risen. The morning is at hand. A few more sighs, a few more heart aches and pains, a few more nights of weary watching, a few more tears in parting with our loved ones, and Jesus will come to end this night of sorrow. Will it not be a glorious morning then, when the sick shall be well, the cripple sound, and the dead live again? Oh, how we have loved them! how loth we were to part! but what will the meeting be? Oh Jesus, come; our hope is in thee.

NOW.

But it will be said we must make a full consecration of our whole nature to God. True, we must lose one life to gain another, but to do this is not against us, but the most direct way to do ourselves good. But it is not very difficult? This depends on the way we treat it. If we attempt to consecrate gradually and feel our way along by carnal sense; and while we dedicate a part, hold on to another part, give Christ the sitting-room, but reserve the parlor for company that may come; here is trouble, darkness, fear and delay. Right here let us tell a valuable truth. Dedicate quickly, make your decision in a moment, and execute it at once. Naaman's mistake ought to be a lesson. Instead of going away round by the king, he ought to have driven straight through by the prophet, and jumped into Jordan and came out telling his experience rather than getting into a rage, and well nigh turning back no better than when he came.

How common for us to want to go to a funeral first, before we go along with Christ (Luke 9:39), or now go and bid somebody good-bye, or anything at all so that the heart can get away from the now, the effectual now.—Crighton's Sermons.

CAN IMMORTAL BEINGS SUFFER PAIN OR DIE?

A. N. SEYMOUR.

"God" is immortal and incorruptible, so is "Christ," so is the "Holy Ghost," so are the "angels." Such holy beings cannot be diseased, morally or physically; cannot possibly suffer pain or death, morally or physically. Death, moral or physical, never did, and never can have dominion over them. Such influences never can reach them; they are at an infinite distance from all such evils. They are inhabitants of light, of glory, of unalloyed bliss, and of the eternal world.

All the saints of God, redeemed from sin by the precious blood of Jesus, will, in the morning of the first resurrection, be raised to immortality and incorruptibility, their bodies fashioned like Christ's glorious body, and made equal to the angels, to enjoy their society in the world to come, endlessly. In this life they have suffered a great variety of evils; but then, and there, all tears will be wiped away, and there will be no more pain, nor death. The saints will then have forever passed the "Rubicon" into their promised rest, where all is immortal and incorruptible. Death will have been vanquished, and the curse on all nature be removed entirely. Blessed world! May it speedily come!

Now no one will for a moment affirm that any of the inhabitants of God's incorruptible kingdom will ever suffer pain, or be unhappy for a moment. Why? Because all are immortal, all are incorruptible, is the direct answer.

But while all this is wisely acknowledged, we are told by many, that the race of man is now immortal; i. e., they have immortal souls, or spirits, that are parts of God's immortal being, consequently all possess this treasure. Such we readily grant was the arch deceiver's positive claim; for, said he to Adam, "Thou shalt not surely die," but be as gods, knowing good and evil;" but Adam's death and that of his posterity has been a standing demonstration for the last six thousand years of the utter falsity of his claim.

But, admitting that he, and the many, whose testimony verily corresponds or corroborates, tell the truth; then I demand an answer to the very important question, Can immortal souls or spirits suffer disease, pain, or death, or any of the consequences of "sin" and the "curse," any more in this world, than God, Christ, angels, and all the saints in the world to come? Immortality is immortality, deathlessness, a total exemption from all moral or physical evils; it matters not where it may be found, and it is verily an impossibility for any immortal being to suffer in any locality, heaven, earth, or hell.

So then, if the race is immortal, according to the statement of the serpent, then Universalism is the inevitable result, and not only that, but we must conclude that there has been no suffering, pain, or death in this world.

Are such conclusions legitimate? Are they to be admitted? By no means. Not so long as the wisdom of God, who created all things, stands so prominently above the wisdom of the devil and of this world.

God said to Adam, "Thou shalt surely die." "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." There is no immortality or deathlessness in such language as this; but directly the reverse,—mortality, corruption, disease and pain, that ends in death—a total suspension of all the vital forces. This is the way of all the earth. And as all nations anticedent to this, have gone down under death's dominions, and still the race is falling, it is an overwhelming demonstration that God told the exact truth, while the serpent told an exact falsehood.

Sin brought suffering, death, and the curse into the world, and the race falls under them, and would ever remain there, were it not for the goodness and mercy of God in providing an all powerful Redeemer to restore what was in Adam lost.

What was lost? Adam and his posterity. Lost in what? Lost in sin, corruption, mortality, pain, the curse, and death. But Jesus, the all conquering king, by the grace of God, stepped forward into this flood of misfortunes and offered his soul (his life) a sacrifice for sin. He tasted death for every man; and although once dead he now lives; for he says, "I am he that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive forevermore, and have the keys of hell and death." He is the first born from death's dominion to immortality, and has been exalted at God's right hand, as our king of righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

Paul spoke of his exaltation in the following language: "God hath highly exalted his son, and given him a name above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." This testimony covers the entire gospel dispensation, or from the time that he took his seat at God's right hand as Lord, Ruler, or Governor, till he comes the second time. This period covers all probationary time, and winds up with the scenes of the eternal judgment.

During this probationary period all who willingly submit and bow the knee, and with their tongues confess the Lord Jesus, and consecrate all to him, and seek for eternal life and immortality by patient continuance in well doing, will receive the same when the Nobleman returns to reckon with his servants.

May all attend to this work, for delays now are exceedingly dangerous. The Master will soon rise up and shut the door, and then obedience and disobedience will be rewarded.

Christian, are you ready for that decisive hour? Have you faithfully discharged your christian obligations to a fallen race? Will the blessed Jesus say to you, "Well done"? "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world"? May this be our happy lot, one and all.

MILLENNIUM.

B. BELLOWS.

It appears that the doctrine of a thousand years' millennium and reign of Christ after his advent, according to history, was held but by few of the early Fathers of the Christian church—the same as the doctrine of the conscious state of the soul after death. A few held to both views. See Buck's Dictionary under the word "Millennium." Though there has been no age of the church in which the millennium was admitted by individual divines of the first eminence, it is yet evident from the writings of Eusebius, Irenæus, Origen and others among the ancients, as well as from the histories of Dupin, Mosheim, and all the moderns, that it was never adopted by the whole church, or made an article of the established creed in any nation.

About the middle of the fourth century the millennarians held the following tenets: (1) That the city of Jerusalem should be rebuilt, and that the land of Judea should be the habitation of those who are to reign on the earth a thousand years. (2) That the first resurrection was not to be confined to the martyrs, but that, after the fall of antichrist, all the just were to rise, and all that were on the earth to continue for that space of time. (3) That Christ shall then come down from heaven, and be seen on earth, and reign there with his servants. (4) That the saints, during this period, shall enjoy all the delights of a terrestrial paradise. It seems that this view of the matter was not endorsed, but by the few until four hundred years after the Christian era.

DEATH.

Death is, in itself, a most serious and distressful event. It is nature's supreme evil—the abhorrence of God's creation—a monster from whose touch every living thing recoils. So that to shrink from its ravages upon ourselves or upon those whom we love, is not an argument of weakness, but an act of obedience to the first law of being—a tribute to the value of that life which is our Maker's gift.

The disregard which some of old affected to whatever goes by the name of evil; the insensibility of others who yield up their souls to the power of fatalism; and the artificial gaiety which has occasionally played the comedian about the dying bed of "philosophy falsely so called," are outrages upon decency and nature. Death destroys both action and enjoyment—mocks at wisdom, strength and beauty—disarranges our plans—robs us of our treasure—desolates our bosoms—breaks our heart strings—blasts our hope. Death extinguishes the glow of kindness—abolishes the most tender relations of man—severs him from all that he knows and loves—subjects him to an ordeal which thousands of millions have passed, but none can explain; and which will be as new to the last, who gives up the ghost, as it was to murdered Abel—flings him, in fine, without an avail from the experience of others, into a state of untried being. No wonder that nature trembles before it. Reason justifies the fear. Religion never makes light of it; and he who does, instead of ranking with heroes, can hardly deserve to rank with a brute.—Ocean Grove.

KEEPING THE TONGUE.

Keep it from unkindness. Words are sometimes wounds. Not very deep wounds always, and yet they irritate. Speech is unkind sometimes when there is no unkindness in the heart; so much the worse that needless wounds are inflicted; so much the worse that unintentionally pain is caused.

Keep it from falsehood. It is so easy to give a false coloring, to so make a statement that it may convey a meaning different from the truth while yet there is an appearance of truth, that we need to be on our guard. There are very many who would shrink from telling a lie, who yet suffer themselves in such inaccurate or exaggerated or one-sided statements that they really come under the condemnation of those whose "lying lips are an abomination to the Lord."

Keep it from slander. The good representation of others should be dear to us. Sin should not be suffered to go unrebuked; but it should be in accordance with the Scripture method: "Go and tell him his fault twixt thee and him alone." And it should be borne in mind that what is too often considered as merely harmless gossip runs dangerously near if it does not pass the confines of slander. A reputation is too sacred to be made a plaything of, even if intent be not malicious.—Ex.

WHAT a wondrous book this Bible of ours is! When you have read it through a score of times, you may have only strolled over the surface, looked at the land, or ploughed at most the upper soil. If you take one passage and dig deep for the treasure that coucheth beneath, you will find it inexhaustible. The book has in it a matchless fulness. It were as possible to measure space, or to grasp the infinite in the hollow of your hand, as to investigate the entire compass of Holy Scripture. It is high; I cannot attain unto it. It is broad; I cannot reach its boundary. But oh, what an abundance of provision, and what a fulness of comfort there is stored up in the promises of God's Word!—Spurgeon.

SCIENTIFIC ANTICIPATION.

A prominent sign of Christ's speedy coming, as predicted by himself, is the anticipations of coming calamitous events foreseen by men of the world—scientists. Christ predicted the sign thus: "Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth; for the powers of the heavens shall be shaken." Luke 21: 26.

The men whose hearts fail them for fear when they see the convulsive throes of nature, which must precede the final dissolution of terrestrial things, are not the followers of Christ, for they will not fear when they see these portents of coming doom, but will rejoice in prospect of speedy deliverance. They evidently argue scientifically, that a regular progression of the principles and powers which caused the witnessed phenomena in the sun, moon and stars, also upon the earth and sea, distressing the people with casualties, in connection with political and ecclesiastical combinations, must terminate in terrible revolutions of society and upheavals of the mundane system.

The Savior shows that these men will be able, by observing the scientific manifestations, to correctly prognosticate that terrific events are about to transpire; for he says of them—"Looking after those things which are coming on the earth." He shows that they will reason correctly when they anticipate that more terrible events must follow those which they have already witnessed.

This important sign is clearly being rapidly developed. Scientists are everywhere in a fever of excitement over the great question, viz., What events do the present scientific developments indicate in the immediate future? There is a diversity of opinion as to what the exact nature of impending events is, but the most learned and those of the most sound mind generally agree that a new scientific era for our world is dawning, a new chapter of earthly history is about to be written. They say that the progression of antagonism between the powers of the ruling agencies of earth matter has so far advanced, producing such a strain upon all things in the earth, seas and atmosphere, that a general rupture and upheaval of all things which can be changed—"shaken"—must, according to science, very soon take place.

These forebodings exactly meet the demands of Christ's prediction. Men of the world are now looking for just such great changes in our planet to immediately take place as the Scriptures predict will transpire at the end of this age. They anticipate them just as Jesus foretold, because of startling scientific developments in the physical world, which he called signs. These he shows will be witnessed in the heavens, among the planets, and upon the earth.

Among the many scientists who have within the last few years excited the public pulse with startling declarations of impending calamities, which they predict by scientific authority will soon overwhelm our world, is M. Victor Herault, a learned Frenchman, formerly a member of the French Academy of Sciences, and also a member of several European scientific societies, who recently arrived in New York from Liverpool, who was reported by an attache of the Sunday Mercury, which we quote from the Herald of Life, as saying many wonderful things relating to the future of the earth.

M. Herault was a pupil of Robert Mallet, who had a world-wide reputation as being the greatest living authority upon earthquakes. We quote some of his sayings from the Herald as follows:—

"Before discussing the diseases and ultimate death of our planet, let us endeavor to realize the thickness of the crust compared to the interfluid mass. From repeated observations made in the English and Belgian coal fields, it is ascertained that the temperature of the earth is constant at about fifty feet, and the increase of temperature observed is about one degree Fahrenheit for every fifty feet of descent. Unquestionably, however, the increase would be found to be in a geometrical progression if the investigation could be extended, in which case the present crust would be found much thinner than it is calculated to be. But, taking as correct the present observed rate of increase, the temperature would be as follows: at 7,209 feet water boils; at 25,200 feet lead melts; at seven miles there is red heat; at twenty-one miles gold melts; at seventy-four miles cast-iron melts; at one hundred miles a temperature capable of fusing platina, porcelain, and every refactory substance we are acquainted with. Bear in mind that the equatorial diameter of the earth is about 7,925 miles, and you will perceive that my comparison of the crust to a boiler-plate is not exaggerated.

Now let us glance at a few of the recent maladies which have appeared on this crust, and by them endeavor to form a prognosis of what is likely to befall our planet in the immediate future. First of all, there were terrible floods that devastated portions of France and England, followed more recently by earthquake throes in Porto Rico, and the series of formidable shocks which extended on the Atlantic coast from North Carolina to Washington. Then a few days since came the cable report of the terrible hurricane which swept over the Philippine Islands; and every two or three days we are informed Vesuvius is preparing for what will beyond question be an astounding demonstration, with disastrous co-ordinate and reciprocal manifestations at or near New York, as I shall endeavor to explain to you.

Such internal disturbances of the earth can almost always be predicted by the atmospheric conditions of deep coal mines. The barometer becomes unusually low, and even with safety lamps it is almost impossible to avert explosions. Now look at the coal mine record: in the early days of December there were three explosions reported in Great Britain from Lancashire and South Wales. Immediately following came the Barnsley explosion and the loss of one hundred and forty lives; and to exhibit the reciprocal action, we learn of a recent explosion at Wilkesbarre, Pa., in the Hutchinson mines. All these fatally destructive phenomena are connected. The eruptions of Vesuvius are invariably predicted by the coordinate action of which I have spoken; and the earthquakes in their turn are preceded by a sinking barometer and subterranean pulsations easily observed in the deep coal mines of England and Belgium by means of the Siesmograph. But on no previous occasion has there been presented for our studious consideration such a formidable series of unhealthy phenomena as the present condition of the earth's interior presents. They unquestionably indicate overwhelming catastrophes—explosions whose sublime horror will surpass all human power of description.

Scientific men all anticipate with AWE—["fear"—Christ]—the impending calamity ["things that are coming on the earth"], although there are various opinions as to its probable extent. Professor Fulmieri watches high up on the slopes of Vesuvius, and may not improbably, like the younger Pliny, be made a martyr to his devotion to science and humanity. M. Robert Mallet is studying the wave movements ["sea and waves roaring"—Jesus] and internal commotions of the earth, by means of a newly invented instrument, consisting of a series of delicately adjusted magnets in the deepest mine in Belgium, near Namur, where he pursues his researches at a temperature of one hundred and two degrees Fahrenheit, in an atmosphere saturated with gases and carbonic acid, mingled with aqueous vapors. Wood, Forster, Lloyd, and other renowned English mining engineers, are making similar observations in the Durham coal field, England, and one and all agree that the crust of the earth is at present subjected to a FRIGHTFUL pressure, consequent upon the inexplicable expansion of subterranean gases.

Over and above all these startling facts, we have the record of that most ominous stellar disaster of last summer, when a star in the constellation of the Crown suddenly and apparently inexplicably emitted eight hundred times its accustomed heat! It is not more than probable, reasoning from the logic of recent phenomena, that a similar fearful paroxysm of carbon may be incubating beneath the rind of solid earth—the cosmical boiler-plate on which we live and move. There is no necessity to elaborate on such an event! It would be to the earth and all its inhabitants—death! Yet this would not be an unprecedented causualty, even as respects our solar system. [Peter says, "The elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burned up."] Between the orbits Mars and Jupiter a large planet formerly revolved that in all probability passed through the various stages of planet life described by astronomers as the nebulous, the sunlight, and the decadence until it reached 'the death period', when, by a sudden expansion of its internal gases, it exploded, leaving as momentous celestial warnings the four asteroids, Ceres, Pallas, Juno, and Vesta—four graveyards. . . . That a similar calamity may speedily overtake our globe is probable from the unquestioned fact, confidently asserted with singular unanimity by great scientists, that both the earth and its inhabitants have passed the prime of their development, and have entered into either a lingering decay or sudden death. The chances seem to me to favor the latter mode of comparative extinction. What may not inaptly be termed the COSMICAL ANALOGIES also seem to point to the instantaneous extinction theory." [Isaiah says that this "flame of devouring fire" shall "be at an INSTANT—SUDDENLY."]

The distinguished savant attempted to prognosticate scenes in the fearful visitation of divine wrath thus:—

"Unseasonably humid, unhealthy weather will be followed by terrible thunder-storms, during which the sky will be literally on fire ["Great hail-stones, fire and brimstone"—Ezek. 38]. Beneath the ground will tremble ["I will shake the heavens and the earth"—Haggai], and a dreadful groaning ["The whole creation groaneth"—Paul] will be heard, for it will in reality be A WORLD IN LABOR."

He says, "a world in labor." Paul says, "The whole creation groaneth and travaileth in pain."

"It requires some courage to conjecture what may befall our poor old planet during the next four months. It is the duty and the privilege of science to mark the omens. We see in the heavens themselves traces of destructive elements, and many indications of their power. The fragments of broken planets; the descent of meteoric stones upon our globe; the wheeling comets welding their loose materials at the solar furnace; the volcanic eruptions of our own satellite; the appearance of new stars and the disappearance of others,—are all eloquent foreshadows of that impending convulsion to which the system of the world and the human race are doomed. Thus placed on a planet which is inevitably to be burned up, and under heavens which are to pass away; thus treading, as it were, on the cemeteries and dwelling in the mausoleums of former worlds, let us learn the lesson of resignation to whatever fate the womb of the future has in store for us."

M. Herault was asked concerning the aspect of the question in the light of revelation. "As a rule, I despise priestcraft," he responded, "and I resent the interference of religion with science. But if I may be permitted to say so, it seems to me that Christ's religion and my science are at one on the subject of which I have spoken. . . . Besides all this, the Savior informs us specifically: 'And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken.'

It seems to me that we are on the very border of the era thus indicated. In fact, both science and revelation agree in declaring the advent of eternity to be, so to speak, at our very door."

We do not adopt many of the conclusion of these learned men, but when we see the general agreement among them upon the great prophetic question of the immediate future of this world, and that there is a remarkable agreement between their predictions and those of the prophets, we do see clearly in this the fulfillment of Christ's prediction, which makes their testimony of fear a sure sign that the end of all things is at hand.

Surely the great God has determined that men of all classes shall—whether they do it consciously or unwittingly—sound the note of warning, while the mountains and seas, winds, floods and flames, together with the marching planets, echo the awful sentence of approaching judgment. O that men would hear the warning, and make speedy preparation to meet the Judge of quick and dead.

THE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

Bro. Moody's eight or nine weeks meetings in Philadelphia, which have been a remarkable success, closed with a very interesting convention of pastors, evangelists, religious editors and delegates from Young Men's Christian Associations. The convention commenced Wednesday, Jan. 19th and closed Thursday evening the 20th. It was stated that about two thousand ministers were present. The object of the convention was to talk over the best way of conducting evangelistic services, prayer-meetings, inquiry meetings, music, expounding the Scriptures, and training of young converts. The exercises were specially interesting and profitable. It was a rare privilege for those present. The Lord is doing great things by feeble instruments. Immense congregatious assembled. At the last evening of the convention, it was estimated that twenty thousand assembled, but some six thousand could not get into the building. It was the largest audience we ever saw under cover, assembled for religious worship.

During the two days convention, Bro. Moody, and others, gave some valuable advice to christian workers. He is eminently practical, and full of good common sense. He is very familiar with the workings of the human heart, and has much skill in adapting the right portion of Scripture to each individual case. He is a close student of the Bible, and is continually enforcing its precepts. He has strong faith in the Lord, expects great things, and is not disappointed.

A large number have been converted in Philadelphia. It is doubtful whether there has ever been a series of meetings held on the continent that have accomplished more good in a given-time. It is the Lord's doings and should cause all christians to rejoice. Brn. Moody and Sankey have arranged to begin meetings Feb. 6th, at the Hippodrome, in New York. That building will hold some twenty thousand. It will probably be crowded. No buildings have yet been found large enough to hold the people who wish to listen to Bro. Moody. For this reason, he has some meetings composed entirely of women; others of men, and others only of the unconverted. Fourteen thousand of the latter have been present at a time in Philadelphia. They were admitted by ticket. If one applied who was a christian, he was refused. Other meetings were held during the daytime only for christian worshipers. By these means all classes were reached, as they could not have been in any other way. Let us pray for these faithful workers in the Lord's vineyard.

IS THIS TRUE?

That the present are strange times cannot be denied. It is an age of counterfeits. In no one thing is this more apparent than in religious matters. Satan is specially busy in producing shams, and is having remarkable success in obtaining a large patronage. People pay much more for the support of the spurious than the genuine. Indeed, it costs more to secure destruction than salvation. The way of the transgresor is hard, while the yoke of Christ is easy, and his burden light. It is far more expensive to follow Satan than Jesus. The wages are infinitely different. The one affords eternal death, the other eternal life. No two results can be more widely different; hence it is in the highest degree important that we should beware of counterfeits.

The following is from the Chicago Daily Times, Jan. 10th, 1876. Let the reader decide whether it is a description of the genuine Christian church or a counterfeit:—

WHAT CONSTITUTES A CHURCH?

Three elements are the essentials. The social, fashion, and business element. A family moves into a city or town, and desires to go into society. The doors which enter it are those that swing in church vestibules. A man who has no great amount of money and a woman who has no great stock of personal attractions, may live in a town for years and never be invited to a social gathering, if they are not connected with some so-called religious society. If, however, they unite with a church or rent a pew, they are immediately put on the calling and visiting list by all the members. The first sociable affords the means of introducing them into society. From that time forward they are in the way of enjoying the social advantages afforded by the members of the society. A young man may live for years in a large city and conduct himself with the greatest propriety, and still never have an opportunity to enjoy any society outside of his boarding-house. By renting a seat in a fashionable church, however, he receives as a perquisite an invitation to attend the society sociables and the private parties given by the members of the congregation. In other words, he becomes a member of polite society.

Fashion requires churches. Without them milleners and dress-makers would starve, and half the fancy dry-goods establishments would go into bankruptcy. No woman ever wants a fine bonnet, cloak, or dress unless she is to wear it where it will be seen of men and seen of envious women. Unless she belongs to a church the chances are that she will have no opportunity of making a display of fine clothes except on the street or at some place of public amusement. A pew in a fashionable church affords the finest opportunity for the display of made-up dry goods, and it is often rented for this purpose."

Now you have read the foregoing, what do you think? Has the Times been describing a true church or a counterfeit? We think but one proper answer can be given. Is it any wonder that Paul said, "From such turn away?" 1 Tim. 3: 5.

SPRINGWATER.

We are now (Jan. 26th) at Springwater, N. Y., about ten miles from Dr. J. C. Jackson's noted Water Cure institution. We began here the 23d inst. Bro. R. H. Bateman commenced his pastoral labors here about the first of January. He had arranged with Bro. Dayton (Methodist), Bro. Hunter (Presbyterian), and Bro. Hibbard (Christian), to hold a series of union meetings in each church for two weeks at a time, each pastor having the right to invite whom he pleased, when meetings were in his church. This week and next the meetings are to be held in the Advent church. We are much pleased with the christian spirit manifested by the different ministers. They are heartily co-operating, and the interest is growing rapidly. They are seeking the baptism of the Spirit. We are expecting glorious rerults. Large numbers remain to the inquiry meetings, and one gave up to Jesus last night. Several more are almost persuaded. Roots of bitterness are being extracted from the hearts of professors, sleepy ones are waking up, and going to work for Jesus; cold formalism is changing to social warmth and sunshine, the backslidden are becoming alarmed, and sinners are trembling. For sometime in the past Satan had been making a special effort to divide and scatter the Lord's professed children in this place. We expect he will meet with a signal defeat.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE Second Advent Christian Association.

In accordance with a vote passed at the late special meeting of this Association, the Adv. Chris. Pub. Society has published the revised Constitution in tract form, and we are now ready to send a suitable number to the Secretaries of the different A. C. Conferences at their request.

TRINITY.

It is asked if 1 John 5: 7 does not teach the doctrine of the Trinity? The passage, with its context, reads as follows:

"Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God? This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. And it is the Spirit that beareth witness, because the Spirit is truth. For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one. 1 John 5: 5–8.

There is the best of evidence that a part of the seventh and eighth verses is not in the ancient manuscript. The following is omitted: "in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one. And there are three that bear witness in earth." Dr. Clarke says that out of one hundred and thirteen manuscripts, only one has this, and that one is of late date, so that there is scarcely any room to doubt that the foregoing parts of the eighth and ninth verses were not known to John, who wrote the letter.

Omitting what has been added, the eighth and ninth verses will read as follows: "For there are three that bear record, the Spirit, and the water, and the blood; and these three agree in one." This makes good sense, and harmonizes with all the rest of the Bible. The early writers on the doctrine of the Trinity did not quote this Scripture in proof of their belief, which they would most certainly have done, if it had been then as we now find it in King James' version. It is very certain that 1 John 5: 7–8 cannot be correctly used to prove the doctrine of the Trinity.

M. G.

NEVADA.

We hear good news from Nevada. Bro. E. McCulloch, the pastor, writes Jan. 21st:

"The blessed work of salvation moves forward with glorious results. The work deepens and widens. It is now taking in those in the prime of life, and business men are trembling. Some are forward every night, and find peace in the Lord. Our house is full every night, and great interest prevails throughout the town. . . . The church is standing the best it has since I came here. I think all have made the full consecration. Bro. Mendenhall is with us now, and rendering efficient aid. We expect to push this work forward until the interest shall cease, if it takes a year to do it, or more. Last evening we had sixty-four testimonies in less than thirty minutes, besides singing. All take hold nobly."

Later correspondence states that twenty-four more have recently given their hearts to Jesus, making eighty-two in all. Thirty-one have been baptized, and twenty-eight have united with the church. The interest continues unabated. New ones start every night.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

LETTER FROM BRO. T. J. GREEN.

TO THE A. A. M. SOCIETY.

Dear Brn.:—Being confined at home since last Sabbath by cold on the lungs from preaching long and often in cold, disagreeable places, I concluded to write you, that the dear ones scattered over the land might hear from one of their fellow-laborers.

Since my last report I have moved into Columbia county, where my family could be more conveniently located. They are all pleased with their new neighbors, many of whom are Adventists. We now have a flourishing Sabbath school going on near my house. This is a great advantage I gained by moving.

I have been blessed with health sufficient to fill all my appointments during the last quarter. The interest is on the increase. The churches are healthy. Social meetings are being held among them. Many of the brethren are warming up on the subject greatly. Many new places are opened for me that I cannot reach, and no one else will go. O Lord, have mercy on them, and open a way for some one to carry them the glorious message before it is too late.

Last month I was much in hopes that I could get the gospel into a certain community by challenging their preacher to debate with me; but up to the present I have heard nothing more of him. But in spite of all the devil has done or can do, some will take hold, and thousands secretly believe with us, but have not the manliness to come out openly. I lost four numbers of the Crisis in Nov., but was made to rejoice yesterday on the receipt of it again, mailed to Suwannee Shoals. Should any one wish to help me, in addition to what the Mission Board is doing, they can send by money order to Lake City, as that is still my P. O. address, Suwannee Shoals not being a money order office.

Dear brethren, pray remember me in my affliction. When you think of me, remember that I am now sick, not able to work or preach, and hardly able to sit up to write this, with a large family to support. Pray for me.

Suwannee Shoals, Dec. 24th, 1875.

"STAR BEAMS."

Have you read the book written by Eld. J. W. Thomas, with the above title? If not, send for it at once. It is full of good things, and it will pay to give it a good reading. I do not know of a book in which there are to be found so many practical hints and sharp home thrusts, and that is better calculated to awaken a deep feeling in the mind of the reader in relation to an entire conformity to the will of God. The article on Page 135, entitled "Keep thy Heart," is practically worth more than the price of the book. This volume contains nearly four hundred pages, neatly bound, and is printed from clear type, and is for sale at the Crisis office, and by the author, No. 12 Arnold Street, Providence, R. I.

A. W. SIBLEY.

"THE mistakes of good men in expounding the prophecies should by no means deter us from studying them for ourselves. If we were to be influenced by such a reason as that, we might lay aside the Bible itself; for what portion of it has not been falsely expounded by some one? And what then would become of the command of our Lord,—'Search the Scriptures?'"—Ramsey.

THINGS I WISH TO KNOW.—NO. 4.
L. BOUTELL.

How can it be said that God will destroy (except by or through Christ) all the enemies of Christ? In the first place, the destruction of Christ's enemies is declared to be the work of the Father (Mat. 22: 44). "The Lord said to my Lord, sit thou on my right hand till I make thine enemies thy footstool." "Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand; it cometh as a destruction from the Almighty. Behold, the day of the Lord, cometh, cruel both with wrath and fierce anger, to lay the land low, and destroy sinners out of it" (Isa. 13: 6, 9).

I think it plainly taught that in the day of the Lord, the Father (having taken his great power) breaks, dashes, destroys entirely all the rebels against Christ's government. This harmonizes with Rev. 19: 6—"And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia! for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth." Here in this reign you see the Father putting down all rule and all authority; and all the elect, the saved, saying, "Amen! right and just are thy judgments, O Lord of hosts." Then follows the glorious anthem of rejoicing, for "the marriage of the Lamb is come, and the bride hath made herself ready." Thus it will be seen that God, Jesus Christ, and the church, are one, so that when God's plan is to be executed, even in destruction, there is an heavenly echo in which comes out one united cry, "Amen! Alleluia! So let it be." So when it says Christ breaks, dashes, and destroys, it is on the same principle of exposition that Christ made the world. So the Father, by or through him, does all these things.

Now I will say a few things relative to what our dear brother says about "two distinct resurrections." Does the Bible teach a thousand years between two resurrections, the good and the bad? After the seventh angel has sounded, is there the sounding of but one more? And do not all the dead come out of their graves at the sounding of the last trump? And is not this at our Lord's coming? "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4: 16. The same is brought to view in 1 Cor. 15: 52—"In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump; for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible." This is the last trump; none after it.

God has appointed a day in which he will judge the world, and this trumpet brings them to the day. So Dan. 12: 2—"Many [the multitude] that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." "Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation"—or condemnation. John 5: 28, 29. Here both classes come forth at one time, at the sounding of one trump, and that the last.

Thus I have tried to follow closely after my dearly beloved brother, in his question on the 20th of Revelation. I have done the best I could to make my answers plain. I cordially accede to him the right to differ, and he shall have my love and fellowship till we shall see eye to eye.

Yours for Christ, truth, and his soon coming.

Chelsea, Mass.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. J. Young.

Dear Children scattered abroad:—I am confident there are many who have been with us in times past, who are saying, they "would like to hear from the little band in Vallejo;" and for your comfort and consolation, we continue to pray for you—though we do not expect to meet until we meet in the new earth. The good Lord is blessing us richly. Our vessels are being filled daily. We are enjoying sweet peace all the time. We have held meetings during the past week every evening, and while it was muddy and very rainy outside, it was blessed within. All who participated in these meetings were filled with the Spirit. They were seasons which will be remembered through the whole year. Some brethren from other churches were with us, and were greatly blessed, and drank in the same Spirit.

We have had four accessions to the church of late. All the dear children are looking right ahead; waiting for the kingdom. I have no bad news to tell. Jesus is precious, and we have no way of showing how much he loves us. The church is being built up through the labors of Bro. Carpenter. He interests all who hear him, and his labors are highly appreciated by all. His dear companion is suffering from disease, but is recovering slowly.

Not long since, we listened to one who undertook to show that the Bible was not the word of God, and it turned out to be a weak affair. Bro. C. reviewed his position, and the arguments presented by him were so overwhelming, that the infidel view disappeared like chaff before the wind. Truth is mighty, and will prevail.

I have written these few words, hoping that it will comfort and strengthen all the enquiring ones, and satisfy the curiosity of any who wonder what we are doing. We feel stronger than when we commenced, and are convinced that we are almost home. Only a little while, and He will come whose right it is to take the kingdom, and give it to his children.

Seeing we have such a hope, let us live holy lives, seek for purity of heart, live unspotted from the world, and win the crown which is for us.

Vallejo, Cal., Jan. 10th, 1876.

From Bro. Seth Woodruff.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I can say of a truth that I do appreciate the Word of God more and more, as I hear and see others struggling and toiling to support theology—trying to make harmony between it and God's Word. I listened with interest to a discourse at a funeral the other day. The preacher started off with more than ordinary animation to show the people that no one should doubt the immortality of the soul. For proof he said, "All the heathen nations believed it." That was his principal argument. He then expressed his wonder that the Old Testament Scriptures should be so silent upon that point; more so, he said, than the New Testament. He took us to the New, but failing in all his zeal to bring one plain passage, closed up by saying, "We take it for granted it is so." Thought I, What a foundation! The heathen belief taken for truth, instead of the teaching of the prophets! And "We take it for granted," instead of God's plain, unadulterated Word, which will stand for ever. Praise God that he ever opened our eyes to the truth.

From Bro. T. A. Cheney.

Dear Brethren:—As Bro. Hoyt has introduced me to the readers of the Crisis as being sick and needy, perhaps I ought to say a few words. My health has been poor for a long time; not able to do but little hard work. I have preached occasionally for several years. One year ago this fall and winter I held meetings once in two weeks, about fifteen miles from home. Quite an interest was manifested among the people. Last summer, after the close of the Tent-meeting in Shrewsbury, Vt., July 4th, I continued the meetings Sunday evenings until the Bethel Campmeeting. The little flock there seemed to be encouraged to press on in the narrow way.

While at campmeeting, my corn was nearly all stolen by a gang of Frenchmen, who encamped near my field. I expected twenty-eight bushels, and had only five. My oats were also taken from my barn. The twenty-fifth of October I was taken sick with disease of the lungs, and was confined to my house nearly two months; so I am truly brought into straightened circumstances. I am now able to be about, although my lungs are still weak, and I can earn but little. I am trying to serve God, and am waiting for his Son from heaven. I wanted to be out preaching this winter, but thus far have been unable to do so.

We feel truly thankful to the dear brethren and sisters who have so kindly remembered us in our time of need. May the dear Lord bless and reward them, and finally give them a home in the kingdom, where sickness and death never can enter. I will acknowledge the following sums received: A lover of the truth, $1.25; Lucy Bedell, $1.00; S. Whitney, $1.00; Mrs. A. Lowry, $1.00; G. P. Wright, $1.00; Albert Pratt, $2.00; C. G., 75 cts.; no name, $1.00; W. D. F., by G. T. Adams, $5.00. Dear ones, accept our heartfelt thanks.

Cheer up, ye saints of God, we can almost hear the rumbling of the chariot wheels of Armageddon's host, rushing on to earth's last mighty conflict. Let us watch with intense interest the coming of the King of kings. He will vanquish the mighty foe—Death—and drive it into the dark shades of eternal oblivion. Then the earth will bloom in Edenic beauty, and the ransomed host of God range the fair fields of Eden restored, and strike the key note of redemption's song.

From Bro. E. McCullock.

Dear Editors:—The work of the Lord is prevailing here most wonderfully. Bro. Grant came here in connection with our State Conference, Jan. 6th, and commenced laboring in earnest to save sinners. The result thus far has been glorious. The first Sabbath he was here, Jan. 9th, we baptized four; and last Sabbath fifteen more were planted in the likeness of Christ's death. Others will go forward at the first opportunity. Sinners are coming forward every night, and finding Jesus precious to their souls.

The inquiry meetings conducted by Bro. Grant, have proved a glorious success in leading sinners to Christ. Large numbers remain each night to be conversed with, and a deep interest pervades the entire village. The church has been greatly strengthened, and many backsliders reclaimed. Almost all in the church have made a full consecration to Christ, and are enjoying a fulness of his Spirit as never before. Praise the Lord forever!

Bro. Grant left for Philadelphia yesterday, but our house was filled again last night, and the interest is not abated. We trust the Lord may direct him here again soon. Bro. Mendenhall comes to-day to assist in the work. May still more glorious results follow. Pray for us.

Nevada, Ohio, Jan. 19th.

From Bro. H. Hodges.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Our hearts have been greatly cheered of late by a visit from Bro. Z. B. Chase, of Bangor. He is a faithful man of God. When he came here a week ago there was no interest in this place for meetings; but thank the Lord, Bro. Chase opened a campaign, and stopped five days and preached the word faithfully, and we have been greatly revived and blessed. He spoke one evening to good acceptance, at the Congregational Church, which was kindly offered him.

We have heard a number say, who do not agree with us in faith, that there was never such able Bible preaching before in the town of C.

May God bless Bro. Chase, and reward him for his faithful labors. I was never settled in my mind before on the state of the dead, but now I do not understand how anyone can help seeing the truth on this subject. It is plain to my mind now that the dead know not anything. Jesus is soon to come and raise the dead, and then we shall put on immortality. This truly is a blessed hope.

Clinton, Me., Jan. 18th.

From Sr. J. M. Slager.

Dear Readers of the Crisis:—Perhaps there are some who would like to hear from Manchester, N. H. I am pleased to say that the Lord has remembered us in much mercy of late by reviving his work among us. Sinners have been converted, backsliders reclaimed, and God's children quickened under the faithful labors of our pastor, G. H. Wallace.

Dec. 26th, six happy souls were baptized, and about twenty have joined the church within a short time, and more are becoming interested in their soul's salvation. We do not expect the work is going to stop here. We bless God for his goodness to us in these last moments of time, in bringing a few more to see the light of the gospel.

Dear readers, let us be faithful, that when He who is our life shall come, we may hail him with gladness. Our loved ones whom death has taken from us will soon come forth, and it is our privilege to be ready to meet them. Your sister looking for redemption when Jesus comes.

REVIVAL NOTES.

C. M. HURD.

The late protracted effort at South Hiram, Me., notwithstanding there were no new ones added to the numbers of the saved, was a most excellent success in all other respects, it being one of the best meetings ever held in the new chapel; and we trust that such impressions were made upon the hearts of a goodly number of unsaved ones in attendance at these meetings, that they will ere long come to Christ and live. The interest was such at the close of the meetings that it was thought best to continue the effort at some future day; and the Lord willing, the 17th of February Brn. Sweet and Stevens propose to visit that place again, and commence meetings.

A series of meetings held last week by Brn. Sweet and Stevens at the Moses school-house in Eaton, N. H., have resulted in a stirring revival. The presentation of the truth at the beginning of the meetings caused some of another faith to raise objections to the doctrines which were advanced, but that only operated as a means to bring out the truth more clearly to the minds of the people, and the result has been good beyond the expectation of the most sanguine. Heart-wanderers have returned to the Lord, and six young persons have sought him for the first time publicly, and the work is still going on, and bids fair now for an extensive and thorough-going work.

At North Sandwich, N. H., a revival has continued till it is hoped that there are near fifty conversions; and at Sandwich Centre, the F. W. Baptist and Methodists have joined heartily together in the work, and and are seeing some fruit of their labor. Already fifty or more have presented themselves as seekers of religion, and so the wave of blessing flows onward. Wherever a united effort of God's people is put forth according to his will, fruit is seen to his glory. At Melvin Village, N. H., quite a revival interest commenced during the late session of the N. H. Quarterly Conference at that place in December, and has continued until the present time with encouraging results.

HARDWICK DISCUSSION.

A public discussion was held at Hardwick, Vt., Jan. 4th and 5th, on the following question:

"Resolved, That the Bible does not teach that man has a natural inherent entity, which exists in a state of intelligent consciousness after the death of the body."

A. A. HOYT, Affirmative.
JOHN BURK, Negative.

The burning of the hotel Thursday, of which Mr. Burk was the keeper, excused him from the debate, which was resumed Saturday evening by Mr. Eaton, who volunteered in behalf of the negative. Mr. Burk repudiated the Old Testament, because it conflicted with his theology. Some expressed their convictions of the truth, deciding that the argument for the negative was very weak. We think that much good has been done by bringing the truth before the people of Hardwick in the debate. The brethren are strengthened in the faith, and the Lord is blessing his cause here. Some have lately "turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven." H. B. QUIMBY.

REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

Eld. A. T. Hodgdon thinks it duty to ininform the brethren, through the Crisis, that he is been sick since the 10th of Nov., with paralysis. The nerves in the right side of the face are paralyzed. His right arm is so affected that he cannot feed himself. He is confined to the house most of the time. He asks the prayers of all God's true children, knowing that the prayer of faith availeth much. We sincerely hope that his case will be remembered at the throne of grace. I. P. HODGDON.

THE EASTERN question, one of the most pregnant that can arise, is gradually attaining a far reaching importance. The insurrections of the Christian populations within the Turkish Empire are establishing their hold, and gathering concentration and force. The Porte is bankrupt. The sword may determine destiny, but the purse controls the sword. Russia, meanwhile, with lessons well learned from her failure before the leagued arms of France and England, and these lessons put into familiar practice, is both assailing the Sultan with diplomacy and with elaborate lectures, and is moving its troops in the direction of effective service. England, too, has startled the world with a significant move,—the purchase, from the Khedive of Egypt, of the Suez Canal, that new highway to the East. France, through whose scientific skill the canal was constructed, and constructed with an eye to her own ultimate control of it, has had to stand weakly by, and see her old rival steal this march on her and gain vantage ground for the coming Eastern struggle, with no power to resist, and hardly the poor consolation either of threatening or scolding. Great events are in the near future. Let the church recognize the voice and the footsteps of her Lord.—Watchman and Reflector.

Obituaries.

HACKET. In Freeman, Me., Dec. 5th, 1875, Hannah J. W. Hacket, wife of Bro. S. Hacket, aged fifty-eight years.

Sr. H. was converted over thirty years ago, but did not continue to publicly acknowledge Christ as her Savior. Her circumstances and relations in life threw her into associations wholly of a worldly and business character, where she accumulated much property, which she continued to deal out to the sick and needy all about her, and without sounding a trumpet. During the last few years she began to inquire and search specially for Bible truth, and to commit herself fully to the Lord. Consecrating herself to him, she obtained peace and hope, and entered into the work of aiding the needy more fully than ever before. She was endowed with a noble intellect, which she improved, and became a thorough scholar, and was remarkable for careful and accurate business habits. With a sympathetic and affectionate heart, she was greatly beloved by an extensive circle of acquaintances, and is lamented by all. She died in the joyful hope of eternal life in the world to come, leaving one sister, one brother, and many other kindred to mourn their loss.

I. C. WELLCOME.

BRAY. In Freeman, Me., from the effects of a stroke of lightning, July 4th, 1875, Hannah J. P. Bray, aged eighteen years, daughter of Sr. Caroline B. Thompson.

Sister B. was an excellent young lady of much more than ordinary qualities, and was greatly beloved by all who knew her. Two years ago she gave herself to Christ and his service, and found him to be her Savior. She was an ornament to society, and a pattern of christian virtue. But death cut her down in youth, yet she met the enemy with joyful hope of eternal life.

I. C. WELLCOME.

PERRY. In Providence, R. I., Oct. 13th, 1875, Sr. Eliza Perry, aged sixty-nine years.

"Mother Perry," as she was generally called, was a Mother indeed in Israel. She experienced religion in her early life and was a lover of Jesus and his soon coming. Her death is deeply felt by all her dear children, and also in the Advent church on Hammond St., where her voice in prayer, song, and exhortation, was often heard. During her sickness, which was only one week, she would often exclaim, "What a dear precious friend Jesus has always been to me." She had a strong desire and fully believed that she should live to see Jesus come; but sudden sickness and death has laid her away for a little while. May God sanctify this deep affliction to the good of the church, and also her dear children, and bring them through grace still nearer to him, that at last they may meet where no farewell tear will ever be shed. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. M. R. Phetteplace. N. D. BABCOCK.

WARREN. In Ontario, N. Y., Jan. 6th, 1876, of heart disease, Sr. Angelania, wife of Bro. Amos Warren, aged fifty-three years.

Our dear sister gave her heart to Jesus when she was but nine years old, and shortly after was baptized and united with the Baptist church. At the age of fifteen she was married to our afflicted brother. For years she has believed that Jesus might come in her day, and when the tent was pitched here in 1874, she became interested in the doctrine of life only in Christ. During the revival interest which is in progress in our church, she has manifested untiring zeal and interest for the welfare of the unconverted. The night of her death she left her last testimony and warning to the church and world, and in one hour from the time she left the church she fell asleep in Jesus. She leaves a husband and number of children to mourn, but not as those who have no hope. The funeral was attended by the writer, who tried to speak words of comfort from John 11: 25.

JAS. E. WELLS.

BOULTON. Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 8th, '76, Emma C., wife of Jesse Boulton, aged thirty-two years.

Emma was for many years in feeble health, and though her last sickness was painful, she was never heard to murmur, but with that patience which only the pure in heart can manifest, she bore it all, trusting in that God whose grace is always sufficient to help. She leaves behind a husband and seven small children, to mourn the loss of a good wife and a kind mother. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. Waggoner of the M. E. Church.

"She will sleep, but not forever,
In the lone and silent grave;
Blessed be the Lord that taketh,
Blessed be the Lord that gave.
In the bright eternal city,
Death can never, never come;
In his own good time he'll
Call us from our rest to Home, sweet home."

GEO. H. HEWES.

BURNSIDE. In Concord, N. H., Dec. 15th, 1875, Mamie Burnside, aged seventeen years.

She possessed an intelligent mind, an amiable disposition, and a pious heart. At the age of ten years she publicly professed her faith in Christ, and received baptism at the hands of Eld. C. H. Fletcher. Her sickness was protracted and distressing, but in the hour of death she enjoyed the full assurance of hope. Parents, grandparents, an only brother, other relatives and many acquaintances shed tears of sadness over the silent resting place of the loved one, but not without hope.

We have laid her away for a season,
She rests till the morning shall break;
Then the shadows of death shall be driven
Away, and the sleeper shall wake.

May the God of all grace and comfort bless the family, and sustain them in this sad hour of their bereavement. A. ROSS.

BELDEN. In Westfield, Mass., Jan. 16th, Georgie L., son of Cyrus L. and Mina Belden, aged three years, eleven months.

Little Georgie "sleeps in Jesus—blessed thought!
Hush, mourners! though ye could, awake him not."
"Oh, precious hope! already from afar
Through sorrow's night we see the morning star,
And guided by its beams, we calmly lay
Our sleeping ones to rest, to wait 'that day.'"

FOREIGN NEWS.

LONDON, Jan. 22. The Ragusa correspondent of the Times telegraphs that there has been two days fighting between the Turks and Herzegovinian insurgents, during which 380 of the former were killed. The insurgents lost one hundred killed and wounded. Trebigne is threatened with famine.

Jan. 25. The Times has a letter from Constantinople which gives details of great suffering among the Armenian Christians from the cruelty of the Turkish rulers, and unrestrained rapines of the Koords. Many Christians are professing conversion to Islamism in the hope of escaping oppression.

A dispatch from Vienna to the Daily News mentions the rumor that the Sultan after receiving the Embassadors of the Powers, intends to announce that the reforms proposed by Austria are impracticable.

Jan. 26. The Pall Mall Gazette's Berlin telegram says the insurgent leaders in Herzegovina have issued a proclamation declaring the Austrian programme unacceptable, though supported by the powers, and calling upon the friends of liberty to answer it with a continuance of the war and by a stouter resistance.

Jan. 27. The Berlin correspondent of the Times telegraphs that the threatened collision between the Porte and Montenegro has once more changed the aspect of the Eastern question. He quotes the important statement in the Montenegrin official Gazette that Turkey is determined to make war on Montenegro, and says the article throughout is a justification of the insurrection of the Turkish cruelty. It declares that Montenegro has so far conformed to the requirements of the international law. If Turkey acts differently Montenegro will be freed from all restraint and forced to adopt measures calculated to protect herself and secure the future of the Servian race, and the article concludes; "No regard for any one or any thing will fetter our action."

VIENNA, Jan. 24. The New Free Press represents that the insurgents in Turkey apprehend, as the natural sequel of the presentation of Andrassy's note, that the imperial powers will forcibly intervene to compel them to lay down arms. They are consequently redoubling their efforts to improve their position, and a brisk renewal of the fighting is expected.

RAGUSA, Jan. 25. Ali Pasha has landed in Klek from Constantinople; 3500 insurgents are intrenched on the mountains along the road from Ragusa to Trebigne.

BUCHAREST, Jan. 25. The Minister of War has asked the Chamber to grant an additional $224,000 for army equipment. Urgency was voted on the measure.

BERLIN, Jan. 25. The financial papers of this city announce a grave commercial crisis at Riga. Two large firms have failed, and further suspensions, which will probably react at St. Petersburg, are expected.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Jan. 25. A boy named William Lee, only eleven years old, was arrested here today for beating and terribly injuring Annie Mason, a little girl only four years of age. It is a case similar to the Pomeroy outrage in Boston.

Springfield, Mass., Jan. 26. Careless handling of a frozen plug exploded 250 pounds of nitro glycerine in Mobray's nitro glycerine factory at North Adams this afternoon, demolishing the building and damaging other buildings in the neighborhood. Two workmen, Benjamin Cook and John Cullen, were blown to pieces, and John Wallace, the foreman, was injured, but not seriously.

— The will of the late David Snow disposes of about a million dollars worth of property.

— The open communion question is agitating the New York Baptist churches.

— The palatial residence of Ingersoll, one of the New York ring thieves, was burned at Norwalk, Conn., loss $100,000.

Notice—Baptism and Rantism.

Orders for this work are coming in, but in order to ensure its publication, it will be necessary that they pour in sufficiently to warrant the cost of publishing an edition without loss, which cannot be afforded. The work will be of interest, I trust, as old ground will be re-explored in a manner to bring out all the truth we can discover, and new ground not yet much explored will be dug over for the sake of discovering the whole truth. It is as yet but little known what Rantism is, or what its relation is to Baptism, if any, and specially to the great atonement. Let all who would like the work, and will be willing to encourage its publication, send on their orders by postal card to me, to RICHMOND, PROV. QUE., CANADA. The work will be afforded as cheaply as possible. Please send on your orders, brethren and sisters. L. C. MCKINSTRY.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

KINGLY ROBES.

E. O. SPRAGUE.

They tell of wondrous cloth of gold,
Spun in some eastern loom;
Of costly robes, empurpled o'er
With lovely Tyrian bloom.

They tell of garments, rich and rare,
Made for earth's favored ones,
Whose every seam is frosted o'er
With pearls and precious stones.

But there's a robe that is not decked
With ermine or with gold,
And yet a kingdom's worth is held
In every glist'ning fold.

No jewel breaks its graceful flow
From throat to simple hem;
But oh, it shines with lustre far
Surpassing any gem!

I'd rather fold above my heart
This vesture pure of Peace—
Of Righteousness and Hope and Faith,
Than one and all of these.

More richly dressed the beggar poor,
Who wears this raiment white,
Than he who recks not of its worth,
Though crowned with princely might.

Then take away earth's robes of state,
Christ's spotless garment bring;
I'd wear it far more gladly than
The purple of a king.

OUR MISSION.

IS IT A FAILURE?

We give a pure testimony out of a pure heart, and surely this cannot be where contention and strife is, for these are the fruits of a disordered system. As I have been a close observer of the fruits of the past labors of our people, called Adventists, I notice there is a lack of system, both in building and in material used; and as a result buildings are being blown down, and torn to pieces, and the labor is worse than lost for the want of system.

Jesus sent forth his disciples "as lambs among wolves," with the injunction, "be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves." Is there not a lack of wisdom in this direction? Have we tried to save as well as hold the ground we have taken? Why all this discordant action? this pulling in opposite directions by the builders? Is this wisdom? Is it not possible to have a preachers' convention to investigate the peculiar points of difference among the brethren? There is too much shoddy used, much might be picked out. "What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord." Men of the world are wiser than the children of light; for if they want a building to last they use no rotten timbers, brick, or untempered mortar. And as a result, our cities are beautified with many elegant, modern structures, and wise men will say they have exercised sound judgment in a careful selection of the very best material.

But can as much be said of Adventists? Is not much of their labor in vain? Have we been wise in the past in our efforts to erect a beautiful gospel building? Why this mixing up of "hay, wood, and stubble" with the "gold, silver, and precious stones"? This destroys its beauty, strength, and durability. Why this mingling of precious truths with those theories which distract, divide, and finally destroy the body? Is it wisdom to longer work and labor in this way, knowing that there are those classed under the head of Adventists who can be properly labelled mischief-makers, breeders of division? They tear down, but never build up. It would seem as if the devil had a manufactory for the purpose of getting these infernal tools to make division. The The material used is "hay, wood, and stubble." And the devil is very careful not to have any of his workmen use anything else. He makes his own selection, and as the true gospel minister, goes from place to place, scattering these precious truths—"Gold, silver, precious stones;" laying them one after another upon that "foundation which is laid—Jesus Christ," many believe and are baptized, and so the work goes on. Very soon along comes another Adventist, with his pack of "hay, wood, and stubble," and he spreads on a layer of this mortar mixed for the occasion. He carries with him a very smooth tongue for a trowel, and he handles it in such a dexterous manner that he soon passes for a wise master-builder. He will of course find fault with the "gold, silver, and precious stones," and perhaps try to prove that they are spurious; or, if pure, they are not in their proper place; or that they are non-essential; or perhaps they will talk much about the great "head-light" of the church, while every available means is being used to dispose of his stock on hand of "hay, wood, and stubble."

To be sure, they say there was some opposition; it has gendered some strife; the brethren and sisters have been somewhat alienated; it has separated some friends; but then it is the nature of these special doctrines. The holders of them are very independent, and if you who hold to the use of "gold, silver, and precious stones" do not let us have our own way, and build upon your "foundations," down comes your building, and then you will be a disgrace in the community, and that which you hold so dear will be trodden under foot.

Again, it is urged by these division-makers, or hobbyists, that there is a lack of the essentials of true Christianity,—that charity is the principal thing, and if you have got charity, you will let us hobbyists into your pulpits. These men will admit that they have, and are making, division in the Advent building; that all eyes can see it at a glance; but "you must have charity, and keep still, and let us have it all our own way. You make all the division by opposing us. We know that these doctrines are not essental to salvation, and sore division is made by them everywhere we go; but, then, the virgins were to be divided; and if I divide, I am fulfilling Scripture." "Hay, wood, and stubble" is sure to produce a dividing spirit.

Now is it charity to submit, longer to be daubed with untempered mortar? Is it charity to let a man preach in our pulpits who boasts of making division wherever he goes? Is it charity to let a man preach to our people when our past experience with him has proved him to be a strife genderer? If you have seen that wherever he has labored the cause has suffered dearth, devastation, and certain ruin, is it charity, even if you have quite often heard him preach from the words of our Savior, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one for another"? Perhaps he will tell you that he is an out and out Adventist, and perhaps fall back upon what he calls his good standing in some A. C. C. If you wish to advertise to the world your love to the brethren as Christ's disciples, then you surely cannot refuse such an one the free use of your pulpits, and take up an occasional collection to pay them for dividing your little church. Is it charity to leave every door open, so that wolves as well as shepherds may come in at will? Is it charity to let them occupy your desks with their favorite twelve or twenty lectures, as the case may be? Is it charity to permit them to scatter "our works", as they are generally termed, when you know they are certain ruin and death? Is it charity, when you see that this is the state of things in every new field, as well as old, where these hobbyists have crowded in?

The devil, through these emmissaries, follow the truth with a spurious testimony. Hobbyist comes and makes acquaintance with some young convert who really loves the truth, and he tells him that he has only had the "milk of the word." He is very tender, loving, and has such a deep, heart-felt desire for their growth and future perfection, that he urges the necessity of more substantial food. He preaches once, twice, and so on; and alas! that once healthy, peaceful, prosperous little church is gone. Strife, variance, emulation, with every evil work, follow.

We are told to keep still, and let brotherly love continue; because if you say anything about this state of things, you are sure to hurt the finer feelings of these men, and they will go off and start a meeting of their own; and so by keeping still our churches are being ruined. Who bears the burden and disgrace? If you let them have their way in Conference you are a good fellow; but you reject a resolution offered by one of these men, and accept one from another brother, and they consider themselves insulted and abused, and will wish you to understand that they will never submit to such things. So those who have the cause of truth in their hearts, keep still, and suffer wrong rather than do wrong.

This is and has been the state of things for the past five or ten years. The church (Adventists) is like the "Valley of Hinnom;" it has been the recipient of everything that floats under the head of Advent, and as a result has been the prey of every unclean bird. Devastation and ruin, divisions and subdivisions are everywhere reported. And I ask, Is there no remedy for these things? Cannot something be done for our churches in the way of a more systematic organization? Is the Bible system so muddled that no two can understand it alike? Are the Advent doctrines so dimly revealed in the Bible? Has the leading minds among our people learned nothing in the past? Does not experience teach us where we are drifting? And all for the want of systematic organization.

What is everybody's business is nobody's business; and so it goes. Our worst enemies are in our own midst, all passing under the head of brother Adventist. Is it not high time we were awake to this all important subject? A regular, systematic organization for every conference under the title of A. C. C.? And every church in its jurisdiction coming under one head, and form of order, with doors open to none unless well recommended by the conference of which the said church is a part? Cannot these side-issues be met squarely and frankly, and yet openly, and be forever put away from among us? There is great need of reform. We must settle down somewhere upon some solid basis of action. We must have a systematic co-operation of every truth-lover in sustaining the truth; the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. We want the best, clearest, and most pointed statements of facts. The pure testimony is called for on every hand. God help us to so place it before the people in the spirit of the testimony itself, that it may carry conviction to every heart who lends a listening ear.

If our people could be so drawn into line as to present to the world, as well as to the enemy of all righteousness, a solid front, under one head and title, each A. C. C. forming into line of action, all coming under the supervision of the General Conference, each member in good standing of any A. C. C., being a member of the General Conference, the general A. C. C. demanding loyalty of co-operation of each A. C. C., and every A. C. C. demanding loyalty and an earnest and energetic co-operation of all churches in its jurisdiction, and every church exacting from its members a strict allegiance to the truths, accepted and indorsed by the body, every church having the same title, rules of order, regulations, etc., they all coming under the head of the General A. C. C., then in this way we should compel all lovers of the truth, which make us a separate and distinct people, to unite with the A. C. C. in their respective States, and exclude from our pulpits all persons coming, not bearing a certificate recommending them to the churches. In this way each church would be shielded by the General A. C. C. Cannot some such system be adopted, and that speedily? God help us to act wisely in the future for the general good. Your brother in Christ. ELD. E. F. SERGISSON.

Rochester, N. Y.

"THE CALEDONIAN PROPHET."

I. C. WELLCOME.

In the World's Crisis of Jan. 19th, is an article under the caption of "Coming Events," which, I think, is calculated to mislead its readers, and do great injustice to Drs. Cumming, Talmage, and Bro. D. L. Moody. An article is therein copied from some English reporter, and endorsed, to the effect that Dr. John Cumming, of London, "on the last night of 1875," stated that Dr. Talmage and himself taught that "Christ's second coming on earth will happen between the month of September, 1875, and September, 1876."

Again, that "Dr. C. says, that in the year 1876 the Jews will return to Judea." Also, that "Dr. C. quoted Mr. Moody as authority for the belief that the millennium must come during the year 1876."

That each of these brethren believe Christ is coming soon, and may come in 1876 is evidently true; their statements show this. But that Dr. Talmage has ever uttered the words, or that Dr. Cumming ever quoted from him, and so constructed a sentence as to say what the reporter writes, is too much for any to believe who are acquainted with the views or the prudence of each of those teachers.

This is but another of the many false reports that have been published abroad through the papers concerning Dr. Cumming and others, being prophets, to produce a sensation, and to bring the heavenly message of Christ's coming into disrepute and reproach.

Then, that Dr. C. should "quote Mr. Moody as authority for the belief that the millennium 'must come' during the year 1876," is simply ridiculous; and the report is made just now in that form to a community which has just witnessed one of the most glorious reformations, under Bro. Moody's labors, ever recorded since the days of Luther, and that if 1876 should pass, and the event not come, Mr. Moody must be looked upon as an enthusiastic false prophet, and his influence as a christian teacher be greatly tarnished.

Bro. Moody teaches that Christ and the millennium will soon come—may come at any moment,—but he does not teach nor believe these events must come on any given year known to him. Let us be careful to avoid giving countenance to false reports, and all sensationalism produced thereby.

LINES.

Selected and revised by MRS. JOHNSON, on the death of Virgie L. Pattison.

Like the gentle snow-flake flying
For a moment on life's sea,
Little Virgie came to cheer us,
Then like it to pass away.

Oh, our hearts were well nigh breaking,
And each bosom heaved a sigh
When a little band we gathered
Round to see our darling die.

As the golden sun was throwing
Shadows of departing day,
Sadly watched we it, well knowing
Virgie too had passed away.

When the sun of life is casting
Over all its parting light,
Then we'll meet where joy is lasting—
Where we ne'er shall say "Good night."

In that land there'll be no sighing,
Death no more can grieve the heart,
For with Christ there is no dying,
We from loved ones ne'er shall part.

MY SOUTHWEST TRIP.—No. 2.

P. S. W. DEYO.

Aug. 30th. Late in the afternoon we left Brooklyn for Greenfield, Adair Co., Iowa, having shipped the tent onward. With my team and Bro. E. A. Marsh for a companion, we traveled on and enjoyed the kind hospitality of the road-side near the quiet and temperance town of Grennell. After adjusting things and taking a lunch of some crackers and apples, we took the buggy box for a bedstead, our coats for pillows, and laid down to rest both body and mind. If we took our reward in ease and pleasure, in the applause and honor of men, so much less would be the reward laid up; but we "endure as seeing Him that is invisible," and have "a conscience void of offence toward God" in trying to faithfully proclaim his Word, and to follow Paul's example (2 Cor. 11:9)—be "chargeable to no man." Yet with all this we hear it said, "They preach for money." A farmer leaves his farm, moves into town, and establishes a mercantile business. What for? To make money. But suppose that there is more money in the farm, and he knows it before he makes the change? Then there must be some other reason besides money in the consideration.

Bro. Marsh was getting good wages painting, but he left it without a promise of compensation. As for myself, I could earn in one week more than I have got in three months. I have earned from two to three dollars per day in the early day of my pioneering, working at my trade, and preached evenings. The day of the Lord will reveal who will be entitled to the reward,—those who planted the truth over Northern Iowa, or those who furnished the money to do so. Let not a worldly, money-loving church cry out, "They preach for money," till they give a little more; till the minister receive more than a fair day's wages for his time. Some will hoard it up and give a lie to their profession, and their money will perish with them. Do not talk loud and long that you believe the Lord is coming soon, and withhold the means that would put hundreds into the blessed light that you pretend to thank God for having. If some one had not spent the time, or helped some one to do so, you too might have been in darkness as others are.

Aug. 13th. I passed on through Kellogg, Newton, Prairie City, and camped for the night doubtless near those of like precious faith, but who have moved west and hid in a world of care. Sept. 1st. I passed Des Moines, the capital of Iowa. I think this the first city of the kind I ever was in.

Sept. 2nd. I moved on and reached Wintersett before night, in Madison Co. The approaching storm caused us to seek shelter, and we found a home at Bro. Starkey's; but ere we reached the barn with team were well soaked. Sept. 3d. We had a bad day to travel, on account of mud, but we reached Greenfield before night, and found our tent on the public square ready to be put up; but the roads were so bad there was not lumber in town to seat the tent, so we spoke in the new Court House and had a good hearing.

Sept. 4th. Bro. Marsh was to speak, but was sick. I spoke in the A. M. Not having as large an attendance as I desired, I concluded I would take the gospel to them. So I stood on the sidewalk and preached to the passers by, and had the best attention. Many stopped to hear. We found them hungry. Stopped with Bro. Alexander, and called on others. This is a new town, and thinly settled. Sept. 5th, had a good hearing, but in the afternoon a heavy storm broke up the meeting. The hail swept the cornfields for miles; and at night it was dark and bad for meeting. There were few out. This closed the meeting.

Sept. 6th, we started for Page Co. Campmeeting of the Southwestern Iowa and Missouri Conference. Had much trouble to get along, as bridges were gone, roads were bad, and water high. Sept. 7th, arrived a little before night on the camp-ground, in Chase's Grove. The Iowa Mission Tent arrived soon after we did. Communication had been so imperfect that they did not know as we would be there with it. Sept. 8th, we put up the tent, and as this meeting will be reported by others, I shall here speak of it in general terms. But few of the ministers I had ever seen.

I think I never saw more complete harmony than in this meeting. Every sermon seemed to weld on to the last one. Not a single hobbiest was there to bring in discord. If there was any fault the meeting was too short. Toward the last Dr. Chandler and I harnessed into the work, and it seemed like old times. We worked as in days of old, and each had the same cause and object in view.

Here I must speak of the children's meeting, which I so much like to be in. It was among the best I ever saw. Such good testimonies made us all children together. The result we trust will be known in the day of the Lord.

Sept. 13th. We struck tent, and shipped to Hamburg, Fremont Co., Iowa. Went to Bro. Wm. Patten's to rest, where I was to leave my team and go the rest of the way by railroad. Sept. 15th, we arrived early in the morning at Hamburg. Found Bro. C. C. Carman, where we made our home. It rained so that we could not well put up the tent; so I went into the streets and preached my first discourse. I stood upon a dry-goods' box and spoke to a good audience, which advertised the tent meeting for miles around better than I could have done in any other way.

Sept. 16th, we put up the tent and began in good earnest. It was well filled over the first Lord's day, after which it was so cold we went to Mr. Davis' hall. We concluded to take the tent down and continue in the hall, which we did till the close. My discourse on the street spread the news some fifteen miles out, which brought to town one Bro. R. H. Ramsay, of Indiana, to see me. I was glad to see him. He had been a M. E. preacher, and then joined the Quakers. He said to me the Lord led him to preach the second coming of Christ, so he gave up his papers and is out doing all he can to spread the light of the soon coming King. I found that he had never seen one of our papers of any kind, and that I was the first minister he ever saw that was preaching this truth. I told him that I had preached it over twenty years. Tears came in his eyes, and we were satisfied the Lord led us to thus meet, and I trust for his good. As he was not furnished with tracts as I wished, I gave him what I had, and papers, etc. He belongs to no sect or party, and I withhold his address lest some hobby-rider or time-setter send him something that would sour his mind and thus put him further from the truth.

I would not speak thus had there not been much discord made in this way in places where I have labored. When will men learn to mind the Lord's business and proselyte out of the world and not out of the churches? Far better have a man who has some error, than a bigot or sectarian.

Sept. 22nd, Brn. C. Carman, E. A. Marsh and myself took the cars for Nebraska City, where I preached to the Jews who had sent word for us to come. They wished to hear about the restitution of the kingdom of Israel. Bro. Marsh wrote on the sidewalk and bill-boards that there would be street preaching at 12½ o'clock. I put up my chart of the metallic image, and spoke to Jews, Gentiles, Mormons and Catholics. I told the Protestants their teaching that they went to heaven at death, and leaving out the promise that God made to Abraham and the kingdom promised to David and his heir, stood in the way of the Hebrew children coming to the true light. We took the cars back to Hamburg, where Bro. Marsh spoke. He was efficient help, and did his part of the preaching in all the meetings. The hall was well filled, and toward the last said to be the largest attendance to hear the truth ever had in the place.

Sept. 27th, we went to the water to attend to the ordinance of baptism, and took the train in the afternoon homeward. The result of this meeting the Lord only knows. We know that quite a number manifested an interest to serve the Lord. We met with intelligent and well informed persons who were made glad in the light, and trust they will use their talent to the glory of God. We parted with kind friends who administered to our wants after a godly sort.

Eld. Wm. McCulloch met us at Red Oak, and, as the Governor of the State was to speak that night, he took us to his home. Here we rested. Next day (28th) we went to Villisca, where Bro. Patten met us, and took us to his home, near where I was to preach at night. We found a good interest as the result of the campmeeting. We were urged to remain, but I had sent on appointments and thought best to go, hoping that it might please the Lord to put it in the hearts of the people to send for me to return at some early day.

Sept. 29th we took our team, and bidding adieu to friends we started for home. We lost Bro. Marsh's valise, which hindered us a day and a half, and made us too late to preach at Greenfield or Arbor Hill, but we arrived in time at Pen Centre. Bro. Marsh spoke to a full house, we trust to the good of the brethren. Oct. 3d, I was barely able to speak in the forenoon, but I felt better in the evening, and spoke with great liberty. I had a slight chill before morning, but arose refreshed and prepared to start on our journey. Here I had hoped to see old Bro. Abijah Hubbell's children, but they had moved off. This is a beautiful country. I like it very much.

Oct. 4th closed our appointments, so we passed toward home fast as possible, stopping as we could get accommodation, which was sometimes in a house, sometimes in the buggy. At Nevada, Stony Co., I tried to find friends who had written to me to come there, but could not. We went on to Marshalltown. I wish I could exchange my house for one here; it is so near the centre of the State. I like the country here very much.

I was not on the committee, but we thought best to look as we went through for the benefit of those interested in the Union State Conference, as this was a place spoken of to lease grounds for the campmeeting. We found most excellent ground near the cemetery, if it could be obtained. We hope said committee will secure it.

Oct. 7th, we arrived at Bro. Joseph Allard's in Tama Co. I had been here before, and it seemed like getting home. Oct. 8th, about three o'clock, I awoke Bro. Marsh and told him I was needed home—my family was in need of help. So we went on, and found a welcome at Cedar Falls. Oct. 9th, they wished me to stay and preach, so I telegraphed home and got an answer to come as soon as I could.

Oct. 10th, got home. Want pressed my family, yet they were all well, for which I thank the Lord. My warning was not in vain.

Thus I close my report of the southwestern trip. It was an interesting time in the Lord. Had prejudice to contend with, yet I was strongly invited to return, and trust I may be able to do so before spring. For awhile I must care for my family, and when their wants are supplied I shall be able to go forth to lead souls to Christ. Brn., pray for me and mine, that we may be kept unto his heavenly kingdom.

"TILL HE COME."

In the church-yard of Hurstmonceux, not far from the venerable ruin of that name, is a short quotation from Scripture on the tomb-stone of one well known and loved, whose life is so graphically pictured in "The Annals of a Quiet Life." "Till He come," was the simple yet pregnant inscription. Well did it express the faith, hope and love of the departed.

"Till He come." The body sleeps in the quiet grave until that day when the Lord shall come. "If we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." What a glorious hope!

Death is not the hope of the christian. Falling asleep is but an incident. We look for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall change our body of humiliation, that it may be fashioned like unto his body of glory.

There is a great difference between holding the doctrine of the second coming and "waiting for his Son from heaven." One may hold the doctrine very clearly and intellectually, nay, combatively, and be but a tinkling cymbal. "To wait for his Son from heaven," as did the Thessalonians, manifests a power of walk and conversation and holiness. "He that has this hope in him purifieth himself even as he is pure." "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless."—Restitution.

HYMN.

Chosen by Sr. Bliss, of Wilbraham, Mass, and read at her funeral.

Thy Word, my gracious God, I love;
It is my chief delight;
A lamp to guide my wayward feet
To realms of endless light.

Oh, let me still new beauties see,
And fit me for the sight;
And as the day of God draws nigh,
Let evening tide be light.

And should I lie in death's embrace
Before that day shall dawn,
Oh, may I rise in glad surprise
On resurrection morn.

But if it be thy will, my God,
That I should live to see
The bright appearance of my Lord
In life and victory—

May I with all the living saints
Go forth to meet my King,
And clothed in immortality,
His praise forever sing.

OBSCURED BY FOG.—Mr. Jay relates that a man from the country once said to him: "I was exceedingly alarmed this morning, sir. It was early and very foggy. I was on a lonely road, and thought I saw a strange monster. It seemed to move, but I could not discern its form. The more I looked the more I became alarmed. As I approached it I saw it was a man; and as I came close to him I saw it was my brother John." Ah, could we get out of the fogs and darkness, how often would we discover that the strange monster about us, the "nondescripts" of our imagination, are our own christian brethren.—Selected.

ENTIRE sanctification is the entire consecration of one's self to God, and his entire cleansing from sin, qualifying him for the service of God, to which he is entirely consecrated.

NO MORE LONELY.

T. S. SCOVILLE.

I see by the letters in the Crisis that some of the believers in the speedy coming of Christ, who live isolated from the brethren, say they feel lonely. I will here give them a receipt for its cure.

I too have felt it, and for years have mourned secretly because there seemed so few that were wise, so few that understood this, so few that considered their latter end; like David, who, in looking forward to our day, prophetically exclaimed as above—"O that men were wise, that they understood this, that they would consider their latter end." That they would consider that they lived in the last days of the age, or the world, as we now behold it, just before the time when Jesus is to "make all things new."

Readers, are we ready to be made over new by the blood of Christ, and changed to new creatures, to meet the great event of the Lord's coming? or will we cling to this old world that perishes? Come to Christ! Be saved by his precious, free salvation, and be made over new. The choice is for you, and you will assuredly make it one way or the other.

But, to our subject—the question of loneliness. I mourn to-day because my church and its leader do not appreciate the situation,—because there is no church among the twenty thousand people of our city that teach the doctrine of the immediate coming of the Lord. Well, "blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted"; and this is a great source of comfort to the isolated and lonely.

But, brethren, I found that I must go to work in Christ's cause; and I have been publishing and circulating tracts everywhere I could, all over the United States, by agents and voluntary help; and I find the work grows on my hands, and my lonely feeling is giving way, and I feel to rejoice in Paul's glorious hope, and do not mourn so deeply over the wickedness of the wicked. David says—"Fret not thyself because of evil doers." So I try not to fret or worry, as in olden time, but to work, work, WORK.

If every lonely christian in all this land will send to you for tracts, and pay for them, or send to me for papers and tracts, with the postage or expressage money enclosed, I will forward to them as long as I have any or can get means to print them.

The world does not need mourners (although there is cause enough for it) half as badly as it needs workers. Hand out your tracts, or little paper which is better, and say ten words with it. I find thousands look at me more than they do the tract or paper when I say to them—"Here are some new views; would you like to see the future? Something, sir, you can find no where else. Something to take your thoughts while waiting, sir." Perhaps going into a depot of waiting people I simply say—"Something new, sir? Time is short, let us improve it," each time giving a tract or paper. They will take the paper, look at me, then seeing I am in earnest they look at the paper, and many times I have had a whole steamboat full reading at one time, or five or six car loads. Six out of ten persons reading intently for an hour on the great events of our times. Many come to me after reading and want to talk about it. But the seed is sown, and only the God of glory can tell how much fruit will come of it.

There is no time for lonely feelings, no time for grumbling, no time even for mourning. It is work that will pay, and pay well too. Send to the Crisis, or to my address, for tracts and circulars for circulation, and put in the freight or postage money at least, then you will be more interested.

THE CURE OF SPIRITUALISM.

From the fruits of modern Spiritualism christian people very wisely concluded that all its preternatural phenomena which cannot be traced to the agency of the devil's human journeymen, are caused by the presence of his Satanic majesty himself. A fact demonstrating the truth of this conclusion may be of great service to those who have to contend with this delusion.

Dr. Cullis of Boston, immediately after the death of his first wife, began to receive letters in her handwriting, style of thought and expression, and bearing her signature, with characteristic peculiarities so minute that neither the Doctor himself nor the friends of his deceased wife could distinguish them from her letters written when living. These missives, full of tenderness, good counsel, and predictions of some great christian work which he was to do in the future (for this was before he began his so-called faith-work), came quite often during several weeks. During this time, regularly, at two o'clock in the morning, he would be awakened by three distinct raps on the table.

One morning, while awake, at about four o'clock, he was suddenly startled by a bird singing in his room. He arose, looked about the room but found no bird. This bird song now became quite a regular phenomenon in his bed-chamber. Once, while sitting in his office in conversation with a gentleman, the bird-song suddenly startled them, as if just above their heads. The gentleman, turning his eyes upward toward the top of the window, said, "You have a canary here, have you?" He was told that there was none in the house.

By this time Dr Cullis says that the thing began to be annoying. His friends who were cognizant of the facts advised him to call in a medium, and establish communication with his departed wife. But instead of this, he carried the whole matter to the Lord, on his knees, in these words: "O, Lord Jesus, I am thine. I desire to do thy will perfectly. If these strange things are from thee, I am ready to go into them and receive all the truth which thou dost wish to communicate. But, if they are of the devil, put an immediate stop to them. Amen!" People who have strong faith are remarkable for the brevity of their prayers. After this short prayer the letters, the table rappings and the bird-songs suddenly ceased, and have never been repeated.

Let all christians who are similarly tempted to converse with the dead follow the example of this good man, and ask God's opinion of resorting to necromancy, instead of the law and testimony.—Rev. Daniel Steele, D. D.

FRUIT IN PREHISTORIC TIMES.—Mr. Messikomer has discovered, in making explorations of the cities of ancient European lakes, the fossil remains of many of the primitive inhabitants. Cooking utensils and other articles are found in abundance in the same localities. In many places the food of the ancient inhabitants is found in considerable quantities, preserved in a fossil state. It is an interesting fact, which corroborates the statements of history, that the remains of food found are almost invariably of a vegetable character, being chiefly fruits. This observation is so general that scientists have decided that the primitive inhabitants of those regions were vegetarians.—Ex.

HOME AND HEALTH.

WHAT IS THE CAUSE OF COLDS?

The real cause of a cold is disturbance of the circulation. Changes of temperature are the most active agents in producing such disturbances, and so colds are most often attributed to exposure to cold in some way. This general dread of cold and cold air has very little foundation. Colds may be induced either by sudden transition from warm air to cool air, or from cool air to warm air. Going from a heated lecture room in a state of perspiration into the cold air out-of-doors, without sufficiently increasing the clothing, will almost always induce a severe cold. Going into a very warm room from the frosty air of a winter's morning will also produce a cold. Unequal exposure of the body to cold, is the most common cause of colds. This is the reason why draughts are so productive of colds. If the whole body were equally exposed to a draught, no cold would be taken. People who are clothed equably do not take cold when riding in the wind, in an open vehicle, even in winter. A very severe cold may result from riding in a railway carriage with the cold air striking the back of the neck from a small opening in the window. Colds are almost sure to result from remaining long in an impure atmosphere and then suddenly passing to a pure but cold one. A violent cold may result from getting the feet wet and then allowing them to become cold, when no cold would be taken if the whole body had been wetted.

In all of these cases the cold results from a contraction of the blood-vessels upon the surface of the body, or a part of it, occasioned by cold, and the congestion of the blood-vessels of internal organs, especially of the mucous membrane of the lungs and air passages. This congestion of the mucous membrane of the nose induces sneezing, which is thus an indication that a cold has been taken.

HOW TO PREVENT COLDS.

Live in the open air as much as possible. Soldiers do not take cold. Hunters and Indians, though exposed to the most inclement weather, do not suffer from colds. Frequent bathing with tepid water, accompanied by vigorous friction of the surface of the body, is an excellent preventive of colds. Avoid exposure. Upon going from a heated room into a cold one, or the open air, put on an extra coat, or a shawl or cloak. Never sit down in a cool place when in a state of perspiration. Even in summer there is danger of taking cold in this way. Do not sit down upon the cold, damp earth in the spring or autumn. Keep away from the fire upon first coming in from out-of-doors in winter. Live in well-ventilated rooms. Instead of sleeping with the cold air pouring down upon the head from a single opening in a window, draw the bed into the middle of the room, open all the windows and doors, and sleep with the whole body in a current of pure, fresh, invigorating air. Of course this might be overdone, in the coldest weather; every person must use good common sense for himself. If the feet are wetted, remove the wet shoes or boots and stockings at the earliest moment possible. Soak the feet for half an hour in hot water, dip them into cool water for a minute or two, and then wipe and rub them dry.

HOW TO CURE A COLD.

1. Eat little or nothing for a day or two. The popular adage, "Stuff a cold and starve a fever," is without foundation.

2. Rest. Sleep all that is possible. No time is lost in such a course. Timely rest may save serious illness.

3. Take some kind of hot bath, which will start the perspiration freely. Long sweating is debilitating; only start the action of the skin. The foot-bath combined with the sitz-bath, the wet-sheet pack, the vapor-bath, and the hot-air bath are alike suitable. These are severally described in works for sale at this office. After the bath go to bed. Drink freely of water, the purer the better. A day or two of such treatment will usually "break" the hardest cold, saving the patient several weeks of pain and annoyance, if not from chronic disease. Try it. The trouble is less than you think; and the results are splendid.—Health Reformer.

SYMPTOMS OF DISEASE.—One is never well when he feels the following symptoms: Thirst before breakfast and after tea, cold feet and hands, sour taste in the mouth, dimness of vision, headache, pains anywhere, sleepiness, feeling of dirt in the eyes, heat in the ears, noise in the head, loss of appetite, greedy to eat, nausea of the stomach, pains in the bowels, slightly sore throat, numbness of the limbs, loss of smell and taste, dots or specks before the eyes. On appearance of these things abstain from eating and drinking as nearly as possible, a day or two, which will remove all the trouble.

FOUL air, filthy and unventilated streets, and uncleanliness in every form, breed vice and crime as well as disease and deformity.

A LITTLE WHILE.

A little while with tides of dark and light
The moon shall fill;
Warm autumn's gold be changed to shrouding white
And winter's chill.
A little while shall tender human flowers
In beauty blow;
And ceaselessly through shade and sunny hours
Death's harvest grow.
A little while shall tranquil planets speed
Round central flame;
New empires spring and pass, new names succeed
And lapse from fame.
A little while shall cold star-tapers burn
Through time's brief night;
Then shall my soul's beloved One return
With dayspring bright.

How oft in golden dreams I see Him stand,
I list His voice,
As winning largess from His lifted hand
The poor rejoice;
But waking bears that vision dear away,
My better part,
And leaves me to this pale and empty day,
This longing heart.
I cannot see thee, but I love thee. Oh,
Thine eyes that read
The deepest secrets of the spirit know
'Tis love indeed!
A little while; but, ah, how long it seems!
My Jesus, come,
Surpass the rapture of my sweetest dreams,
And take me home!

THOUGHTS ON THE 4TH OF JOHN.

WM. SHEPHERD.

This chapter of John is certainly fraught with some of the most sublime and important truths the Savior ever uttered; and the circumstances under which they were spoken render them deeply impressive.

They were first proclaimed by our blessed Lord to the woman of Samaria near the city of Sychar, at the place called "Jacob's well." We shall but briefly notice here four points, which appear the most important. The first is the "living water," which we regard as essential to christian experience.

It was characteristic of our Lord's preaching, whenever occasion would admit, to make use of natural things for the purpose of illustrating spiritual things, as in the case before us, using the water of Jacob's well as an appropriate symbol of the blessings of the gospel. This element in nature is always made use of in Scripture to represent the life-giving influences of the Holy Ghost upon the human heart. And inasmuch as man could not subsist any length of time deprived of water, so he could not subsist in his moral and spiritual nature without partaking of this "living water," but must eternally perish. It is as necessary that he should drink of this water, which will produce in him "a well of water, springing up into everlasting life," and thereby secure to him an endless existence, as it is that he drink of natural water to sustain his present life.

In these waters there is a peculiar feature of difference. Jesus says to the woman—"Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst." Here you perceive all who drink of this water thirst no more, but are constituted wells of themselves, and are able to dispense the living streams to others. This agrees with what Jesus says—"In the last day, that great day of the feast [typical of the closing scenes of this age], Jesus stood and cried, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. And he that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive.)" John 7: 37-39. In reference to this life-giving power of the gospel, may we all say with the woman, "Give me this water, that I thirst not."

The second point comes in here—"Go, call thy husband, and come hither." She answered, "I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband; for thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband." The woman marvelled and said, "Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet." Here is revealed the presence and omniscience of the Messiah.

The third point is that true and acceptable worship is of a purely spiritual character, and is not confined to any time or place. This is inferred from what Jesus says to the woman in their still further conversation. She says—"Our fathers worshiped in this mountain [Mount Moriah]; and ye say that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship." (The Jews said there was no other place to offer sacrifice but at Jerusalem, and such was the fact under the Jewish economy.) But our Lord reveals another very important truth, that both this manner and matter of service is to be abrogated—entirely superseded; all rituals and ceremonies are to be put aside, and a new order of service was about to be introduced. Through these rites, forms and ceremonies, and a human priesthood, men hardly knew what they were worshiping; and Jesus here observes, "Ye worship ye know not what"; and then he declares, "Woman, believe me, the hour cometh when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father. . . . The hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshipers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth; for the Father seeketh such to worship him. God is a Spirit"; i. e., God is a spiritual being; not that he is devoid of "body, parts, or passions," as he possesses all these elements and attributes; but with these he is spiritual, recognizing the thoughts and intents of the heart.

God being a Spirit in this sense, they that worship him "must worship him in spirit and in truth."

The ceremonial economy and stated place of service was literally abolished at the time of the crucifixion, when "the vail of the temple was rent in twain." He nailed these things to his cross, and, having spoiled principalities and powers, he made a show of them openly, and opened up a new and living way, whereby we have access to the Father by the one Spirit through Jesus Christ the one mediator between God and man. Blessed be God for this beautiful, simple way of service;—for the throne of grace, the "mercy seat," made accessible unto us by virtue of the passion, resurrection and ascension of our blessed Lord. We can now come to God without wading through a labyrinth of ceremonies and forms. We have only to knock, and the door will open; we have only to seek, and we shall find; we have only to ask, and it shall be given. We can now come boldly, or with humble confidence unto the throne of grace, and find mercy and grace to help in every time of need.

Again, not only were these ceremonies and rites of religion here abolished and thrown aside, but the particular places and stated times where services were held were also shown to form no part of Christianity. Splendid buildings professedly dedicated to the service of God, are no more sacred than the lowliest cot in the wilderness.

The prophet also has made this clear as to individual worship in respect to time, place, and manner (Isa. 66: 12). Jesus has also clearly pointed in Matt. 18: 20, the place, time, and method of worship in an associated capacity. "Where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst of them."

It makes no difference where or when it is, whether it be midnight, cock-crowing, or in the morning; on the mountain-top, in the valley, the crowded city, or the lonely wilderness; whether in the palace, or humble hamlet;—it is where you meet together in his "name"; which implies meeting together in the New Testament order, and worshiping the Father in Spirit and in truth.

Peter has followed directly in this order and nature of Divine service, and makes (instead of the material and inanimate structure the house of God) the body of believers the house, or temple of God. "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house, an holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices, holy and acceptable unto God." 1 Pet. 2: 5. (Compare Eph. 2: 22, Heb. 3: 6.)

The last point we shall now briefly notice is Theory vs. Experience.

We find that after the conversation with Jesus the woman "left her water-pot and went her way into the city," and reported what she had heard and seen, and then inquired of the Samaritans, "Is not this the Christ?" And many of them believed on him for the saying of the woman which testified, "He told me all that ever I did." Here was theory. They gave an intellectual assent to Christ being the Messiah, but they were unchanged in heart; they had some confidence in the assertions of the woman, that what she declared was true, and concluded that this must be the promised One of whom they had heard, and were expecting about that time; but they were not satisfied with this state of the case. They started at once and "went out of the city, and came unto him." They were in earnest, as all men should be in a matter so important, and they were determined to know for themselves; and from a subsequent statement to the woman we are led to infer that they acquired the information they desired in their interview with Christ, and that they were satisfied that it was the Christ. They received him, and heartily believed on him, and were converted both in heart and mind, as we find they strongly urged him to "tarry with them," and he, complying with their request, "abode there two days." They said to the woman, "Now we believe, not because of thy saying, for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Savior of the world."

They had heard him themselves, and believed in the heart. Are we in a position to hear him to-day as those Samaritans? Yes, "He that hath an ear to hear, let him hear what the Spirit saith." Jesus speaks unto us to-day. It is our privilege to listen to his voice. "My sheep hear my voice, and they follow me, and I give unto them eternal life." "Verily I say unto you, He that heareth my words and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life." Jesus speaks unto us now from heaven—"I am he that liveth and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore, Amen, and have the keys [power] of [over] hell [hades] and of death." Let us listen to his voice; let his words sink into our hearts, that we may believe unto righteousness; for "with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation." Amen.

Recapitulation. We must of absolute necessity become a participant in that "living water" of which Jesus speaks, which contains symbolically the elements of a future and eternal life, which represents the graces of the Spirit of God—the blessings of the gospel, without which we have no well-founded hope of a future existence.

Jesus Christ is essentially divine in his nature, possessing the attributes of divinity, such as omnipresence, omniscience, etc. The order of divine service is of the most simple character possible, and is spiritual in its nature, no way connected with rites, priestly orders, temple worship, or gaudy ceremonies, but consists in the offering of the soul—the very heart and affections, to God, as a whole burnt offering through Jesus Christ, who is the consecrated priest to officiate and mediate between God in heaven and man on earth; and by virtue of his sacrifice, "being delivered for our offences and raised again for our justification," our humble service is rendered acceptable.

We can possess a theory of religion without any well grounded hope. There is a wide difference between theory and experience. The first may make a great show in religion, in gaudy forms and ceremonies, while true experience may assume no prominent position. It is of the greatest moment that we possess an experimental knowledge of Christ. "That we may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable to his death." "And this is eternal life, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

ISAIAH 40: 1.

"Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God.'.

J. A. CARGILE.

O how much God's careworn and tempest-tossed children need this comfort. These precious words are sweet this morning to me. With a heavy burden on my heart, I opened my Bible to read, thinking I would spend the day in reading, fasting, and praying the Lord to give grace sufficient to pass all these fiery trials, and to stand soon before the King in his beauty. The first thing, on opening the blessed book, my eyes fell on the above passage. Tears gushed from my eyes as I in silence prayed—O Father, give me this comfort now! My eyes followed the sweet lines from veres 5 to 11—"And the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together; for the mouth of the Lord hath spoken it. The voice said Cry, and he said, what shall I cry? All flesh is grass, and all the goodliness thereof is as the flower of the field. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, because the Spirit of the Lord bloweth upon it. Surely the people is grass. The grass withereth, the flower fadeth, but the word of our God shall stand forever. O Zion, that bringeth good tidings, get thee up into the high mountain. O Jerusalem, that bringeth good tidings, lift up thy voice with strength; lift it up; be not afraid; say unto the cities of Judah, Behold your God. Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him; behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him."

How timely these blessed words are to my burdened soul this day. He is coming to do his glorious work, a part of which will be "to comfort all that mourn; to appoint unto them that mourn in Zion; to give unto them beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness, that they might be called the planting of the Lord, that he might be glorified." Isa. 60: 2, 3. My heart responds—Yea, Lord, hasten the time.

These burdens, how discouraging to the minister of Jesus, who really feels the "woe," as I think I do. How Satan works to pull down all our labors. Only a few days ago a dancing professor, at whose house I had tried to preach, said to me, "When are you coming back to preach for us?" I replied, "When you quit dancing." How it made me feel that I had spent labor in vain when he said, "Prove to me that there is harm in it."

Here comes news on another hand that a preacher had gone to a party and played "snap." Then comes trouble to my almost bleeding heart. For a few days I have had the sorest trials of life. Satan has said to me, "Now see how it goes. Other denominations do these things, and you thought you could build up a people to live too holy to do such things; and now if I were you I would quit trying to preach." At one time when he had almost "out winded" me, and had me battling just as Bro. Harding did on the Penobscott river, these cheering words came to mind—"And the Redeemer shall come to Zion, and unto them that turn from transgression in Jacob, saith the Lord." Isa. 69: 20. Bless the name of our God for the promise that in the kingdom "the days of thy mourning shall be ended." Isa. 60: 20.

Dear fellow pilgrims, we are amid the perils of the last days. Satan will get all he can to turn from Jesus. To the beloved who have been, in an evil hour, tempted to say "Why, there is no harm in it," I would say, had you not better be praying than playing or dancing? God knows I love you, and want you to be in the kingdom. If you knew that Jesus would come at the dawning of to-morrow's morning, would you feel willing to spend to-night in a social party? Would you not prefer a prayer-meeting?

"The grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world, looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works." Titus 2: 11—14.

Let me beseech you, dear ones, yield no more to the snare of the devil, but cling to the cross. "Return unto me, for I have redeemed thee." Isa. 44: 22. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith the Lord." To the churches—Grace be with you all. O pray for for me.

WORDS OF CHEER.

O. A. DAMON.

In this world of sin and sorrow how many there are suffering with heartache. A feeling of wretchedness takes possession of the soul when disappointment and sorrow have quenched the light on the inner shrine; when hopes deferred have made the heart sick, and we long to lie down and give up the struggle. This I call heartache.

I have seen it stamped so plainly on the countenances of youth and age, that I have longed to tell them of the great Panacea, and where to find it. It is simply this: Do not live wholly for self. Give words of cheer. The rich or poor, high or low can do this, and a blessing will fall on your own souls. Interest yourself in those around you; do not sit down stony, and dead, and cold, and fold your hands in idleness, or waste your precious moments in finding fault with fate. Never let an opportunity pass of doing good. The more earnest you become in trying to alleviate the woes of others the sooner you will forget your own; and flowers will bloom along your path where before it was only waste. With love to God and your fellow men pass on your way; lift the fallen, cheer the faint hearted, and help them to gain confidence in themselves and Heaven.

How many a man or woman has been heard to say—Oh, if I only had been blest with a true-hearted friend to counsel me, I should not have entered the path of sin; but no one seemed to take any interest in me; there seemed no opposing power to the siren voice that led me on, and so I fell! God pity such, and help us to do our whole duty!

In this good work none need neglect their own families, or interfere with other duties. The poor you have ever with you, and you may do them good at any time. Give, and have a blessed assurance that what you give to the poor you are lending to the Lord, and he is able to repay you with interest. Often the most sterling qualities of virtue and honor are to be found among the lowly poor.

Few fully realize what a world of good kindness can do. To the despondent soul it acts like the sunlight to the plant that hitherto has been kept in darkness. It causes it to grow and bloom.

To the sick it is often better than medicine. When friends go to the bedside of the sick with a cheerful face and hopeful words, it inspires hope within them. It is sweet to know that the eyes of the sick watch for our coming, and brighten at our approach.

Many a man or woman might become useful members of society, if they had encouragement; but they have lost all confidence in their ability, and we, by well directed efforts and kindly sympathy, may help them. Then give words of cheer; scatter them broadcast; and in eternity we shall know that the seed was not sown in vain.

WORKING FOR JESUS.

C. MENDENHALL.

If our object is the acquisition of wealth or knowledge, or fame, or any other thing temporal, we make use of the best means possible to gain the desired end. If we are working to secure political ascendancy for ourselves or for others, their virtues and claims are ever upon our lips. We are not satisfied simply with the declamations of some orators who have espoused the cause, but we engage in individual conversation with friends and acquaintances, talking "the measure," "the platform," or "the candidate" at every opportunity.

But when it comes to that greater object, the noble work of saving sinners, the lips of the fluent conversationalist are closed. He who could talk politics for hours, to any one who would give him hearing, has nothing to say for Jesus. He may perhaps sit idly by and criticise those who are filled with love to fallen humanity, work with zeal, and step boldly out from the dead formalism of that sort of godliness which lacks the power thereof.

It is time that christians became aroused to a sense of their duty. There is a work for every child of God to engage in; that of pointing men to Jesus.

Preaching has its office work, but it avails little unless there is personal effort to accompany it. In order to work for Jesus we must be his in the fullest sense of the word; we must realize that men are worth saving, and that we must do our part of the work. Many professors cannot engage in this "hand to hand" work, because they have not been living right; they are inconsistent, hence, worthless.

The Lord wants men who know what it is to believe, who know experimentally the purifying effects of the blood of the Lamb,—men who are the Lord's, and his alone; full of the spirit; men who have the love of God shed abroad in their hearts. Such persons, feeling their weakness, yet knowing the power of God, do not labor in vain.

At first we admit it is a cross to timid christians, to go into a mixed audience in time of "inquiry meetings," but there is a rich blessing sure to follow. It is glorious work. It strengthens us. Sinners feel that we are in earnest, that we mean what we say, and invariably treat us, at least, civilly.

These hasty thoughts have been suggested by reading Bro. Grant's editorial upon "Inquiry meetings." Every one should read it, and act accordingly. The plan is no uncertain experiment, but is a decided success, resulting to the glory of God. We have seen it in operation, and it far exceeds anything we have ever met with.

Christian reader, the time has come for work. There is a woe pronounced against those who are at ease in Zion. Stir thyself, sluggish one! Go labor for perishing sinners! Talk to men of Christ in loving words; let them feel that you are interested in their welfare; that you want them to become, not proselytes, but christians, and you will be surprised at the grand results.

If the church would thus work, no special effort would be needed at stated periods, but men would be coming into the fold at all times. The church is not organized simply to meet together for comforting one another, to get up a good feeling, to do ourselves good and neglect others; but it should ever be active in helping others up out of perditions overwhelming wave;—to the secure rock—Christ Jesus.

Let every professed disciple, "examine himself," buckle on the whole armor, and be fruitful, ever abounding in the work of the Lord.

TWO WAYS.

We are told in God's Word, that there are two ways in which we may travel. One a broad, the other a narrow way. One leading to destruction, the other to life. And while we have the privilege of choosing which of these ways we will travel in, we are compelled to take one of them. We are not left to say I will not walk in either of these ways; I will seek a way of my own; no, we are obliged to be in one way or the other.

Let us mark the contrast. We see a broad way, thronged with much of the wealth and show of the world; gay pleasure-seekers are there, to all outward appearance, they seem to be happy. The way looks bright; flowers and glittering toys are on either side; we hear the merry laugh and gay music of these travelers. But we stop and ask, where are they going? this road that seems to hold out so many inducements, where does it lead to? Ah! my friends, it leadeth to destruction. The pleasures it affords are not lasting, they are but for a season.

The other is a narrow way, so narrow that it will admit of no shows. Few travel that road, few in comparison to the vast multitudes that throng the broad way. They seem to have but few pleasures, at times the way seems rough, and thorns pierce their tender flesh, but it leadeth unto life. Glory be to God, it is a way of safety. And although the dark clouds sometimes gather over the travelers, they have a guide, who understands the way, and they will be guided safely through.

Dear reader, in which way are you traveling. Some people think there is a middle way, they have a way of their own marked out. But the Bible tells us of only two, and we are either in the broad road that leadeth to destruction, or we are in the narrow way that leadeth unto life.

I have wondered if it were not possible for people to be mistaken, for them to imagine themselves in the narrow way, when they are going down the broad way. We turn to the Word of God again, and find these words, "not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven." We are told that they will tell of their works, that they have prophesied in the name of the Lord, that they have cast out devils, and done many wonderful works. O! thereply to all this—"Depart from me, ye that work iniquity, I never knew you."

It means something to follow Jesus, to walk in the narrow way, taking all the consequence. It is not a popular way; the humble follower of Jesus does not receive much honor from the world. He is seeking constantly to walk humbly in the narrow way, finding these words with a thus saith the Lord. "Stand ye in the ways and see, and ask for the old paths, which is the good way, and walk therein, and ye shall find rest for your souls." So there is a way in which we may walk, where we shall find rest for our souls, and what christian has not experienced unrest.

Let us dear reader, seek for this way. Ask for the old paths, and thus obtain this rest. "And a highway shall be there, and a way, and it shall be called the way of holiness; the unclean shall not pass over it; but it shall be for those; the wayfaring man though a fool, shall not err therein."

"No lion shall be there, nor any ravenous beast shall go up thereon; it shall not be found there, but the redeemed shall walk there."—Christian Standard.

OF WHAT PROFIT IS KNOWLEDGE?

"A man," said Dr. Guthrie, "may know all about the rocks, and his heart remain as hard as granite or adamant; he may know all about the winds, their courses and their currents, and be the sport of passions as turbulent and fierce as they; he may know all about the stars, and his fate be the meteor's, that blazes for a little while, and then is lost, quenched in eternal night; he may know all about the sea and be a stranger to the peace of God; his soul may resemble its troubled waters, which, lashed by storms and ruffled by every breath of wind, cannot rest, but throws up mire and dirt; he may know how to rule the spirit of the elements, and not know how to rule his own; he may know how to turn aside the deadly thunderbolt, but not the wrath of an angry God; you may know all, in short, that man has discovered or his skill invented, but, if you do not know Jesus Christ, if your eyes have never been opened to a saving knowledge of the truth, what will that avail you, when they are fixed in the sockets, glazed by the hand of death? Equally by the death-bed of the greatest philosopher, as of the hardest miser that ever ground the faces of the poor, there is room and reason for the solemn question: What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world—all its learning, its wealth, its pleasures and honors—and lose his own soul?"—Restitution.

ATONEMENT.

A. S. BABCOCK.

I saw a request from Bro. D. B. Hunt that some brother in the ministry should write an article on the "atonement" made by the Lord Jesus Christ, and asking some questions in reference to it. Permit me to drop a few thoughts in connection with that subject, as it is the most interesting of all subjects pertaining to man's present and future being.

The original design was, in the creation of man, that he was to dwell on the earth, pure, and not a dying being. This seems clear, for God had prepared the requisite means to that end, and placed it within his reach, with all the necessary instruction for obedience. It also seems that man was left to form his character, whether it should be loyal or otherwise; the results of either course placed clearly before him. His choice we are all partakers of, which is death; and this means all that the word implies, and it has visited the young and old alike, whether saint or sinner, for the last six thousand years. The child that never sinned, according to the similitude of Adam's transgression, has not escaped the penalty—Dust thou art, and to dust must return.

Our Lord saw this, and his heart went out in sympathy for the innocent ones. He proposes to take their place, or die in their behalf, that he might have the privilege of bringing them back to life. Had they gone directly to heaven, as taught by some, the atonement could not affect them, for sin could not be imputed where there was no transgression.

In this arrangement there seems to be another important one, which is, that the way was open to all who had sinned as Adam did, to secure a pardon for all their sins, and, with the little ones, possess the earth made for Adam and his posterity.

The Scriptures clearly teach that the ungodly also will be brought forth. They were, by the death of Christ, relieved from that eternity of death that would have been the lot of our race had no provision been made to save any part of them; but as this has been done for those that have no sin, the offer has been freely made to all. Life and death have been set before them on terms honorable to all. Invitation after invitation has been given, and last of all Death, with all its horrors, has been set before them, and they must experience as a reward for their own folly and neglect.

I think the atonement has already been completed, unconditional salvation secured for all the infant race that have or may go down to dust. Gospel salvation is secured to believers and them alone; and it is all based on conditions. See Mark 16: 15, 16. The conditions are fully set forth in the Word. All those who refuse the terms can experience no good on account of the atonement, further than a relief from the Adamic death. They are to be brought forth at the judgment day, to behold the face of Him who had manifested so great an interest in fallen man as to leave all the glory he had with the Father, subject himself to the scoffs of a wicked world, and end his life here in the most ignominious manner. They will realize the ways they have erred, and will wish the atonement had not been made. John, the Revelator, heard them cry for rocks and mountains to fall upon them, and hide them from a face once so full of love and pity. That day is near at hand. A few more rising and setting suns will bring us to it.

But it will be a happy day for the faithful and obedient; the good of the land will be their's forever. God's dead men shall awake to life; Job's eyes will see the King in his beauty; Abraham's city will no longer be a thing looked for; the saints will no longer cry, How long? The angel may now be on the cloud with the sharp sickle, waiting the joyful command to gather the harvest of the earth. Sinner, hear now the voice of warning, and flee to Christ ere it is too late.

SOLEMN QUESTIONS TO PROFESSING CHRISTIANS.

Are you reconciled to God? Can you approach him as a friend? Do you love him as a father? Do you obey him as a master? Do you love his Word, his people and his day? In vain do you profess to love him, if you do nothing for him. Are you, like Jesus, going about doing good? Do you visit the sick, pity the poor, and seek the salvation of all around you?

Do you daily live under the impression, I am responsible?—I am responsible for my time, talents, and opportunities to do good? Are you growing in grace? Is the heart hard, or soft? Is Christ precious? Are you willing to receive all he lays upon you, and to do all he bids? to make a complete Savior of him, imitating his example, as well as trusting in his blood? Are you prepared for death? You may soon be summoned. How much better to be summoned from the field of labor, than from the bed of sloth. Work while it is called to-day; "the night cometh when no man can work." Are you looking for the glorious appearing of the Lord Jesus, who will soon come to be glorified in his saints, and to reward every man according to his works?—Selected by Mrs. Emery Marston, Ashland, N. H.

SHADOWS OF LIFE.

S. S. BREWER.

I have of late very frequently let my mind dwell npon the reply of Jacob to Pharaoh concerning his age: "The days of the years of my pilgrimage are an hundred and thirty years. Few and evil have the days of the years of my life been, and I have not attained unto the days of the life of my fathers in the days of their pilgrimage."

How far short of that period are mine, and yet amid the multitudinous diseases in these evil days, how few amid the teeming population exceed threescore and ten; and then, as expressed by David, "Yet is their strength labor and sorrow."

Oh, how deeply my heart is affected and saddened as the Crisis, week after week, bears the notices of the death of so many of the loving and the loved of those who were led forth in the great movement of the ever-memorable year 1843, when the truths that have distinguished us as a people thrilled all their mental powers with delight in the expectation of seeing, being like and ever with the Lord.

There are at the present time but few remaining, and seldom do they have the opportunity of greeting each other, and waking to precious memory the deep, heartfelt christian sympathy preceding and following our disappointment. Those who with smiling faces and extended arms stood ready to grasp the friendly hand and welcome us in the name of the Lord, are the greater part fallen asleep. Happy homes, that were once vocal with our good stirring songs—"The clouds at length are breaking," and, "How long, O Lord, our Savior," are now deserted of their once hospitable inmates. Eyes that beamed with love, faces that were wreathed with smiles of tenderest sympathy, hearts that glowed and burned with holy ecstasy, hands that were wide open, and ardently hastened to aid, strengthen and encourage us, are now cold, silent, and waiting for the Lord to return. Peace! peace to your precious dust.

"But, oh! beyond this shadow lamp,
Where all is bright and fair,
I know full well the dear old hands
Will palms of victory bear.
Where crystal streams, through endless years,
Flow over golden sands,
And where the old are young again,
I'll clasp immortal hands."

The infirmities of age have kept me confined more or less since early in the autumn, but I cherish the hope that if time continues till the warm season returns, I shall be able by the blessing of God to go forth again proclaiming the glad tidings of the coming One, and the preparation to meet him.

Dearly beloved, we are living in a time most evidently foretold in Holy Writ, when "the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great." Crimes of such enormous magnitude, with calamities of such appalling nature, seem to rush so precipitately upon each other, that we are often compelled to stand in mute astonishment, and ask the Lord in amazement to keep us in this trying hour when the powers of darkness are making their last terrible onslaught.

Nearly half a century has passed away since the Low Hampton farmer's message, in its gladly solemn tones, fell with delight upon mine ears, and led me to believe that in all probability I should long ere this have been like and with the Lord. I am still holding fast to the expectation of very soon seeing him coming in power and great glory.

Let me say to our friends scattered far and wide, among whom we have traveled and labored in years past, and among whom we have enjoyed many precious seasons, that my dear, dear wife is getting too feeble to travel but very little, and then it is quite an effort.

That form and voice, that once was strong,
Is growing feeble now,
For time and toil hath left their marks
On hand, and heart, and brow.

As fond memories of the past come into mind, and the noble company of the Advent pioneers appear before me, I am saddened at taking a survey of the depleted ranks, and the query of Zechariah comes to mind—"Your fathers, where are they?" Nearly all are sleeping, and the few that are tottering amid the shadows of the evening feel as did the Psalmist—"Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth. . . . Now also, when I am old and gray-headed, O God, forsake me not, until I have shewed thy strength unto this generation, and thy power to every one that is to come."

We are waiting, only waiting,
Till the sands of time are run;
When the morning, the glad morning,
Of eternal day shall dawn.

All the efforts of oratory and eloquence to paint the boasted progress of the present with a rosy tint, is but an insidious delusion. It is but as the hectic flush that glows and deepens, as the victim appproaches the moment of dissolution.

While I survey the abounding iniquity, the wrongs of oppressed virtue, the pent-up revenges of ages, and the seeming tendency to evil almost universal, I am led to cry in secret with the prophet, "O that thou wouldest rend the heavens, that thou wouldest come down." And with Dr. Watts we sometimes feel and sing—

"Faith longing shakes its caged wings,
And burns to meet thy flying throne."

Dearly beloved, let us amid all our trials hold fast our confidence. We need constant watchfulness, prayer and patience. Never, oh, never have I felt more deeply the need of divine assistance than of late. The shadows of the evening gather fast around us. The long-predicted time of trouble perceptibly approacheth, and with it the deliverance of every one that is written in the book.

"In thy fair book of life divine,
O God, inscribe my name!
There let it bear some humble part,
Through Christ the bleeding Lamb."

Your Bro., humbly expecting immortality at the revelation of the Just One.

HE who sows courtesy, reaps kindness.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION.

It is evident that there is a growing conviction among many of our brethren, that we, as an associated body of christians, need to have our churches more perfectly "set in order," according to the gospel, so that everything may be done "decently and in order." We are suffering confusion and defeat because we have sinned against God, in not only neglecting his commandments and examples given for the regulation of his churches, but many of us have argued—unwittingly doubtless—that they were not only useless, but a hindrance to christian growth and devotion. All we need to produce gospel discipline among ourselves is to make a practical application of the rules given in explicit language in the Scriptures, as manifested through inspired examples given by the apostolic church.

God's revealed rules require every associated body of worshipers or churches to appoint certain officers, as overseers or rulers, and to select such as have the ability to rule well "their own house." "For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the church of God?" Tim. 3: 5. Let none of our churches presume to disregard this solemn requirement of God, and think they will be justified while neglecting to keep these commandments.

When an important question came up which related to the interests of the entire body of believers, a call was made for the representative disciples of all parts, to assemble at Jerusalem and discuss and settle the matter for the faith and action of all the churches. This was not a casualty which had no reference to the future action of the church, but was evidently designed as a divine example, as were all the recorded events of the apostolic church, to be imitated by all generations of Christ's church. Some very honestly argue that general counsels and representative bodies of the church have been fountains of evil, and have generally opened the flood-gates of iniquity when they have been held; and for this reason conclude that it is not duty to hold them. To this we reply that every sacred institution of the gospel has been prostituted to the accomplishment of evil more than of good; praying, preaching, and even almsgiving have become fountains of crying sins. A great majority of the prayers offered in Christendom is evidently an abomination to God"; and yet this is no argument that God's instructions, giving directions to pray, are abrogated, and that his people should cease to pray. This fact only increases the necessity to pray, but to be careful that our prayers do not become an abomination to God, but a channel through which blessings may be drawn from him. Just so it is with church government; much of it has been political, worldly and wicked, but this only increases the importance that we labor to come up to the divine standard, and make united and continued efforts to establish pure gospel order, not only among our individual churches, but also among ourselves as an associated body of christian worshipers.

All questions and business, which relate to the general interests of the body, just as legitimately and scripturally require general consultation and action for the harmony and united effort of all the churches, as those relating to a single church require deliberation and an effort for its peace and harmony in transacting its local business.

The Advent Christian Association is designed to meet the gospel requirement of giving the privilege to all our churches, who may esteem it a privilege to do so, to come together, through their representatives, and discuss and determine upon all questions relating to the general interests and harmonious action of the whole body, united in the same faith and co-operating in the same christian work. The fundamental law, or Constitution, was designed to be so framed as to give all the churches, no matter where located, equal and practicable rights and privileges, so that the weak and isolated may be encouraged to expect all that equality, justice, and eternal truth may award to them.

What we want first of all in these christian associations is to accept of the precepts and examples of Christ and the apostles as our rules, instead of following the apostate churches who pattern after Cæsar instead of Christ. We want to incorporate in our entire action in this matter more gospel and less politics, more apostolic examples for our rules, and less parliamentary usage. A worldly church will adopt worldly rules, and a political church will become political wire-pullers; but the true church of Christ should depart from all these, and stand upon a higher plane, and act upon more noble and heavenly principles.

We do most devoutly pray that this subject of gospel church government may receive our most prayerful and earnest consideration, remembering that a predicted sign of the last days is a disposition to "despise government," which evidently relates to ecclesiastical as well as political government. We pray that God may give our State Conferences wisdom to guide them in this matter, so that they may act as becometh saints, rising above all party and selfish influences, and be sure and give every church a practicable privilege of being heard in the choice of Delegates to the A. C. Association.

We hope our brethren will pray much before they vote, and not consider the qualification of the tongue for the position of more importance than that of the heart. Elect men of God, full of the Holy Spirit, and your interests entrusted to them will be safe. The church needs men, in positions of trust, who are more accustomed to praying in the closet than disputing in legislative halls; men who have risen above party strife, personal and sectional interests, who can act upon noble christian principles, and can sacrifice personal preferences and interests for the public good. If we put on Christ, the divine nature will control us, which will seek for the benefit of all and the injury of none.

This is emphatically an age of strife and war, jealousy and confusion. All society is being tested as to its ability to sustain love, good-will and harmony. A factious spirit seems to be breaking up all of the long established orders of social life, religious and civil, so that this trial of christian character, as to its ability to maintain true christian love, harmony and fellowship, is one of the most severe tests of christian purity of heart that the age has manifested.

Brethren in Christ, let us humble ourselves before the Lord, and fast and pray until we obtain a victory over this damning strife about men and parties, grudging one against another, biting and devouring one another, as foretold of the last generation. We cannot have strife and division among us, contrary to the gospel, and be ready for translation. God grant that we may have grace to associate ourselves in keeping all his commandments, and follow all the holy examples of the inspired teachers of the church, in brotherly love and pure christian fellowship, unto the end, so that we may be found of him in peace at the appearing of Jesus Christ. THE SECRET OF THE LORD.

We all like to be trusted with secrets. There is something in the thing revealed to us, that everybody must not know; and the fact that our friend has chosen us, shows that he places confidence in our word. The more important the secret, the better we guard it, and no bribe can buy an important secret from an upright man.

"The secret of the Lord is with the righteous." The worldly mind can see no difference between the christian and the sinner. No special favors seem to fall to professing christians. They suffer, they die, they live in poverty, they are bereft of friends, and share the common lot of all. They weep, as the unbelievers weep when loved ones die, their children are left fatherless, their wives widows. Wherein do they differ from the world. Hark! "Leave your fatherless children to me;" the voice comes from heaven, but is only heard by the christian mother. "Thy Maker is "thy husband, the Lord of hosts is his name."—Christian Standard.

Yes, the Lord makes his covenant people his confidential "friends," to whom he communicates many of the secrets of his government and purposes. We are all inclined to reveal to our dearest friends our designs, especially when those purposes relate to the interests of those friends. So the Lord, the Ruler of this world, will not bring events to pass, involving the welfare of his people, without revealing those events to them, so that they may take advantage of that knowledge, and be prepared to reap the benefits and escape the snares of such events. The Lord expressed this principle by the prophet thus: "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secrets to his servants, the prophets." Amos 3: 7. The secrets which the Lord makes known, especially to the righteous, are not the ordinary occurrences in life, which may be anticipated as well by an unbeliever as by a believer, but must relate to uncommon events, which none could anticipate unless they were revealed by one who could foresee them. Daniel says—"There is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets;" and the things revealed were not common events, which human wisdom and foresight could know, but they were those things which God alone could foresee.

Jesus expressed this principle in its application beautifully, as he spake to his disciples thus: "Ye are my friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you. Henceforth I call you not servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends: for all things that I have heard of my Father I have made known unto you." John 15: 14.

Christ explicitly states who he esteems his friends—those who have sufficient confidence in him to obey him as their Lord and Teacher; while he reciprocates the confidence in them, so as to open to them his sacred treasures of wisdom and knowledge. Upon such he will not suffer any event to come for which they need to prepare, without first notifying them of its approach, and teaching them the way to escape its snare. Noah was God's friend, therefore the Lord would not suffer the flood to come without warning him of what was coming, and the preparation necessary to escape its destruction.

So God has dealt with his covenant people in all ages; for a part of his pledge to them in that covenant is that he will reveal his secrets unto them, so that they may not be harmed by any of his judgments which he may send upon the wicked for their rebellion.

If God has acted upon this principle with all the generations in the past, we cannot believe that he will bring the overwhelming calamities of the last judgment upon the wicked and not reveal the secret of the period, and attending circumstances of its approach to his people, as he did to Noah and Lot the coming judgments which threatened them. No; the "day of the Lord" will not come upon the true church as a thief, because they are all children of the day, and are not of the night nor of darkness. It is prophetic light which expels the darkness of night and illumines the faithful, so that they can see the day of the Lord approaching. Peter says, in speaking of the coming of that day, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the 'day' dawn [the dawning is a sign of its approach] and the 'day'-star arise in your hearts." 2 Peter 1: 19. The secret of the Lord is communicated to his friends through his Word, and all coming events are necessarily communicated through the prophecies, so that his judgments have always overtaken those who would not take heed to it, as a snare or thief; but to those who have received those prophetic announcements as forewarnings from their heavenly Guardian, they have been seasonably anticipated, so that preparation has been made for them. If we are Christ's loyal friends, he will certainly never suffer the awful snares of the last judgment to come upon us without communicating to us the evidences of its approach.

The Holy Scriptures clearly testify to this fact, by presenting more clearly defined evidences of its coming than any other event ever revealed by God to men. There are at least twice as many clearly stated signs given in the prophecies, revealing the approach of the second advent of Christ, as there are of his first advent. If the church manifested a want of true friendship with God in not receiving the revelations of his secret councils, presenting the first coming of their Messiah, have we not reason to fear if we are found in darkness upon the subject of the approach of the second coming? Let us be very careful and see that we have all the experience of true and abiding friendship with Jesus Christ, so that he may not come and find us sleeping. Be watchful, that the day of Christ may not "overtake you unawares." God offers us light, and if we accept it we make ourselves his friends and shall never fall. Let us accept the heavenly boon, and live forever. J. C.

THE DEVIL.

Is the Devil, spoken of in the twentieth chapter of Revelation, literal or symbolical? INQUIRER.

The first three verses of Rev. twentieth chapter read as follows:

"And I saw an angel come down from heaven, having the key of the bottomless pit and a great chain in his hand. And he laid hold on the dragon, that old serpent, which is the Devil, and Satan, and bound him a thousand years, and cast him into the bottomless pit, and shut him up, and set a seal upon him, that he should deceive the nations no more, till the thousand years be fulfilled; and after that he must be loosed a little season."

That the animal, called the "dragon," is used in the Bible as a symbol of a wicked person or power, we have no doubt. In Ezk. 29: 4, we read: "Thus saith the Lord God, Behold, I am against thee, Pharaoh, king of Egypt, the great dragon that lieth in the midst of his rivers, which hath said, My river is my own, and I have made it for myself." In this case Pharaoh, the strong Egyptian king, is compared to a "great dragon" lying in a river, as the terror of all other animals. In Rev. 12: 3, we find another "great . . . dragon" used as a symbol, without any specification as to what it represents; but the description of its work shows plainly that it is a symbol used to denote the Roman power in the time of the Cæsars. No Bible student would advocate for a moment that the "great dragon" mentioned in Ezek. 29: 3, and Rev. 12: 3, represent the same thing.

We now inquire if "the dragon," in Rev. 20: 2, refers to the same power, or person, as in Ezk. 29: 3, or Rev. 12: 3? We believe all would say no, so far as relates to the passage in Ezekiel. It has no reference to Pharaoh. The next question arises, does it refer to Pagan Rome, or to the literal Devil? There are three special terms applied to the one who is the prince of "the angels that sinned," called also "unclean spirits," and "demons." Those terms are "serpent," "Satan," and "devil." Whenever an individual, or nation is filled with the spirit of Satan, that person or nation is said to be satanic, or devilish, and is sometimes called Satan, because it so fully represents the character of the great deceiver; just as a good angel is sometimes called the "Lord," from the fact that the Lord was speaking through the angel; hence it was said to be the voice of God.

The first time the word "serpent" occurs in the Bible is in Genesis, third chapter, where it represents the one who tempted Eve in the garden of Eden, hence this is the "old serpent," because we have no knowledge of any evil one existing before this one who contradicted God, and led Adam and Eve into sin.

The first time the term "Satan" occurs is in the history of Job, between fifteen and sixteen hundred years before Christ. In the first and second chapters of Job, we find the record of a conversation between "the Lord" and "Satan" in relation Job. That "Satan" and "the devil," when used literally, mean the same person, is very clearly taught in the Scriptures. In Matt. 4: 10, 11, we read: "Then saith Jesus unto him [the devil], Get thee hence Satan, . . . Then the devil leaveth him, and behold, angels came and ministered unto him." In this case, the "devil," or the "Satan" that left Jesus, was just as literal as the angels who "came and ministered unto him."

Turning again to Rev. 20: 2, we find that the "dragon," seen by John in vision, and used as a symbol of some person or nation, is explained to represent, "that old serpent, which is the devil, and Satan." When a symbol is thus explained, the matter is settled. When Jesus made known the parable of the sower, he says: "The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil." Matt. 13: 38, 39. In this case, the term "devil" is not a symbol, or figure, because it is the word used to explain a figure; so in Rev. 20: 2, when it says, "the dragon . . . is the devil, the term devil cannot be a symbol or figure, because it is used to tell the meaning of the word dragon, used as a symbol in that passage; and this devil is the same one that tempted Eve, called "that old serpent," and the one also that troubled Job, and called Satan;" hence the devil in Rev. 20: 2 cannot represent either Pharaoh, or pagan Rome, but the literal devil. CORRECTION.—In the letter of Bro. T. A. Cheney, published in last week's Crisis, the amount received from W. D. F. should have been $5.00—not $500. G. T. A.

NOT ROOM ENOUGH.

Bro. P. T. Light writes: "I attended a funeral recently, when the preacher took occasion to speak sneeringly of those who believe this earth renewed is to become the abode of the saints, stating that it is entirely too small, and that the redeemed would be crowded for standing room. Please give me some light on the subject."

Several months since, we published an article on this subject. For the benefit of this Bro. and those who did not read the article to which we refer, we will make a few statements. We will suppose the human race commenced with eight hundred millions, instead of two individuals; make no allowance for the flood, when they were reduced down to eight persons; allow but thirty years for a generation, instead of hundreds of years for the early history of mankind, making two hundred generations in the six thousand years, and then all—including saints and sinners—could stand in the State of New York, and have nearly a square yard apiece.

But the New Jerusalem—the Capitol of the kingdom, which, according to its smallest measurement, is fifteen hundred miles in circumference, which would make it three hundred and seventy-five miles on a side, is large enough to cover N. Y., Mass., R. I., Conn., Vt., Me., N. H., N. J., Del., and nearly half of Penn. Hence there will be abundance of room in the city alone, saying nothing about the whole earth besides.

Those who say there will not be sufficient room in the new earth for the saints, will do well to make the figures before they state it again. M. G.

THE CENTENNIAL BUILDINGS.

The Centennial Buildings in Philadelphia are objects of special interest on account of their great extent. Much skill and genius have been shown in planning and executing them. During the past two years a great work has been done, the sight of which would pay for quite a journey. It will require much labor to have them ready by the 15th of May. The main exhibition building covers about twenty-one acres of ground. It is composed mostly of iron and glass. The building for machinery is about the same size. There are many other buildings of fine structure, some of which are built for foreign nations. When the exhibition is opened, it will probably surpass anything of the kind ever witnessed since the world began.

There is much danger that this nation may have a spirit like that which led Nebuchadnezzar to say: "Is not this great Babylon, that I have built?" American pride is rising to a high degree, connected with man-worship. The word tekel may soon be applied. M. G.

A SACRIFICE.—Jesus says it is more blessed to give than to receive. He is pleased with those who make a sacrifice for the benefit of others. We are rejoiced to find so many willing to give at least fifty cents to send the Crisis to some one, who may not know what bright evidence there is to show that our dear Jesus is about to return to this world, to set up the kingdom of heaven. Dear Brn. and Srs. this is the time for work. Let all do what they can, as speedily as possible. M. G.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We wish to say to all correspondents with this Office, who write upon business and for publication at the same time, NEVER WRITE THAT WHICH BELONGS TO THE BUSINESS DEPARTMENT AND THAT FOR PUBLICATION ON THE SAME SHEET OF PAPER. We often receive business communications on one side of a sheet and on the opposite side letters, obituaries, etc., for publication. The business goes to the Clerk's desk to be recorded and filed, while that for publication goes to the compositors' room to be put in type. We cannot separate them when they are on one sheet unless they are re-written. Please accommodate us by writing on separate sheets, and not tempt us to complain or reject the articles.

We wish also to say to those who write serial articles, that we wish them to send all the numbers before expecting the first to be published; for in many cases we cannot determine whether we can publish articles until we see them all. J. C.

ANONYMOUS ARTICLES.

We will repeat what has often been published that, It is against our rules to publish communications not giving the name of the writer. We should be liable to be imposed upon by publishing articles from very unworthy persons if the name is not given.

Again, we do not take the responsibility of endorsing the sentiments of all articles published, therefore it is proper and right that all correspondents take the responsibility of their written sentiments, by endorsing them with their own name. We have recently received articles which we should have published if they had been properly endorsed.

If for any good and special reason a writer should desire not to have the name published, we consent to do so, but must have the name in the Office, so that if it should for any good reason be called for we could give it. J. C.

WRITE PLAINLY.

We do hope that our contributors will write as plainly as possible, for it saves us much painful labor, and our compositors an almost unendurable task. In many cases we are under the necessity of striking off whole sentences from articles because some important word in it cannot be deciphered; and we cannot supply one, for it might materially change the sense, and thus misrepresent the writer, which we would not allow ourselves to do. Please not write too fine, and never write between the lines, and do not interline, for it is difficult to correct it, or for the compositors to set it up. Do be kind, and help us in this matter. J. C.

BE PATIENT.

We would say to our kind contributors—Be patient, if your articles do not appear as early as you may desire; for we often have manuscript on hand sufficient to supply us with original articles for weeks. This will account for delay.

We do not say this to discourage any from writing, for we think it will do you good to write even if your articles are never published. Careful and studious writing is one of the best means of cultivating and disciplining the mind. It assists us in condensing ideas into few words, thus concentrating the power of the argument upon focal points. J. C.

COLOGNE, Jan. 29. The Gazette's Madrid correspondent writes that by the order of the Spanish Bishops the bodies of all persons dead prior to the 9th of February, 1875, who were only civilly married, be exhumed and removed from consecrated ground.

One decision of the Spiritual Court relating to a case of this kind has already been approved by the Minister of Public Worship.

"The Lady of Kingdoms" utters a very feeble voice from the throne, compared to the thunderings of her imperial echoes in the days of her glory. Poor Spain, bankrupt and divided into factions, bleeding with civil war and distressed with colonial rebellion, attempts to imitate Charles V. in attempting not only to command the living, but also the dead. These feeble utterances of professed authority over men do not startle the nations into servile submission as in the days of her riches and power, but only manifests her purposes of what she intends to do when she again grasps the sword and wields the sceptre of the world. But God has written upon her palace wall, "Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin." Her "kingdom is numbered and finished." She is "weighed in the balances and found wanting"; and God will give the kingdom not to Cyrus but to Christ; not to the Medes but to the saints. Amen. J. C.

NEVADA.—Bro. E. McCulloch writes from Nevada, Jan. 26th: "The work is still increasing here. Last night several were forward for prayers, and found peace, and sixteen rose in the congregation, asking prayers. Two leading business men started last night. The town is stirred. The house is filled every night, and about two hundred remain to the inquiry meeting." We learn over one hundred have been converted. M. G.

SPRINGWATER.—At this date (Saturday, Jan. 29th) the meetings in Springwater have become very interesting. Last evening quite a number decided to be christians, and the voices of several new witnesses were heard in the conference meeting. Strong men are bowing at the feet of Jesus, seeking and obtaining pardon. The Lord is doing great things. All the ministers are united in the work, and being very much blest. M. G.

WAR AT JERUSALEM.—Please give the best light you have on the time of the war at Jerusalem. H. D. SHARP.

The best we have is, that it began in A. D. 65, and ended A. D. 72. As we are away from home, we are not able to give our authorities at present. These have been given at other times in the columns of the Crisis. M. G.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

AG'T.

STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS.

L. BOUTELL.

Dear Brn. of like precious faith:—The year we have entered upon is pregnant with mighty events. We need not be surprised at any development of crime in the most horrid form, or the breaking up of national compacts or contracts, neither the calling out of national troops, or the bringing together of armed forces. There is an impending emergency for the fulfillment of the last-day prophecy of Joel the prophet—"Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up; beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning-hooks into spears; let the weak say, I am strong." The very last events are crowding themselves upon us imperceptibly, unless our eyes are open to the signs of this time. I hear continually expressions like the following: "These are wonderful times." "What are we coming to?" "It is fearful!" The people wonder with amazement. Murders, bank robberies, defalcations, fraud, seduction, lust, cheating, stealing, drinking, rioting and debauchery, are the order of the day. Life, character, virtue, property, and domestic happiness,—all, all are unsafe. And no redress, for even the law is powerless and inoperative. The money-god, with her co-operative power, has an unbounded influence to swerve the jurymen and affect the ballot-box, so that "men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking for those things which are coming on the earth."

Does this look like a millennium, when Christianity is to triumph gloriously? Does it not look more like the cup of iniquity being filled to the brim? Confidence in good men is mightily shaken, and few can be trusted; and from this fact all feel the stringency of the times. Hoping for better times we only meet disappointment.

Amid these complications, depression and horribles, what can be done? The only way I advise is to hold fast our trust in the God of the Bible. Believe his Word. Do good. Cling to and live out the golden rule—"All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Have that Christianity that Job had when he said, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he will stand at the latter day upon the earth." Being lit up with this faith, our life will be secure—"hid with Christ in God." With the Spirit of our God, we shall let our light shine, blowing the trumpet of "good news," warning and beseeching men to run to the Fountain, and the more speedily as they "see the day approaching." "It is high time to awake out of sleep," and to do our best to arouse all classes by crying, Behold! Christ is coming! and with patient perseverance point them to the divinely inspired utterances, made plain by the Holy Spirit, saying, This is that spoken by the prophets, Christ, and the apostles. Thus doing the best we can to get a people prepared "as a bride adorned for her husband."

Amen, my soul replies; keep this blessed, hopeful message before the people of this generation, promising all grace, mercy and peace, with everlasting life, on condition of believing on the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen. Chelsea, Mass.

THE entire Bible in the Mandarin is now complete. While it is affirmed that there are some two hundred dialects in China, six of them occupying a prominent position, the Mandarin is the most prominent, being spoken throughout the North by the common people, and throughout the Empire by the officials. It is for these reasons scarcely possible to over-estimate the importance and value of this translation.—Ex.

TRUE charity is like evening dew, whose softening and reviving influence operates silently and unseen—the physician, whose sole fee is the consciousness of doing good—an angel breathing on riches.

"REVIVAL."

L. BOUTELL.

The revival in Kennebunkport, Me., still continues in interest to the present date. Says Bro. Mitchell, in a card I received yesterday: "Our meetings the past week have been truly wonderful; afternoons well filled, evenings thronged, except when stormy, then well filled. And oh, to hear the praises of God from the children of twelve years of age up to the old men leaning upon their staves, would do your heart good. Some anxious souls are finding relief by coming to the Savior almost every night. Bro. Sederquest is still with us. The people have become very much attached to him."

I would to God that we could report more of the wonderful works of God among us, in the reformation of the people, who otherwise at the coming of Jesus will be lost. "If the gospel is hid, it is hid to them that are lost"; "in whom the God of this world hath blinded their minds, lest the light of the glorious gospel should shine unto them."

I have a strong desire that through the agency of the church of Christ, and the instrumentality of the living Word, we may see a reformation of the divine work going on all about us. I earnestly desire a revival of that deep-rooted piety and devotion that puts all on the altar, even one's loved self, with that faith that justifies, brings peace with God, and causes the convert to rejoice in hope of the glory of God; that separates and spoils him for the world, and sets him looking and longing for a better, that he will be welcomed to when Christ comes.

Dear brethren, let us concentrate our efforts, tears and prayers, to pull our dear ones "out of the fire," while Christ calls and mercy waits. "That awful day will surely come; the appointed hour makes haste." For our friends, enemies, and Christ's sake, let us be up and doing, by fasting and prayer, that the Lord may visit us. Amen.

Chelsea, Mass., Feb. 4th, 1876.

WORK IN BATH.

As the Brn. and Srs. in Maine have written to Sr. Anna E. Smith, requesting her to come and labor with them, the committee wish to inform them through the Crisis about the work with us. After much earnest solicitation she has visited us. A good work has commenced; a blessed spirit pervades the meetings. The first evening sixteen manifested a desire to become christians. Some have found peace and are at work. The interest is on the increase. Other denominations came in. The Young Men's Christian Association laid aside their meetings and came in to help. The Lord is truly at work. Sr. Smith is in earnest about the matter—anxious that souls may be saved. Pray for us, that a great work may be done.

Correspondence.

From Bro. T. L. Waugh.

Dear Brn. and Srs.—It has been some time since you have heard from me through our paper; but I can say that I am still endeavoring to do the will of God, though very imperfectly. I rejoice that the Lord knoweth them that are his, and when the world frowns, it is blessed to realize that Jesus smiles upon his children. I am glad that my lot is cast with the humble and despised followers of Jesus, who are looking for his speedy return to earth.

Let us hold up this truth, even though it may provoke ridicule from the ungodly. May none of us be found unprepared to meet the Judge, who will reward every man as his work shall be. Let us trust in God with all our hearts, and we need not fear that he will withhold any good thing from us. I have found it much the best way. Sometimes we think we will work out the way, but we often have found that we have made many mistakes, because we have gone in our own wisdom. Oh! how important a lesson it is to learn to trust God in everything.

May we be enabled to live as becometh christians, keeping aloof from the spirit of the world, which so many professing godliness entertain. We are commanded to come out and be separate from the world. This we shall do if we love Jesus. God bless you all who are striving to walk in the narrow way to life. Soon your cares and toils, your afflictions and trials, will have passed away forever. Day is breaking in the eastern skies. The morning star heralds the approach of day, which will usher in eternal glory and blessedness to the saints; but the blackness of darkness forever to those who are unprepared to meet their God.

Sinners, flee to the ark of safety now. Delay no longer, for soon you must stand in judgment, saved or lost. There is no middle ground. It is life or death, salvation or ruin. Come to the Fountain and drink the waters of life, which flow so freely. Submit to God. Do his will, that you with the redeemed may be prepared for that home that is being fitted up for all those who love God; when the earth shall bloom in Eden beauty, and sin shall be swept out of its fair domain. Then the earth will be filled with the glory of God as the waters cover the sea. Then the wilderness shall bloom. But until Jesus comes there will be no betterment. The movement of the nations betokens a terrible struggle in the future. One more death-struggle and our Deliverer comes to put an end to sin and to reign in righteousness. Let us

"Hold the fort, for He is coming!
Jesus signals still;
Wave the answer back to heaven,
By thy grace we will."

West Morris, Ct.

From Sr. A. Dinsmore.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—Do we realize what an amount of work ought to be done before Jesus comes? Have we not all got loved ones out of Christ? Will the skirts of our garments be found clear of their blood? Do we realize that the parting must soon come, if they do not turn to Christ? Are we doing all we can to arouse them? God's power is the same as it ever was; but, oh! the lukewarmness of God's professd church. I do not wonder Jesus asked, "When the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" God has provided an armor for all, but how few have it on to-day.

I praise God that a few here and there are willing to wear it, and are trying to get others to put it on. It is no time to talk about gifts or talents. God has given us just what he saw we could do the most with; but we need not be long with only one talent, for if we improve we shall soon gain others.

I praise God that there is a growth in grace. How blessed to feel the labor upon us. If the church were free from all its weights, how much more might be accomplished. If all could only realize how much more important it is to work for God than for the meat that perisheth, it seems to me they would do differently, for Jesus says, "Seek first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

God has wonderfully blessed us here, but there is yet a great work to be done among us. Pray for us, that our faith fail not; that our love for God and his cause may grow stronger and stronger; that we may daily have an application of the precious blood; that our robes may be found spotless when Jesus comes to gather "all his jewels—precious jewels, bright gems for his crown."

East Bowdoinham, Jan. 30th, 1876.

From Bro. J. H. Harding.

To the Brn. and Srs. and Readers of the Crisis:—"Let not your hearts be troubled; if you believe in God believe also in me." These are the words of Jesus. The Savior, the Lord of the dead and of the living—he that came the first time to bring life and immortality to light. Jesus came to redeem us from the power of the grave, and to bring us from the the land of the enemy.

Christ said, "I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go away I will come again and receive you unto myself." Can we rely upon his word and patiently wait for his coming amid the thickening perils of these last days. Life is only promised to those that endure unto the end. Then shall we slack our hand almost in sight of the glittering crown and mansions fair? If we do we lose all, and all our days of weariness and watching have been spent in vain. Let us then fight the fight of faith, that we may have a crown of life when the chief Shepherd doth appear. Amidst the voices of that throng we shall distinguish the voices of the loved ones that have been torn from our embrace. They will come from the east and west, the north and south, and sit down in the kingdom of God.

Let the hope of soon seeing Jesus inspire our hearts with fresh courage to move forward, even amid the gloom. When once amid the ransomed ones we bid adieu to every pang, for the former things have all passed away.

Trembling soul, cast away your fears; soon, if faithful, you will hear it said, "Come ye blessed; if not, it will be, "Depart, ye cursed." God help us to escape to a place of safety.

Obituaries.

PERKINS. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Savoy, Mass., Dec. 3d., 1875, Sister Alma S. Perkins, wife of Ambrose B. Perkins, aged fifty-four years.

Sister P. gave her heart to the Savior in early life, uniting with the Methodist church in Savoy, of which she was a consistent member for several years. Afterward she united with the A. C. church in Savoy, and until the last she continued strong in faith, rejoicing in the prosperity of God's people, and sorrowing in their adversity. She often expressed her resignation to the Lord's will, saying "all is well," and repeating comforting passages of Scripture,—such as "Though I walk through the valley and shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." To her daughter, who was greatly distressed when she was dying, she said, "Put your trust in the Lord," and sweetly fell asleep to wake in the bright morn of the first resurrection.

> There we'll meet the dear departed
> Over on the other shore;
> Husband, children, all united,
> When death's triumphs will be o'er.

M. L. TOWER.

GILMAN. In Kingston, N. H., Jan. 20th, '76, Bro. Joseph W. Gilman, aged twenty-seven years.

Our Bro. leaves a beloved christian companion, and son of five years. He was converted to God some seven years ago, and also to the faith of the soon coming of Christ to complete the work of redemption, and was baptized by Bro. Cyrus Cunningham about the same time. Although sick with consumption, yet he indulged the hope that he might escape death, and be among those that will be changed at the last trump, until a few days before his death. But when he found that God had ordered otherwise, he cheerfully submitted, and soon fell asleep in Christ, to await the voice of the Archangel, when he will come forth to the resurrection of life. Funeral and burial at East Haverhill, Mass. J. F. CHAMBERLIN.

Messiah's Herald, please copy.

WEBSTER. Arthur M. Webster was born June 12th, 1865. Died Jan. 18th, 1876, aged ten years, seven months.

Little Arthur was beloved by all who knew him. He was kind, affectionate, gentle, and of a loving disposition. He early learned to love Jesus, and delighted to read the Holy Scriptures. One of his choice verses was—"And the ransomed of the Lord shall return, and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." He will be one to come to Mount Zion; but, oh! how we miss him. Bro. and Sr. Webster feel deeply afflicted, but the Lord is coming soon to destroy death. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly." The writer tried to comfort the friends from Ps. 25: 14.

ELD. V. F. HUNT.

CATE. At Loudon, N. H., Nov. 4th, 1875, Benjamin Cate, aged seventy-one years.

After five weeks of severe illness, my father fell asleep with these words upon his lips: "Cheer up, the morning of my redemption draweth nigh." He loved the truths of this paper, and often contended earnestly for them. He spoke in his last sickness of the peculiar trials soon to come upon all true christians, and of their speedy deliverance. He leaves two sons to mourn their loss, and many others mourn as for a father. His kind deeds and pleasant words were alike to all. Let all who read this obituary resolve to live the life of the christian, that they may die his death. The death scene of my father was heart-rending, yet it was glorious; there was victory in it.

WM. W. CATE.

SECOR. Near Charles City, Floyd Co., Iowa, Jan. 12th, 1876, of heart disease, Gertrude Secor, youngest daughter of Z. M. and M. A. Secor, aged nine years.

Gertrude was a favorite with all who knew her. She told them she must die, and requested her father to pray for her, which he did, and she bade them "good bye." Her last words were—"I see heaven." The Lord permitted her to have a vision of glory to sustain her in death. Sermon by the writer, from Eccl. 12: 7.

P. S. W. DEYO.

LORD. In Madison, N. H., Dec. 17th, 1875, Georgie A., adopted son of Bro. Samuel and Lydia Lord, aged three years and eight months.

Death has blighted the precious bud of promise, and the earthly mission of the loved one is fulfilled. It is a comfort to the sad hearts of the weeping ones to know that Jesus knows where all his little ones sleep, and he will awaken them in the morning. Words of comfort were spoken by Elder John Runnels, of the F. W. Baptist Church.

> Our dear little Georgie lies hidden
> Under the snow.
> The angels their kind watch are keeping
> O'er the beautiful treasure safe sleeping,
> No pain and no sorrow or weeping
> Under the snow.
> Yes, beautiful Georgie lies sleeping
> Under the snow.
> But he will awake in the morning,
> At the bright resurrection dawning,
> No more to lie down midst our mourning
> Under the snow.

A. NICKERSON.

COX. In New York City, on the 23d ult., Daniel Hudson, youngest son of Thomas J. and Elizabeth Cox, aged two years and six months.

Thus in the divine disposal of events death has been allowed to reach his icy hand into our little circle and pluck one of our brightest flowers—the youngest, tenderest bud. Our sweet boy now sleeps in Jesus. We yield him, knowing that the Allowing Power doeth all things well. Resignation is our duty; in Jesus is our strength, and in the resurrection is our blessed hope. One more strong link now binds us to that morning, and we more earnestly pray, Let thy kingdom come. Bro. Cook and King, in fervent prayer and words of heavenly comfort, lifted us up to God, and in humble and abiding trust we bade our darling boy "good night."

> Oh, haste the dawning of that bright day!
> Oh, come the blessed morning!

T. J. C.

HUNT. In Wellington, Sumner Co., Kansas, Dec. 3d, 1875, Wm. F. Hunt, aged seventy-one years.

Bro. H. has for many years been a firm believer in the near coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead; and it was only at the resurrection that he expected his reward. He died strong in the faith that his rest in the grave would not be long, but that the morning would soon dawn when he should awake and sing, "Oh, grave, where is thy victory?" He was the father of our esteemed Bro. V. F. Hunt. We endeavored to speak words of comfort to the sorrowing ones from Job 14: 14. DANIEL WEBSTER.

WHITTIER. In Orford, P. Q., Canada, Oct. 29th, 1875, of heart disease, Willis Whittier, aged forty-five years.

The subject of this notice died very suddenly, leaving a wife, five children, a father and mother, three brothers and two sisters, besides numerous other friends to mourn his loss. May God sanctify this affliction to the salvation of the family. The writer endeavored to speak words of comfort from Psalms 104: 29–30. JOHN CHAPMAN.

KNOWLTON. In Wilmot, N. H., Jan. 15th, 1876, Sally B., wife of Shurburn Knowlton, aged eighty-two.

Sr. Knowlton was a great sufferer, but she bore her pain with christian fortitude. A cancer in the stomach laid her low in death. We trust she died in the faith, and we hope to see her again when death shall be swallowed up, blooming with immortality. Funeral services by the writer, from Luke 23: 42. D. EASTMAN.

PALMER. In Concord, N. H., Jan. 5th, 1876, Bro. Ira S. Palmer, formerly of Sutton, aged sixty-six years.

Bro. Palmer was a true and faithful husband, a kind and affectionate father, and a good neighbor. He leaves a mourning wife and children, but they are comforted with the hope of soon meeting the loved oned ones that are now sleeping.

D. W. DAVIS.

CARR. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Palermo, Me., Jan. 18th, 1876, my mother, Mrs. Sarah Carr, aged eighty-three years.

> Sleep on, dear mother, and take thy rest;
> Lay down thy head upon thy Saviour's breast;
> We loved thee well, but Jesus loved thee best.
> Farewell, farewell.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen.

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

Coming, coming, coming! Who?
Christ, the Lord of life and glory,
He who once for me and you
Died!—oh, depth of sin's sad story!
Coming, not a helpless stranger,
Cradled in the friendless manger;
Coming, Lord of earth and heaven!
King! to whom all power is given,
Judge! at whose all-searching bar
All must stand, just what they are;
And the wicked tell with shame,
Why they've cursed his holy name.

Coming, coming, coming! How?
Clothed in strange unearthly splendor,
Glory men ne'er dream of now,
Grandeur earth ne'er had attend her.
At his sight the heavens shall wither,
From his presence earth shall flee,
Islands move, and mountains thither
Seek the caverns of the sea.
Every eye shall then behold him,
All the nations feel his ire;
While the brightness that enfolds him,
Is to them consuming fire.
Thunders all the earth shall thrill,
All the heavens with lightnings blaze,
And the universe stand still,
While through all its realms is heard
That profound omnific word,
Which to life the dead shall raise.

Coming, coming, coming! Why?
To redeem his purchased treasure,
All his saints o'er sin who sigh,
All who make his will their pleasure;
To bring back within their borders
His, whom Hades holds to-day;
To arrest sin's wild disorders,
And the monster, death, to slay.
Coming to fulfill his plan,
Make his oath and promise good,
Which secures repentant man
Life eternal through his blood.

Coming, coming, coming! When?
Ah! that question, solemn, thrilling!
For when He appeareth, then
All these earthly scenes, fulfilling
His sure word, shall have an end.
And behold the day is near!
Signs in heaven and earth portend
That the Lord will soon appear.
Angry thrones, through wars, proclaim it.
Scoffers by their scoffing name it;
And the mute and solemn sky
Has hung forth its prophecy.
Coming! while we wait and dally;
Coming! while we sleep in sin:
Swift as light o'er hill and valley,
That great day is coming in.
Sinner, rouse thee to thy fate!
Saint, be watchful at thy gate!
Savior, make us meet t'appear
At thy coming, now so near.

LETTER.

To the Editors of the Crisis:—Dear Brethren: I have been impressed with a desire to publish through the columns of your valuable paper some information concerning the Lord's work in this locality, having particular reference to the truths the readers of the Crisis hold so dear. "As iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend." "As in water face answereth to face so the heart of man to man." So the Lord's doings in this part of the harvest field may stimulate and encourage some of the friends of Jesus who are going forth weeping, bearing precious seed. Press on, dear friends, he is faithful that hath promised.

Some nine or ten months ago I was working with Bro. Marsh, an Advent brother, in the workshop, and from Bro. Varley's meetings, the subject of the second coming of Christ was laid on my mind. Bro. Marsh helped me through with many difficulties, and our fellowship was sweet and profitable; and when he began to speak of the non-immortality of man, and final destruction of the wicked, I felt sorry that so good a man should be led away with such dreadful views of the word of God.

I tried to put him right, but soon found my own standing was not very secure. I went to my theological works, but found them very unsatisfactory to help me meet the position of Bro. Marsh. I then went right to the word of God; but the more I searched, the more I got into difficulty. Although unwilling to acknowledge it, the word of God was all against me. I made several efforts to hold my ground, and then gave up thinking about it; or, rather tried to do so, but every time I read the word of God, I found that God only hath immortality; and men obtain it only by "patient continuance in well doing." I read that the ways of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord.

I was so perplexed with these that I knew not what to do. I laid the matter in prayer before the Lord, asking him to show me what was truth; and the Lord heard and answered my prayer, and led me into the truth, and the truth has made me free.

I have been a member of the Baptist church some nine or ten years, and have held a license from that church in this city for four years to exercise my gift in preaching at a mission station.

I went to the pastor of the church some time ago, telling him of my views upon this matter. He told me I was wrong, but could not show me how from the word of God. He admitted I was better posted on the subject than he, but he promised to look into the matter, and I left him a number of texts of Scripture, assuring him that if he could show me from the word of God that my views were wrong, I would give them up, and not teach them. I waited nearly three months, but I heard no more from the pastor about the subject. Many asked me in relation to the matter, and I commenced to talk to several members of the church about the glorious truth of life only in Christ. This soon got to the pastor's ears, and he came to me reprimanding me for teaching such heterodox views.

I was admonished that if I continued to teach these things, I should be put out of the church. I might believe them, but not teach them. I replied that Christ was the best friend I ever had, and his truth I should hold and teach. I would not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. I was called up before the leading members of the church, and told that unless I would consent to withhold these views, I must not teach in the Sabbath school (I had a large adult Bible class), and I must not preach at the mission station. But the Lord gave me grace to stand up boldly for the truth.

The same week myself and another brother who had imbibed these truths were brought before the church to be tried. I was charged with holding heterodox views; viz., That the wicked would not suffer eternal misery, but that they would be blotted out. I pleaded guilty to the charge, and before the church I defined my faith from God's word, using nothing but texts of Scripture. The hand of fellowship was withdrawn from myself and the brother who was tried with me.

There were several others in the church who have drank in the blessed truth of life in Christ and his speedy coming to set up his kingdom. One brother, a teacher in the Sabbath School, was waited on by a Committee, and the pastor warned him not to have anything to do with people who hold these views. The brother, a dear good christian, said he should meet with and talk with those who loved the Lord, wherever he found them.

We have several others who are with us in this work, and the church, no doubt, will soon turn them out. They thought to stop this work. Many say—Why, Bro. Walter, what are these things that you are turning the church upside down about? It is not me nor my truth; it is the Lord and his truth, and he will take care of it.

The pastor of the Baptist church is preaching eternal torment, misery, eternal tribulation and anguish all the time now; and one of the sisters is in somewhat of a dilemma, as the pastor says, The wicked are destroyed from the presence of the Lord and the glory of his power. The question now arises in her mind, Where are they? The sister and her husband are going to find out where the wicked will be. God help them to find out the truth. We are going to hire a hall and start meetings. We have a good number to start an Advent Christian Church, and all the people are particularly warned to keep clear from Bro. Marsh, as he is the cause of all the trouble.

Brethren and sisters who love the truth, pray for us, that we may adorn the doctrine of Christ our Savior, and that a people may be gathered here who may be ready to meet the Lord when he comes to make up his jewels. Yours in the blessed hope.

AN INCIDENT.

ARTHUR A. WAITE.

One of the most solemn and impressive moments that I ever experienced was witnessed at the old residence of Bro. William Miller, at Low Hampton, N. Y., on the afternoon of January 14th, 1876, at the close of the business session of the Hoosick Valley A. C. Conference.

It was suggested that all the brethren and sisters from afar should go over to Bro. Miller's house and sit down in the same room where he studied the glorious Bible truths which have startled the world, and have echoed and re-echoed in thunder-tones to the present hour. The old desk was examined, and the old Bible, and many interesting items were given by his sons and daughters. Then the chairs, the same two identical chairs that Bro. Miller aud wife used upon their marriage day, were brought in, and Elders Mathewson and Flagg were invited to be seated in them, as they were the two oldest ministers present, and had in the same room talked of the "blessed hope" with Bro. Miller in the year 1843, when they were in youth's vigor and of sanguine hopes. It certainly was a thrilling moment. Memories, almost overwhelming, came upon the two veterans as they gazed on familiar scenes, their own silvered heads, and the array of young soldiers who had rallied and took their stand among the battle-scarred and truth-persecuted people. Every heart swelled with deep emotion as the aged elders, all broken and in tears, told the interviews they had had with Bro. Miller, who now sleeps in the earth. All then sung "How long, O Lord, our Savior, wilt thou remain away?" after which a season was spent in prayer; then "Come and reign" was sung with that spirit better known by God's children than can be desribed to them. Hearts were too full for utterance; but each one covenanted with God to go forth (from the seeming holy ground, made sacred to them by being the place where God called his servant to declare his truths which have been so precious to us) determined as they parted to labor among their flocks, to be more faithful than ever, and to be careful that they do not "shun to declare the whole counsel of God."

For my part, individually, I never felt the Advent truths so precious as I do at present. Dear brethren, let us try to take the place of those who have left us, by throwing our all in the last work that God has entrusted to man. Let us try to spread the present truths every opportunity we have, for time is certainly short. Christ meant something when, among the signs in the gospels, he brings up the case of the faithful preacher Noah, and faithful Lot, and solemnly declares, "So shall also the coming of the Son of man be." May God so settle the truth in our hearts that we will be known and read of all men, and burning lights in the midst of this wicked generation, holding forth the word of truth.

INFORMATION WANTED.

D. R. HARGRAVES.

I want to know if there is any rule given in the Scriptures for interpreting "waters," in any of its forms, as given in revelation, either as sea, fountains or rivers, to mean governments? Woman signifies a church. An impure woman an impure church, and a pure woman a pure church. We also find that beasts represent governments, and horns kings or kingdoms; and in no place, so far as I know, do they represent anything else. In Rev. 16, we have an account of the pouring out of the vials of wrath. The second was poured upon the sea, and the third was poured upon the rivers and fountains of waters. I have never known anyone to say that these symbols represented governments; yet when we come down to the pouring out of the sixth vial upon the great river Euphrates, instead of interpreting it as meaning the resources of the Catholic church which were flowing in from "nations, peoples, and tongues," and are now dried up, so that instead of receiving she is taxed, some break the chain, and get another key, and call it the empire of Turkey.

It seems to me the whole of these vials were poured upon the Catholic Church and its supports; and to take one and apply it to an empire in the manner that is done by some, to my mind does violence to symbolic language.

I have ever considered symbols hard to interpret, but have always supposed that one key would unlock all of one class of symbols. I have by some been referred to Rev. 9: 14, as a proof that it must mean Turkey; but I confess that I can see no good reason why it should be so interpreted there. In fact, to keep the rule for interpreting symbols good,—so far as I understand them—it cannot be so interpreted. I do not seek controversy. I want light; and if there are two keys to one class of symbols, I would like to be informed where they are found, and how to determine which one to use.

I will say in conclusion that if we are to apply symbolic language without reference to rule, we can apply it to one thing as well as another. We can take a class of events and mould our symbols to them. What we want is divine authority in unlocking divine symbols. Yours looking for truth.

MY EXPERIENCE.

E. MARSTON.

Having read with interest the experiences of others from time to time, I thought I would write a little of my own. I was formerly opposed to the Bible doctrine which I now so much enjoy, and believe with all my heart. I was taught to regard the advent people as the false prophets which should come. I always desired to attend some of their meetings that I might judge for myself; but never had an opportunity until two years since, when it was my privilege to attend the Alton Bay campmeeting. I believe I was converted there; for when I returned, every thing looked different.

I began to look into the Bible to see if these things were so, before I became satisfied in my mind. Some brethren came, whom I still love and fellowship as christians, telling me I was receiving error. This brought me to a stand still; but after a long and diligent search of the Scriptures to get the truth, I finally became convinced beyond a doubt that "the dead know not anything," (Eccl. 9: 5), and that no man hath ascended up into heaven, and that Christ's kingdom is to be set up upon the earth and not in heaven. There is an abundance of Scripture to prove that the dead will be literally raised. I firmly believe it, and find great comfort in so believing.

I have very few opportunities of attending upon the means of grace, but I try to improve what I do have; sometimes going eight or ten miles. For several weeks I have had none, but a deeper work has been going on in my heart. Being nearly all the time entirely alone, I have tried to improve the opportunity to examine myself. I sought, and have obtained pardon for all my sins, and now, leaving those things which are behind, I press forward, having a hope which is an anchor to my soul, both sure and steadfast.

Satan sometimes sets before me strong temptations, but thus far I have resisted him. Jesus keeps me. I have felt his hand guiding me when about to yield to temptation. Until Jesus comes we shall be subject to temptations and trials; but these light afflictions will, if we are faithful, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. I love everybody, and want all saved. I love you, dear reader, and am praying for you all. Pray for me.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

H. B. SEVEY.

Since our tentmeetings closed last fall I have been holding protracted meetings.

Our meeting in March was well attended, although the weather was very rainy. Brn. and Srs. came from abroad with the Spirit to work for the interest of our soon coming King. Only a few in the place are interested in the truth due this age. One man has recently embraced the doctrine of "Life only through Christ." Bro. T. Rines has moved from Mercer to Norridgewock. Only a few belonging in the place came out to hear. They have closed their eyes to this blessed truth. The brethren and sisters were comforted and strengthened. We next held meetings in Rome. The interest was good. A few made new resolutions to follow the Lord more fully. Brn. F. E. Blaisdell and W. H. Blaisdell (of the Seventh Day brethren) united with us, and preached from the eleventh of Daniel, showing that the Turk must soon be driven from Europe, and will plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas, in the glorious Holy Mountain, and come to his end; and at that time Michael would stand up. He read extracts from political men, showing it must come immediately. It was a timely discourse.

J. C. Wheeler was with us. He has been for a long time on the background, but has renewedly covenanted to obey his call, and let his voice once more be heard in proclaiming Christ's coming.

Our next meeting was in Litchfield. A few in the place love the truth, but were on the background. The weather was very cold. In our last meeting two young ladies made a start for the kingdom.

In facing the cold, thirty-five miles on my way home, the thermometer from twenty to twenty-eight below zero, I took cold and was confined to the house for a few days. But I could praise the Lord for the blessed hope that we were almost through with this cold world.

I was not able to attend our meeting in West Waterville; but learned by others they had a good meeting. Bro. Blaisdell baptized three. The cause still prospers in W. We have reason to praise the Lord that a few will take heed to his word as unto a light in a dark place.

We next visited Augusta. The brethren and sisters are striving together for the kingdom, and sinners are turning to the Lord. Bro. Weeks baptized five Jan. 2nd, and one went forward the 9th. Next went to Hallowell. Held meetings in Bro. Jackson's house, and had a good time talking over our hope. A few in Hallowell are striving for the old paths. Our next meeting was in Gardiner. Bro. Thomas engaged the Disciples house for me to preach in. I had a good time in presenting the signs of Jesus' coming. I hope the word may find good ground; if so it will bring forth good fruit. We have the consolation that it will not return void, for God gives the increase.

Our meeting in Richmond was one of refreshing to many. This is an old place, probably one of the first churches organized in Maine. They have passed through many trials by divisions. Some have embraced the S. D. Sabbath, and a few of the old ones have fallen by death. They are missed very much, but not sorrowed for as those who have died without hope. Brethren and sisters came from abroad, filled with the spirit of love and labor. It was blessed to see them united in the great crowning truths due this age—Jesus' coming at the doors, and a full consecration for the event. A few could say, "My all to Christ I've given;" others were halting, fearing to lay all upon the altar for Christ. Some requested prayers, that they might find the blessed Savior, whom they had once loved. We could all say it was good to be there. Brn. Rhodes, Blaisdell, Sturtevant, and Warren were with us to give meat in due season. For the last twenty years that I have been laboring in the Master's cause, I never have realized that the judgment was so near. Oh to be all for Christ, making no compromise with the world, the flesh, or devil.

We have believed for years that Jesus would come when the Turks were driven from Europe; and every event shows it is near. May our lamps be burning, and we have oil in our vessels is my heartfelt prayer.

Mt. Vernon, Jan. 19th.

HEREIN IS LOVE.

We looked for Him oft in the whirlwind,
In the fire and the tempest's shock;
But found him at last in the silent voice,
And hid in the cleft of the rock.

The nearer we've dwelt to the Father,
The stronger our love has grown;
The more we have sought to obey him,
The clearer the light has shown.

He bids us beware of the tempter,
Of selfishness, anger, and strife;
Of the love of the world and its pleasures,
And of the vanities of life.

And this is the proof that we love him:
If with joy we keep his commands,
And walk in the way he has ordered,
Having pure hearts and clean hands.

We have, as a proof that he loves us,
His commands to keep and fulfil;
For with duties, and trials, and crosses,
Comes the strength to do all his will.

Of every thing useless he prunes us,
And casts every branch aside
That beareth not fruit to the glory
Of him who was crucified.

If Jesus has taught us submission
By the things he suffered while here,
Then let us go on in his footsteps,
With the love that casteth out fear.

Our trials, and conflicts, and losses,
His love, strength and grace do reveal;
For while we pass under the rod, we know
Our Father's hand wounds but to heal.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Lyle.

Editors of the Crisis:—Dear Brn.: The following extract is from the Nation of Jan. 13th, 1875, in reference to an article in the January number of Lippencott's on Portugal. I wonder if that nation would be willing to send us a batch of Jesuit priests to aid in bringing the United States up to the proper standard?

"A little known country, which nature and Catholicism have kept out of the current of modern progress, is exposed, professedly by a native, in a private letter on 'Famishing Portugal'. The famine caused by last summer's drought gives the writer occasion to show why famines are possible in his country, and he reviews its history to an extent which will interest those who share in the prevailing ignorance about it. He lays special stress, perhaps too exclusively, on the evils of the Greek-inherited land-tenure known as emphyteusis—'the renting of land upon condition to improve it'; as Anthony Transtagans defines it in his Dictionary, published in 1773, while Pombal was still in power, and engaged in executing his beneficent reforms.

"What followed that eminent statesman's dismissal, four years later, was a revival of all the old abuses of the system, which was not abolished till 1832. Its effects, as may be supposed, still linger, and for one thing, the wine crop is cultivated at the expense of the cereals." "The utmost area of land which the average Portuguese peasant can cultivate is two and a half acres." "To-day there is scarcely a tree in Portugal—the woods, including fruit and nut trees, covering less than 400,000 out of 22,000,000 acres, the entire area of the country." "The population of Portugal has not increased during a hundred years." "The crimes of fœticide and infanticide have become so common that there is scarcely a peasant woman in Portugal not guilty of them, either as principal or accessory. Illegitimacy is more common than in any country in Europe. . . . One eighth of all the reported births in the kingdom are foundlings."

Such are some of the dark traits of the picture drawn with an unwilling hand by the writer of the letter in Lippencott's.

From Bro. O. A. Ladd.

To the Brethren scattered abroad:—Another year, with all its cares, anxieties and trials, is numbered with those things that are past. The past cannot be recalled. It is gone forever. Nothing but its memory remains.

Like a bubble borne upon the "stream of time," another year has floated by. Another page in the history of man is written. Time in his swift and sure career, has come——has gone—yet is present, and notes down each moment as it passes. Many have expected ere this to have seen the King in his beauty, and to have been walking the streets of the heavenly Jerusalem, but hope has been deferred, and hearts have been made sick; and we still find ourselves inhabitants of this sin-cursed earth, in the midst of wicked men and seducers, who are waxing worse and worse.

We would to God that those who have been so sanguine in their definite time theory, might see the sad havoc which they have made with the flock, repent of their misdoing, get into working order, and improve the short time which they yet may have in repairing the breach they have made in the ranks of God's people.

May the monument which this year shall raise bear the record of time well spent. We often feel lonely and sad, being entirely separated from those of like precious faith; but if it is God's will that we should finish out the few remaining days of our pilgrimage away from our brethren, we would be willing to submit. We have found the Lord to be a present help in every time of need. Blessed be his name!

Our beloved paper, the Crisis, makes us a visit every week, for which we feel very thankful. Many cheering letters which it contains encourages our hearts to boldly face the storms as we are passing through the perils of the last days. We believe with all our heart that it cannot be long before Jesus will call for his waiting ones.

"O when shall come the moment,
When brighter far than morn,
The sunshine of thy glory
Shall on thy people dawn."

From Sr. L. M. Tower.

Dear Brn.:—The cause of God seems to be gaining ground in Savoy, Mass. Three have been buried by baptism, and others are waiting for a convenient opportunity. There seems to be a good feeling in the community. Bless God for his long forbearance and goodness to the children of men. I have labored there one half of the time the past year. Numbers and interest seem to steadily increase. Brethren, pray for the cause in Savoy, that pure and undefiled religion may be so thoroughly established in the hearts of the people, that all the powers of darkness shall not be able to turn them from the truth as it is in Jesus.

Jan. 11th, by request of brethren, I went to Plainfield, Mass. Bro. Pratt had been there preaching on prophecy. There is quite an interest to hear. They held their meetings in the town hall, which was well filled. Some came out of curiosity to hear a woman, but became so much interested as to continue to come as long as I remained. At the last meeting several members of the Congregational Church spoke, and seemed to rejoice in the liberty that they saw manifested there. Two middle-aged intelligent looking men said they were members of the Congregational Church, but they had become Adventists in belief by studying the Bible, and were not afraid to tell it. Many are studying and inquiring if these things are so?

This is emphatically a deciding time with many. To-day God says, Come. Soon the Master will rise up and shut the door. How we need entire consecration. Soon we shall behold the King in his beauty. Let all who profess the name of Christ be ready, having done all to meet the Bridegroom, and rejoice because we have waited for him. Amen.

Editors of World's Crisis:—Dear Brn.: In Matthew 24: 34, we read, "This generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

It is over eighteen hundred years since these words were spoken by our blessed Lord, and niney-six years since the first of the signs mentioned in Matthew 24: 29 was seen; but time has not erased the predictions of our Lord and Master. There are some of the generation alive yet, although they have lived beyond "threescore and ten." For the benefit of those who are looking for the return of the Lord I send you this item, which shows that Mr. Fruits would be seventeen years of age when the sun was darkened, and his wife fifteen years. If this will add one more evidence to the truth of the Word of God, please grant it small space in your valuable paper.

PROBABLY THE OLDEST COUPLE IN THE WORLD.

Dr. Wilkins, of Fairmount, recently visited a man and woman in Montgomery county, Ind., whose ages are respectively 113 and 111 years, and who have lived together in the married state eighty-five years. The name of this ancient couple is Fruits, and they are the parents of Mrs. Thomas Williams, of Catlin township. The old man stands up as straight as a ramrod, and does quite a good deal of work every day. He has always been a moderate liver, and uses no tobacco, which is an argument against tobacco users. But his wife has been a steady smoker sixty years, which is an argument in favor of tobacco. The old lady is afflicted with a cancer, which made its appearance upon her forehead forty years ago, and which she is now doctoring with coal oil. At one time in her life she weighed 225 pounds, but gradually shrank away till she now tips the beam at 125. The venerable old man was personally acquainted with Daniel Boone, Simon Gerty, Simon Kenton, Williams and others of the first settlers of the West.—Danville (Ill.) Times.

HOLINESS IN COMMON THINGS.

Conversing the other day with a housekeeper, who was in search of a servant girl, I inquired of her, have you laid it before the Lord? The glance which she gave, and her answer, "Why, I never thought of such a thing!" led to this serious thought, viz., that many christians fail to realize their privileges in the common, and yet exceedingly real affairs of life. I shall never forget the time when I consciously and trustingly believed Jesus was interested in all that interested me. I came to realize that I could tell him all, could lay before him all the minute, common things of life, and have his hand to lead me in them, and feel that he regarded me in them as really as in momentous affairs. How many times has my way been opened before me! How many times before entering a store to purchase articles of attire have I asked the Father to go with me, to assist me in the selection and choice, because it was "all for Jesus." And in very many instances I was helped, as time and disposition of the goods attested, as to the wisdom and tastefulness of the purchase. How I have rebelled at the thought, "Whatsoever ye do, whether ye eat or drink, do all to the glory of God." How I have loved to think that my wants were his care, to be looked after; that my pocket-book is his, whether it contains much or little; and in how many instances have the few loaves been multiplied incredibly.

What we want, to-day in our churches, in our Sunday schools, in our families, in society, is a practical faith. We need to realize that our Savior is the same Savior in the kitchen as in the prayer-meeting; that Jesus is Jesus in the market and store, as in the pulpit and class-room. Yea, he is to save just when we want help; that since he notes the fall of a sparrow, and counts the hairs of our head, he certainly knows we are in want of a good help. This is practical, I know, but is it too practical? Have we not just such lives to live? Is not life real? Are not our lives practical? There is very little poetry in some families in which I visit. I am glad to tell such today there is help for you, for Jesus wants to come and live in all the rooms in your house; aye, he wants to live as resident Lord in your heart. Jesus longs to help. He comes always with a purpose. He is not an objectless Jesus, for, as in the days of his flesh, he was untiring in his efforts to help, to heal, lift up, smooth out; so, by the power of his Spirit does he come to make crooked things straight; to show us an easier way of keeping house, an easier way of "keeping to rights," an easier way to get and to keep servants. (We can keep them in the way we get them, if we are Jesus' servants ourselves. Servants can tell the grade of our holiness.)

I am quite sure we can have the victory all the time; at home or abroad; in meeting; with cross children and wearying care; with servants or without servants; when the thermometer is at zero and when it is up to blood heat; when the days are sunny and bright, or dark and dreary—all the time. Jesus is the same always. He is himself when we are not ourselves, and because he lives we may live also. How often have I met with those who would say to me: "If I lived differently I would be holy; if I could go to meeting as often as as some others do; if my circumstances were different I could live an easier life, and then I could live holy and useful. But here I am, shut away from all the means of grace; the children are sick, I cannot leave them; I have no servant; times are hard," etc., and a good deal more along this line. May God teach all such by his Holy Spirit that he wants them to be holy, just where they are and as they are. He knows all about the children, the deprivations, the hardships. Not one of the reasons urged need keep them from living holy and gaining grand victories, just where they are and as they are. He does not intend that all his servants shall be in meeting at once, nor in school at once.

God is working out a great plan requiring many different workmen and various work, and he is using some of us here and some of us there. Some are known to the world and others are unknown; but all are well known to him. After we have yielded all to him, we have a right to feel, where I am is the place God wants me in; my work is what he wants it to be. I am his. "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" If the answer comes back, "stay at home and appear to be doing nothing for me," remember, the giving of a cup of cold water, in the name of a disciple, cannot lose its reward; then stay at home and have your victory. The tying of a child's shoe string may be done unto Jesus. The real song of a consecrated life is "all for Jesus." It is evermore saying "Thy will be done." "If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it."—Adv. of Christian Holiness.

SNATCHES FROM WAYSIDE MUSINGS.

N. WHEELER.

Mankind naturally goes to extremes.

It is as important that we save as it is that we earn.

The dam must be firmly built, or the egress will exceed the ingress.

By becoming impetuous we may greatly enlarge the rent, instead of setting one stitch therein.

Firmness is a principle of great worth, if it be founded upon truth and purity; otherwise one may be firmly fixed in error, and that to his own hurt.

He who would walk in the path of wisdom, must not only open his eyes, but keep them open continually.

Light maketh manifest the beauty and glory of those objects which the Divine hand hath created. But he who will not see can have as much darkness as he chooseth.

What matter if man reap what he hath sown; should he be begrudged his own choice?

He who is a lover of thorns or thistles should not be robbed of his chosen treasure.

Gold tried in the fire hath no dross; and whoever he be that possessed it hath riches indeed.

Xerxes, Alexander nor Cæsar could boast of durable riches. Even Satan himself must yield his usurped claim, when the year of jubilee has come; yet the man of wisdom shall secure the boon which monarchs of earth rejected, and in the reaping time shall gather fruit unto everlasting life.—

HOME AND HEALTH.

HOW TO RENEW ONE'S YOUTH.

A CURE EXTRAORDINARY—THE DOCTORS PUZZLED.

MR. EDITOR—DEAR SIR: A very remarkable case of restoration from disease without the use of medicine, by simple dietetic and hygienic methods, has lately come to my knowledge, which I am sure cannot fail to interest your readers, especially the invalid portion whose life is but a cup of suffering. The subject is Timothy Wheeler, of Waterbury Centre, Vt. Mr. W. is a thriving, enterprising, well-to-do stone mason and farmer, well known in Washington county. His age is fifty-five, and his average weight about one hundred and fifty-two pounds. Twelve years ago he was sorely afflicted with numerous diseases. Felons of a dangerous severity frequently prostrated him, occasioning great suffering. At one time his life was in danger, the doctors having to perform a very painful operation, by reason of which his right thumb is rendered useless. Hemorrhoids plagued him continually. Catarrh became the torment of his life. A cough followed him six months in the year, which was rapidly running him into a consumptive's grave. No physician could cure him; no relief could be obtained from any source.

Being a deep and subtile thinker, by inductive reasoning he was led to conclude that this wretched condition of his organism was entirely owing to wrong ways of living. He decided to abandon all drugs and try certain hygienic methods. Afterwards he read authors of this school and profited by their aid. With unstaggering faith and cool courage he struck out for dear life, and January 1st, 1865, commenced on his new system. Meat, fowl, fish, oysters, butter, salt condiments were banished from his diet. No tea, coffee, cider, beer, or vinegar were allowed to pass his lips. The feather bed and pillow were put aside; instead, he slept on a matrass and husk pillow. Farewell roast beef, gravies, chicken-pie, dainty bits, sweets, rich dinners, etc. He rigidly put himself on the cereals, fruits, and vegetables of dame nature, cooked in a simple manner, refusing all else; abstained from every kind of fluid at meals; eating regularly three times a day, and sleeping at regular hours. For two months the struggle was tremendous. His iron will was terribly tested. But he persevered and conquered himself. Afterward the new diet came easier. He learned to love it. Life was worth more than meat and drink. The result was speedy and most striking. The story is short.

Health came again with improved bodily conditions. Depressed at first by absence of all stimulating food, the vital force reacted splendidly. In a few months the hemorrhoids disappeared and have never again put in an appearance. One or two felons of minor severity showed themselves, apparently the diminishing and dying out crop of the old ways of living; then in a year or so felons vanished. He never had another. Catarrhs and colds fled. The cough died the hardest, but it died. The lungs had been so sensitive that labor in the dust of the barn was forbidden. The cough had for years followed him winters. Now it grew less each succeeding winter, coming on a month or two later every winter season. By the third winter it left him, and since 1868–9 he has been comparatively free from it, not having so much as a common cold. Indeed, to lung, bronchial, and nasal disease Mr. W. appears impervious and invincible. The drug dealers having been dismissed, he allowed himself not so much as a cup of herb tea. A bath in tepid water was performed once a week, but diet rather than hydropathy was relied upon to perform the cure.

Recovery was rapid and permanent. It was wonderful. Instead of cough, catarrh, colds, hemorrhoids, felons, internal inflammations, sickness, hindrance, pains, etc., there came perfect freedom from all these, and Mr. Wheeler has not had a pain for eight years! No disagreeable taste in the mouth, breath sweet, stomach ever in tone, lungs free, nervous system clean and strong, head cool and clear; all these and more he luxuriates in daily. He gained five pounds in weight the first year, and keeps it. His flesh is solid, muscles wiry. He has a wonderful power of endurance; in the hay field or at any hard work no man can go ahead of him. He can abstain from food for several meals and feel no inconvenience thereby. Sleeps just seven hours per night, then awakes refreshed and eager for life's work.

Salt is his enemy. It acts on his system like a cold, irritant poison. Radway's Regulators will not prove a quicker cathartic; hence he is careful to banish this mineral, the least particle of which to his sensitive taste is "salt as brine." Refraining from it, he is never troubled with thirst, save in summer. Melons, grapes, and apples supply him with nature's fluids sufficient for all cravings of thirst. In winter when not perspiring freely he uses no water. I do not believe he would die of thirst in the middle of Saraha. He has made some interesting exepriments, never, I think, made before, in testing human ability to live without drinking. The first winter he went thirty-five days without using a drop of fluid as a beverage; the next winter he went seventy days drinking nothing; the next one hundred and twenty days; the next one hundred and seventy days; the next two hundred and twenty days; and this winter he has not drank any fluid since Sept. 18th, 1875. On inquiring of him the result, the prompt reply was "perfect health." Life's current running smoothly, with a credit good as a bank, living for the good of others, possessing the coveted boon of perfect health, along with a competence, and having a good conscience toward God and man, as also a blessed hope of a coming joyful eternity, is it any wonder that our friend is a happy man?

The bitterest opponents of his system admire Mr. Wheeler's indomitable bravery in conquering "self," and freely admit he is a living exponent and guarantee of physical and mental health by natural methods. He is not a physician, nor a public lecturer; he ought to be in the field and well paid as both hygienic doctor and instructor on the platform. He is too modest to thus report himself. I ask the privilege of doing it for him for the sake of suffering humanity. Ought not such a case to be widely known? The doctors watch him sharply. Can his cure be explained on their system? Are we all living wrong; eating wrong food, drinking too much at meals?

Mr. Wheeler cordially offers to correspond with invalids and others seeking health. He will do so freely and without charge. He delights to do good. I have intimately known him for some twenty-five years, and can vouch for the truth of this statement of his cure.—D. T. TAYLOR, in the Plattsburg Sentinel.

SILENT MEALS.

From time immemorial, almost, it has been taught by all writers on health that a hearty laugh is promotive of digestion; hence, people have been exhorted to cultivate sociability at meals, to engage in cheerful conversation and laughter, and by all means to avoid eating in silence. Recently, we are told by a writer who seems desirous of gaining notoriety by making startling statements, that a meal to be well eaten and digested must be taken in silence. He believes in the Bible doctrine, "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might," and so would have us devote our whole attention to the matter of eating while engaged in taking food.

No good arguments are offered in support of the doctrine advanced, for the very good reason that none can be given. It remains as true as ever that cheerfulness is an aid to digestion. Cheerful emotions increase the vigor of the circulation and favor the development of nerve force, which are essential to digestion. "Laugh and grow fat" is an ancient adage, which is good hygienic doctrine. Of course it is possible to overdo the matter. A person may injure himself by too hearty laughter, or he may choke himself by trying to laugh, or talk, and eat, both at the same instant. Or, a person might occupy so much of his time in talking that he would find no time to eat. An excess of any good thing is injurious. A sullen, sour, silent eater will surely become a dyspeptic in time. Of all family gatherings, the meal should be the most social, cheerful, and pleasant. No troubles, perplexities, nor inpleasant news should ever be brought to the table.—The Health Reformer.

TRUST IN THE LORD.

Trust in the Lord with all thy heart,
If thou his love would know;
Abide in him, so shall thy soul
In endless rapture flow.

Trust in the Lord, his ways are right,
His judgments all are just;
His word is truth, his promise sure
To all who in him trust.

Trust in the Lord, whate'er betide,
Affliction, sorrow, care;
Cast all thy burdens at his feet,
And he will hear thy prayer.

Trust in the Lord, in death's dark hour
His love thy solace be;
Thy soul shall shout o'er Jordan's flood,
"I'm trusting, Lord, in thee."

WHAT THE MINISTERS SAY.

THE SECOND COMING OF CHRIST.

Will it be Spiritual, or Literal?

At an early hour every seat in the Advent Chapel was filled with a congregation made up of representatives of all denominations, to listen to a discourse by Eld. E. A. Stockman, of Portland, in review of a sermon recently preached in this city on the "second coming of Christ." Elds. Wm. Mitchell, of Kennebunkport, and Jer. Hill, of Dayton, occupied seats in the pulpit. One of the introductory exercises was the singing of a hymn written by Charles Wesley:

"Lo! He comes with clouds descending,
Once for favored sinners slain;
Thousand thousand saints attending,
Swell the triumphs of his train.
Hallelujah!
God appears on earth to reign."

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS.

The preacher said that he did not believe much good came from theological controversies, as a general thing; but as some of his friends here had invited him to review a certain sermon preached in this city, he had concluded to do so. The sermon referred to was candid in tone and kind in spirit, and he hoped to be governed by like principles in what he might say of it.

The text was from 2 Peter 2: 15, 16: "Moreover, I will endeavor that ye may be able after my decease, to have these things always in remembrance. For we have not followed cunningly devised fables, when we made known unto you the power and coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, but were eye witnesses of his majesty." The subject for consideration is then, said the preacher, the second coming of Christ to this earth. Do the Scriptures teach any such event? What is its character? Will it be literal—personal—or spiritual? Has it passed, or are we to look for it in the future? Nothing of more thrilling import; nothing of more inspiring and overmastering splendor and grandeur is there than the subject of the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ, and it is amazing, perfectly astounding that the church should have so far lost sight of it, and any attempt, however poor and weak, to revive this great theme, is most laudible and demanded. Those of you who are not accustomed to hear this doctrine preached, would be astonished if you would take your Bibles and sit down and read carefully, with this thought in your minds, at the very much that is said in the Scripture concerning it. You would be surprised to see how often it is spoken of. How it stands connected with every other Bible doctrine of any importance whatever. Many of you will be surprised to find that actually more space is occupied with reference to the second coming of Christ than with reference to his first coming, his death, his resurrection, his ascension, his intercession, all counted together.

In late years, and especially in the last decade, there has come unto the church and pulpit a wonderful transition, a marked change—a change that ought to awaken the whole body in regard to this old time doctrine of the second coming of the Lord; until now that event is ignored. O, no, you say; you misrepresent us. Our ministers are not unsound. They believe the Lord is coming as much as you do; but when we make this statement we do not mean to make it wholesale. The sentiment is now most rapidly growing over the whole body of the house of God, especially over the pulpits, that the second coming of Christ, personally, is a thing not to be expected at all. And this change of opinion is perfectly natural and easy. When one begins to say, "My Lord delayeth his coming," it is perfectly easy to say, "it will be a long time," and finally, "He will not come at all."

Now, then, let me read from a sermon preached in one of your city pulpits. Says the preacher, "Is this coming again of Christ to be in the same manner in which he went away?" If the preacher had turned to the fourteenth chapter of John he could have read—"I go to prepare a place"—not state—"for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am there ye may be also." I deem that a sufficient answer to that inquiry.

Again, says the preacher, "Christ's second coming is in the spirit." "He ascended in a spirit body." That sounds like modern spiritualism. And again he says, "Christ directly told his disciples not to regard him through the senses." "I go in the body to return in the Holy Spirit. He goes "a sufferer to come back a conqueror." And again, "Christ's coming is in the Holy Spirit—so he came on Pentecost and will so continue to do till all know him." His work in the flesh is finished; there is no more need, nor any promise of it again."

So much quotation gives you the position of the sermon, from which you see very distinctly that we are not to blame when we say that the pulpit is undergoing a startling change. You have thought we have seen danger when there was no cause of alarm. You have supposed that your pulpits were sound to the core, or perhaps did not care so be they would not trouble you with this hated doctrine of the end of all things. This matter of the Lord's soon coming to earth is purely a thing of divine revelation. Nothing else has the slightest thing touching upon it. The second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ bears no relation to science or philosophy, or human reason, no more than the miraculous conception of Jesus Christ. Dare our pulpits, dare these modern expounders grapple with that divine phenomena? There is but one standard by which to determine this question of the coming of Christ, and that is the word of God. And it should be understood that all Scriptures are to be taken in their primary and literal meaning unless, in their very nature the texts are manifestly and without doubt symbolical. The preacher here quoted several authorities to prove that "the literal sense is the common rule of all rational interpretations."

Will you let Christ speak for himself? Will you accept the testimony of the Holy Ghost? In 2 Cor. we read, "Therefore, judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who both will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the councils of the heart; and then shall every man have praise of God."

Did that occur at pentecost? "But every man in his own order. Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." Were the dead raised at pentecost?

Are the dead raised every time you have a conversion? "For the son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works." If Christ came at Pentecost every man has got his reward. "But the day of the Lord shall come as a thief in the night." Has that occurred?

What mean the allegations in this sermon that Christ came at Pentecost? Did the preacher forget there were such texts as this in the Book: "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts and saying, "where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." But if Christ came at Pentecost the promise was fulfilled eighteen hundred years ago. Why, then, do men assert that Christ came at Pentecost and comes again and again as often as men are converted, or, as another of your pulpits is reported to have said, "the coming of Christ is like the fruitage of the seasons, not suddenly—not quickly." But the word says: "As the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Fruit does n't ripen as quick as lightning; but the coming of Christ shall be in the "twinkling of an eye."

When a political offender in the old world was adjudged to death she clasped the goddess of liberty in the public square and exclaimed, "O, liberty, what crimes are done in thy name!" I often have that thought, O, holy Word; O, blessed book of divine revelation! O, transcript of the mind and heart of Christ, what wicked doctrines are taught in thy name! "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." (Not as the fruit buds and grows in the springtime). "And the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore, comfort one another with these words."

Has the world heard the trump of the descending Christ, do you think? Have the dead lived? Then Christ has not come. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God, and our Savior Jesus Christ." And this was written a long time after Pentecost. What a stretch of license on the interpretation of the Word of God to assert, as this sermon asserts; that Christ went to heaven in a spirit body. Our Lord carried our flesh into heaven. He has gone up a physical being, a body that did not see corruption.

Will he ever come back again? We turn to the first chapter of Acts and read: "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Can anything be more explicit than this? Yet this sermon says he went into heaven a spirit body. If that license is to be taken with the word of God it becomes a great question. What is the Bible worth? I like to revere the opinions of men, but when a question of this sort comes to the text I am frank to say I must take the testimony of these two men in white apparel in preference to all the mere deductions of the modern theologians. Now, then, having gone over these Scriptures thus far I wish to say that the Christian church in every age—the great body of the church—have so understood these Scriptures. The church of God, down through the ages, has held to the doctrine which these texts teach.

[Writers were here quoted all through the ages from the time of Christ to the present time to substantiate this assertion].

All the Protestant creeds recognize this doctrine of the personal coming of the Lord Jesus. This preacher says that Christ went to heaven in a spirit body, and in this he is supported only by the creed of the Swedenborgians. This sermon closes the ordinances of the gospel, for it says that Christ came at Pentecost—in the Holy Spirit at Pentecost. Can a man avow this sentiment and hold a communion after? "This do till I come." I cannot celebrate his coming as a future event if I believe he came at Pentecost. This kind of thing destroys the trinity; it makes Christ and the Holy Spirit identical. It closes probation to us and the redemptive work. "Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Then he is in heaven till the restitution of all things. If Christ came eighteen hundred years ago the resurrection is passed.

Once more, if this interpretation is correct, the judgment is passed. "Thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him; the judgment was set and the books were opened." All these declarations of coming and all this hope of the church recorded in the Book is not revealed as a matter of history, but as a matter of expectation.

In conclusion, you see that with this modern spiritualistic interpretation applied to the second advent of our Lord Jesus Christ the whole superstructure of gospel doctrine goes to pieces. If we may so construe that doctrine, the judgment is passed; there is no resurrection; and precisely that is what Mr. Beecher says, and as much of this sentiment is his echo around the country, and under his interpretation the whole thing has gone into the vortex of Spiritualism. There is not an intelligent Spiritualist in the world, but what will say the heartiest Amen to this line of interpretation. Would to God that some in every community, who have adequate power to do this thing, might be raised up to stem this terrible tide.

Read your Bibles; study the word of the Lord, and study the word of the Lord for yourself. Do not take anybody's teachings. Go to the Book and see what God has said about the coming of his Son.

"I WILL COME AGAIN."—JOHN 14: 3.

J. E. GIFFORD.

While Jesus was with his disciples he informed them that he would not be with them always, and to comfort their sorrowing hearts he told them that if he went away he would come again and receive them unto himself. And at the time of his ascension, while they stood gazing up into heaven, after he had been received up out of their sight, two men stood by them in white apparel; and we hear them saying—"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner, as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts 1: 10, 11. Were not these comforting words to those sorrowing christians who had just parted with their best friend? And are they less comforting to the christians who are living at the present day? Can we not lift up our heads and rejoice, knowing that our redemption draweth nigh?

It is true we are met on every hand with severe trials—at times almost overwhelmed by the enemy's forces; but when we use the sword of the Spirit, they flee, and we come off conquerors.

Jesus had the devil to contend with; the disciples also had severe conflicts with foes; and why should we not be willing to fight the good fight of faith, and proclaim to a dying world that Jesus is soon coming again without sin unto salvation to those who look for his return?

The disciples, after receiving those comforting words from Jesus and the two angels, went forth into all the known world proclaiming the joyful news. By careful study of the sacred oracles we learn that the object of Jesus' return will be (1), To raise the dead:—"I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope. For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1 Thess. 4: 13, 16.

(2) To judge the world:—"I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1. "Because he hath appointed a day, in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Acts 17: 31.

(3) To save his people:—"And it shall be said in that day, Lo, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us; this is the Lord; we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation." Isa. 25: 9.

(4) To destroy the wicked:—"Who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power." 2 Thess. 1: 9.

(5) To restore all things:—"Whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3: 21. "For, behold, I create new heavens and a new earth; and the former shall not be remembered, nor come into mind." Isa. 65: 17, Comp. Rev. 21.

(6) To reign forever and ever:—"And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." Rev. 11: 15, comp. Dan. 2: 44, 7: 13, 14, 17, "Wherefore, brethren, comfort [or exhort, marg.] one another with these words."

R. W. WILSON.

I have taken considerable pains to find out the true position as held by Seventh Day keepers in relation to what constituted the first or old covenant. I find they are not all of one mind in regard to this important point,—I mean important to them, being fundamental to their system. Eld. Cornell, in his debate with Eld. Miles Grant, in San Francisco, admitted that the ten commandments was the first covenant; but Eld. J. W. Andrews has taken the position in his work entitled "The Two Covenants," p. 17, that "the first covenant was the contract made at Sinai, between God and Israel, concerning the law of God, or ten commandments; obedience to that law constituting the condition of the covenant." This fact of disagreement between these leading men of that faith does not accord very well with a statement made by Eld. Canright, when preaching in their tent in Santa Clara, Sept., 1874, in speaking of the value of their prophetess, Mrs. White, to them as a people. He said the First Day Adventists were much divided; but their unity was preserved as follows: namely, If two of their leading men disagreed in relation to the meaning of a passage of Scripture, Mrs. White would have a vision, and whatever she saw in relation to it would decide the matter. This may account for the many perversions and strange notions which we find in their expositions of Scripture.

Eld. J. W. Andrews' position (I mention him because he is their first and most influential writer), in relation to what constituted the first covenant, should not be received for this reason: It is not sustained by the Word of God; in fact, it stands in direct opposition to God's own statements in regard to this point—"And he declared unto you his covenant which he commanded you to perform, even ten commandments; and he wrote them upon two tables of stone." Deut. 4: 13. God has repeated this fact several times over that his covenant consisted in what he had written on the two tables of stone. But in reply to these positive and definite portions of Scripture, Eld. Andrews on page 18 of the work referred to says: "But all parties must agree that the ten commandments are not a covenant in the sense of being a contract or agreement, as they contain no such thing." He refers here to Webster's definition of covenant, which he had previously quoted as being a "mutual consent, or agreement of two or more persons," etc.

In defining the word covenant our arbiter should be God's Word, and not Webster's Dictionary, for God has used this word with much frequency, and by comparing scripture with scripture we can readily learn the sense in which God has used it. We admit that it does not always have the same meaning, but the connection will determine its use in every case. In this way we as a people have found the scriptural use or meaning of other Bible terms such as soul, hell, kingdom, etc. Now we will "follow the same rule and mind the same thing" relative to covenant. Webster only gives us the common definition of the term covenant as used among men,—a mutual agreement, or contract, in which the parties have a common interest and benefit therefrom. But this idea of a covenant should not govern in defining the covenants of God, because it is incompatible with the position of the parties; in this the twofold and mutual relation does not exist.

God's covenants with our fallen race are all gracious; he bestows on us all the benefits, and we should render all the obligations incurred thereby. From the scriptural use of this term it is very evident that it signifies primarily the relation into which God enters with man, rather than the relation into which man enters with God; and this is the reason why God speaks of them as being his covenants.

But what saith the Scriptures? We will see. The first use of covenant we find connected with Adam's transgression. But they (margin) like Adam have transgressed the covenant. Hosea 6: 7. What kind of a covenant did Adam transgress? It was one commanded, like that of the Decalogue. "Thou shalt not eat of it." Gen. 2: 17. We find this word again in Gen. 9: 9. Here it means the promise of God that he would not again destroy the world by water. And in Gen. 15th and 17th chapters we find covenant used as a synonym of the promise God made to Abraham. Abram said—"Lord God, what wilt thou give me? . . . And he brought him forth abroad and said, Look now toward heaven, and tell the stars if thou be able to number them. And he said unto him, So shall thy seed be. And he believed in the Lord, and he counted it to him for righteousness. And he said unto him, I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees, to give thee this land to inherit it. And he said, Lord God, whereby shall I know that I shall inherit it?" And God directed him to select certain victims to be slain as a sacrifice; "and he took unto him all these, and divided them in the midst, and laid each piece one against another. . . . And it came to pass that when the sun went down and it was dark, behold a smoking furnace and [margin] a lamp of fire that passed between those pieces."

This promise of God thus ratified by a sacrifice, and the symbols of the Divine presence passing between the pieces, is reiterated in Gen. 17: 2–4, and here God calls it his covenant. "And I will make my covenant between me and thee, and will multiply thee exceedingly. And Abram fell on his face; and God talked with him, saying, As for me, behold, my covenant is with thee, and thou shalt be a father of many nations" (having reference to his children by faith—"the nations of the saved").

This promise, or covenant, with Abraham is referred to in 1 Chron. 16: 15–17—"Be ye mindful always of his covenant, the word he commanded to a thousand generations, which he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac, and hath confirmed the same to Jacob for a law, and to Israel for an everlasting covenant." What covenant did God make with Abram, and confirm the same to Isaac and to Jacob? Paul has answered in Heb. 11: 9—(Abraham) "dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise." We see that in this instance that promise and covenant are used synonymously, and the gracious character of this covenant is manifest in the fact that God required as its seal the shedding of blood, indicating that without an atonement there could be no channel of blessing from God to fallen man. Furthermore it is very plain that there is no mutual agreement or contract with two or more parties embodied in this covenant; for God only passed between the pieces offered in sacrifice,—it being God's covenant with Abraham, and not Abraham's covenant with God.

Next we find a covenant made between Abraham and Abimelech, as recorded in Gen. 21: 22, 32. Mark the striking dissimilarity between this and one of God's covenants. The parties of this are on the same footing. This is man's covenant with his fellow; and in this the twofold and mutual relation is recognized, special benefits accruing therefrom to each party concerned. Abimelech received certain assurances of favor from Abraham, to himself and posterity, and Abraham received a pledge of favor in relation to a well which he had digged; "and it is written that both of them made a covenant."

With men it takes two to make a covenant; but God can make one alone. With men a covenant must consist in a mutual agreement; but God can make one by his promise, his command, or by a fixed law. In the instances already referred to, we get the first, the primary and biblical signification of God's covenants; and as in these cases the common idea of a covenant, as being a mutual agreement with two or more persons, is necessarily excluded, so we will find it in every other instance where the expression "covenant of God" is used.

Notice the use of the word in the following scriptures: "Thus saith the Lord, If ye can break my covenant of the day, or my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day and night in their season [In this passage covenant is used to designate a fixed arrangement or system, regulating the precise succession of day and night in their SEASON], then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign on his throne." Jer. 33: 20, 21. This scripture refers to the covenant God has made with David; and, like the one made with Abraham, it embraces David's son, which is Christ; hence it is very important in its relation to us.

God said to David, "I have made a covenant with my chosen; I have sworn unto David my servant, Thy seed will I establish for ever, and build up thy throne to all generations. My mercy will I keep for him for ever, and my covenant shall stand fast with him. My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David. His seed shall endure for ever, and his throne as the sun before me." Ps. 89: 3, 4, 28, 29, 34–36. God's covenant here simply means his promise to David. In Ps. 50: 4, this word is used again. "Gather my saints together unto me, those that have made a covenant with me by sacrifice." Andrew A. Bonar (who is good authority) has rendered this passage as follows: "Those who over the sacrifice have entered into covenant with him"; and that this criticism is correct who can doubt, when we consider the facts in the case? For there is no such thing in substance as a covenant with God and his people, the basis of which is their works; such as their sacrifices in the way of self-denial and full consecration. This is all due from them as servants of Christ, and the purchase of his blood. All that a christian does in the way of service for Christ is prompted by love, etc. This is all easy. He has the same feeling as his Master,—"I delight to do thy will, O my God."

We who are looking for the return of our blessed Lord have sometimes used this text as applicable to us, on account of what we have suffered in the way of reproach for our faith; but this is not correct. We are unprofitable servants at the best; and we will not be gathered by God unto our Lord at his coming, on account of our sacrifices, but on account of our interest by faith in the sacrifice of Him who was slain for us.

But let us return to the point under discussion. You may think this text gives some countenance to the common theory of a covenant. We think not, for this expresses the action of the church considered as one, entering into covenant relation with God by means of the sacrifice of Christ. This is proven by the following scripture (Isa. 55: 3)—"Incline your ear and come unto me; hear, and your soul shall live." (Under this covenant it is not do, and live; but, believe in what is done by Christ, and live. The word "hear" in this passage is used as an equivalent of faith; for "faith comes by hearing," and, "the just shall live by faith.") "And I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." What kind of a covenant is this? It is that which was made sure to David by the promise and oath of God in relation to the perpetuity of his seed and kingdom, as quoted above. We find the same use of covenant also in Isa. 59: 21—"As for me, this is my covenant with them, saith the Lord: My spirit that is upon thee, and my words which I have put in thy mouth, shall not depart out of thy mouth, nor out of the mouth of thy seed, nor out of the mouth of thy seed's seed, saith the Lord, from henceforth and for ever."

We will now show, by a few passages of Scripture, that God has also called what he has commanded his covenant, as in the case cited in relation to Adam's transgression. Gen. 17: 10—"This is my covenant which ye shall keep, between me and you, and thy seed after thee: every man child among you shall be circumcised." This covenant consists in God's command in regard to circumcision. We find the same in Judges 2: 19, 20—"And it came to pass when the judge was dead, that they returned, and corrupted themselves more than their fathers in following other gods to serve them, and to bow down unto them; they ceased not from their own doings nor from their stubborn ways; and the anger of the Lord was hot against Israel, and he said, Because that this people hath transgressed my covenant, which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened unto my voice." Again in Josh. 23: 16—"When ye have transgressed the covenant of the Lord your God, which he commanded you, and have gone and served other gods, and bowed yourselves to them, then shall the anger of the Lord be kindled against you, and ye shall perish quickly from off the good land which he has given unto you." The transgression specified in these texts is idolatry; and this God has said is a transgression of the covenant which he commanded their fathers; and there is but one covenant in which he has prohibited by a special command the sin of idolatry; namely, the old one—the ten commandment covenant.

We find another passage of equal weight in its bearing on this point, in Josh. 7: 11. "Israel has sinned, and they have transgressed my covenant, which I commanded them; for they have even taken of the accursed thing, and have also stolen, and dissembled also; and they have put it even among their own stuff." Which covenant does this refer to? The one in which God has commanded saying, "Thou shalt not steal." These scriptures furnish conclusive evidence that the old, or first covenant, and the ten commandments are identical.

For the foregoing reasons, we claim that Eld. J. W. Andrews' objection to the ten commandments being a covenant, on the basis that they do not contain a contract, or agreement, is not valid; for we have found that God's covenants do not involve or imply a contract, or agreement, between parties; and moreover, his definition of God's covenant with Israel, as consisting in a "contract or agreement concerning the law of God," is without a single scriptural precedent or warrant; in fact, there is not an instance in the Bible, in which "covenant of God" is used, that will admit of such a definition as this. Eld. Andrews has assumed this position in order to sustain a certain theory which he holds relative to the ten commandments. His premises in this regard are not true; therefore, all his deductions, and those who have copied from him, are also untrue. This statement I purpose to establish more fully in my next.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

E. A. BOYNTON.

Our Savior prayed thus for his followers: "That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me." John 17: 21. And Paul exhorted the brethren after this manner: "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." 1 Cor. 1: 10. And again: "That ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel." Phil. 1: 27. And yet again: "That ye be likeminded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." Phil. 2: 2.

From the above Scriptures and many others, it is very evident that the Lord would have all his people, of every name and nation, joined together in one loving, happy family. Some think this can never be until they are pretty thoroughly agreed in their doctrinal views. But I am now convinced that they can and ought to be harmoniously united in christian work and worship, however widely they may differ in their understanding of the Scriptures. I am satisfied that there is no way in which christians will be so likely to come to a oneness of faith, as by being determined to unite in a loving, friendly manner, in spite of their doctrinal differences.

There is no church organization in my neighborhood. Although several profess religion, sincere, devoted christians are very few. Our little band consists of Methodists, Congregationalists and Adventists; and often those of other denominations join with us. We unite pleasantly and harmoniously in the Sabbath school, prayer meeting, etc.; and although the attendance is sometimes very small, we continue our S. S. through the winter, and our prayer meeting through haying and harvesting. In our adult Bible class we do not shrink from discussing, freely and candidly, any subject that is presented, however widely we may differ in regard to it, and thus we seldom fail to get some light; and I think I can see that we are more and more inclined to view things alike, especially those of practical importance.

We are not able to have regular preaching, but gladly welcome christian ministers of every denomination whom the Lord directs this way. Believing it to be of the utmost importance that we do all in our power to help each other on in the christian life, and to win others to the fold of Christ, we are firmly resolved that no denominational difference shall alienate or separate us, or hinder our work. We feel a strong attachment to each other; and while our numbers are slowly increasing, we feel that we are gradually growing in grace. I hope and pray that the Holy Spirit will unite the hearts of God's people more and more all through the land.

WORKING.

You cannot be Christ's without working for Christ. Where there is life there is a manifestation of life. The tree of righteousness bears the fruit of righteousness. If you have a genuine christian experience, you will do the work of a christian. "This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works." Titus 3: 8. But there is great danger here of being deceived. Christianity has become thoroughly organized. The church has become a powerful machine. The division of labor is well nigh complete. One man preaches and prays. A half a dozen do the singing. Three or four more visit the sick, read the Bible, and instruct the people from house to house. For all this the church pays. These preachers and singers and visitors do their part, and draw their salaries. The members contribute their money, the work goes on, and the church prospers. All this may be done through zeal for the church, without much personal piety. Men worked upon the ark who were not saved in the ark. So many give their money to promote the christianity of the day, who have neither part nor lot in this matter; for their heart is not right in the sight of God.

Works, as the fruit of piety, are indispensable; but works, as a substitute for piety, are delusive and dangerous. They lead men to believe they are safe, when they are not safe. This makes an entirely different test of the christian character from that which the Master has made. He who gives most is he who is most highly esteemed, though he may be proud, self-willed and worldly. But little estimate is placed upon humility, faith and devotion. Conformity to the world is encouraged—for it is thought to add to one's influence. Thus many are deceived. If one who gives all his goods to feed the poor, and has not charity—inward religion—is profited nothing by it, how much less is he who gives of his income to sustain an aristocratic church, from which the poor are excluded, made by it an heir of heaven! "Ye cannot serve God and mammon."

A heart given to the world is not sanctified by consecrating a portion of its gains to the cause of God. "Ye must be born again." John 3: 6. "If any man be in Christ he is a new creature." 2 Cor. 5: 17. "They that are Christ's have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts." Gal. 5: 24. For the experience that these words denote, there is no substitute. God will not accept of any offering in the place of the heart. He wants you. Cyrus was rewarded for the work he did in executing the commands of God. You will receive your pay for every good action you perform. You will feel better. And God will give you your reward for every thing you do for others. But all this does not secure your salvation. The king pays his servants their wages; but he takes his children into his palace. Keep on doing all the good you can; but do not trust in your good works for your salvation. Seek that holiness without which you cannot see the Lord.—Earnest Christian.

ONLY TWO.

Only two ways. One broad, and the other narrow; one leads to destruction, the other to life; many go by the one, few by the other. Which is your way? Only two sorts of people. Many sorts in man's opinion—many societies, classes, and denominations. Only two in God's sight: the righteous and the wicked, the wheat and the chaff, the living and the dead. Which are you? Only two deaths: the death of the righteous and the death of the wicked. Which do you think you will die? Which do you not wish to die? Which would it be if you were to die this moment? Only two sides at the day of judgment: the right hand and the left. Only those two. Those on the right hand will be blessed—"Come, ye blessed of my Father." Those on the left hand will be cursed—"Depart, ye cursed." All must appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, to receive for the things done in the body, whether good or bad. What word shall be spoken to you? On which side of the throne will you stand?—Ex.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

Pilate, before passing the sentence of death upon Christ, inquired of him what his real position was in the world; whether he was the king of the Jews or what he considered himself to be. Jesus answered him "To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." Pilate then anxiously inquired, "What is truth?" The import of his question seems to be, What truth hast thou come to establish among men?

Truth is the medium through which facts are conveyed from one mind to another, and may consist in words, writing, pictures, models, or anything which is in "exact accordance with that which is, or has been, or shall be." Webster.

An event or fact is not truth, but that which conveys it from one mind to another. That communication is truth.

Revealed truth is the communication of facts made by revelation. Divine truth is that statement of facts made by divine authority. Saving truth is a communication of facts made to those in danger, by which they are enabled to escape from the snare and find safety. God's Word is truth because he is a being who cannot lie. We may prove God's Word to be true by comparing its statements with facts stated, which come within the range of our knowledge. If we hear a statement that there is a certain treasure hidden in a certain cave, and we go to the cave and find the treasure exactly as described, we know that the statement of its existence is truth.

So it is with the Word of the Lord; we test its truthfulness by comparing its statements with the events and things described, and find a perfect agreement between them, which is a demonstration that the statements are truth. This demonstration not only proves the truthfulness of Bible statements, but it also proves the author of those declarations to be a being far above humanity in knowledge and power; for men by their natural foresight and power cannot foretell and bring to pass events as the Author of the Holy Scriptures has done.

The Bible proves its record of earthly events and scenes to be true, just as a correctly made almanac proves its statements of eclipses to be true by the elipses happening just as stated. Jesus, in prayer to the Author of Bible testimony, says—"Thy Word is truth."

One of the principal objects of Christ's first advent to this world, was to establish the truthfulness of God's Word; as he said: "For this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth." As he sanctified himself for the accomplishment of that great work, so he prayed that his people "might be sanctified through the truth;" that is, that they might bear witness unto the truth as he, their Lord, had done.

God has made it the first and most imperative duty of all his servants to bear testimony unto the positive truthfulness of his inspired revelations. This became emphatically necessary, because Satan, and all rebels against God, manifest their opposition to his government, by seeking to invalidate his testimony given for the guidance and safety of his creatures.

The first and great duty we owe to our God is, therefore, to acknowledge in our hearts and express openly the positive truthfulness of all that he has revealed to the children of men. This confidence is called faith. Such an expression is called "confession of faith." To bear witness unto the truth is to state and exhibit facts which, in their nature and position, serve to prove what is truth.

To bear witness in a court is to present facts calculated to establish the innocence or guilt of the defendant. To bear witness for God is to labor to prove that he has revealed the truth and only the truth in his Word. This can be done by arguments showing that all God has said of earthly events, which have transpired in the past, agrees perfectly with the events as they took place; and also by manifesting in our lives as disciples of Christ just such acts and characters as God declares his grace in men will produce. This was exactly the way Christ and his apostles witnessed to the truth when they gave the church an example of testifying for God before the people. God designed that such arguments and proof of the divinity of his Word should produce and maintain among men confidence in the sacredness and truthfulness of the Holy Scriptures.

When men refuse or neglect to give such arguments, God cannot honor them by giving them the riches of his grace, by which the standard of holiness to the Lord is maintained, and a separation from the world is kept up; so that the proof in both departments is lost, which must result in a want of reverence for the Word of God, and an increase of scepticism as to its truthfulness.

Satan's first attack upon the government of Jehovah was directed against his revealed will to man; and his tactics and base of operations have never changed. God has clearly instructed his servants in this matter, and imperatively demands that they plant their batteries so as to defend the sacredness and eternal truthfulness of his holy Word.

Let the church defend God's citadel of truth, and she holds a position of perfect defence from the enemies' missiles of death. When we stand in defence of the gospel, God himself will stand in defence of us; but when we cowardly, for fear of reproach or for worldly gain, yield the fort to the enemy, opening it to his false interpretations, introducing into its place men's opinions and human creeds, or reckon it of little importance, or trample it under feet as false and delusive, then our heads will be uncovered so that the thunderbolts of heaven will miserably destroy us.

Let us remember that unbelief in what God had said was the cause of the condemnation of our race and the blighting of our world; and that the opposite of that—faith in his testimony—reverses the action, giving to man justification, and to our world eternal glory.

Saving faith is a hearty, fixed confidence in divine truth, which causes us to adopt that truth as the rule of life and the foundation upon which our hope of future life and happiness rests. Christian works and experience are the fruit of christian faith. Righteousness is imputed to us or given to us when we believe God's Word, and is the operating principle which produces good works; therefore, our righteousness is only self-righteousness if it is not obtained through real faith in divine truth.

God has given the most demonstrative proofs of the truthfulness of his Word, having fulfilled every prediction in perfect harmony with the prophetic language, and has executed every threatening upon the wicked as stated; and has fulfilled his gracious promises to all his people as classes and individuals, exactly according to the conditions stated and the assurances given. God justly demands that all men believe his revelations, because he is God, and also because he has given them individually sufficient proof of its truthfulness to make their acceptance of it the pivot upon which they turn to justification or damnation.

We greatly fear that many people of this generation are not taught the importance of this great truth, that our salvation turns upon our faith in God's truth, and not upon our emotions or external relations. It is true our emotions and christian relations are required to be of a certain class; but their spiritual and true character may be determined by the character of our faith.

The idea of leading men to Christ and not leading them into a belief of his gospel is a very dangerous and false idea. The first step towards salvation is to accept God's Word as an expression of eternal truth. Saving faith never allows its possessors to accept of portions of sacred truth and reject other portions; for it demands that every part be accepted as divine and given by a kind Father for our benefit.

God has given his truth to accomplish a certain and important part in the salvation of men, and when it is rejected or not applied as designed, that work cannot be accomplished, any more than the work designed to be done by the Holy Spirit can be accomplished without it. God has given his Son, Spirit and Word as the great Agents in the salvation of our race; and if we reject either, we reject them all. When men talk about laboring for the salvation of sinners, but say we must not preach doctrines, we think they make a very dangerous mistake, which is breaking the first rule of the divine plan, and is directly opposed to Christ's teaching, and the example of the apostles. Christ taught his servants in their commission to preach the gospel, and faith in it, as the means and condition of salvation.

Let us cleave to the divine rules, and fully submit to the teachings and examples of heavenly truth, and God will bring us to enjoy all the glorious blessings promised in his holy Word. J. C.

"It is said that the Pope threatens the Czar of Russia and his family for persecuting the Catholics."

This reminds us of the ancient saying, which in many cases proves to be very true: "Whom the gods will destroy they first make mad." Such a threat from the Pope, under present circumstances, must be an act of madness or an expression of desperation. It would only make his destruction more certain and complete. J. C.

HUMILITY.

Humility is an essential qualification of christian character, and for efficient christian labor. God will not give grace to those who use it for their personal aggrandizement, or for the building up of a class to enjoy worldly glory and fame. God bestows spiritual blessings upon those who will use them to glorify the giver and not the receiver.

Just as soon as a person or class of persons begin to reckon their prosperity and triumphs as the result of their own wisdom, or of human effort, thus taking the glory to themselves for the good accomplished, God will withdraw his special blessings from them, leaving them to learn the vanity of human learning and power to accomplish the great work of saving men from their sins.

Christian humility is a realizing sense of human depravity, weakness, ignorance, incapability of doing good, producing perfect dependence on God, and a fear to trust unsanctified humanity. It manifests itself in making all earthly and human means and instrumentalities secondary and of little importance compared to divine means and help in the service of God. God giveth grace to the humble, while he beholdeth the proud afar off.

Men can bear much adversity in the service of God and be safe, for it will cause them to cling to him for protection and help, thus securing all they need for victory; while prosperity causes many to forsake the Lord, because they feel self-sufficient, trusting to learning, wealth, and worldly influence for success.

Worldly prosperity has ruined, spiritually, every class of apostate christians since Christ ascended. It is the rock upon which every church has struck, which has gone down under a worldly, unsanctified, unholy wave of satanic influence and power.

A people, to enjoy the inestimable blessings of holy communion with God and the assistance of Jesus Christ in doing christian work, must walk very meekly in the vale of humility, where they can ever pray, Lord, help, or we perish. As long as God continues to employ an individual or class in his vineyard to do responsible work for him, he throws a strong guard around them, to prevent the growth of pride and self-dependence, in suffering reproach and poverty to follow them as was prefigured in the life of Christ.

We may feel assured that, when the flood-gates of wealth and worldly prosperity are thrown open to a people, and they go unhindered in popularity and pride, God has dismissed them as his peculiar people, and abandoned them to pleasure and destruction. "Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth. If we are without these chastisements then are we bastards and not sons"—false professors and not real christians.

It is a historic fact that the true people of God, in all the past ages, have been a poor, outcast people, despised of the world; and as soon as they have become unwilling to walk in that vale of humility, and have sought to gain the friendship of and to affiliate with those who occupy high seats and enjoy the emoluments and glory of the world, God has at that point forsaken them by withdrawing from them his special blessings, which sanctify and make holy his people; thus leaving them in the darkness of night to stumble over their self-righteousness and worldly wickedness into perdition. All classes of God's church, at their beginning, have been despised, reproached and rejected of worldly men; and when they have outgrown this position, they have invariably been succeeded by those who refuse to keep in the ranks of those rising to the plane of worldly fellowship, while departing from the fellowship of God.

We give below, to show the humility of the M. E. Church fifty years ago, an extract from the reminiscences of one of its humble servants, which we clip from the Christian Standard,

"To enter the Methodist ministry in 1824, required more than it has subsequently. Not of literary preparation, for there were, at that time, very few educated men, if any, in our effective ministry. The circuits were large, our people mostly poor, the salary (then called allowance) one hundred dollars for the minister, an equal amount for his wife, if he had one, and a small sum for each child until fourteen years old. The roads were imperfect, most of the families with whom we lodged were poor, and lived in small houses; and we had to be in the saddle several hours every day, and usually took care of our own beast. There was nothing to tempt ambition, and educated young men, as a rule, avoided a work requiring so much toil and self-denial, with such poor pay.

And then again, we were only about thirty years from the death of Mr. Wesley, under God, our great founder. All his assistants had been taken from the toiling classes, and the leading men in all our conferences still followed his example as exactly as possible in all things. Has he gifts? has he grace? and is he useful? were the three leading questions proposed, when a young man received license to preach, or on his admission into the annual conference. No course of study was then prescribed, only we were advised to read the Bible, daily, closely, and in unceasing prayer for a clear insight into its saving truths. Then, as helps to its better understanding, we were directed to the writings of Mr. Wesley aud Mr. Fletcher, with other books then accessible. A prescribed course of study came many years after that, for all young men entering our ministry." J. C.

"A well known Bank President of Worcester, according to the Gazette, is disgusted. He remarked on hearing of the bank robbery at Northampton: "I am sick of this rascally world. Don't want to see or do business with anybody. I'd rather be an old farmer, living on a cross road, four miles from the sight of everybody, than to have anything to do with banks, money, or men."

It seems as if the "howl" of "rich men" had already commenced; if so, the end of it must be awful to them. The prophet seemed to have anticipated this experience when he said—"Oh, that I had in the wilderness a lodging place of a wayfaring man; that I might leave my people, and go from them; for they be all adulterers, an assembly of treacherous men." Jer. 9: 2.

This passage seems to have a striking application to a numerous class of the most appaling acts of wickedness which is now agitating the public mind, and among them the following case of shocking depravity:

"E. D. Winslow, formerly a Methodist minister, and of late publisher of the Boston Post and the Daily News, has forged paper to the extent of about two hundred thousand dollars and fled." J. C.

REVIVAL INTEREST.

There is an increasing revival interest in all directions. So far as we can learn it is deeper-toned than is common. Indeed, if it were not, it could not be expected to be very lasting in its results. The churches to-day are full of backsliders; of men and women who are strangers to the true religion of Jesus. They give no evidence that they are living in Christ. On the contrary, they live in the spirit of the world, its fashions, customs, and manners. They are of the world, therefore speak they of the world. They serve mammon instead of Christ. Their names are on the church book, but not in the Lamb's book of life.

The standard of religion, as presented by Bro. Moody, is far in advance of that which has been exhibited by the majority of preachers and their church membership. This is one reason why the blessing of the Lord attends his labors. But in addition to this, his whole aim is to reach sinners, and persuade them to be true christians. When ministers do not make special efforts to reach the unconverted, they must not expect to see much fruit from their labors. If they devote their best energies to preaching doctrine, they only succeed in making sectarians instead of making christians. There has been a great lack of personal effort directed to persuade men to immediate repentance. This is being seen and felt very keenly by many professors of religion. It is truly alarming to see how little anxiety is manifested for the salvation of the perishing. The subject is treated as one of but little consequence, compared with some doctrinal point, about which equally good men may differ. Politics, business, fashion, and all sorts of little matters, occupy the attention, while scarcely a word is said about Jesus, and the necessity of being in him, in order to be saved. It is time every professed follower of Christ was aroused from his careless slumbers, and actively engaged in earnest work to lead as many as possible to seek pardon for their sins before our dear Savior appears. Soon the cry will be "Too late! too late!" M. G.

SPRINGWATER.

The meetings in Springwater, N. Y., have continued to increase in interest from Jan. 23d to this date (Feb. 7th). The Lord has done great things. Some fifty or sixty have been brought from darkness to light, and many more are "almost persuaded" to be christians. The whole community is stirred. The meetings are the chief topic of conversation. All classes are moved. The house is full about every night, and often crowded. Every evening some two hundred remain to the inquiry meeting, in which the chief work is done. The young, the middle-aged, and the gray-haired, have bowed at the feet of Jesus, confessing their sins.

The meetings have been characterized by a blessed union spirit, without which we could not have expected such rich grace from the Lord.

A part of the time we were in the Advent chapel, and a part in the Methodist, the Presbyterians uniting, and also the Christian preacher. We think a careful observer would have been puzzled to tell to which denomination each one belonged. Our hearts were united by ties stronger than creed bonds—the love of Jesus. The more we were together, the closer and sweeter the union. It was not forced, or pretended, but voluntary and real. The great object of the meetings was to persuade sinners to come to Christ, and the Lord smiled upon us most graciously. The series of meetings has been held in the Presbyterian, Advent, and Methodist churches. The meeting last Sabbath evening was one of the best we ever enjoyed. The house was densely packed, but there was great liberty in Christ. From 6 to 7 o'clock, we had a prayer and conference meeting, during which time, there were some twenty prayers and seventy testimonies. We truly had a "shower of blessings." At the close of the sermon some two hundred remained to the inquiry meeting, when several more decided to become christians.

One reason why we had such a glorious meeting Sabbath evening was on account of a "Christian Workers' Union" formed that day, under the following pledge:

"CHRISTIAN WORKERS' UNION."

We, the undersigned, hereby form ourselves into a Christian Workers' Union, for the purpose of advancing the cause of Christ, by living and spreading 'pure and undefiled religion.' As one means of accomplishing this end, we mutually pledge ourselves, by the help of the Lord, that in all prayer and conference meetings, where the opportunity is offered, we will take the earliest time for prayer or testimony, in order to prevent all dullness and waste of time."

Over ninety joined this Union. The first opportunity to try its working was Sabbath evening, when the results were all that could be desired. It is proposed to have at least one general prayer-meeting a week, under the direction of the Christian Workers' Union. The design of this union is to bring into action every one who is willing to work for Jesus. It is to be entirely free from any sectarian element. It is simply a union in Christ for mutual benefit, and to lead as many as possible to accept him as their Savior.

Would it not be well for every town, village and city, to adopt a similar plan for christian worship?

While engaged in prayer, this system was presented to our mind as the best means to preserve and continue the benefits of the revival. It is well known that one of the greatest obstacles in the way of good prayer and conference meetings is the habit of waiting for each other. Those who join this Union, pledge themselves that no such thing shall happen till every member has taken some part in the meeting. If there are but few, it is well to speak or pray several times, in a familiar manner, as in personal conversation. Throw off all cold formalism. Let each public prayer and testimony be short, at most, not over three minutes. As a general rule half that time would be better. The whole exercises should not be over one hour, beginning and ending promptly at the time appointed; then a lively interest, and crowded meetings may be expected, and rich blessings from the Lord.

It may be well to have the Union properly organized by the choice of a president, secretary and treasurer, so as to transact the necessary temporal matters of the Union in a systematic and business-like manner.

We wish that wherever this system may be adopted, they would send us a report of the same, and the results following. Would it not be well for every church to make a beginning immediately. We think the results would be glorious. We would suggest that every preacher propose this for adoption at once among the people where he may labor, even if there are none but the members of his own denomination to unite in the work, but in all cases extend it as far as possible. Dear Brn. in the ministry, let us do all in our power to increase the number of laborers in the Lord's vineyard. M. G.

HELP YOUR NEIGHBOR.—We are rejoiced to see the spirit of sacrifice manifested for the welfare of others by so many in sending them the Crisis for three months. We think all will agree that the "three months" column is one of the best looking things in "our paper." It shows that every week a large number of new ones are becoming acquainted with the reasons of our blessed hope. Let not this noble sacrificing spirit stop till every reader of the Crisis has sent at least one paper for three months to some person. Gracious fruits have resulted already from what has been done.

In addition to this work, let every one secure as many new subscribers as possible. There are thousands who are hungering after just such a paper as the Crisis, but they need to have it shown to them, and then they would take it gladly. It is to be feared that we, as a people, are not half awake to the importance of the work in which we are engaged. Let us honor our divine Master by more faithful and persistent efforts to lead the people to see the glorious truth that Jesus is soon coming. M. G.

DAILY WITNESS.—Those who wish to get a faithful report of the great meetings in the Hippodrome, New York, commencing Feb. 6th, under the direction of Bro. D. L. Moody, and Ira Sankey, will do well to take the New York Daily Witness. The price is $1.25 for three months, or $5 a year. Remember it is the only christian daily in the United States. It gives an excellent selection of the most important news from all parts of the world. We would recommend every christian to take this who wishes a daily paper. Those who wish a weekly news-paper, will find the weekly Witness just what they need. Price $1.50 a year. As the Catholics, and those in favor of the liquor traffic, infidelity, and other bad things, are trying to break down the Witness, we feel anxious to have it succeed, because it is worthy of success. HYGIENIC SEMINARY.

Yesterday (Thursday, Feb. 3d), it was our privilege to visit Dansville, N. Y., the location of Dr. J. C. Jackson's celebrated Hygienic Institution, called "Our Home on the hillside," and also of a Hygienic Seminary, well conducted by Samuel H. Goodyear, as principal, and nine associate teachers. Dansville is a pleasant village of some five thousand inhabitants, situated on a very fertile plain, where fruit and other trees grow luxuriantly. "Our Home on the hillside" is said to be the largest Hygienic Water Cure in the world. It is very pleasantly located on the hillside, overlooking the village. Dr. Jackson has met with remarkable success in his treatment of patients. There are now about two hundred in the institution. It is an excellent place to recover health, or to learn how to live hygienically.

The Hygienic Seminary is about sixty rods south of "Our Home," and has about two hundred scholars. "The design is to furnish a hygienic boarding school to those desiring it, where students may learn how to live, as well as how to study." The students are allowed the privilege of attending Dr. Jackson's lectures to his patients, free of charge. The location is healthful, the scenery pleasant; the rooms are commodious, and well furnished, the food hygienic, and two meals a day, in connection with healthful exercises and physical training. The expenses per year are about $300, including hygienic board, washing (twelve pieces a week), fuel, light, furnished room, incidentals and tuition in common and higher English, and in all the departments of the institution, except music and painting, together with physical training and daily drill in elocution. Music pupils can have lessons and practice on the piano, melodeon, guitar, or pipe organ, besides a complete course of instruction in thorough Bass and Harmony. So far as we could learn, the moral influence in and about the school is excellent. It deserves a large patronage. M. G.

NEVADA.

The revival in Nevada, O., is still progressing. Bro. E. McCulloch writes Feb. 7th as follows: "The Lord is still at work here wonderfully. Some are starting almost every night. Our house could not seat near all that came last night. I baptized three yesterday, and three united with the church in the evening, making forty-two that have been baptized, and forty-six that have united with the church, since the meetings commenced. Others will go forward at the earliest convenience. Quite a number who have come out to our meetings will unite with the Methodist and Lutheran denominations, in all probability. About one hundred and thirty-five have been converted. M. G.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS.

Received from Sr. Bishop, Cheshire, $2.00; sisters in Hinesburg, $5.00; Sr. Susan M. Hall, $5.00; J. B. Cook and wife, $10.00; a valuable lot of clothing from Sr. Midgely, Coventry, R. I., and another quantity from a sister in Worcester; a box from Sr. Lowry, Cincinnati.

My dear brethren and sisters, the wrath of man has been permitted to assail us, but the promise is still recorded, "The triumphing of the wicked is short." I know the friends of the Freed people will be pained to learn that our pretty school-house has been destroyed by a lawless mob. There has always been a settled hate among the lower class of whites toward every effort to elevate the blacks, while the better class has been growing more in favor of giving them knowledge. The slumbering hate was roused now by a shameful act of a low, worthless negro, despised by all his race who were trying to elevate themselves and children. He was a good worker, the best that could be said of him, and was employed by a wealthy farmer four miles from here. On Saturday night, the 15th inst., near dark, he assaulted a young lady who was going home from a neighbor's house. Her screams reached the ears of her brother, who ran in time to save her, and the man fled. On Sunday a mob was raised, and the negro was caught and identified by the lady. He was shot at, taken to a tree and hanged, and shot at several times. When dead he was thrown upon the ground, and left there two nights and a day, waiting for a coroner. The same night he was killed our house was burned, and no one doubts that it was by the same mob.

There are none connected with the school but peacable, law-abiding citizens, in earnest for improvement, and some of them exemplary christians. So cruel an act deprived many of the means which might help to raise them above the vicious life and tragic end of one of their race, who never received the restraining and refining influences of christian education, cannot but receive the disapprobation of every noble-minded person. A magistrate called and assured me the act was greatly condemned, and, although I had been threatened, he thought I was safe, as the fury of the mob had spent itself. He said if the least evidence could be found against the perpetrators, the grand jury would indict, etc. But the day is at hand when evil will be uncovered, and "the wickedness of the wicked come to an end."

The house cost only about $75, but was very comfortable, and greatly enjoyed. There were sad faces that Monday morning when the pupils came and saw nothing of their house but charred timbers and ashes. All over sixteen years of age I took into my kitchen, where I shall teach them, if permitted, till March, when they have to go to work. It seemed cruel to send the younger ones home, but it was not at all suitable to retain any more,

It did seem that Providence favored the building of the house. Why it was permitted to be destroyed so soon is known only to Him who notices the fall of even a sparrow.

My present duty seems plain,—to double my diligence for these, and my own boy, who is with me this winter, and trust for the future. I ask the prayers of God's children, that I may be guided and directed, and that good may come from the evil, and that we may all be led to a firmer faith and hope, and a cleansing from all unrighteousness.

West Point, Ky. CAROLINE TULLER.

HE LEADETH ME.

H. B. SEVEY.

In looking over the past I can adopt the words of the prophet—"It is not in man that walketh to direct his steps." I have great reason to thank the Lord for the light which has shone upon my pathway, and it increases more and more. How beautifully has the Psalmist expressed it by saying—Thy word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path. Praise his holy name! More than twenty years have passed since I took heed to the sure words of prophecy as unto a light that shineth in a dark place. I expected Jesus ere this; but still I find myself under the curse in mortality. I often think of the light that caused me to leave my employment and sell my stand in a little village, move my family on a small farm so I could devote my time to the proclamation of that blessed truth of Jesus' soon coming at hand, and contrast it with present light. The same evidences that moved me out would not be able to hold me now, but the increase of light has kept me. Thank his dear name!

I never was in a definite time move, yet have been very favorable. The "'75" time looked the most plausible of all, but that has passed. Now the light shines more clearly than ever on the removing of the Turks from Europe. This has been my faith for some time. I see no hope for this wicked world beyond the planting of the "tabarnacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain.' Then Michael stands up, and deliverance comes to the waiting ones—all who are found "written in the Book." Then the sleeping ones will awake, and shout victory over the grave.

How sweet it will be to meet all the dear ones at home. The four angels will soon loose their hold. All the servants of God will be sealed, and the time of trouble on the world begin.

Oh, my Lord, may we be kept by this power, through faith, amid the perils that surround us. All for Christ is the only safe position.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

AG'T.

PACIFIC COAST.

H. F. CARPENTER.

Much has been said, much written, but still more inquired, about California. To give true, impartial impressions concerning it is no easy matter, because of the variety of its presentations. One can color his story as he pleases, write nothing but truth, yet leave upon the mind many false impressions. I have kept silent a long time, though importuned often for imformation, that I might see all phases of Pacific clime and life, and thus give a fair unbiased account. I now venture the attempt.

California is not altogether peculiar. It is not peculiar as to "hard times"; they are here as well as in the East. Fifty thousand Americans out of employ attest the fact. He who thinks that to reach California is, of itself, to secure all temporal good, comes but to be sadly disappointed. He that comes with abundant means, or he that has secured a good situation before coming, or he that comes counseled of God to come, will do well. Others should remain where they are, unless they can endure the severities and privations of pioneer life.

California is not peculiar as to disease. It is not the land where the inhabitant never says, "I am sick." Sickness has greatly prevailed this winter, yet there has been but little dying. Nearly every one coming from the East undergoes a radical change of constitution from climatic influences; some few for the better, and some for the worse. I think that more consumptives come to this coast to grow worse and die, than come to get well. They should come when the disease first attacks, and locate away from the coast, and stay a long time.

California is not very peculiar as to wickedness. I read papers printed on the Atlantic and on the Pacific. I find the same deeds of horror, the same crimes against life, property and virtue perpetrated in the East as in the far West, and they are equally as numerous. Wickedness is more open, bold and undisguised here. Liquor saloons stand upon every street corner, and are largely interspersed through the centres of streets, and they all do a thriving business. One coming from the East will at once notice in every place an atmosphere of infidelity and irreligion, a want of reverence for sacred things, not found in good old New England. The refusal of the State Senate to have a chaplain, and the appointment of committees to hold business sessions on Sundays, are fit illustrations of the prevailing impiety. Meat-shops, fruit-stands, billiard-halls, saloons, and almost all kinds of trade-marts, are open on Sundays. The standard of religion is low, and in Vallejo, on stormy nights, there are seldom any religious services save at the Second Advent Chapel.

California is not peculiar as to annoyances. He who cannot be happy doing duty amid New England annoyances, will not be happy here. He who thinks that in leaving the East he leaves all nuisances behind, is doomed to disappointment. We do not have bed-bugs, but we have fleas in endless procession. As one sits in church, reads or chats in the drawing-room or parlor, as he stretches his weary limbs at night for rest, it is a novelty for a Yankee to feel the presence of these little black specks, skipping and creeping on the inside of his drawers, and along the sensitive spinal column, around the neck and down the other side, filling their glasses too often, you would say, with the nectar of life, never failing to bring down upon them a smart application of the hand signaling an earnest wish for their absence; but you must not think that you have hurt them, for they soon remind you of their safety by a fresh application to another not distant part. They do not trouble me, however, as for some reason unknown to myself, they have ever been friends and never bite. Very few are so highly favored.

Neither the summer nor the winter is entirely a delight. In the summer we have sunshine every day without the inconvenience of rain, but we have wind and dust, intense heat in the interior, yet everywhere the luxury of cool nights. Concerning the winter, I might write of calla lilies in full bloom out doors in January; of a rose-bush eight feet high in a garden before my study in blossom now (January 26th), and that has been for seven months past; of young tender lettuce picked from the garden and eaten at Bro. Wilson's, Santa Clara, on Jan. 14th. I might write you that all stores and shops do business with doors wide open every day; that days as warm and sunny as those of June are ours; that frogs peep cherrily every night; I might write of grass almost ready for the scythe, and of cherry trees and pear trees in blossom; of vegetables of all kinds in prosperous growth unprotected from changes of weather; but should I stop here I should leave you in a feverish desire to sell all and rush to such a "summer land." To be faithful I must tell you of storms cold and drear; that for three months we have not seen sunshine enough to make three full weeks. I must tell of east winds that chill to the bone; of rains so constant that nothing outside gets dry, but fences and roofs can be seen green with mould; of a damp atmosphere that makes large demands upon vitality; of mud as deep down as New England snows are deep up. Thus you see the Pacific coast has its annoyances.

California is peculiar for its scarcity of trees; no wide-stretching woodlands as in the East, except in some localities; but here and there a tree to relieve the barrenness which everywhere presents itself in the summer; for the earth is then parched and bronzed. The large cities are well shaded with ornamental trees, except Vallejo and San Francisco.

Another peculiarity, quickly noticed by a stranger, is herds of cattle and horses fat and getting fatter, in the summer, in fields as barren apparently as a harvested rye field. The grasses have been cured while standing, and no rain falls to spoil its richness.

California is noted for the rapid growth of trees. I saw a peach tree seven feet high that was last spring in the stone. I saw a cassia tree fifteen feet high of only two years' growth. They grow both summer and winter.

California is peculiar for the variety and largeness of its fruits. Last season I measured a peach that was ten inches in circumference; and while at our late Conference at Santa Clara, Bro. Wilson had on his table a pear which measured twelve and a half inches in circumference one way, and thirteen inches the other. But if we except grapes, and perhaps peaches, the fruits and vegetables grown here have not the rich flavor of those grown East.

California is peculiar for having two springs every year. I never saw spring come in the autumn till last October. The April shower, the springing up of the tender grass, the coming of the birds from northern bowers, the peeping of the frogs, the plowing time, the seed-time, the warm sultry days, the languid tread,—all declared it spring; while the almanac declared it fall. An almanac is indispensable here to tell you what season of the year it is.

California is peculiar for the equality of its temperature. You need the same clothing in summer, along the coast, to protect you against the trade winds, as you need in the winter. It is not safe to change.

California is peculiar for its sociality and generosity. They make you feel at home at once. They despise anything small or niggardly. With all its annoyances I feel at home in California. I feel that I have come at duty's call, and at the right time. God is increasing my strength, and although my wife has been sick and confined to her room and couch for ten weeks with a very painful and prostrating abscess, she is now recovering, and when thoroughly acclimated I trust will be stronger than before. The expense of living far exceeds that in the East, and most of our brethren are out of work, yet Elijah's God provides, and we fear no evil.

The church is growing in grace and in the knowledge of God. Mission fields invite in every direction, and they tell us if we will come they will pay our fare one way; and as our strength comes again, and the rains cease, we must preach the kingdom to other cities also. God does help us do it, and gave us at the Santa Clara Conference a pentecost indeed.

Scattered loved ones, accept this in answer to your many desires concerning the Pacific coast. H. F. C.

WOODMAN. In Lowell, Mass., Jan. 8th, 1876, of consumption, Bro. Watson Woodman, aged sixty-two years.

Bro. W. was born in Scarboro, Me. He came to Lowell in 1842, where he was converted and united with the Methodist Church; but soon after heard and embraced the Second Advent doctrine, and was a firm believer at the time of his death. He was a great sufferer, but bore all with christian fortitude and patience. He leaves a wife and two daughters. May the hope that sustained him be theirs to enjoy here, and they be prepared to meet him in the soon coming kingdom. Funeral attended by Bro. Couch assisted by Bro. Phetteplace. C. C. P.

RYDER. Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 9th, 1876, very suddenly, Elijah Ryder, of Chatham, Mass., aged seventy-two years.

My uncle Elijah was a member of the M. E. Church, and had been a faithful servant of the Lord for many years. His affections were placed upon things above, and not upon the earth. He was "a pilgrim and a stranger, looking for that city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." He loved to read the precious Bible and the appearing of Jesus. When speaking of the trials of life he often said—"Well, perhaps the Savior will soon come, and then our trials will all be ended." A few moments before he died he sat down, in his usual health, to read his Bible, and never removed his eyes from the sacred pages until they were closed in death. He died without a struggle or a groan; and so suddenly that his daughter, sitting in the room with him, did not notice the change until she saw his eyes roll back in his head and close in death. It was hard to part with him so suddenly, without time even to say the last farewell; but he sleeps in Jesus, quietly resting from his labors.

Dear mourning friends, refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears. Soon Jesus will call him from his slumbers, and he will live again.

"O how sweet it will be in that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and with harps in our hands,
To meet one another again."

JAMES R. SMITH.

DURRIN. In Lake George, N. Y., Jan. 25th, 1876, of consumption, Elizabeth Durrin, daughter of Deacon Arron B. Jones, aged eighteen years.

Our sister was converted under the first labors of Eld. Miles Grant, in Castleton, Vt., and yielded her life to the power of the enemy, triumphant in faith of the near coming of Christ to redeem it. Through her sickness she manifested unquestionable evidence of the truth of our Savior's words, "My grace is sufficient." When asked by her ever kind husband if she was going to Jesus, she replied—"No, he is coming to me." Just before she died she extended her hands as her lips murmured—"Come, Jesus. Come, Jesus."

Cheering indeed were her last words of counsel to her friends, and especially a blessing to her bereft husband, who, through her instrumentality, has been led to give himself to the Savior, and we trust many others will thereby be led to have faith in a Savior that can give perfect peace in the dying hour. ELIZABETH DURRIN.

WOOD. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Woodford, Jan. 3d, 1876, Bro. Wm. Wood, aged eighty years.

Bro. Wood was converted under the labors of Bro. R. L. Harrison, of Hoosick, N. Y., nearly five years ago, and united with the Advent Christian Church, and has been a faithful soldier of the cross. He assured his companion that he was ready to die,—was looking confidently for the return of the heavenly Bridegroom, and expected to receive a crown of righteousness then. He leaves a wife and a number of children to mourn his absence from them. May they all meet when the jewels are gathered. He died at the residence of his son, Charles Wood, in Woodford City. The funeral services were held in the Union Christian Church. Words of comfort by the writer. W. O. HIGLEY.

RYDER. Fell asleep in Jesus, Jan. 20th, 1876, Washington Ryder, of Chatham, Mass, aged sixty years.

My uncle was the last of a family of ten children, all of whom, with their parents, died "in hope of a better resurrection," while we mourn for the sad work which death has made; yet "we sorrow not as others who have no hope; for if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him." Death now holds him captive in "the enemy's land," but when Jesus comes he will destroy his power, and the sleeping captives will go free. Then he with others can sing, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" I have been redeemed from thy cruel bondage, and am free. "Thanks be to God who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ." JAMES R. SMITH.

FRENCH. In Morris, Ct., Nov. 28th, 1875, Sister Nellie French, aged fourteen years.

Our sister gave her heart to God in her youthful days, and was buried with Christ in baptism soon after, and received a rich blessing. She left a bright evidence that she was ready for the summons of death. Eld. Joseph Curtis preached from the text—"Is it well with the child? And she answered, It is well." 2 Kings 4: 26. She sleeps in Jesus awaiting the resurrection morn.

"Dearest sister, thou hast left us,
Here thy loss we deeply feel;
But 'tis God that hath bereft us,
He can all our sorrows heal.
Yet again we hope to meet thee,
When mortality has fled,
Then in heaven with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tear is shed."

T. L. WAUGH.

WILLIAMS. Killed by the falling of a tree, in Bridgewater, Vt., Jan. 26th, 1876, John Williams, aged fifty-four years.

He leaves a wife and five children, who deeply mourn their loss. God grant that this severe blow and sudden death may warn the people, and that portion of the family that are unsaved, that they may see their need of having their lives hid with Christ in God. Services attended by the writer. A. DAMON.

HARRISON. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Hoosic, N. Y., Jan. 15th, 1876, Hannah Alice, daughter of Eld. K. L. Harrison, aged seven months.

Thus death has broken this family group, and grief sits upon the hearts of the fond parents, and little ones feel sad that the little sister is gone. Though the mourners weep, they have hope that their darling will come again from the land of the enemy. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, from Jer. 31: 16. W. O. HIGLEY.

A. C. Times, please copy.

WENDALL. In Edinboro, Pa., Jan. 10th, of diptheritic croup, Harry, infant and only son of Bro. Daniel and Sr. Emma Wendall (grandson of Bro. Jonas, deceased), aged thirty-seven years and eight months.

Words of comfort were spoken from Rom. 8: 20–22 by their pastor. G. W. STETSON.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

LONDON, Feb. 7. The Kelet Nele, a journal of Pesth, publishes the following: "The Sublime Porte, on account of its financial difficulties, recently requested Roumania to pay her customary tribute in advance. The Roumanian Government has sent a note in reply declaring that the treaties stipulate that the tribute is payable only in return for the obligation assumed by Turkey to defend Roumania from foreign invasion.

The Porte having shown itself incapable of quelling a local insurrection, the Roumanian Government is convinced that it can no longer rely on Turkey for protection. Therefore the obligation to pay tribute is at an end. Roumania moreover complains that the Porte has concentrated troops at Widora and sent ships up the Danube under a false pretext; that the threatening attitude of Servia rendered such measures necessary. Roumania is consequently compelled to protect the frontiers."

The note concludes with a declaration that Roumania is an independent State, and will resist every attempt to occupy her territory or the march of foreign troops through it.

Feb. 8. A special dispatch to the Times from Cattars says the Herzegovinian leaders, Peke and Soccja, have united their bands in the district of Zubia, and are now organizing the forces and preparing for future operations. Soccia will probably be made Commander-in-Chief.

Count Cozerta, with considerable re-enforcements for the Carlists, having arrived at Vera, the Alfonsists, having abandoned Lessaca and Echalor, and are falling back on Urdax, Maya, and Elizonds.

Advices from Slavonic sources report that the Turks were repulsed at Gradatz, losing eighty killed, and that they met with a reverse near Klek, where they lost fifty men.

A revolution has broken out in Hayti. The revolutionists are in possession of Ioemel. The President has ordered the Foreign Club at Port-au-Prince to be closed, but Mr. Bassett, the United States Minister, who is President of the club, has refused to accede the demand.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

A serious fire visited New York city Tuesday evening, destroying about thirty buildings on Crosby and Grand streets, involving a total loss of about three millions of dollars. Four firemen were killed and as many more injured by falling walls.

Reverdy Johnson, the statesmen and jurist, died suddenly at Annapolis, Md., Thursday evening.

The second trial of Piper, for the murder of Mabel Young, has resulted in a verdict of murder in the first degree.

A magnificent capture of express robbers was effected near Wauseon, Ohio, at about two o'clock in the morning, recently. A narrow escape from a loss of nearly $400,000 by the United States Express Company was made. The safes under charge of Messenger Lacey, from Chicago to Toledo, contained $125,600 bullion and 225,000 currency, making the neat sum of $350,000, a handsome swag for four robbers. Inklings of a plot to rob the express came to the ears of the express officials, and so they prepared themselves for the occasion. A posse armed to the teeth was ready for the robbers when they came, and they were surrounded and captured. There were four of them. Two of them were Dwights, one was Hartwell, the other Topher, all discharged employees of the road or express company, and all residents of that part of the county. One of the Dwights was formerly a conductor on the road.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An Answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection,—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It ought to have a wide circulation. We are all out of the pamphlet edition of this valuable work, but have a supply nicely bound in cloth, which, through the liberality of Dr. Ives, we are able to sell at a small advance in price over that of the cheap edition, as follows: Single copy, by mail, 30 cts.; per dozen, $3.00; by express, $2.50 per dozen. THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

"THE CHILD'S BIBLE QUESTION BOOK."
BY ELD. C. GOODRICH.

This is the title of a work just issued by the A. C. P. Society, designed for the small children in the Sabbath Schools and in the family. Just what we have long wanted. Price 10 cts. single copy; $1.00 per doz., sent by mail. AG'T.

TALKING WITH JESUS.

A little talk with Jesus,
How it smooths the rugged road;
How it seems to help me onward,
When I faint beneath my load;
When my heart is crushed with sorrow,
And my eyes with tears are dim,
There's naught can yield me comfort
Like a little talk with him.

I tell him I am weary,
And I fain would be at rest—
That I'm daily, hourly longing
For a home upon his breast;
And he answers me so sweetly,
In tones of tenderest love—
"I am coming soon to take thee
To my happy home of love."

Ah! this is what I'm wanting,
His lovely face to see;
And I'm not afraid to say it,
I know he's wanting me.
He gave his life a ransom
To make me all his own,
And he can't forget his promise
To me his purchased one.

I know the way is dreary
To yonder far-off clime,
But a little talk with Jesus
Will while away the time;
And yet the more I know him,
And all his grace explore,
It only sets me longing
To know him more and more.

I cannot live without him,
Nor would I if I could;
He is my daily portion,
My medicine and food.
He's altogether lovely,
None with him can compare—
The chief among ten thousand,
The fairest of the fair.

So I'll wait a little longer,
Till his appointed time,
And glory in the knowledge
That such a hope is mine.
Then in my Father's dwelling,
Where "many mansions" be,
I'll sweetly talk with Jesus,
And he will talk with me.

LETTER.

Editor Crisis:—Dear Bro.: Please publish in the Crisis the enclosed article, if you deem it worthy of a place in your most excellent and truly religious paper. Among the many papers I read, I find in none of them better food for living, earnest, working, hungry souls, than I find in the Crisis.

In view of the condition of society and the state of the world, men are beginning to ask, "What are we coming to?" I hear men say, "I have not been much of an 'Adventist;' but, really, it seems as if we were living in the last days." Thoughtful and observing men are becoming alarmed at the prevalence of forgery, swindling, embezzlements, defalcations, frauds, dishonesty and crime, not only among ordinary business men, and in commercial and high official circles, but also among men of high positions in the ministry and in the church. Verily, these are "perilous times."

This, surely, is no time for crying "peace and safety." "Let us exhort one another, and so much the more as we see the day approaching," when the "wheat and tares" will no longer "grow together."

SALVATION THE TEST.

Some unknown friend has kindly sent me the Church Union, for which he will please accept my most hearty thanks. The strong radical sentiments it contains on the subject of Christian union, or the oneness of all acknowledged christians, meets my entire approval. I have believed it and preached it more than thirty years. My attention was first called to it from an incident that occurred in connection with the observance of the Lord's Supper, early in my christian ministry, which led me to a careful and critical examination of the New Testament, that I might learn from its sacred pages when, where, how and by whom the first Christian church was organized, which might be regarded as a divine model for succeeding ages—at least, so far as essential or fundamental principles were concerned.

Then my purpose was to compare the present with the New Testament pattern, and mark the likeness or disagreement between them. My search was thorough and earnest for the truth, and not as taught by the warring, jarring sects.

I utterly failed to find what I sought. I came to the conclusion that a church in the New Testament was simply a company or an assembly or congregation of christians or disciples, worshiping God together in a given locality, independent of any organization, and consequently, the christians in any given locality were the church in that locality. Now, there can be several rival organizations in one locality, all and each claiming to be churches of Christ! How pertinent Paul's question to the Corinthians: "Is Christ divided?" There is a vast amount of unwarrantable assumption in regard to this subject.

Organizations, as such, are mere human, voted into existence and voted out. But Christ's church is founded on a rock, and "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." Good men may be voted out of a human organization, called a church, and bad men retained in it. The terms of admission to sect churches exclude those whom Christ receives.

Sectarianism is anti-christian, and is a formidable foe to the spread of the gospel and the fulfillment of the Savior's prayer, "that they all may be one." Look at the antecedent condition required by our distinguished evangelists, preceding their advent in any place, viz., the putting away all discord and strife and sect-ism and party feeling; and in place thereof, there must be union and harmony, and fellowship and cooperation and brotherly love. These are the conditions upon which God has promised to bless his church and people.

Now just let this state of things continue and sectarianism could have no place there; which shows conclusively, that sectarianism is a hindrance and not a help to the cause of Christ everywhere.

It is said, there will be sects so long as men differ in their views. That assertion is based on a false assumption; that there must be union of intellectual perceptions in order to fellowship and love each other as christians. "Facts are stubborn things," and facts coutradict this assumption, as witnessed in many cases. Love, love to God and love to man, is the essential bond of christian union. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." The only ground to be settled as a ground of christian fellowship (for there is no such idea in the New Testament as church fellowship in distinction from christian fellowship) is this: the possession and manifestation of the Spirit of Christ; for this is the apostle's test: "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his."

Now, if any man have this spirit—the tender, loving, kind, gentle, humble, sweet, forgiving spirit of Jesus, then he is a christian, he is our brother, no matter how many intellectual or theological errors we may judge him to have; they cannot be fatal or fundamental to christian character.

The divine Redeemer settled the question who were his brethren, his nearest kin: "He that doeth the will of my Father in heaven."

Sectarianism has wrought incalculable mischief and injury to the progress of pure and undefiled religion; and it is cause for devout gratitude, that so many christians in all denominations are awakening to the magnitude and deplorable results of this long cherished and wide-spread evil. The light is spreading. Signs of the long looked for day are visible. Multitudes are rising to a higher level. Old errors are being abandoned.

The world is awakening to comprehend the great, all over shadowing truth, that the chief mission of the gospel of Christ is to save men from their sins; and all else is to be regarded only as means to that end. All the creeds and forms and ritualisms and machinery of Christendom are worthless except as means to one end—the saving of men. A life preserver is worth nothing as an invention or for its mechanism; but only to save men from drowning. Christ's prayer that God's will may be done on earth as it is in heaven, if answered, would bring into harmony and loving union and fellowship all the now discordant and scattered disciples of Christ as one flock, in one field, under one Shepherd. For this may all true christians pray.

LETTER.

Dear Brn.:—Enclosed is an article from the pen of an aged pilgrim, the father to Bro. J. J. Smith, of Ala., who is an occasional contributor to the Crisis.

While laboring in North Carolina, six years ago, I received an urgent invitation, penned by the trembling hand of this venerable man, for my husband and myself to come thither, and, if possible, awaken an interest in concerns of the soul. The season was unpropitious, and I was compelled to take the journey alone; but God was my helper, and rewarded my effort with signal success throughout. On my arrival I found an eager and curious throng awaiting the coming of the "woman-preacher," and here, indeed, it was that I for the second time preached from the Word of God, taking a text. I anticipated opposition, but the Spirit of the Lord was with me, and hearts were moved and melted beyond my most sanguine expectations. This was because I held myself of no account, but placed my whole trust in Him. From this beginning sprang Bethel Church, organized by the faithful labors of Bro. H. Davis. Little did the dear old patriarch hope to live to see such fulfillment of his prayers. Many a time have I seen his cheeks wet with tears, as he expressed the earnestness of his desire for this end. Already one of the pillars of this little church,—Silas Smith, brother of the friend whose letter I enclose,—sleeps in death, and it may not be long before the survivor is called to join him. Should such prove to be the case, may our brother come to his grave like a shock of corn fully ripe.

Yours in Christ, Mrs. H. B. Hastings.

COPY OF LETTER.

June 10th, 1875.

I, Caleb Smith, was born June 30th, 1790. My father and mother's people were very numerous at the time of my birth, and have been increasing rapidly until the present. I have had in all sixty-two brothers and brothers-in-law, sisters and sisters-in-law; of these thirty were my own brothers and sisters, with their companions; fourteen of them belongs to the S——n family,—eighteen were of the M——n family. I was the first-born; had nine brothers and seven sisters, all of one father and mother. I have been twice married and have raised two families of children, seventeen in number,—both the mothers are dead, and the children have all either died or married and left me. My children, grand-children and great-grand-chidren with their companions are so numerous and scattered about the world that their number cannot be known. But few of the elder ones are alive to-day, and my departure is near at hand.

I am now living alone, in a house by myself, but under the watch-care of my youngest daughter and her family. My bodily affliction confines me to my home and keeps me humble. God gives me sustaining grace day by day to bear up. He has been good and kind to me when I least deserved it,—unworthy as I am,—thanks to his holy name for all his wonderful mercies.

I love to read his Word; it is a lamp to my feet—a light to my path! I will trust him and praise him while I live. I have no citizenship in this world: I claim none; I want none. I am now passing the last milestone on my pilgrimage home. I shall soon be there, never to return to this unchristian world, where evil spirits go about as roaring lions seeking whom they may devour.

Dear brethren, sisters and christian friends, all who have a well-grounded hope in Christ Jesus, I have a request to make of you before I bid you farewell. I want you to be earnest, faithful missionaries for Jesus. He has done more than that for us: in him is all my hope of salvation; he is precious to my soul.

When God delivered me from hopeless despair by speaking peace to my troubled heart in a blaze of heavenly light, all within me was at peace, harmony, joy and love to God and man. Jesus had released my soul from sin and unbelief. Can I forget the day of my release from bondage and my happy espousal to Christ? No, no! I am steadfast and immovable in the faith.

The mission work is one of great importance: may it prosper in Bethel Church. When I was destributing tracts, Bibles, Testaments, and religious books and papers, I had pleasure in doing the work, self-denying as it is. Now old age and infirmity have set me aside. I did what I could to aid in the progress of the work. Our God is a prayer-answering God, who withholds no good thing from his faithful people.

The, missionaries are working for the same God we serve: their God is our God: their Savior our Savior, he is the God of the universe, the living God who will guide us even unto death. We are on the Lord's side. If God be for us who can be against us? Who can separate us from the love of God which is in Christ Jesus our Lord? Was ever love like unto his love? Can God fail to sustain his faithful missionaries and guide them into his Kingdom? Our earnest prayer is that the mission work may be the means, under God of saving many souls. May he impress upon our hearts the urgent necessity of helping them all we can while we live. Amen!

The Bright Side.—Look on the bright side. It is the right side. The times may be hard, but it will make them no easier to wear a gloomy and sad countenance. It is the sunshine, not the cloud, that makes the flower. The sky is blue ten times where it is black once. You have troubles, so have others. None are free from them. Troubles give sinew and tone to life, fortitude and courage to man. That would be a dull sea, and the sailors would never get skill, where there was nothing to disturb the surface of the ocean. What though things look a little dark? The vane will turn, and night will end in a broad day. There is more virtue in a sunbeam then in a whole hemisphere of cloud and gloom.—Sel.

Happiness.—In vain do they talk of happiness who never subdue an impulse in obedience to a principle. He who never sacrificed a present to the future good, or a personal to a general one, can speak of happiness only as the blind do of the colors.

Correspondence.

From Bro. W. D. Loveland.

Dear Brn.:—I have been much interested in reading the letters which have appeared from time to time in the Crisis from those who have been slaves to tobacco; some of which in a measure resemble my own experience; but mine being in part different, and somewhat unique, may perhaps be interesting.

I had not the plea that many offer in extenuation, that the habit was contracted when a boy, for no one could be more strongly opposed to the use of the "weed" in any form than I was until past the age of twenty-two, when kind but mistaken friends persuaded me to try smoking for dyspepsia. After an extended test I found that it was no benefit to me, but the trial had created a taste for it, which strengthened and became fixed into a habit while in the army.

The twin vice of chewing is easily acquired by a smoker, and ere long I became a slave to both. It soon affected and deranged my nervous system, showing me that it ought to be given up as a sanitary measure, if for nothing higher; but by this time the habit had so firmly enchained me that I still clung to it, although fully alive to the fact that my mental powers were suffering irom its deleterious effects. It is true I often broke off, and resolved to be free, but every time after a short battle with my perverted appetite, returned to it again a greater slave than before.

This conflict between duty and desire continued for about ten years, and during all this time, although I tried in all other matters to do my christian duties, yet the idol which I had set up dimmed my view of the Sun of Righteousness.

While my mind was in this state of conviction and vacillation, I had a peculiar dream, which, although not a believer in dreams and omens as a rule, I did then, and do still believe was the warning voice of Omnipotence.

The scene of my fancy was laid in my childhood's home. I seemed to be assisting in clearing a piece of ground which I helped my father to clear off when I was a boy. The field had all been logged, and we were picking up the sticks and chips which strewed the ground. I had just filled my arms and started toward a log-heap to deposit them, when a slight rustling in the leaves at my feet drew my attention, and I saw a snake about nine inches in length gliding ahead of me in the same direction in which I was going.

Snakes are always plenty in a new lot, but there was something noticeably strange about this one; for the further it went the larger it grew. This seemed so peculiar that I stopped and watched it. It crawled directly to the log-heap and up on the bottom log, facing me. It had increased in size very rapidly, and by this time appeared to be about twelve feet in length, and as large as a flour barrel. Then came a still greater change. The reptile became a beast. I could see the feet and legs growing out of his sides, and the neck curved up like that of a horse, giving the huge head which moved from side to side, as if in search of something, an elevation considerably above the body.

The sight of this monster put me in such trepidation that I dropped my load, the noise of which drew the beast's attention, and, speaking with a man's voice he said, "I hear a man: I'll have him." This so excited me that I awoke, and whether it was my overheated imagination, or that I really heard it, I cannot tell; but after becoming fully awake, while thinking of my remarkable dream, a voice the most deeply impressive that I ever heard, which seemed to come from overhead, sounded in my ears—"That serpent and that beast are tobacco."

This dream seemed to me to be a Heavensent warning; and, although I clung to my idol for two years after, I never lighted my pipe or took a chew without its forcing itself upon my mind, till at length I resolved in God's strength to give up the vile, sinful habit, or perish in the trial.

I made no endeavors to break off by degrees, but threw box and pipe away together. That was on March 1st, 1873, and, thank God, I have not touched them since.

I cannot say as some do that the Lord immediately took away all desire, but he enabled me to triumph over my perverted appetite, and in a few weeks the desire for it ceased. Since then God has manifested himself to me as he never did or never would while I worshiped at the shrine of tobacco; and my wife rejoices daily that the nuisance is expelled from our home. I do not assume to judge others, and say that it is wrong for Bro. A. or Bro. B. to use it; the case lies between each individual and his God; but to me it was evil, and the Lord gave me strength to overcome it. Glory be to hls name forever.

Lockport, N. Y., Jan. 29th.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—While reading the Crisis my heart is filled with emotions and praise to the good Lord. It is a welcome guest at our home, bringing light and truth. As we read, we thank our God that he puts it into the hearts of his children to write and publish these blessed things concerning the coming kingdom of our Lord and his Christ.

Oh, how good the blessed hope looks today as we near its consummation. It is glorious. It is indeed an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast. While in the depths of affliction, temptation, or poverty, it is a consoling thought that He who now sits at the right hand of our heavenly Father can be touched with the feelings of our infirmities. He was once acquainted with poverty—a wanderer in this vale of tears, not having where to lay his head. He was tempted in all points like as we are, and sympathizes with us in our most trying hours. How blessed to have such a loving Savior to lean upon, and cast all our burdens upon him.

Never did the promises of God look so blessed to me as at the present hour. We are taught to trust in the Lord, and do good, so shall we dwell in the land, and verily we shall be fed. We are fed with the true bread which cometh down from heaven. Praise the Lord, our Leader is the bread of life, and we can go to him and get a fresh supply each day. O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together.

My heart rejoices as I read of those who are working for our blessed Lord and Master, trying to bring some to Christ. The night is fast approaching when no man can work. What is done must be done quickly. Time is short. May we all do what we can to bring sinners to Christ. Soon we shall witness the glorious appearing of Jesus, and hear him say to all his people, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. What a blessed time that will be to all the waiting ones. Let us not be weary in well doing, knowing that in due time we shall reap if we faint not. Christ is able to keep all who will trust in him. Nothing is able to separate us from his love. I love a religion that you know you have. The path of the just shineth brighter and brighter unto the perfect day, and each day we live we can know more and more of the goodness of God.

Cheer up, dear ones in Christ, he will never leave nor forsake us. He has promised to be with us in six troubles, and in the seventh he will not forsake us. Our trials in this life are almost ended. When I think of the blessings I enjoy, I am glad that I live, and can praise the Lord with all my soul. I am so glad that Jesus ever owned me as his child. Unworthy as I am, I hope to be among those whose robes are washed and made white in the blood of the Lamb. May the peace of God that passeth all understanding be with you all is the prayer of your sister in Christ.

New Britain, Ct., Jan. 18th.

From Bro J. S. Hinds.

Dear Editors of the Crisis:—I wish to inform you and the readers of the Crisis that we are yet alive, and love the Crisis more and more. But sometimes we fear it has been stopped. It came weekly until the last No., Jan. 5th, '76. I sent twenty-five cents more than a year ago to pay postage for 1875, but have not sent any to pay for 1876.

I do not remember that I ever gave notice that I received $5 from Bro. Grant. It came in due time, and I have thanked the Lord many times for it, also Bro. G. We are poor as it respects this world's goods, but we are rich in faith and confidence in our heavenly Father through the merits of our Lord Jesus Christ. We have enough to make us comfortable at present, and we have had the Crisis and A. C. Times, which have been a great consolation to us. If these papers should be stopped we shall have our Bible left, thank the Lord; but we like the papers, for they seem to be the essence of the Bible. We cannot find words to express our satisfaction in reading the letters and articles in them.

We are rather lonely, living so far from any of our faith. There is one man and his wife who earnestly contend for the faith. There is no church of our faith within about forty miles of us,—at Hinesburgh, Vt. We have not heard an Advent preacher for more than two years. Truly we live in rather a barren part of the world, and no foot of land do we possess. We live about two miles from the village where there are three meeting houses, Methodist and Congregationalist. There has been a protracted meeting for about two months, and I cannot learn that any one has been converted. There are some that say they have started to be christians. It has been so that I could not attend much, for we are old and feeble, and my wife's health has been very poor for a long time.

We are glad to see so many three months' subscribers, but feel rather sad to see so little given to send the Crisis to the poor. I think the poor enjoy reading the paper as much as any. . . . We send love to all that love our Lord and his soon coming.

Wilmington, Essex Co., N. Y.

From M. L. Moulton.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Jesus:—I would ask a special request of you who pray, to pray for a dear young sister of mine that we fear must soon go down to the grave unless Jesus comes. That terrible disease—consumption—we greatly fear has fastened upon her, and unless our heavenly Father raises her to health again, she must go down in death. I believe the prayers of the righteous availeth much, and whatsoever we ask in his name we shall receive. Praise God for his true and blessed promises. I believe God has power to raise the sick, and it is my humble prayer that he will bless the effort that may be put forth in raising my sister to health again. The time is soon coming when we shall not have to part with our dear ones. When Jesus, our Life-giver comes, he will give us a life that will never end. It will be immortality and eternal life. Soon the dear saints will be gathered safely home, free from sickness, sorrow and death.

Dear sinner, where are you? Do you not want the home that Jesus has promised to his children? If you do you must give your hearts to him. You must make your calling and election sure. Soon Jesus will leave the mediatorial seat, and cease pleading for poor, dying sinners. Oh, come to Jesus; come now; now is the accepted time; behold now is the day of salvation. He is willing to save all who will come unto him. "Whosoever will may come," and he will in no wise cast you out.

Glory to God for his promises, and for the hope of eternal life. It is like an anchor to the soul, both sure and steadfast.

Rome, Me.

From Sr. Eliza Tallman.

Brethren Editors:—I understand that it has been widely circulated that I, the daughter of Eld. O. R. Fassett, joined the Seventh Day Adventists, and great hopes were entertained that Eld. Fassett and wife would soon be among them also. Eld. Fassett and wife are too strongly and firmly placed on the "Rock of Ages" to go into forbidden paths that lead to bondage; but I am sorry to say that in a moment of trial I did not see the trap set by the ever watchful evil one, and was charmed by his "cunningly devised fables," and fell into the snare.

After struggling some time in bondage, trying to keep the Sabbath (not as it is laid out in the ten commandments, but in the modified form of the Christian age), I found it impossible to stand with a clear conscience before God, and he showed me that I could not return under a law which Christ had made us free from. I thank God for opening my eyes, and that I have found the truth of this matter, and that there is no other way to get into the kingdom but by Jesus Christ. I am striving to-day to so live, that I may enter, with all the blood-washed throng, into everlasting rest.

I believe it never was reported that I had left the Seventh Day Adventists, so I write this, hoping you will publish it.

Santa Clara, Cal., Jan. 26th, 1876.

From O. A. Hill.

Dear Editors:—I take my pen this holy Sabbath afternoon for the purpose of writing a few lines to you, being one of your free subscribers. I feel very thankful to you for the dear paper. It is always a welcome visitor to our humble dwelling. It is like cold water to a thirsty soul; and it often cheers my heart when I read the stirring letters from the dear ones in Jesus. I am so often deprived of the privilege of meeting with the children of God that the Crisis is a great comfort to me.

I seldom have the privilege of meeting with those of like precious faith, or of hearing the gospel preached, my health being too poor to walk to the place of worship; but thank God, for the past three or four months the brethren and sisters have come to our house and held weekly prayer meetings. Two backsliders have been reclaimed, and are rejoicing in God. One was a man sixty-seven years of age, and had once been a minister of the gospel. He had wandered far from God, but he is working well now. Truly the Lord is good. I long to see Jesus to be made like him. I long for a home where sickness, sorrow, pain and death can never come.

I should be very glad to send you the pay for the paper, but I have not the means to do it. I sincerely hope and pray that God will abundantly bless you for all your labors of love in this life, and give you a home in his everlasting kingdom.

North Adams, Mass.

From Bro. A. Damon.

Beloved in the Lord:—While the night time is taken for the revels of wicked men, and that now the night has well nigh spent its blackness and darkness, we rejoice that weeping is about ended, and this blood and carnage will soon be gone. No man, woman, or child is safe anywhere in the world but in Christ. His name, as yet, affords us a good hiding-place from the tempests that are raging without.

Another year of gospel labor with the church at Bridgewater, Vt., is ended, and thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. The work of the ministry grows better. I love it more and more. The conflicts and trials are not worthy to be compared with the glory which shall be revealed in us. Continual service keeps the armor bright, and the harness sets easier.

As for my labor this year, it will probably be in other parts, now the best known to the Master. I conclude that after I have done the will of God, I am an unprofitable servant; therefore I have nothing to say in praise of myself. The power, and the glory, and the kingdom belong to God. Yours watching for the morning.

Bridgewater, Vt.

From Bro. G. A. Carroll.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—Through the providence of God I find myself again in the mission field with encouraging prospects before me. I think the Lord has opened a door for the reception of the truth, and I feel a great responsibility resting upon me. I believe that the coming of the Master is near at hand, and what is done to save the perishing must be done quickly. The Lord works in a mysterious way, and to our shortsighted vision his ways are often mysterious indeed.

I arrived here on Friday night, after an absence of three weeks. Shortly after my return, much to my surprise, I received an urgent invitation to speak on the coming of the Lord at the Second Baptist church in this city. I think there were at least one hundred and fifty present, and all seemed deeply interested. I found several brethren whose views exactly coincided with us in regard to the sleep of the dead and the future inheritance of the saints. Pray for us, that the Lord will open the ears and hearts of the people, that they may come to a knowledge of the truth.

Wilmington, Del.

From H. A. Linden.

Dear Editors and Readers of the Crisis:—I am glad that I believe the words of the heavenly Master, and those of his holy apostles and prophets, although I have not as yet been an "eye witness of his majesty," because he has said himself, "Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed." He has said, "They shall see the Son of man coming in a cloud, with power and great glory;" and I am expecting soon to see him coming to redeem this suffering world, and cheer it with his visible, hallowed presence.

I expect soon to hear his mighty voice calling his bride, and saying, "Come, ye people, enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast." All the signs that he gave to this generation proclaim his return, and I am waiting for him.

Mina, N. Y., Jan. 26th, 1876.

From Bro. W. Reynolds.

Dear Brn.:—I love to see the growth in the three months' list. I know it will do some good. It does me good to read the Crisis, and learn how the church is getting along in other parts. Our little handful is firm, trusting in God, and waiting for his Son from heaven. We have good meetings, and a few have of late started to serve the living and true God; but the majority seems to hang back, and we fear many times that they are joined to idols. Some of the coldness seems to have passed away, and we have a goodly number of people from other churches at our meetings. Of late three or four have testified that they love to hear of Jesus' coming again and the resurrection of the dead. I trust the well begun work here may continue, and when the Master comes we may be found ready to hail him with joy, and exclaim, "This is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us."

From Bro. E. McCullock.

Dear Crisis:—The Lord is still doing marvelous things here. The interest has not abated in the least, but is still deepening and widening. Merchants, mechanics, business men, also people of every class are becoming interested, and giving their hearts to the Lord. Truly "the harvest is great, and the laborers few," but still they come. Over one hundred and twenty-five have already professed faith in Christ, and the work is onward. Thirty-nine have been baptized, and forty-three united with the church. Others will go forward next Sabbath. Praise the Lord! Great good is accomplished in our inquiry meetings. Last Sabbath evening nearly three hundred remained to the meeting. Pray for us.

Nevada, Ohio, Feb. 2nd.

THE RIGHT WAY.

Reader, are you sure you are in the right way? Do you know where you must go for the pardon for your sins? Do you know where forgiveness is to be found?

There is a way both sure and plain, and into that way I desire to guide your feet.

The right way is, simply to trust in the Lord Jesus Christ as your Savior. It is to cast your soul, with all its sins, unreservedly on Christ; to cease completely from any dependence on your own works and doings, either in whole or in part, and to rest on no other work but Christ's work, no other righteousness but Christ's righteousness; no other merit but Christ's merit, as your ground of hope. Take this course, and you are a pardoned soul. "To Christ," says Peter, "give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10: 43.

The Lord Jesus Christ in great love and compassion, has made a full and complete satisfaction for sin by his own death upon the cross. There he offered himself as a sacrifice for us, and allowed the wrath of God, which we deserved, to fall on his own head. For our sins he gave himself, suffered and died, the just for the unjust, the innocent for the guilty, that He might deliver us from the curse of a broken law, and provide a complete pardon for all who are willing to receive it.

Reader, believe on this Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved. Come to him this day with all thy sins and wickedness, with all thy feelings of unfitness and unworthiness, and he will not cast thee out, nor refuse thee. He has said it. He will stand to it. He never breaks his word. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out." John 6: 37.

Reader, do you want to have your sins pardoned? You have heard of the right way. Walk in it, and you shall be saved.—N. Y. Witness.

WILL I BE THERE?

ANTHONY O. BUSCH.

Will I be there,—in that "great day"
When earth's death knell shall toll?
When "mount" and "isle" shall flee,
The starry "heavens" be
Wrapped up "as a scroll"?

Will I be there?—when "kings" shall seek
In "dens" and caves a place;
When "rich" and "great" shall call
For "rocks" and heights to "fall"
And hide them from His face?

Will I be there?—when at the word,—
As with one grand accord,—
"The dead in Christ shall rise"
Triumphant to the skies,
"Forever with the Lord"?

Will I be there?—when Christ, "the Judge,"
Shall come the storm to calm;
When saints shall join the throng,
And sing the mystic "song
Of Moses and the Lamb"?

Will I be there?—when, clothed with might,
Earth's rightful King shall reign;
When Satan bound shall lie,
And judgment from on high
Shall banish woe and pain?

Will I be there?—O, may the thought
My inmost powers employ.
What all this dross of sin
To that sweet "Enter in";
"Eternal weight" of joy?

SPIRIT OF THE HARLOT POWER.

A. W. SIBLEY.

The following, clipped from the Providence Press, shows very clearly the spirit that once caused christians to be persecuted and the fagot fires to burn is now actuating the papal "woman." Thank God her doom is unalterably fixed, "for strong is the Lord God who judgeth her."

"The Shepherd of the Valley, the organ of the Archbishop of St. Louis, has, according to an exchange, the following interesting editorial paragraph in its last issue.

We acknowledge that the Roman Catholic church is intolerant of control; but this intolerance is a logical and necessary sequence of her infallibility. She alone has the right to be intolerant, since she alone possesses truth. The Church endures the heretics only in so far as she is compelled to do it; but she has a deadly hatred for them, and makes use of every artifice for their annihilation. As soon as the Catholics here have attained a sufficient majority, religious freedom in the United States will have an end.

Heresy is a deadly sin which destroys the soul, and, besides, an infectious disease, and because of this all christian princes have uprooted and cast out of their domains even the weakest fibres of heresy. If we neglect at the present moment the persecution of heretics, we repeat it boldly, it is for the sole reason that we are too weak to persecute."

UNCONSECRATION IN THE CHURCH.

Everywhere those who are the truest friends of the church, and most free from uncharitableness, recognize a wide departure from spirituality and devotion on the part of the church at large. They deplore great corruptions in doctrine and practice, and acknowledge the necessity of reform. It may be that not all have clear views of what is needful to produce it, or of the methods by which it is to be sought. But there is a great and rapidly increasing number of those who are fully enlightened in all this matter, and who are praying and laboring to bring back Christ's professed followers to that real following of him which is exemplified in a scriptural faith and practice.

The real difficulty in the church is, that multitudes live without consecration to God, that is, they live unto themselves, seeking to fulfill the desires of the flesh and of the mind. They live under the continual sense of condemnation, acknowledging that they ought to be holy, but realizing that they are not. Their life is a self-life, and therefore they are dead while they live. Many do not know that there is anything better than this, and expect to spend all their life crying, "Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?

The other difficulty is ignorance of the way of faith. None know what faith is, or can know it, except those who are walking in it. Mere intellect, even in its highest cultivation, has no power to comprehend faith in the Son of God without living it.

How often do we hear from the pulpit discourses professedly setting forth the nature and obligations of faith, when it is perfectly evident that the teacher has no just conception of the experience, and needs to be taught himself.

Unbelief and legality are the leading characteristics of the self-life which pervades the unregenerate world, and to a great extent beclouds and paralyzes the church. The needed reformation and that which the Scriptures indicate is entire consecration and faith. These are the two steps by which we enter the way of holiness, and they are so to speak, the two feet by which we walk into it.—Henry Belden.

HOME AND HEALTH.

TEA AND COFFEE.

MENTAL EFFECTS.

By mental effects we mean the changes that are occasioned in the mental or intellectual organism by the use of tea or coffee.

Whatever may be the nature of the mind, whether the mere result of molecular action, as claimed by the materialist, or the product of the operation of a distinct entity upon the brain, as is more generally believed, it is a well-attested fact that the manifestations of mind can only be perfectly harmonious and healthful when exhibited by a healthy brain, or physical organization.

We have already shown the effect of the use of tea and coffee upon the physical organism—the various vital organs, the different tissues, and especially upon the nerves. Now, the brain itself is nerve tissue, and hence must suffer in common with other similar tissues. Furthermore, it cannot receive or impart any kind of intelligence except through nerves, all of which have been blunted and paralyzed by the constant baneful influence of a daily administered poison. Hence it is readily seen that the mind of a tea-drinker or coffee-user cannot escape its due share of damage in the general demoralization of the system which these fascinating beverages effect. And how well does experience support this statement! Facts almost without number could be adduced to show that the influence of tea and coffee drinking is invariably antagonistic to mental strength and endurance. It was long ago decided by eminent physicians that excitement is not strength. It has quite as long been recognized that every unnatural increase of physical or mental action must be followed by a corresponding descent below the average standard of activity.

Then every minister who drinks a strong cup of tea to increase the animation of his discourse, borrows a certain amount of vivacity and energy from some future effort. So every student who goads up his weary brain with a cup of tea to enable him to steal time from sleep, is making a double draft upon his capital of mental force and ability. So, too, the young lady who stimulates with tea to enable her to entertain her visitors, is laying the foundation for future intellectual poverty and mental inefficiency.—Health Reformer.

Nervous Headache.—Nervous headache is a very painful disease. What is the cause of it? and how can it be removed? are questions of great importance. The immediate cause lies in the expanding of the blood vessels that supply the brain with blood. These swell, or enlarge, causing great compression on the brain, as though there was a tight band about it. Now what causes the dilation of the arteries? They are supplied with nervous filaments from the great sympathetic nerve, that controls to a great extent the action of the vital organs, and when these filaments do not supply sufficient nervous energy to keep the blood-vessels contracted they dilate, and the result is nervous headache. The real cause, however, lies back of this, either in nervous exhaustion or in defective nutrition and oxygenization.

Nine-tenths of all persons who suffer with nervous headache might be permanently relieved by attention to the laws of hygiene, to eat, sleep, breathe and live correctly. We have little patience with people who go through life tormented with headache year after year, making no effort to remove the causes and get rid of the pain.—Herald of Health.

Drunkenness a Disease.—There is no doubt whatever that drunkenness, in that ungovernable stage in which the victim cannot restrain himself from drinking, is a disease of the most serious character. The condition of the brain is one of great and distressing exhaustion. Alcohol temporarily relieves it, by increasing the heart's force and dilating the arteries, only to make the matter worse in the end. The true method of curing such cases is by rest and wholesome food, restoring the system to health by hygienic measures as rapidly as possible. The use of the Turkish bath in such cases has proved highly useful.—Her. of Health.

Praying for her Enemies.—A little girl in an Italian Sunday-school complained that some of the children had hissed at her. "Why did you not do your best to defend yourself, or complain to the master?" inquired her mother. The child hung down her head and was silent. "What did you do?" added the mother, "when they were seeking their pleasure in tormenting you?" "I remembered what Jesus did for his enemies," replied the child; "I prayed for them."

CHASTENING.

O thou, whose sacred feet have trod
The thorny path of woe,
Forbid that I should slight the rod
Or faint beneath the blow.

My spirit to its chastening stroke
I meekly would resign,
Nor murmur at the heaviest yoke
That tells me I am thine.

Give me the spirit of thy trust,
To suffer as a son,—
To say, though living in the dust,
My Father's will be done!

I know that trial works for ends
Too high for sense to trace,—
That oft in dark attire he sends
Some embassy of grace.

May none depart till I have gained
The blessing which it bears,
And learned, though late, I entertained
An angel unawares.

So shall I bless the hour that sent
The mercy of the rod,
And build an altar by the tent
Where I have met with God.

THE OLD COVENANT.—No. 3.

R. W. WILSON.

The Old, or First Covenant, which God made with Israel, is not exceptional in its nature to the other covenants mentioned in his Word. The graciousness of this covenant is made obvious in the first statement God made to Israel in regard to it, as introductory to its formation (Ex. 19: 3-6)—"And Moses went up unto God, and the Lord called unto him out of the mountain, saying, Thus shalt thou say to the house of Jacob and tell the children of Israel: Ye have seen what I did unto the Egyptians, and how I bare you on eagles' wings and brought you unto myself. Now, therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people; for all the earth is mine, and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and an holy nation. These are the words which thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel."

Here notice, God speaks of this as being his covenant, and this is confirmed also by the shedding of blood for its dedication, and by the words used on that occasion (Ex. 24: 7, 8)—"And he [Moses] took the book of the covenant, and read in the audience of the people; and they said, All that the Lord hath spoken will we do, and be obedient. And Moses took the blood, and sprinkled it on the people, and said, Behold the blood of the covenant, which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words." And as recorded by Paul (Heb. 9: 19)—"For when Moses had spoken every precept according to the law [not according to anything that Israel had said], he took the blood of calves and of goats, with water, and scarlet wool, and hyssop, and sprinkled both the book, and all the people."

Why was this book thus sprinkled with blood called the book of the covenant? Because the words of the covenant were written therein; and for the same reason the tables of stone are called "the tables of the covenant," because they contained it. Mark, this book, containing only the words of the Lord, as we find in the 4th verse of this same chapter of Exodus. "And Moses wrote all the words of the Lord" (and not the words of Israel), indicating that this book embodied the words of his covenant with Israel, and not theirs with him.

But if the position of Elder Andrews be true, that the first covenant consisted in the bargain or agreement made between God and Israel, concerning his law, it would be necessary to have written in this book, in order to make it the book of the covenant, not only all the words of God, but also all the words of Israel expressed relative to it; because an instrument or book containing an agreement between two parties must give both sides of the contract. Israel said several times over, "All that the Lord hath spoken we will do"; but what they agreed to do was not recorded in the book of the covenant, for that did not constitute a component part of the covenant of God.

The conditions which God has annexed to his covenants and promises express only what we are to comply with in order that we may receive and enjoy the blessings which these covenants and promises are designed to bestow. In order for Israel to receive the blessing of God's covenant with them—such as their being a peculiar treasure unto him above all people, and that they should be a kingdom of priests, and have long life in the land of Canaan—they were required by God to keep his covenant, to obey his commandments; but this condition is no part of the covenant itself, any more than faith in God's promises concerning his Son, is a constituent part of the new covenant. But faith in God's record concerning his Son is made the pre-requisite in order to the reception of its blessings.

Under the old covenant, it was do and live, as Paul expressed it in Rom. 10: 5,—"That the man which doeth these things shall live by them"; but under the new or everlasting covenant it is hear, or believe, "and your soul shall live."

Eld. Andrews has said in his work on the two covenants, page 19, in speaking of the words that had passed between God and Israel, at the time of the institution of the first covenant, says—"Moses, having written the whole thing in a book, sprinkled both it and all the people, saying, Behold the blood of the covenant which the Lord hath made with you concerning all these words." Here we find perversion again. God has not said that the whole thing was written in the book of the covenant. This would embrace the words of Israel as well as the words of God. This is contrary to the facts in the case. Ex. 24: 4—"And Moses wrote all the words of the Lord, and rose up early in the morning and built an altar under the hill . . . . and he made the necessary preparations for the sacrifice and the dedication of the book of the covenant; but this book contained only the words of the Lord, according to the record; therefore the first covenant thus ratified did not consist in a mutual bargain or agreement between God and Israel, for the book of the covenant contained no such thing.

Let us hear Eld. Andrews again from the same page of the work quoted above:—"Both parties to this controversy respecting the first covenant will here again certainly unite in saying that Moses used the word covenant in this remarkable text, not as signifying the ten commandments, but the agreement made respecting them. Here we stand on solid ground, and our opponents will not attempt to drive us hence."

He calls this text, relating to the covenant, a remarkable one, but surely it is not so remarkable as his exposition of it; and he claims to stand on solid ground; but the solidity of a man's position in argument depends more on the facts he uses to sustain it than his own assertions. He says we will not attempt to drive him hence. We think, so far as he is concerned, that an attempt to this end is unnecessary, for by his strange definition of God's covenant he has driven himself outside of the Bible; and so far hence, that if he ever returns he will have to abandon his position.

But why this labored effort on the part of Eld. Andrews to prove the first covenant did not consist in the ten commandments, but in the agreement concerning them? Because it is a demand of his theory in relation to the perpetuity of the ten commandments, which claims that after the abrogation of the first, or old covenant, the ten commandments remain in full force; and that under the new covenant they retain a more sacred relation to the people of God than under the old. To use his own words, "The old covenant gave man the law of God upon tables of stone, but the new puts it into his heart"; and this, according to his theory, constitutes the difference between the old and the new covenants. If he would admit that the ten commandments or law of God constituted the first covenant, then in several instances Paul's writings would spoil his theory, as we find in Heb. 8: 13—"In that he saith a new covenant, he hath made the first old. . . Again, if the first covenant had been faultless, then should no place have been sought for the second." This statement would refute the most important point of his theory concerning the perfection of the ten commandment law, which he tries to maintain by a perverted use of Ps. 19: 7—"The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." He claims that "law" in this text means the ten commandments; but the marginal reading is doctrine, involving all that God has taught in his Word. Again in Heb. 10: 9—"He taketh away the first, that he may establish the second." This taking away the first covenant in order for the establishment of the second is quite in conflict with the theory that under the new covenant the law is only changed from the tables of stone to the hearts of God's people.

Another position of Eld. Andrews, which is equally necessary to the maintenance of his doctrine, is his "two law system"; viz., that the law given to Israel on Mount Sinai consists of two parts—the ten commandments and the ceremonial law. We expect to be able to show, as we proceed in the discussion of this subject, that this is pure assumption, and has not the support of one passage of Scripture. In my investigation of this subject, in reading over the positions of Eld. Andrews, and others who hold his views of the covenants, I have been frequently reminded, by their ingenious and perverting style of reasoning, of the arguments used by immortal-soul theorists in relation to what constituted the man which God formed out of the dust of the ground. They will not admit that God made the whole man out of the dust of the ground, because the Scriptures, which speak of man as dying and wasting away, would disprove their theory of his natural immortality; so they say man is a compound being, consisting of body and soul; and when his death is spoken of it only refers to his body, for the soul lives on after death more fully than before; death is not death to the real man, it is only a transfer from this world to the next.

So with the advocates of the two law system; when we prove by the Scriptures that the ten commandment law, as given to Israel in the old covenant, died when the blood of Christ—the blood of the new or everlasting covenant—was shed, they say, No, this means the ceremonial law; for the real law—the ten commandments—did not die; it was only transferred from the tables of stone to the hearts of God's people, and thus lives on with more power than ever before.

These positions are consistent, as the demands of the theories which they are used to maintain, in relation to the nature of man and the first covenant; but we ask for some better reason for the existence of human theories, so evasive and contradictory to sound doctrine, than the mere necessities of the theories themselves.

I have before me the writings of Elds. Andrews and J. H. Waggoner, on the covenants, and they both maintain that the first or old covenant consisted in the contract or agreement made between God and Israel, concerning his law. We will compare this position with the Word of God, and by the light of truth we will see how it appears. If the first covenant was the bargain, or agreement, then its duration was less than forty days; for the violation of a mutual contract by either party concerned destroys it, and according to their position we have had no first covenant since it was broken by the children of Israel before Mount Sinai, by their worship of the molten calf. For even if they claim it was renewed after that, its renewal would require a repetition of the shedding of blood and the same ceremonies as before. But where do you find its record? Paul said, in speaking of the first or old covenant, (Heb. 8: 13.) "In that he saith, a new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away." "Waxeth old," in this text, indicates a gradual process of wasting, as when applied by this writer to the heavens and earth; but the first covenant considered as an agreement, did not have time to wax old, for it only lived about thirty-five days, when the transgression of Israel caused it to vanish away.

But we find the first covenant of God in existence over six hundred years after this, and only then ready to vanish away.

Some may ask, If the first covenant had run out by limitation when Christ died, how could it be said to have an existence twenty years afterwards, when Paul wrote his epistle to the Hebrews? For this reason: although it had served the end of its appointment, at the coming of the promised Seed, to whom the promise was made, who sealed the new covenant with his blood;—and whereas the confirmation of the new covenant by Christ and his apostles did not interfere with the civil law of any nation, the law of the old covenant was allowed to remain as the municipal law of the Jews; and when Paul wrote about six years before the destruction of Jerusalem, it was ready at that time to vanish away.

We will hear Eld. Andrews again. I quote from page 23 of his work on the covenants. He cites Jer. 31: 32. "Which my covenant they brake. Should I have continued a husband unto them, saith the Lord." If therefore we hold, as do many at the present day, that the covenant between God and Israel was simply the ten commandments, then we have the people of Israel weaken and finally bring to an end the law of God by disobeying it.

The absurdity of this reasoning is so manifest in itself that it does not require argument to show it; for who, with any reason, would claim that a law is weakened and brought to an end when it is transgressed? Is the law against stealing weakened when a man steals a horse? It is not the condition of the law, but that of the transgressor that is affected by disobedience; and it is quite in accordance with Scripture usage to speak of transgression as breaking a commandment, as our Savior said in his sermon on the mount;—"Whosoever therefore shall break one of these last commandments," etc.

Eld. Andrews' reasoning here is incorrect in another respect. He claims that the first covenant was weakened and brought to an end by the transgression of the children of Israel. This might be true if the first covenant consisted in their agreement with God; but this is not true, for the words of this covenant are God's words, and not theirs, therefore its strength and durability did not depend on them, but on the veracity, the omnipotence, and immutability of Him who made it, and whose covenant it was; as Paul said: "He maketh the first old." Who made the first covenant old? God. From the nature of the covenant, he alone could do this. At some future time we will show how God made the first covenant old.

We will now notice a point which Eld. Waggoner attempted to make, in writing on the same subject as published in the 34th No. of The Signs of The Times. He says: "A very decisive reason that the law is not the first covenant made with Israel is this: That covenant was made void and the necessity for a new one created by their violation or failure to keep it. This is a valid reason respecting a contract but not respecting a law." You will observe that this is the same as Eld. Andrews' point, just noticed, with the addition of the word void, which we do not find in the connection in which he has used it, in the Bible; but even with the use of his addition, he does not make any more harmony with his theory and the Word of God than that of his Bro. Andrews; in fact, his word void, as used by him, furnishes a refutation of his own position; for if the first covenant consisted in the contract, and it was made void by its transgression, then it was made void by the first transgression after its formation, and, according to his own showing, there was a void of over six hundred years between the old and the new covenants. But the scriptual facts on this point, already adduced, do not admit of this, and, moreover, the addition or substitution of this word void, in place of break, by Eld. Waggoner, furnishes us with "a very decisive reason" to believe that his theory is not in agreement with truth; for all facts harmonize, and any theory which requires the change of God's word here, and the perversion of a word or passage there, in order to make it agree with God's great Book of facts, must be false.

In our next we will examine the root or foundation of the "two laws," as held by the "Seventh Day" people.

THE DOCTRINE OF 2 COR. 5: 1-10.

J. LYLE.

"For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Those who teach that man is a compound being, possessing an invisible personality which is rather hindered than helped by being clothed with the mortal body, and which in the case of the christian escapes to heaven to be present with the Lord as soon as death dissolves the mortal frame, cite the above passage as proof thereof. Another class of Bible readers view the passage as teaching that man is an organized structure, performing the functions of life till death interferes and renders him as naked, or destitute of conscious existence, as though he had never lived. His being is suspended until the resurrection re-organizes and re-animates him.

As these two views are opposed to each other, we must ascertain what the Scriptures teach concerning man's nature in the present life, his state in death, aud what is implied by its utterances concerning his resurrection. If its general statements harmonize with one of the above doctrines, the other should be abandoned.

It will be seen that the subject of our text is a continuation of the apostle's discourse in the previous chapter. There he dwells on the afflictions of the present life, and comforts his Corinthian brethren with the hope, not of dying and going to heaven but of being introduced to the presence of Jesus by a resurrection. "Knowing," he says, "that he which raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise us up also by Jesus, and shall present us with you." Observe that this positive word "knowing," in the above verse, is the same as "For we know" in our text, and shows it to be a recapitulation of the believer's hope,—victory over death by a resurrection from the dead.

In a former letter the apostle had instructed the Corinthian church in the fifteenth chapter on man's nature by the first Adam, his subjection to death, and that his only hope of a future life was by a resurrection from the dead by the power of Christ—the risen first-fruits, the Second Adam. Not one hint do we find in that chapter of a conscious disembodied life between the believer's death and the sounding of "the last trump."

Let us analyze our text in the light of Inspiration: "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved." Mortal man is an earthly house. Every power of his structure is perishable. "All flesh is grass, and the glory of man [physical and mental] as the flower of the field." The Bible is full of such testimony. Job 4: 17, 19. He is compared to a shepherd's transitory tent. Isaiah. 38: 12. "We have a building of God, an house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Here is something in the heavens, in tabernacle form, contrasted with the mortal tabernacle on earth. It is not heaven itself, but a structure eternal in its nature, built by God, and which as we learn from the next verse, the apostolic church groaned for, called it their house, and earnestly desired it to come from heaven, that they might be clothed upon with it.

What can this heavenly building be but the Lord Jesus Christ in glorified human form, the object of the christian's hope? He is their House, their Pattern. They are adorned with him spiritually here. Rom. 13: 14; Eph. 4: 23, 24. From him will emanate their resurrection tabernacle, even a body fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself. Phil. 3: 20, 21.

The relation which Jesus now holds to his church in this world is illustrated by the pattern shown to Moses in the mount. Heb. 8: 5. According to that model a tabernacle was made with hands for Israel in the wilderness, and by it Soloman built the house of the Lord. So Christ is now the embodiment of things unseen, as yet, which faith discerns. When the Lord descends he will impart his image in full to his people. 1 Thess. 4: 16. St. John also declares—"We know,"—notice the similarity with the words of our text,—"that when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him [then, not before] as he is."

Among the many passages that teach that Jesus is the building of God meant in our text, see John 2: 21; Acts 13: 30—37; Rom. 1: 4; Eph. 1: 20, 23.

We proceed to notice the following verses of the chapter as confirmatory of the above exposition. "For in this we groan," etc. This has been explained incidentally. Ver. 3—"If so be that being clothed we shall not be found naked." The following translation and note are from Conybere and Howson's translation of Paul's Epistles—"If indeed I shall be found still clad in my fleshly garment. (Note.—Literally, 'If indeed I shall be found clad, and not stripped of my clothing'; i. e., 'If at the Lord's coming I shall be found still living in the flesh.' We know from other passages that it was a matter of uncertainty with St. Paul whether he should survive to behold the second coming of Christ or not. Compare 1 Thess. 4: 15, and 1 Cor. 15: 51.")

We quote the succeeding seven verses that stand related to the text, to show by parallel passages that the coming of the Lord and the resurrection is the subject of the apostles discourse. If a living entity dwells in christians, which is released at death to go immediately to heaven, or anywhere else, this was the place to teach the doctrine; but, as in 1 Cor. 15, the inspired Word is as silent as the grave on that subject.

Ver. 4—"For we that are in this tabernacle do groan, being burdened; not for that we would be unclothed [death is not what we groan for], but clothed upon, that mortality might be swallowed up of life." When is mortality swallowed up of life? Ans. When death is swallowed up in victory. Isa. 25: 8. Paul says that mortality is exchanged at the coming of the Lord, when the promise in Isaiah is fulfilled. 1 Cor. 15: 54.

Ver. 5—"Now he that hath wrought us for the self-same thing is God, who also hath given unto us the earnest of the Spirit." That this is expressive of the hope of the redemption of the body, see the parallel passage in Rom. 8: 23. God hath not wrought or prepared his people for an immaterial spirit sphere, but for a substantial, immortal existence.

Ver. 6—"Wherefore we are always confident, knowing that, whilst we are at home in the body, we are absent from the Lord." For the history of this absence see Acts 1: 9—11.

Ver. 7—"For we walk by faith, not by sight." This is but a reiteration of a former verse in the discourse. 2 Cor. 4: 8.

Ver. 8—"We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." So was the aged revelator, who, though standing on the verge of the grave, did not expect to meet his Lord till he returned to earth to glorify his saints. His last prayer is, "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus!"

Ver. 9, 10—"Wherefore we labor, that whether present or absent, we may be accepted of him. For we must all appear at the judgment-seat of Christ." Paul thus ignored a middle state of existence, and like his fellow apostle John, sleeps in Jesus until the coronation day. 2 Tim. 4: 8.

How full of meaning are these words of the apostle—"Absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." The faithful christian walks a lonely pilgrim here, far away from the person of his Beloved. Sooner or later he puts off this his earthly tabernacle (2 Pet. 1: 13, 14), but having no knowledge of intervening time in his death state till he awakes, his transition from mortal to immortality in the presence of the Lord will seem to his conciousness to have been instantaneous. So with the saints found living when Jesus appears; this transformation will come "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." Truly there is virtually but a step beeween the pilgrim and the celestial City! What weighty motives this subject presents for constant watchfulness and prayer.

Newark, N. J., Feb. 1876.

THE AFTER LIFE.

When once this weighty question of the after-life has been opened, and when it shall have come into the hands of well-informed biblical interpreters, a controversy will ensue, in the progress of which it will be discovered that, with unobservant eyes, we and our predecessors have so been walking up and down, and running hither and thither, among dim notices and indications of the future destinies of the holy family, as to have failed to gather up or to regard much that has lain upon the pages of the Bible, open and free to our use. Those who, through a course of years, have been used to read the Scriptures unshackled by systems, and bound to no conventional modes of belief, such readers must have felt an impatience in waiting—not for the arrival of a new revelation from heaven, but of an ample and unfettered interpretation of that which has been so long in our hands.

The doctrine of future punishment, as a belief drawn from Scripture, and so drawn as to dissipate prevalent illusions, and to spread on all sides a salutary and effective alarm—such a belief will take its place in the midst of an expanded prospect of the compass and intention of the christian system.

The renovation which we look for will come in as the splendor of day comes in the tropics—it will be a sudden brightness that makes all things glad.

Who is so bold as not to draw back trembling, although the prospect be bright, when he approaches a mediation such as this, and ventures to inquire what that feeling shall be, and what that condition of the church shall be, when, in its simplicity of expression, and in the incomprehensible vastness of its import, the first truth of the christian system shall present itself to the minds of men—not as a verbal proposition, but as a reality? Those wordy mists wherewith controversies, long continued and often repeated, enshroud religious principles, will have passed away; and the darkness of mis-belief which sheds a gloom beyond its own limits, will have gone off to the distance as a cloud. Preachers well understanding that science, though good and genuine in itself, can contribute absolutely nothing toward the interpretation of truths eternal, and feeling well that human eloquence has little or nothing of its own to add to the impressiveness of those truths, shall allow them to be offered in the strictly rendered terms of Scripture, to the reason and to the consciences of men. Multitudes also are there, who, although their present religious condition is, in their own estimation of it, ambiguous, yet stand prepared to listen to the boldly proclaimed gospel with gladness and animation; they are the constant frequenters of public worship—to its forms and observances they yield themselves, not reluctantly, nor yet cordially, but wishing that the service they take part in was borne out in their bosoms by a less evanescent feeling. Churches are filled by those to whom the first wakening sounds of another Whitefield's voice would be hailed as bringing "glad tidings of great joy."—Prophetic Times.

A CHOICE OLD BOOK.

The following interesting extracts have been selected by Elder T. M. Preble, of Hyde Park, from the rare old book owned by Henry A. Rich. The book contains the Life and Death of Dr. John Donne, Dean of St. Paul's, London, and "Eighty Sermons," preached by him between the years 1618 and 1630. The work was dedicated "To His Majestie, Charles, By the Grace of God, King of Great Britaine, France, and Ireland." "He was born in London, of good and virtuons parents," and "by his mother he was descended from the family of the famous Sir Thomas More, sometimes Lord Chancellor of England." The book is in a very good state of preservation considering its age, still retaining its original cover, judging from its appearance. The old style of letters and spelling of more than two hundred and fifty years ago cannot be imitated in these extracts. The following are extracts from "Sermon XXVI,"—"Preached upon Easter-day:"—

1 Thess. 4: 17.—Then we which are alive, and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord.

In this epistle, our apostle (according to his manner in all his epistles) first establishes those to whom he writes, in those matters of faith, in which he had formerly instructed them; and then, rectifies them in matter of manners, of holiness of life, and the ways and fruits of sanctification. In this last part of this chapter, he involves, he wraps up both together; a fundamental point, the resurrection of the dead, and then, an instruction for manners arising out of that, that they mourn not intemperately for the dead, as they do (saith he) which have no hope of seeing them again, who are gone. . . . What difference between them that were dead thousands of years before, and them whom Christ shall find alive at his second coming. . . .

This then, in our text, is an apprehensive and a comprehensive word. It reaches to, and lays hold upon that which the apostle says before the text, in the fifteenth and sixteenth verses. Then, when the dead in Christ are first risen, and risen by Christ's coming down from heaven, in clamor, in a shout, in the voice of the Archangel, and in the trumpet of God. Then, when that is done, we that are alive and remain, shall be wrought upon, and all being joined in one body, they and we together, shall be caught up in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. So that, in these words we shall have three things to consider, which will constitute three parts in this exercise. First, the raising of those that were dead before; secondly, the changing of them who are alive then; and lastly, our union in our exaltation, and possession of the kingdom of God. . . .

For our first branch of our first part, the rising of the dead, the first man that was laid in the dust of the earth, Abel, loses nothing by lying so long there; he loses nothing that men of later ages gain. For, if we live to the coming of Christ to judgment, we shall not prevent them, we shall have no precedency of them that were dead ages before. . . . They die, says David, and they return to their own dust. It is not an entering into a new state when they die, but a returning to their old—they return to dust. And it is not to that dust which is cast upon them in the grave (for that may be another man's dust) but to that dust which they carried about them in their bodies. They return, and to dust, and to their own dust. . . .

Neither does Abraham think it any diminution to lie in the dust of the earth when he is dead. . . . And when David seems to fear the dust of death (lighten mine eyes, lest they sleep the sleep of death) it is not that he suspects any detriment to himself by death, that he shall be the worse by dying. . . . And when he says (in apparence) by way of expostulation, and jealousy, and suspicion, "Will God shew wonders to the dead? shall the dead arise and praise him? shall his loving kindness be declared in the grave, or his faithfulness in destruction?" All these passionate interrogatories and vehement expostulations may safely be resolved into these doctrinal propositions. . . . Yes, God will show wonders to the dead; the dead shall rise and praise him; his loving kindness shall be declared in the grave, and his faithfulness in destruction. For God will not forget the congregation of his poor forever. . . . God hath a greater congregation under ground, than of the living upon the face of the earth; and God will not forget the congregation of his poor forever. . . . But how shall they be raised? by what power? (for that is a second consideration induced also by this first word of our text "then") when the Lord shall have descended from heaven to raise them. Then, when they are raised in the virtue and power of Christ.

Then (says our blessed Savior, speaking of the resurrection), then, shall the righteous shine forth as the sun. . . . Christ as the Son of Mary rose not by his own power. It was by his own; but his own, because he was God, as well as man. Nor could all the magic in the world have raised him sooner, than by that his power. . . . So sits he now at the right hand of his Father in heaven. . . . till his time of coming to judgment come. Then . . . the dead shall rise first; they shall rise in the power of Christ (therefore Christ is God; for Christ himself rose in the power of God), and that power shall be thus declared, in a shout, in the voice of the archangel, in the trumpet of God.

The dead hear not thunder, nor feel they an earthquake. If the cannon batter that church walls in which they lie buried, it wakes not them, nor does it shake or affect them if that dust, which they are, be thrown out; but yet there is a voice which the dead shall hear. The dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God (says the Son of God himself), and they that hear shall live. And that is the voice of our text. . . .

I scarcely know a verse of Scripture more diversely read and consequently more variously interpreted than that place, which should most enlighten us, in this consideration presently under our hands, which is that place to the Corinthians. We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed. The apostle professes there to deliver us a mystery (Behold, I show you a mystery), but translators and expositors have multiplied mystical clouds upon the words. . . . But, howsoever, that which St. Chrysostome collects upon his reading, may not be maintained. He reads as we do; and without all doubt aright. We shall not all sleep. But what then? Therefore shall we not all die? To sleep there is to rest in the grave, to continue in the state of the dead, and so we shall not all sleep, not continue in the state of the dead. . . .

And farther we carry not your consideration upon those two branches which constitute our second part,—that some shall be alive at Christ's coming; that they that are alive shall receive such a change as shall be a true death, and a true resurrection, and so shall be caught up into the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so be with the Lord forever, which are the circumstances of our third and last part.

In this last part, we proposed it for the first consideration, that the apostle determines the consideration of the resurrection in those two, Them and Us, They that slept in Christ, and We that expect the coming of Christ. Of any resurrection of the wicked, here is no mention. Not that there is not one; but that the resurrection of the wicked conduced not to the apostle's purpose, which was to minister comfort in the loss of the dead, because they were to come again, and to meet the Lord, and to be with him forever; whereas, in the resurrection of the wicked, who are only to rise, tha they may fall lower, there is no argument of comfort. . . .

Hell is not a monument of God's cruelty, but of his mercy. If we were not told of hell, we should all fall into hell, and so there is mercy in hell. . . . For us, who by this notification of hell, escape hell, we shall not die, but live, that is, not die so but that we shall live again. Therefore is death called a sleep (Lazarus sleepeth, says Christ). And churchyards are our beds. And in those beds (and in all other beds of death), (for the dead have their beds in the sea, too, and sleep even in the restless motion thereof), the voice of the archangel and the trumpet of God shall awake them that slept in Christ before, and they and we shall be united in one body; for, as our apostle says here, We shall not prevent them, so he says also, That they shall not be made perfect without us. Though we live to see Christ, we shall not prevent them, though they have attended Christ five thousand years in the grave. . . .

Christ does not come in a chariot, and send carts for us. He comes as he went. This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven, says the angels at his ascension. In what manner did they see him go? He was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their sight. So he went, so he shall return; so we shall be taken up in the clouds to meet him in the air. . . .

When he is come from the right hand of his Father in heaven, into the air to meet us, he is come farther than we are to go from the grave to meet him. . . . Here in our text, it is Obviam Domino, We must meet the Lord. He invests here no other name but that. He hath laid aside his Christ and his Jesus, names of mercy, and redemption, and salvation, and comes only in the name of power. The Lord, the Judge of quick and dead. In which judgment he shows no mercy; all his mercy is exercised in this life; and he that hath not received his portion of that mercy before his death, shall never receive any. There he judges only by our works. . . . Then in judgment we meet the Lord, the Lord of power, and the last time that ever we shall meet a Jesus, a Christ, a God of mercy, is upon our death bed; but there we shall meet him so, as that when we meet him in the other name, the Lord, in the air, yet by the benefit of the former mercy received from Jesus, we shall be with the Lord forever.—The Norfolk County Gazette.

The Need of Darkness.—There are many things we cannot see, save in the dark. The stars shine all day long, but we cannot see them till night comes on; and it is the same with many other starlights. We need the dark to see them, and God kindly lets some shadow fall upon us, and we grumble at him for his thoughtful goodness. It is only in the dark that the glow-worm is to be seen, and if you will take your lamp to it, you shall not see it. Symbols, truly, of the glowing lights of God's truth. Persist in looking at them by the light of your lamp, however well-trimmed that lamp may be, and you shall not see them at all. They must be looked at in that Great Light which is not their own.

The imaginations of commentators, or the sentiments of friends, have too often been made the key to modern expositions; whilst the plain text, which is the safest guide, has been neglected.

GOD'S HISTORY OF THE EARTH.

The Holy Scriptures profess to give an outline history of the world, from the time of its chaotic condition, before its first creation by God, to the time of its second chaotic state, when God will recreate it, producing a glorious restitution of all things of which all the prophets have given testimony. This divine historic sketch professes to unroll the pages of the past, giving the important items of the Creator's acts, and the application of his government to the earth and its creatures, down to the present time.

An important part of this history is consecutive in its nature, giving the events in the order of their occurrence as well as specifying their nature and results. This makes it doubly easy to test the truthfulness of its history; for if it is true, it must agree with the events and also the order in which they transpire. It also professes to unroll the map of the future, giving the great characteristic events and conditions of the earth and its inhabitants down to its perfected, changeless state.

That part of this history which relates to events and conditions future from the time of its being written, is called prophecy, which signifies the foretelling of events, or stating what is to come to pass.

A truthful, reliable history is a statement of facts made by one having a knowledge, direct or indirect, of the facts stated. A test of the correctness of a history is the perfect correspondence between the statements and the facts designed to be represented.

The truthfulness of prophetic history may be positively tested by those who both read the predictions and witness the events foretold. If the statements and circumstances described exactly agree as to the facts and order of their occurrence, the prophecy is "sealed;" that is, it is ratified by the God who brings the events to pass.

If the scriptural history of our world, as far as human knowledge has demonstrated its truthfulness, has been found true in every case, if there should be a few cases where the demonstration is lacking and the question of truth is left open for discussion, it is fair and logical to reckon them true, until it has been demonstrated by undisputed facts, which is something more than men's opinions, that they are not true.

If the history of our world has been given correctly in the Scriptures, and much of it was prophetic when written, giving a correct statement of events long before they transpired, or anything which could indicate their occurrence was seen, it proves, beyond the power of any logical argument to contradict, that the Author of that history possessed knowledge higher and beyond human knowledge; for man never did have the power to thus foresee and describe events wrapped in the darkness of the future.

It is a fact that men by their own power of understanding know nothing about the future, only as some earthly events repeat themselves, so that they may anticipate some things, because the same had taken place in the past. By this principle we say that "History repeats itself;" because there are natural principles, or, more properly, principles now operative, which produce similar results everywhere, upon all men, and therefore what they resulted in a hundred years ago they will result in to-day.

The same principles which caused Babylon to become great and mighty, caused Rome to become the same; and the same social elements which caused Babylon to be overthrown will cause Rome to fall also. This is the only show of argument by which man can account for human foresight or power to predict coming events.

Upon this principle no prophetic history of the future could be given by uninspired men, only what they could know "naturally," by the action of natural law; so that all who reject the divine inspiration of the prophecies reject the idea of the church knowing anything about the future only by argument of parallelism—nature repeating its own acts. Therefore every prediction of an event which requires, for its accomplishment, a power above nature's, is disputed by those who reject God and the inspiration of his Word; so that, when the church proclaims coming events upon the authority of divine history, which are outside of natural occurrences, such as the resurrection of the dead and the renewal of the earth, they are ready to dispute it, as Peter says of the last-day scoffers, who will say, "Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." That is, no such events can transpire as the coming of Christ and the resurrection, for no such events have taken place in the past.

True faith looks upon God as the sovereign Ruler of the universe, not limited by the power or action of nature, but is himself the source of that power and the Controller of all things. As he changed the order and arrangement of earth matter at the creation, not by the action of scientific laws, but by his almighty power, according to his own purpose, so he can make any changes in the things and beings of his creation according to his own infinitely perfect counsel.

This is the great principle rejected by the last-day scoffers, as Peter foresaw, which causes them to scoff at the proclamation of coming events, which they cannot see through the light of their (often false) science.

The purposes of the Creator of our world, as to its perpetuity and changes, are expressed in his prophetic history of it, so that by consulting that history we may learn what changes have taken place in the past, and those that may be expected in the future.

As God has made much of this prophetic history consecutive, he has manifested his design that his people should understand the order in which earthly events should transpire, so that they may know at all times what the present events are which were foretold, and those to be looked for in the immediate future.

If a man traveling from Chicago to Boston had a chart of the road, in which all the principal towns to be passed were given, and he could read it so as to tell what places he had passed, he certainly could tell by the chart what place he might then be passing, and also what town he might expect to next arrive at.

Just so is God's historic chart or prophetic Word, in which all the most important events connected with the interests of his church in this world are given. The people of God started from Paradise lost to journey to Paradise restored, amid changing scenes of trial and danger, where it has ever been important that they know the nature of their present surroundings, and what to prepare to meet in the unfolding future. God could foresee just what his church would meet in this world, and just what would shield her from the dangers to be experienced, and make just such provisions of truth for her as the circumstances would demand.

God requires his servants to feed his people with the truths he has provided for them in his Word, just as a school teacher is required to teach his pupils the principles expressed in the text books furnished by government for his school. The teacher is acquitted when he teaches his pupils the very sentiments and ideas furnished him by his superiors. He has no right to teach from some books furnished, and reject others, for then he reflects upon the wisdom of his superiors in furnishing that which it is not wise to teach. So it is in the school of Christ.

God has given by the prophets, Christ, and the apostles, text books or different classes of truth, which he saw would be important for his people to learn. He has called men to go and teach these truths to his people, and will hold them responsible for preaching all the truth applicable at their time. They are not allowed to preach prophetic truth to the exclusion of doctrinal and experimental; for his purpose evidently was that his church of all generations should receive the variety given, which was designed to accomplish certain purposes which anything short of the given variety could not do. Therefore when any important part of sacred truth is not given to the people, there is a deficiency of christian character, position and influence, just as a compound medicine, in which an important ingredient is wanting, could not affect the patient as the perfect remedy would do.

God has made the prophetic history of his Word a very prominent and large division of sacred truth, manifesting in every item of christian experience in all ages recorded in the Scriptures, in the teachings of Christ, the apostles, and the most eminent teachers in the church, that it should be made to occupy the front rank in proving Christ to be the Messiah, God to be the author of the Holy Scriptures, the Holy Spirit to have come from God, according to certain predictions, to lay a foundation for a hope of a glorious future, and to deliver from present snares and coming judgments. Nearly every sermon of Christ and the apostles, and their epistles, were largely prophetic.

What would have been the fate of the church at Jerusalem's destruction, if it had not been taught the prophetic truth designed for her then and there? Who would have fled from the doomed city, if nothing but doctrinal and practical truth had been heard and received? No one; for it was faith in its prophetic history, given by Christ, which caused the believers to escape the snare.

We labor more constantly, and press this question of the importance of teaching and receiving all the elements of revealed truth, as given by God, because it seems to us that the importance of the subject is not well understood, and therefore is not generally taught as it should be. We believe that prophetic truth is not at the present time receiving from christian teachers, generally, that attention and made to occupy its proper place in the catalogue of divine utterances as was the case in formes ages, and as God demands of this generation. We also believe that this is emphatically a prophetic age; that is, it is a time when there is a large class of prophetic texts in process of fulfillment, and that these developments indicate other events more grand and important, rising into view, soon to become mighty realities. If this be so, then the proclamation of the prophetic part of the gospel is made especially important as a present duty of Christ's servants. We earnestly and kindly press this important question upon the attention of all the professed servants of Christ, of all denominations, trusting that God will have mercy upon us, and sanctify us through a belief in and an obedience to all his sacred truth.

CRIME IN NEW YORK.

New York has long been known as "The Murderers' Paradise," and the following statistics will account for the term. It appears that out of two hundred and eighty-one homicides committed in the past five years, the great majority of which were murders of unmistakable character, only seven of the murderers have been executed, and only twenty-four sentenced to imprisonment for life. The most glaring feature is that more than one-fourth of the entire number of assassins have escaped without being brought to trial. For every murderer who has been hanged, ten have escaped without punishment of any sort.

The government of New York city is more thoroughly Roman Catholic than any other Municipal government in this Republic, and is more demoralized, giving less security to life and property, and gives more license to crime of all shades than any other city in the land. This has ever been the fruit of the priestly corruptions of the abominable Roman Church. We correctly call the ages of its glory and triumph "the dark ages,"—dark with crime and iniquity, oppression and bloodshed.

Whoever puts the reins of American government into the hands of Roman Jesuits will transplant to this soil the dark and bloody scenes of the Spanish Inquisition. The difference between the liberty, safety and prosperity of the inhabitants of New England and those of Mexico, for the last three hundred years, has evidently been produced by the fact that Catholicism has been the ruling element there, and a purer Christianity here. The government of Spain is now the nearest to the Pope's standard of any State in the world; and we do hope that Americans will read its present history, and learn how its priest-ridden rulers are laboring to enslave the citizens, uproot every plant of liberty, and exterminate every ray of light which has recently given hope of the resurrection of the nation of dungeons and faggots.

Catholicism sends up a wailing cry to-day from every land where her cross is reared, because she cannot enslave, rob and butcher the people as it did five hundred years ago. The declaration of infallibility was declared for the purpose of arousing all Catholics to the necessity of uniting and arming, to regain what they have lost by the reformation and the introduction of general education and political liberty. Modern progress in civilization and general enlightenment has destroyed their power over the masses of the people, so that they cannot rob them and bind their consciences as of old; therefore they strike at our schools and every channel of free thought, so that the Pope and his priests may again rule the world.

But, thank God, this terrible effort is doomed to end in an everlasting overthrow and a complete demolition of the great antichrist. It must end by limitation, for God has set the bounds of its period and it cannot pass them. The gloom of evening is fast gathering around it, and the chill of death is producing its present convulsive throes, as the last efforts are being made to prolong its forfeited life. The angels in heaven and the saints upon the earth already feel the first vibrations of the prophetic raptures as they witness the dying Harlot's last expiring effort to mount the throne and grasp the sword of earthly dominion; for they know from the infallible Word of God that the throne can never be regained by her; but instead of a royal robe, she will be wrapped in her shroud of death; instead of rising to glory she will sink in eternal infamy; instead of her shedding the blood of the saints, the martyrs, whose blood she has shed, will arise, and sing victory as she sinks under the fiery wave of perdition's lake.

Then let us rejoice at her boastful words, as she pours out the wine of her wickedness upon the cities and peoples. These point as the divine index to the awful sentence of God—"The great day of his wrath is come, and who shall be able to stand?"

SECRET CONDITION IN THE ANDRASSY NOTE. New York, Feb. 18.—A London special says the following is the text of the secret paragraph inserted by the Queen's Ministry in the article of adhesion to the Austrian note to the Porte:

"The Sultan to send a special commissioner to the insurgents. If the insurgents reject the proposals for peace, the Austrian Government, at the Porte's expense, will make a military occupation of the whole territory of the insurrectionary provinces for six months, while the British Government will send a division of its fleet to cruise in Turkish waters and in the Adriatic also."

It is stated that the Russian General Vouvaroff had an interview with Prince Charles of Roumania, at which it was agreed the latter should take an early opportunity for refusing to pay the Turkish tribute, and that upon the Porte taking steps to enforce its rights a Russian force of 150,000 men would occupy the province.

The progression of events connected with the complicated troubles between Turkey and her vassal subjects is evidently towards the final overthrow of the Sultan's government, and a general intervention of the great Powers in deciding who shall occupy the "holy places" in Palestine and the long coveted strong holds of Constantinople and the Dardanelles. The coming spring may light the match which shall explode the mine over which Europe now stands in awful suspense. Next summer's sun may reflect its flashing rays from the burnished steel already prepared for humanity's last terrible slaughter. Grand and awful events seem to be rising in the East, casting shadows of fearful gloom over the Western nations where the twilight last gathers.

BRO. MOODY'S MEETINGS.

Having two or three spare days, we felt assured they could be well spent by attending the wonderful meetings conducted by Brn. Moody and Sankey at the Hippodrome in New York. Accordingly, Bro. Geo. T. Adams and myself left Boston at 6 P. M., Thursday evening, Feb. 9th, via the Old Colony R. R., and Fall River boat, for the great metropolitan city. We wish to say right here, that we consider this route to New York much the most delightful. The fare is but four dollars, two less than by all rail. Berths are free. Good state rooms with accommodations for two persons can be obtained for a dollar extra. One can have a fine night's sleep, and be in New York about 8 o'clock in the morning, all fresh for the duties of the day.

The meetings at the great Hippodrome are marvelous. The place is not large enough to accommodate the people who wish to attend. When Mr. Barnum arranged the Hippodrome for his great shows, he little thought he was preparing a place where many thousands would hear the gospel night after night, and be brought to Christ. A place where the most interesting revival work ever witnessed in New York would be enjoyed; but such is the case, judging from what has been already accomplished during the brief period in which these meetings have been in progress.

At the noon prayer-meetings some three or four thousand assemble daily, and the interest is steadily increasing. These meetings continue from one to two o'clock. A large number of clergymen are present daily, and assist as far as there is opportunity. Bro. Moody speaks very plainly to professors of religion, giving no countenance to the cold formalism, and worldly-mindedness, now so common in the professed church of Christ. He is not preaching a low-standard religion. If his advice was taken, backslidings would be very rare, and conversions would be greatly multiplied. Although the meetings had been in progress but three days when we arrived, there were several seeking Christ. On the fifth evening some sixty rose for prayers, and many remained to the inquiry meeting, which is of great importance in assisting persons to come to Jesus.

Bro. Moody works just as candid people would say one should labor, who believes that all out of Christ must be lost; but it is a lamentable fact, that a large number of professors are living as though they considered the christian religion of but little consequence, and scarcely worth naming to the unconverted. It is no wonder that so few are brought to Christ. Let us wake up to the importance of trying to lead people to the Savior before it is too late.

THE SITUATION IN TURKEY.

The aspect of things in Turkey looks very dark for the Sultan. The mene tekel seems to be written plainly on his walls. He has been very stubborn, but now begins to bend and bow to the demands of those whom he has long crushed with a cruel hand. February 13th he "signed the decree granting the Andrassy reforms to the people of the insurgent provinces." The following are the five leading points proposed by Mr. Andrassy:

"The establishment of religious liberty. The modification of the system of collecting tithes. The granting of facilities to agriculturists. The application of a portion of the revenues of the insurgent provinces to local improvements. The appointment of a mixed commission of Mussulmens and Christians to watch execution of these reforms."

He may act some like Pharaoh, when he refused to set the children of Israel leave their Egyptian bondage, and harden his heart against the Christians in the Turkish dominions.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune, writing from Constantinople, Jan. 14th, says:

"Trade is now virtually paralyzed. Money is becoming scarce. Those who have gold are beginning to hoard it, and there is little in circulation. The war in Herzegovina is daily becoming more expensive. The maintenance of the whole army on a war footing is telling fearfully on the resources of the land. The navy is likewise being put on a war footing in order to be prepared for contingencies in Crete. With all these extraordinary expenses it is unlikely that any more interest coupons of the public debt will be paid. The nation seems on the verge of anarchy through insolvency. This it is felt will bring on intervention resulting in a general European war."

Another writer says:

"Deeming the Porte unable to afford protection, Roumania has decided to discontinue paying tribute. This may be regarded as one of the consequences of the Herzegovina revolt, which is demonstrating the weakness of the Turkish government and inciting its disaffected subjects to make their hostility more manifest."

Soon after the Sultan had decided to accept the reforms proposed by Count Andrassy, the Principality of Roumania,—the strongest of the partly independent States on the northern frontier of Turkey—refused to pay tribute. There is evidence that the great powers of Europe are only planning to cause the removal of the "Sick man" from Europe, as soon as possible. It is evident there must be a radical change soon, that will make a great stir among the crowned heads in the old world. Roumania says to the Porte:

"We agreed to pay tribute in return for the obligation you assumed to defend us against foreign invasion. You have shown yourself incompetent to suppress a small local insurrection, and we can no longer depend upon your protection; therefore we will pay you no more tribute."

This is a period of special interest to the student of prophecy.

BRIDGEPORT.—Sabbath, Feb. 13th, we commenced a series of meetings in Bridgeport, Ct. We preached in the morning in the Methodist church, in the afternoon in the Adventist church, and in the Baptist church in the evening. The audiences were all unusually large and attentive. The prospect is encouraging. Bro. Ali Andrews has been very actively engaged for some time in efforts to awaken an interest in the great truths we love so well, and his labors have not been in vain. He has sent the Crisis to over two hundred families for three months, and is still adding to the number. The Lord is blessing his own heart in return for his sacrifice, and many are becoming deeply interested to know more about the way of truth and holiness. We have never before seen so good a prospect in Bridgeport. Srs. Warren and Crumb have preached here with good results, and are highly esteemed for their faithful labors.

Bro. Andrews has hired the Universalist church for a series of meetings. We commenced there Monday evening, Feb. 14th, and the prospect is now (17th) encouraging. Some are under conviction, seeking after Christ.

FRUITS OF CONSECRATION.—A dear Bro. in the ministry, whom we met at Nevada, O., writes: "I do feel to praise God that I ever launched out into the deep waters. The change is a greater one than when I was converted. I shall never forget the memorable Jan. 7th, one month to-day, when I fully consecrated all to Jesus. Praise the Lord, O, my soul."

Why will not all ministers imitate this example? Jesus is as ready to accept one as another. He is no respecter of persons. He would delight to fill all with the Holy Spirit, but cannot do it till there is full submission to do and suffer his will, without murmuring. But when he is allowed to have full possession of the heart, then follows perfect love and peace. O how blessed is the result. Come to the all-healing stream, and be made every whit whole. Lay all at the feet of Jesus, and say, "Thy will be done." Do it NOW. Do not wait another moment. Jesus is ready to accept the offering. Say from the heart:

"Here I give my all to thee,
Friends, and time, and earthly store;
Soul and body thine to be,
Wholly thine forevermore."

M. G.

SINKING.—At short intervals evidence continues to come, showing that the Roman "woman" and the "sick man," are both in a critical condition. The following is a telegram from London, Jan. 20:

"A special despatch to the Standard from Rome, says the Italian Government has closed the Episcopal Seminary at Como for its refusal to admit a Government inspector. This is a most important act, being the strongest step yet taken in the States dealing with the Church."

We are fast approaching the grand focal point, where the prophecy meets in the coming of our Redeemer. Let us lift up our heads and rejoice. The greatest of all events is at hand. Praise the Lord.

M. G.

PRINCE NAPOLEON.—A Paris telegram shows that Prince Napoleon is adopting the sharp policy of his father, Napoleon III. in order to secure the reins of the French government; first favor the Republic, and then watch for an opportunity to establish the empire by a vote of the people.

PARIS, Feb. 14. Prince Napoleon has issued an address to the electors of Ajaccio. He says:—The form of government is not in question. It exists. I accept it frankly." He denies that his acceptance of the Republic is dictated by ambition or personal interest, but declares it comes from profound convictions. He concludes thus: "I respect the form of government without any bitterness provided it insures order, justice and liberty. If elected I shall be always democratic and a partisan of progress."

M. G.

RATHER STRANGE.—In the Brooklyn court of Oyer and Terminer, a man was recently tried for murder. In selecting the jury, one man was presented as a juror who did not believe in the immortality of the soul. The counsel objected to him, stating "that a man who did not believe in the immortality of the soul was not competent to sit on a trial for a capital offense." The man was rejected.

M. G.

THE WORLD MOVES.—Recently an Italian Methodist Episcopal church has been dedicated at Rome. This is the first church for Italian Protestants, that has been erected since the union of Paganism with Christianity in the days of Constantine, about A. D. 325. Now the pure gospel, which teaches salvation by faith, is taught in the Italian language in Rome. They have over one hundred communicants.

CARDINAL ANTONELLI says the Pope has been "despoiled," and placed in "financial straits," and for this reason he will not be able to send much to the Centennial Exhibition. Yes, his dominion is taken away, as declared by the prophet Daniel.

☞ A wonderful outpouring of the Holy Spirit is taking place at Niles, Mich., where the different religious bodies have united, and are holding three special meetings each day.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

Correspondence.

From Bro. J. Ridley.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—It has been a number of months since I last wrote a report of my labor to the Crisis; but I have not been idle. I have been laboring in protracted efforts most of the time this winter, and the Lord has blessed his truth to the salvation of sinners. I never have seen people more anxious to hear concerning the signs of the Lord's coming than at present. Doors are opening in all directions, and there is a great need of more earnest workers in the western field. The fertile lands of Iowa are being settled by an intelligent class of people, from different parts of the world, and though the multitude are poor in this world, yet they are anxious to hear of a better one, and many are willing to accept it.

I have lately returned from a trip of ten days into the northwestern part of the State, about two hundred and fifty miles from home (a journey of an hundred miles does not seem as great an undertaking to people here in the West as it does to those in the East), and into the section that has been devastated by grasshoppers in years past. The past season the "hoppers" did not trouble them, but the wet weather coming on just as they were beginning their harvest, damaged their crops very badly.

I went first to Cherokee, where we held a tent meeting in the summer, and stopped over Sunday. Found the church awake and letting their light shine. I baptized two young men on Sunday, and in the evening ordained Bro. J. W. Haughawout, by the laying on of hands and prayer, to the work of the gospel ministry.

Bro. H. became interested in the truth last summer, in the "mission tent," and with his wife and others was buried with Christ by baptism, and arose to live a new life. He acted the part of the Bereans, who searched the Scriptures daily to see whether these things were so; and being a man of good understanding, and also having quite a good knowledge of history, he was soon able to "give a reason" of his hope. And as the brethren were without any preacher he began by their request, to exercise his gift by preaching for them. And a few weeks ago he went up into Clay Co., where he had formerly lived, and commenced a series of meetings, which he continued about two weeks and about 25 started to serve the Lord. The people were very anxious to hear the truth, and desired him to remain longer; but he was getting somewhat tired, and knowing that I was coming to Cherokee, he postponed the meeting a few days, and came down, promising to go back and get me to go with him if possible.

Monday morning I started with Bro. H. and some other brethren from Cherokee for the meeting, twenty five miles across the praries. The meetings are held in a large school house, it being a country place; and when we got there we found the people waiting for us. I stopped there four evenings, and I have never seen people more eager to know the truth. Some came over seven miles night after night. The house was crowded every night, and the last night, after filling all the standing room in the house, there was a number in the entry that could not get in. About twenty while I was there expressed a desire to live henceforth for Christ. I left Bro. H. to continue the meeting over Sunday, while I turned my face homeward. I stopped one night on the way and preached the Word to a company of attentive listeners in a new field. I trust some seed that was sown will bring forth fruit to the glory of God.

Dear brethren, while we profess to be looking for the soon coming of our blessed Lord, let us live so that our actions will not belie our profession. We have only a little while longer to work, therefore let us be diligent, that we not only may be found of Christ in peace, but that we also may be instrumental in leading some to him, and thus have them to share the glory of that promised home with us.

Manchester, Iowa, Feb. 3d, 1876.

From Bro. F. P. Dingley.

Dear Brethren:—By your permission I would add my testimony to the Crisis in favor of the these truths which we as a body of believers hold so precious; I mean this doctrine of the soon coming of the King Eternal and the truths connected with it. O I am so glad that I was ever persuaded to turn my face Zionward, and to look for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life to be revealed at his appearing and kingdom.

I feel that I am the least of our Lord's disciples, but I would not be cast aside from them, nor fail to have my name registered among theirs, especially at the coming of the Lord Jesus. My hopes all centre in Jesus, and are based on his coming to reward his people with life and immortality, and to give them the inheritance which is promised to all those that are sanctified. Nothing short of that coming can satisfy my longings.

"Worldly things cannot attract me,
I have counted all as dross."

But this hope that I have in Christ, really cheers me and keeps me amid the perils of our time. I feel that we are living amid great perils, the perils of the last time. The signs spoken of by the long-ago inspired writers to indicate the time of our Lord's appearing have nearly all been seen as predicted, and we are now living in a time when we must watch earnestly, with much prayer, fasting and patience, lest we fall asleep and that day come upon us unawares.

The admonition given us by our Savior to watch and pray always, that we may be able to stand before him when he appears, is specially important to us at the present time. We have almost every thing thrown around us to separate us from the love of God, and to keep us from enjoying that perfect peace, which it is our privilege to possess; but he that said to Paul, "My grace is sufficient for thee," is perfectly able to keep our feet from falling, and to preserve us blameless unto his coming, if we will obey him in all things. He is coming very soon, and then—

"We shall sing on that beautiful shore
The melodious songs of the blest,
And our spirits shall sorrow no more—
Not a sigh for the blessing of rest."

Amen, so let it be. The Lord will hasten it in his time.

Brethren, be of good cheer, for we shall soon possess the goodly land. Be faithful to that which is committed to your trust. Live up to present truth, having an eye single to God's glory. Be humble, watchful, and prayerful, keeping yourselves pure, and in the love of God, and paitient waiting for Christ. Pray for me.

Casco, Me., Feb. 10th.

From Bro. P. Tandy.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—I feel it to be my duty to write a few lines to you, to let you know how I am, and what my determinations are. I am very feeble yet, having been confined to my bed for eight weeks with disease of the spine, so that I could help myself but very little—not even to raise my head from my pillow without much pain. But I am now some better, and still gaining.

Pray for me, dear brethren and sisters, that I may be perfectly resigned to the divine will of God. I believe that sanctified tribulation worketh patience, and patience experience, and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost. I do believe, dear friends, that we are living in a grand and awful time; and we ought to have all on the altar, and our lamps well trimmed and burning. I think Jesus will come "quickly," and bring his reward with him. The Savior has plainly said in his precious Word that "when ye see all these things fulfilled, then know that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." It is plain and evident, according to the fulfillment of prophecy and the signs of the times, that the second advent of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is near. Are we ready for the greatest of all events? Have we repented of and forsaken all our sins? Are our hearts pure and our hands clean? Are we in Christ by faith and good works? and have we no condemnation? Are we truly on the watch tower? and can we say from a sanctified heart, "Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly"? Amen.

From Bro. J. Bickford.

Dear Editors:—Thinking that it might be of interest to the dear children, we venture to write this letter for the Crisis, hoping that the churches that have become spiritually low will take courage and not cast away their confidence. The church at East Rochester is being wonderfully blessed of the Lord. We commenced a protracted effort with the church Feb. 6th, which has been in progress now one week. The result thus far is blessed. Some thirty have started to serve the Lord for the first time. Many of them are the Sabbath school children. May God bless them and their teachers abundantly. Most of these have witnessed for Jesus, and give evidence of having found peace. Saturday evening (Feb. 12th) some sixty testified. Many of these were fathers and mothers that are overjoyed to see their children giving their hearts to the blessed Savior.

This is just the kind of work our churches need to bring back those that have got discouraged and laid down the cross. O, may there be a waking up, for this is no time to sleep. God is giving the world a special call, that Christ's house may be filled. We can now reach those who heretofore have been indifferent concerning eternal things.

Let us work with the Lord, and then we shall not labor in vain, nor spend our strength for naught.

Great Falls, N. H., Feb. 13th, 1876.

From Bro. R. Mosher.

Brn. Editors:—The Advent cause in this place is progressing gloriously, and the revival interest increasing. Eld. A. Waite, in the hands of God, is doing a great work here. His preaching is well received by all, and God's Spirit attends the word with power. Last Sunday our house of worship was crowded, and last evening at our prayer-meeting over one hundred met for worship, seventy testimonies were given on the Lord's side, six arose for prayers, and the good Spirit of the Lord seemed to fill the house. Many are getting sick of dead formality, and are waking up to the truth of Christ's soon coming, and the importance of having on the wedding garment. Six have been baptized and united with the church of late, and others are going forward soon. Pray for us, that a great work may be done here in the conversion of many souls, and in the leading of many to see the truth as it is in God's Word.

Sandy Hill, N. Y., Feb. 9th, 1876.

From Bro J. Ward.

Editors of the Crisis:—Dear Brn: I want to say, for one at least, that I heartily endorse the views set forth in Eld. Sergisson's article on our mission, and earnestly hope all our brethren may wake up to the importance of the subject. We know it is sometimes said, when all other arguments fail, that time is so short it is scarcely worth while; but experience has proved it otherwise. We have known those teaching gross errors sheltering themselves beneath the motto—"The Bible our creed." Nearly all the errors of Christendom claim to be founded on the Bible. Let our line of attack on the darkness around us be defined; so that all who wish to work in harmony may have an opportunity of doing so. By thorough organization we can better comprehend our resources, and be in a position to effectually attack the enemy in his stronghold, and will also have the satisfaction of knowing what headway we are making; while in our present almost disorganized condition we can scarcely tell who is for or against us.

Montreal, P. Q.

Bro. E. McCulloch writes from Nevada, Ohio, Feb. 14th:—"We closed our protracted meetings last evening, having continued them thirty-eight evenings. The result has been both glorious and wonderful. The Lord has done more for the church, and for sinners, than we had faith to believe he would when we commenced the meetings. Praise his name, he has been "better to us than our fears." Our faith was not strong enough to believe that the whole town would be stirred as it has been. We will endeavor to trust him more fully in the future. The church has come upon much higher and holier ground, and we believe made an unconditional surrender to the Lord. Praise his name forever. About one hundred and thirty-five have been converted and reclaimed; forty-three have been baptized, forty-nine have united with the church, and several more will be baptized and unite with the church at the earliest convenience. The work is still going forward, and the town is moved.

To-morrow I am to commence a protracted meeting in a comparatively new field. There are four places, in as many different counties, waiting for a series of meetings as soon as possible."

Bro. J. G. Morris writes from Springwater, N. Y.:—"The good work still goes on. I think there are now about sixty-five that have started in the service of the Lord. There were several new ones started last evening. Four backsliders made a full surrender. The Lord is working wonders with the people here. Praise his blessed name! For myself, I have never before had such sweet peace as this week in my experience as a christian. We are all one in Christ here yet, and it seems to please the Lord."

THE LORD ANSWERED PRAYER.

When I wrote to the Crisis, asking the prayers of brethren for the recovery of Bro. Goud, he was in a very critical state. His physician thought he would not recover; one lung was in a very bad state, with a violent cough and much prostration. He continued to sink still lower for a week or ten days; had enjoyed no good rest in sleep for about six weeks.

One evening while lying and desiring rest in sleep, he felt a pressure like a sudden soothing rush of air pass over him from head to foot. This was repeated five or six times within a few minutes, when he fell asleep and rested as sweetly as he ever did all night. Awaking in the morning he felt refreshed and strengthened. From that hour he began rapidly to amend. His appetite became good, his sleep quiet, and strength increasing. He is now able to walk out into his yard, and we trust he will be able to yet preach the gospel of the kingdom of God to the people who love to hear him. He believes the Lord arrested the progress of the disease upon his lungs, and produced a miraculous change in his physical system to restore him to health, and he gives him the praise for it.

I write this to give honor to the Lord, information to the brethren, and encouragement to others to pray. I. C. Wellcome.

Brooks. Fell asleep in Jesus, Bro. Alexander Brooks of Hollis, Me., Jan. 28th, aged seventy-one years.

Bro. B. was a firm believer in the truths that distinguish us as a people. Though a man of few words, yet his upright form and earnest attention in the house of God told that he was no idler, but a man of deep thought, and his occasional testimony for God showed that he was pledged for the truth. His death was sudden. He left his home in the morning in usual health, he and his companion going to Saco. Having completed his business, he went out to get his team, and was seen falling back in his sleigh, and ere his wife reached him he was dead. Thus suddenly a wife and two sons are left to mourn the loss of a kind and affectionate husband, and a loving and indulgent father. May the Lord bless, comfort, and guide them safely amid the ills and toils of life, that they at last may be gathered to share the glories of the renewed earth. We tried to speak words suited to the occasion.

Burnham. In Biddeford, Me., Oct. 18th, '75, Sr. Sally Burnham, aged eighty-two years.

Aunt Sally, as she was familiarly called, was a christian. Choosing the service of God in early life, she exemplified the christian religion, and for long weary years she endeavored not to let an opportunity of doing good pass unimproved. Whenever a word could be spoken to comfort or encourage the weary ones of earth, or the means she had could be used to relieve the destitute, her heart and hand were always ready for the work, and there are many who can testify that to them she has been one of the "Mothers in Israel." Sr. B. was formerly of Exeter, N. H., but she has spent the last few years with nephews and nieces in Biddeford and vicinity. She fell suddenly, struck with paralysis; but she sleeps in Jesus, and waits his coming to break death's slumber, and call her to the saint's eternal home. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, assisted by J. White. Jesse Gay.

Jennings. In Wilsonville, Conn., Feb. 12th, 1876, Benjamin Jennings, aged sixty-eight years.

Years ago he gave himself to Christ. In 1842 he took his stand with those looking for his soon coming. He with twenty-two others were baptized by Bro. Grant, thus confessing his faith in the resurrection. He was a consistent follower of Christ from that time. His house has ever been a home for the Lord's servants. Brn. Jones, W. Pratt, and others have proclaimed the good news under his roof to those willing to hear. He with his dear companion loved the blessed hope, but the infirmities of age, with years of watching and waiting, had their effect upon him, and in a moment of aberration he took his own life. We found the wife and his only son firmly trusting in Abraham's God.

"When shall this tedious night be gone?
When will our Lord appear?
Our fond desires would pray him down,
Our love embrace him here."

Horton. In Lowell, Mass., Jan. 6th, 1876, John F. Horton, aged seventy-six years.

Bro. Horton formerly lived in the Province of Nova Scotia, and was a member of the Methodist church. From there he removed to New York State, where he heard and embraced the great truth of the coming of the Savior at hand, and also of the final destruction of the wicked, the end of evil, the sleep of the dead, and the real, literal resurrection of the dead. He held these great truths, and advocated them to the last. His family and the church have been called to part for a "little while" with a worthy citizen, a sincere christian, and a good man. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." C. P. Whitten.

Proctor. In South Casco, Me., Feb. 2d, 1876, George, son of Benjamin and Eliza Proctor, aged sixteen years.

George was an excellent boy, possessed of an amiable disposition, which endeared him to all his acquaintances. He was just reaching manhood, and was the hope of his parents. How hard to see him robbed of life, torn from fond embrace, and laid in the dark charnel house, yet amidst all their sadness and sorrow, one glorious hope remains, viz., that George will be brought again from the land of the enemy, and die no more. He will bloom with eternal youth, and be in the image of the great Life-giver.

In my Report of Maine Conference, I find an error in the P. O. address of our Mission and Tract Agent. It should be, Eld. F. A. Baker, Frankfort, Me. Will not all who have not paid their pledges to that Society do so now, and replenish the treasury?

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, Feb. 14. A special dispatch to the Standard from Vienna says a letter from Belgrade announces the triumph of the war party in Servia. The appointment of Ristick to the Premiership is almost certain. It is reported that shortly before the close of the session, the Skuptschina, sitting with closed doors, resolved upon war in the spring, appointed a committee to watch over the Government, raise taxes in advance, and issue paper money on the outbreak of the war.

Ragusa, Feb. 13. Advices from Sclavonic sources represent that the Herzegovinian refugees on the Austrian soil have declined the invitation of Mouktar Pasha to return to their homes. The insurgents refuse to be satisfied with Count Andrassy's reforms, and are resolved not to submit to the Turkish rule.

Paris, Feb. 14. Prince Napoleon has issued an address to the electors of Ajaccio. He says: "The form of government is not in question, it exists. I accept it frankly." He denies that his acceptance of the Republic is dictated by ambition or personal interest but declares that it comes from profound convictions.

He concludes as follows: "I respect the form of government without any bitterness, provided it insures order, justice and liberty. If elected I shall be always democratic and a partisan of progress." Renault and De Bazes have issued strongly republican addresses.

Constantinople, Feb. 14. The foreign embassadors lately complained to the Porte of recent outrages against Christians at Broussa and Angora. The Grand Vizier replying to the complaints, disavowed the conduct of the governors of Broussa and Angora.

The latter has been dismissed and will be prosecuted. The Assistant Governor has been ordered to remedy the abuses. Mussulman and Armenian commissioners have been nominated to investigate the circumstances.

Vienna, Feb. 14. The Wiener Crosse reports that an English vessel has landed at Gravasa 14,000 breech-loading rifles and two field pieces for the Herzegovinians.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

New York, Feb. 12. Gen. Custer, who has been in this city the past week, received peremptory orders to join his cavalry command immediately, and left yesterday for Fort Abraham Lincoln, Dakota. It is stated that the Sioux have sent their women and children into winter quarters and have organized a winter campaign against several large trains of miners which have recently left for the Black Hills.

Washington, Feb. 12. Information has been received that Bear Wolf, a Crow chief, came into the Crow Agency the 20th of January and stated that he had been at Fort Pease, at the mouth of the Big Horn; that he had a battle with the Sioux, killing six, and that forty and fifty Sioux, are around Fort Pease, killing the inhabitants at every opportunity. Five persons have already been wounded.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 12. A Jackson (Miss.) special says the committee investigating the official conduct of Mr. Cardoza, State Superintendent of Education report, after diligent inquiry it finds him guilty on ten counts, as follows: Perjury, liability for public moneys unaccounted for from the time of his taking possession of the office, misappropriation of the public moneys, embezzlement, speculation, bribery, fraudulent issuance of witness certificates, forgery, extortion, and having in his possession State moneys unaccounted for.

THE TOBACCO PLUG AND CIGAR

From Zion's Herald:—"Rev. George Trask is in a fair way to have an efficient successor in Rev. I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me. We have received a spirited tract from his pen, entitled, 'The Tobacco Plug and Cigar.' Its seventy-two pages are crowded with facts and figures, forming a terrible indictment against the foolish and vulgar habit and expensive indulgence of the use of tobacco. We wish it the widest circulation and the utmost success in its important mission."

From the Portland Transcript:—"Rev. I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me., publishes a neat pamphlet of seventy-two pages, against the use of the 'The Tobacco Plug and Cigar,' being a friendly talk with those who use tobacco, with the hope of benefitting them in health, mind and money. It is a complete treasury of anti-tobacco argument and appeal. Sold for $10 per hundred, $1.50 per dozen, 15 cents single copy. Send order to the author." Sold at the Crisis Office.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. Agent.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

OVER THERE.

GOULD CROUSE, JR.

Oh, think of the home over there,
By the side of the river so pure,
Where the saints will be free from all care,
Where no sin nor temptation allure.

Oh, think of that city so bright,
Which city by faith I now see;
Oh, think that the Lamb is its light;
In that city I long now to be.

Oh, think of the worthies of yore,
Who will rest in that home of delight,
And think how they'll stand on that shore,
All robed in their garments of white.

Oh, think of the angelic host,
Who will gather the saints to that home;
But we'll think of Jesus the most,
'Twas he for our sins did atone.

Oh, think that our Savior will come,
That his advent is now drawing nigh;
And soon we shall all get safe home,
In that home where none ever will die.

Bro. Turner reported Pacheco as having a few believers, who desired the word preached. He also stated that he and Bro. Martin sustained prayer meetings in Oakland, where there were ten or more believers, and that a church would probably be organized soon.

Bro. Reed reported new fields, viz., Potter's Valley, Guernville, and Davenport's Landing, where doors were open, and laborers much needed.

Bro. Brown reported several families in Santa Barbara, who were Advent believers, and labor was needed there.

Bro. Carpenter, Chairman of the Committee to draft a Constitution, presented the following, which was adopted.

CONSTITUTION.

ART. I. The name of this Conference shall be, the California Advent Christian Conference.

ART. 2. The object of this conference shall be 1st, to strengthen and multiply the number of those who wait for God's Son from heaven, looking for the mercy of God unto eternal life, through Jesus, believing that the night is far spent, the day is at hand. (2) To promote that vital piety and holiness unto the Lord, which maketh glad with exceeding joy, when his glory shall be revealed.

ART. 3. This Conference shall not legislate as to what its churches and members shall believe, but it shall discourage and disfellowship those who divide and distract the churches by the introduction and advocacy of notions and side questions, thus hindering the great work which God has given us to do, as set forth in Art. 2.

ART. 4. This Conference in the execution of its work shall be a Home State Missionary Society, for the purpose of carrying the proclamation of Jesus' coming soon to judge the quick and dead, into new fields, and building up such churches as are weak.

ART. 5. The officers of this conference shall consist of a President, Vice President, Secretary, Treasurer, a State committee of five, and a ministerial committee of three.

ART. 6. The officers of this conference shall be chosen by ballot at each annual session. Vacancies occurring during the year by death, removal, or resignation, shall be filled by the official board.

ART. 7. The duties of President, Vice President, Secretary and Treasurer, shall be such as are usually required of such officers. The duty of the State Committee shall be to appoint and arrange for protracted meetings in new fields, and for State campmeetings, which they shall regulate and take charge of, as a campmeeting committee, and shall receive and disburse all funds collected for State missionary work. The duties of the ministerial committee shall be to examine candidates for ordination, investigate charges preferred against any member of the conference, and when deemed necessary, shall arrange for an impartial trial of any offending member.

ART. 8. Both the State and Ministerial Committee shall report to this Conference at each annual session.

ART. 9. No candidate for the ministry shall be ordained by this conference, unless working in sympathy with its constitution, and recommended to the ministry, either by the church of which he is a member, or to whom he is ministering in spiritual things (said churches also being in co-operation with us), and he must be of good report among them that are without.

ART. 10. The members of this conference shall consist of all ministers in good standing who can endorse this constitution, and of delegates of churches also co-operating. Each church shall be entitled to two delegates, and one additional delegate for every twenty-five, above the number of twenty-five members. A church consists of those who worship in one place whether few or many. Every delegate shall bring a certificate signed by the clerk of the church sending him.

ART. 11. Every church shall report to the clerk of conference a list of its officers and the number of its members at its annual session.

ART. 12. Five members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business at every regular meeting.

ART. 13. No article of this constitution shall be amended except by a two-thirds vote at a regular meeting.

Voted, That Bro. Geo. T. Adams (in the absence of any delegate from this conference) be a delegate to represent us at the regular meetings of the Second Advent Christian Association.

Voted, That the officers of this Conference act as a State committee, and that the ministerial committee also act, till the next session of this Conference be held.

Voted, That the A. C. Times have the sympathy and support of this Conference.

Voted, That a tent be procured and put into the field as soon as practicable. Brn. Coffin, Martin, and Young, constitute the committee, solicit and receive subscriptions for the accomplishment of the same.

Voted, That thanks be extended to the friends in Santa Clara, for their hospitality in amply providing for all who came.

Voted, That the Secretary name the place where the July session shall be held.

Voted, That the report of this Conference be published in the Crisis and Times.

Moved, that the Constitution be put in tract form, with an appendix of Scripture texts, expressing our faith. This was left to the discretion of the officers.

These meetings were seasons of refreshing. Each sermon was meat in due season. We have not witnessed such meetings as these for more than twenty years, where the sweet, melting spirit of Jesus rested with such power. We parted reluctantly, with stronger desires than ever to meet at the marriage supper of the Lamb. Respectfully submitted. A. J. YOUNG, Sec.

NOTES BY THE WAY.

HIRAM MUNGER.

For eight weeks I have been out reviewing the old battle-fields, enlisting some, and teaching others. I am more than ever convinced that no one kind of food or labor will feed the whole flock of God. There are many members in the body, or church, all differing one from the other. It needs different lessons to stimulate different members to act in their appropriate spheres.

The church is a school taught by the grace of God. See Titus 2: 11, 13. There are five branches taught by the teacher—Grace. First lesson—We by nature are wicked. Second lesson—To subdue our worldly lust. Third lesson—To be sober. Fourth lesson—To be righteous. Fifth lesson—To be godly in this present evil world. If we go through the whole five lessons taught by grace (our only teacher in this school), we shall be looking for Christ's second coming as the hope of the church.

That it takes time to learn all these lessons is evident from our own experience. To put a scholar that is learning his first lesson into the fourth or fifth class, is not wisdom in the teacher. Paul says the body has many members; some small and weak, and need more care to keep them healthy. If the little members suffer, the larger members of the church will suffer also. There is a growing neglect in this important matter. If we lose our children the stock will run out. There are more doctors and law-makers than there are nurses in the church. We need not expect we can get the members of the body to occupy one position in knowledge, or strength, or enjoyment. No matter how much effort is made, there is a difference, and will be when Christ comes.

I have no confidence in voting ourselves up to a particular condition. I saw some fanatical experiments tried forty years ago in our Methodist church. Private tents were selected in which to obtain the blessing of a higher life. Some particular temperaments would be in their element, and others never could reach that point; hence they would throw themselves away. In these tents no sinners were taught their A, B, C. It seemed to be a kind of teachers' meeting for the higher branches of religion. This may be well enough in itself, but I never knew one that did not get spiritually proud in a few years at the most.

The human family are necessarily classed off according to their education, or habits, or color, or intellects; no standard of holiness ever can unite all in perfect association. There are some holy people you never can feel free with; with others you can, though you know they do not enjoy as much religion. Why this difference? Because they constitutionally occupy another place in the body or church, and their gift and office is different.

I have seen more dissatisfaction or discouragement in this direction during this trip than for years; therefore I note it, instead of giving particulars in each place as formerly. There is no standard for all in these things; but all can and must love God and his truth.

SUCH GIFTS AS YOU HAVE.

"Silver and gold I have none," but we must add, as Peter did, "such as I have I give unto thee." These words of Peter make the motto of a truly beneficent life, and round out the full idea of social duty. Our responsibility does not extend to what we have not. No matter how large and sovereign the need which appeals to our charity, this response covers the whole breadth of our obligation, when we can say with willing heart and ready hand, "Such as I have I give thee." It is not whether we have ten talents or one, that determines the plaudit of the Judge at the last. The right and diligent use of the smallest and humblest trusts will, as surely as the same use of the largest, secure in that day the "Well done, good and faithful servant!"

Now, I cannot tell what the one personal gift is which each of you is to supply in these mutualities. It may be more than one—it is surely one. So equitable is the divine adminstration, so universal the prerogative of doing good and communicating, that each of you has some element of help to impart to lives that are, perhaps, far more richly endowed than yours, and yet are deficient in some faculty or force wherein yours abounds. Such as you are, you are necessary to the comfort and happiness of your fellows. God has not made you in vain. You fill a sphere otherwise unfilled. You represent a personal force and ministry otherwise wanting, and the loss of which were a subtraction from human good.

A case of physical infirmity and want appeals to you. If you have "gold," you may give that. If you have "silver," and not gold, bestow that. If you must say with Peter, "Silver and gold I have none," still there remains to be drawn upon "such as you have." You may furnish a garment whose newest gloss is gone; you may offer a plate of food; you may at least give a kind look or word of sympathy. The tender accents of your voice may be worth more to the sufferer than another man's shining eagles.

One comes to you for counsel in perplexity. You have neither learning nor eloquence, perhaps. You cannot bring him, for his disturbing question, the decisions of philosophy, set forth in rounded periods. Well, you can tell him a bit of your personal experience, if your feet have ever touched the track of his inquiry; or you can seek to put yourself in his circumstances, and look with his eyes upon his environment, and tell him what you think you would do in such a pinch, or you can at least, while pleading intellectual poverty, show yourself rich in sympathy and brotherly kindness.—Rev. A. I. Stone, in the Pacific.

APPROACHING TERRIBLE TIMES.

We are now on the eve of those dire events which mark the last days. One passage of Scripture that particularly presses itself upon my mind is Rev. 16: 12. We do, indeed, seem now to be approaching the times which all the prophets so much dwell upon: Isaiah, for instance, startles us by prophesying the sudden appearance of a banner upon a high mountain, calling the Lord's mighty ones, and mustering them to the battle; while at the same time the flashings of his indignation cluster around. (Isa. 13), and the prophet, in loud strains, cries out to the whole world, "Howl ye, for the day of the Lord is at hand," a day cruel with wrath and fierce anger, when he will punish the world for their evil, in which the dire destruction of Babylon is set forth,—not merely the then existing Babylon, but the Babylon of the last days of the book of Revelation. Isa. 24; compare also Joel 2: 3 with Matt. 24, 29, 30, and Luke 21: 25, 27.

Thus thrice have we a shout of victory over this dire power, Babylon, in its several forms, first over Egypt, then the golden head of Gentile dominion, and then, lastly, over the mighty Anti-Christ of these last days! And when this last victory is won, there shall rush through all space a voice of thunder, the thunder of victory! this shout: "The Lord God Omnipotent reigneth!" But the last days, although at hand, have not yet presented more than their dawn.

A perfect whirlwind of revolution and revolutionary rage and uproar shall ere long rush over the nations; for the "great day, of the Lord, cometh, the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them, a desolate wilderness" (see Joel 2). What the evil power will be we know not yet; it will, however, be headed by one who shall accept the gift Satan offered to our Lord, and was repelled. It will be the mighty, the terrible anti-Christ, with all the world full of his spirit and full of his Satanized principles.

We see around us, both at home and abroad, all things rushing onward to these terrors and judgments of the last days. I fear the lower orders throughout the world will be the main actors. It will, indeed, be "hell broke loose!" But there shall be a place of safety for the Lord's people.—The Christian Herald.

SPRINGWATER, N. Y.

R. H. BATEMAN.

As previously announced in the Crisis, Bro. Grant has been laboring with us in a series of "Union meetings," in which Presbyterians, Methodists, Christians and Adventists have taken hold and worked together. The services were held in the Advent Church except on four occasions when the Methodists invited him to speak in their house. His preaching was plain, practical, and heart-searching, causing us to look within at our own individual condition as we had never done before. The result has been salutary. Ministers and church members have sought a deeper work of grace, and a more continual abiding in Christ.

The inquiry meetings as conducted by Bro. Grant, have proved a success. They occupy a prominent position, especially in revival efforts. Christian workers took hold in the "inquiry meetings," and worked with a zeal not known of them before. It seemed almost fascinating. We loved to work; and the more we did, the greater our desire to do still more. The people came in freely, and nearly all would remain to the "inquiry meeting," thus inviting the "workers" to converse with them on religious subjects.

We visited from house to house, and found a deep feeling pervading the community. The tide continued to rise higher and higher, the house becoming thronged with eager listeners. Many said they were the best meetings they ever attended. Holiness was prominently set forth. It was combatted by some at first in private conversation, but the word of God and solid arguments has in a great measure silenced objections, and many are seeking it, while some are rejoicing in it.

Last night—Sunday, Feb. 6th—closed Bro. Grant's labors with us. Subject, "Home of the Saints," in which were embodied the "new heavens and the new earth," with "the new Jerusalem" and its glorious beauty as the great metropolis and capital, where the throne would be established; also how it was to be attained—by passing through tribulations and persecutions, being dead to the world, but alive unto God.

During the two weeks of his labor, fifty have started for this heavenly city, and more have promised to follow. He leaves many warm friends in this place. Prominent among them are the ministers and their members, who worked faithfully with him for the salvation of lost men. Bro. Dayton, pastor of the M. E. Church, with his people, tried to persuade him to remain a week longer, and work in their church, but duty called him away.

We now purpose to continue the meetings for two weeks in the M. E. Church, and are expecting blessed results from the Lord. Yesterday, at Bro. Grant's suggestion, we formed a "Christian Workers Union," the object of which is to advance "pure and undefiled religion." We pledge ourselves by the help of the Lord in all prayer and conference meetings, where opportunity is offered, to seek the earliest moment to testify for Jesus, in order to prevent a dulness and waste of time. Nearly one hundred signed the pledge. O how sweet it is to work for Jesus in these inquiry meetings. Let us awake to the great fact, that in all denominations "the bride is making herself ready," and what is done must be done quickly. Let us all work as never before. Pray for us.

Correspondence

From Sr. L. M. Brittain.

Dear Brn. and Srs.:—I have just been reading dear Bro. Boutell's letter in the Crisis of Jan. 19th—"As it should be," and my whole soul responds, Amen. Even so let it be; not only in one church, but in every church in our land. Oh, I do so love that religion that knows no party lines. Let us rejoice that sectarian walls are falling to the ground. I have been in just such meetings where, as Bro. B. says, "the partition walls were so completely broken down, swept away, that you could not tell but they were all Adventists, or Methodists, or Baptists, and were so baptized by the Spirit that Scripture utterances, however strong, would put no chill on the meeting, or the movers in this godlike work of reformation." I have seen those, not professedly believing in what is termed "present truth," with tears streaming down their cheeks with love to Jesus, and telling how they would love to see him coming down the parted sky; evidently showing that they loved Jesus and his appearing, which is a Bible test of dicipleship.

How true it is that this is something different from the union of the sects. This is union of heart in Christ; united by one Spirit into one body. No schism there, praise his dear name. It is something more than union of beliefs in what we may call dispensational truth; it is union in the doctrine of Christ—"I in them and thou in me," perfect in one. This will stand amid the wreck of matter and the crash of worlds. This is "solid rock" foundation: and other foundation can no man lay that will abide. It will be like "sinking sand," swept away in the day of his coming.

God is moving. Let us be in sympathy with his work. There is a wave of mercy going over the land, perhaps for the last time, and those who do not receive Christ must necessarily become more and more rebellious.

Yesterday my eyes witnessed a solemn yet pleasant scene. After the close of the sermon at the State Reform School, the request was made that all who wished to remain for prayer and religious conversation, those only who felt a special interest in their soul's salvation should do so. Some seventy, out of nearly four hundred, remained. As I cast my eye up in time of prayer, what a picture! Seventy or more on their knees; some rejoicing in Christ as their Savior, and others seeking him, sorrowing. My heart went out in prayer and praise to God for what he is doing; for it seems like his work. The officers say that some of them have met with a real change of heart. Let us pray for them, that as these four hundred lads leave the school, the change may not only be reformatory in outward life, but that they may be witnesses for Jesus; living epistles; a blessing to friends and useful to society.

Jan. 31st, 1876.

From Sr. J. A. Goodrich.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I have thought much of late of our blessed home in the kingdom of God. Who can realize it? We talk of this home, but it is only when we sit down tired and weary with the cares and trials of life, or when laid upon a bed of sickness that we can realize in any great degree what that home will be. Could we at all times realize the glories and blessings of that home, earthly homes and possessions would not have half the place in our affections they now do. It is glorious to know it will be a home free from trials and sorrows, where the child of God shall enjoy the sweet peace that he now has only the foretaste of. Who would not long to be there?

It will be a home where sin's dark stain will never be seen; where Jesus will reign in triumph and glory over all earth's fair domain. Blessed thought! How it cheers my aching heart to know that we are almost in sight of home. The righteous of all ages and nations will meet in one holy, happy band, without jarring or discord. All will unite in one glad song of praise to Him who hath loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood. I love to contemplate the beauties of the new Jerusalem—the saints' sweet home, and think that I, if faithful, shall one day have a right, through the precious blood of my dear Redeemer, to enter those pearly gates, walk those golden streets, and drink of life's pure river, which flows from the throne of God.

Earth's beautiful things soon fade; but when earth is restored, and receives Jesus as its rightful king, its glory and beauty will be eternal. Our beautiful things in the present state are not worthy to be compared with the things that are in reserve for those who love and serve God. I cannot have both; and I would much rather have the hope of the one than the possession of the other. We cannot serve God and mammon.

Brethren and sisters, if we have a home in the kingdom of God we must live for it while here; we must do the will of our Father in heaven. If we are the children of God we must be like Jesus Christ. If we reign with Christ we must also suffer with him. We cannot have the pleasures, fashions, and follies of this world, and the glories of the world to come. The pleasures of this world are fleeting, its joys are but momentary, its wealth often takes to itself wings and flies away, and its honors and fame alike perish. Not so with the world to come. Its pleasures, joys, honor and fame are eternal. They will never fade away.

May we so live that we may hail with joy our coming King, and have an abundant entrance administered unto us into the everlasting kingdom.

From Bro. L. L. Ames.

Dear Brethren in Christ:—I never wrote for the Crisis, for I never felt competent to write for such a valuable paper. I have been a reader of it for about seven years, and I have been cheered and strengthened on my way to the kingdom a great many times, by reading valuable letters from the brethren and sisters. It is to me a feast, and a blessed one too. Praise God! It reminds me of the eternal love feast that we shall all, if faithful, be permitted to enjoy when the King of kings comes in his glory.

I long to see that day when sin, sickness, sorrow and death shall be no more. My companion and myself are lonely pilgrims in the northwest of Wisconsin, not having had the privilege of hearing any one preach, of like precious faith, for nearly four years. We came from the south part of this State, where we heard the gospel proclaimed as it is in Christ Jesus. Oh I would that God would send some one this way, full of the Holy Ghost, to proclaim the glad tidings of the soon coming of the Lord Jesus to earth. We love the doctrines of holiness of heart, the unconscious state of the dead, the literal resurrection and the final destruction of the wicked.

Brethren and sisters, let us prove faithful, watch and pray always, that we may be found ready when Jesus comes. Lord, come quickly.

From Bro. J. W. Hanghawout.

Dear Brn.:—I was converted last July at a tent-meeting held in this place by Elder J. R. Ridley and Bro. Hough. When the truth found its way to my mind by the light of the prophecies, of Christ's soon return, I felt like telling it to the world; and commenced sounding the glorious news in Clay county of this State, among the poor homesteaders, three weeks ago. The Lord was with us. About fifty started for the kingdom. We organized a church of twenty-six members, baptized ten last Sabbath; will baptize as many more, we think, next time we preach for them. I was ordained by Elder J. R. Ridley, of Manchester, who came out here and helped us four days. The sound of the soon coming King in judgment, seems to have a compelling influence we never witnessed before.

From A Sister.

Dear Brn.:—I take this way to let you know that I love the Lord, and am still trusting in his name. While reading the many letters in the much loved Crisis, my heart is cheered.

Truly, we are living in the perils of the last days, when men shall be "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God." I do not wonder that the question was asked if the Lord would find faith on the earth when he comes. I think we are close to the judgment; and what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation? I want to be one of that number who can look up with joy and say, Lo, this is our Lord, we have waited for him, and he will save us. How I long for that blessed morning to dawn, when Christ will take his faithful ones to himself.

Pray on, brethren and sisters, and soon you will get your reward—eternal life and a crown in the kingdom. L. L. W.

CHRIST MY REFUGE.

Jesus, refuge great and free,
Let me fly in faith to thee;
In thy strength shall be withstood
Angered storm and hostile flood.
Be thy arms around me cast,
Hold me to thy bosom fast.

Breathe thy life within my soul,
Let thy law my life control;
May I more thy image bear,
May I more thy pureness share;
Let thy grace my nature fill,
Let thy love my being thrill.

No created arm may move
Souls encompassed by thy love;
Hosts of hell may not o'erthrow
Those who thy salvation know;
E'en in nature's final shock,
Thou art our eternal Rock.

SIMPLICITY OF FAITH.

J. DAVIS.

Concerning this subject, no language can be more explicit than that of the apostles and prophets. We hear Jesus saying—"He that believeth on me as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. This spake he of the Spirit which they should receive." The prophet also declares—"He that believeth shall not be ashamed." Paul delivered to the church first of all how Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures.

At the Nicene Council, convoked by Constantine in the year 325, Gentile philosophers appeared, engaging the attention of the synod, before entering upon the immediate business of the Council; some with a design to satisfy their curiosity concerning Christianity itself, others wishing to involve the christians in a cloud of verbal subtleties, and to enjoy the mutual contradictions of the followers of Christ. One of them distinguished himself above the rest by the pomp and arrogancy of his pretensions, and derided the clergy as ignorant and illiterate. On this occasion an old christian, who had suffered with magnanimous constancy, during the late persecutions, though unacquainted with logical forms, undertook to contend with the philosopher. Those who were more earnest to gratify curiosity than to investigate truth, endeavored to raise a laugh at the old man's expense; while nervous spirits were distressed to see a contest apparently so unequal. Respect for the man, however, induced them to permit him to engage; and he immediately addressed the philosopher in these terms:

"Hear, philosopher," says he, "in the name of Jesus Christ. There is one God, the maker of heaven and earth, and of all things visible and invisible, who made all these things by the power of his Word, and confirmed them by the holiness of his Spirit. This Word, whom we call the Son of God, compassionating the sons of men involved in error and wickedness, chose to be born of a woman, to converse with men, to die for them; and he will come again as the Judge of things which men have done in the body."

That these things are so, we believe in simplicity: do not then labor in vain, investigating the manner in which these may or may not be, and seeking to confute them which ought to be received by faith; but if thou believest, answer me, now that I ask thee. Struck with the plain, authoritative address, the philosopher said, "I do believe;" with pleasure owned himself vanquished, confessed that he embraced the same sentiments with the old man, and advised the other philosophers to do the same, swearing that he was changed by a divine influence, and moved by an energy which he could not explain.

How applicable the words of the apostle: "Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness. God was manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory. "That your faith stand not in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

New Durham, N. H.

THE greatest man is he who chooses the right with invincible resolution, who resists the sorest temptations from within and without, who bears the heaviest burden cheerfully, who is the calmest in storms, whose reliance on truth, on virtue, and on God, is the most unfaltering.

WATCH THE LIPS.

Words of detraction and slander require the watch. It is not all mention of a neighbor's faults and evil deeds that is wrong, for we cannot but notice gross faults, and to speak of them in a right spirit may be perfectly right and needful for self-defense and the good of society. The sin and wrong is in being quick to see and punish faults, magnifying them, imagining them, meddling with them when it is none of our business to do so, and speaking of them from promptings of envy, resentment and rivalry. A slanderous tongue moves as naturally in the element of hatred as a fish in the water. One who loves his neighbor as himself, and seeks to do unto others as he would they should do unto him, can hardly be called a slanderer.

The mischief of detraction springs from a mean, unloving spirit, soured by disappointment, fretted by envy, urged on by meddlesomeness and miserable curiosity. When one with such a frame goes from house to house with the preface: "They say," or "they do say, but I don't know how true it is," that this man drinks; or, that man and his wife don't live very pleasantly together: or, that man did not come by his money very honestly; or, this woman is no better than she should be—it is very probable that then a busy-body and slanderer is at work who greatly needs the prayer: "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips."—Restitution.

BIBLE READING AT THE Y. M. C. A. HALL.

The Bible reading by Mrs. Gierlow, yesterday afternoon, at the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association [place not given], was well attended, the room being filled to its utmost capacity. The service began with a song and a prayer. Mrs. Gierlow then read, in the second chapter of Daniel, the account of Nebuchadnezzar's dream and Daniel's interpretation of it. After giving quite an elaborate explanation of the chapter, she turned to the seventh chapter of the same book, and gave a very satisfactory analysis of that.

In speaking of the second coming of Christ, she said she did not understand it to be the coming of the spirit, but of the spiritual body of Christ, for Christ's spirit has never left the world, so there can be no second coming of it. Some people think that the kingdom that will be established on earth, to reign a thousand years, will be Protestant Republicanism; but she believes it to be Christ's kingdom, and he will reign in the body and so will the people of this earth—those who are followers of Christ—but the bodies will be spiritualized. Mrs. G. then signified a willingness to answer any questions that might be asked. One of the audience asked if there would be different denominations of christians during the reign of Christ. She replied that there would be but one.

Questions were asked concerning the conversion of the world, and the effect the anticipated war in Europe will have on this country. Mrs. Gierlow said she did not think the world is to be converted, for the wicked will cry for deliverance from the wrath of God, in the day of Christ's coming. She does not think the war in Europe will have any effect on this country.

The same party wished to know if the church is now in existence that will be the church then, to which she answered negatively.

He then asked if the world is to be purified by fire?

"Yes, but not destroyed."

Question.—"Do you think we have any right to say when Christ will come?"

Mrs. G.—We can make some estimate by noticing the fulfillment of the prophecies, but we should not presume to state the time; however, it is very probable that the time is not far distant, for I think we are living under the seventh wrath, as spoken of in the sixteenth chapter of Revelations.

All were very much pleased with Mrs. Gierlow's talk, and an invitation was extended to her to favor the audience with another entertainment, to which she assented, not naming the day, however. The time will be announced through the papers and churches. Fvery person who has not heard her should not fail to avail themselves of the opportunity. (Name of place or paper not given.)

A FOOT LAMP.—One of the most interesting things in the Holy Land is the fact that one meets everywhere, in daily life, the things that illustrate the Word of the Lord. The streets of Jerusalem are very narrow, and no one is allowed to go out at night without a light. Throw open your lattice in the evening and look out; you will see what seem to be little stars twinkling on the pavement. You will hear the clatter of sandals, as the late traveler rattles along. As the party approaches, you will see that he has a little lamp fastened to his foot to make his step a safe one. In an instant the verse comes to your memory, written in that city three thousand years ago—"Thy Word is a lamp to my feet and a light to my path."—Ex.

WHAT WILL PEOPLE SAY?—This question makes the mind homeless. Do right and fear no one; thou mayest be sure that with all thy consideration for the world thou wilt never satisfy the world. But if thou goest straight forward on thy way, not concerning thyself with the friendly or unfriendly glances of men, then thou hast conquered the world, and it is subject to thee. By heeding the question "What will people say?" thou dost become a subject of the world.

The World's Crisis

AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER.

"BEHOLD I COME QUICKLY; AND MY REWARD IS WITH ME."

WHOLE NO. 1059. BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 1, 1876. VOL. XLII.—NO. 20.

The World's Crisis, AND SECOND ADVENT MESSENGER, Issued every Wednesday Afternoon, by the ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, At No. 144 Hanover Street, Boston, Mass.

GEO. T. ADAMS, TREASURER AND BUSINESS AGENT.

JOHN COUCH, MILES GRANT, } EDITORS.

EDITORIAL COMMITTEE: S. G. MATHEWSON, L. BOUTELL, WM. H. MITCHELL.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE: H. V. DAVIS, M. BATCHELOR, L. T. CUNNINGHAM, J. G. HAMBLIN, J. HEMENWAY.

The CRISIS is devoted to the exposition of all Bible truth; especially the doctrine of the immediate, personal coming and reign of Christ on the earth; holiness of heart; the unconscious state of the dead; their literal resurrection, and final destruction of the wicked.

TRIUMPHAL SONG.

Come on, ye raging tempests, come!
Welcome each stormy blast!
Ye bring rich treasures to my home
That evermore shall last.

Oh, glorious home on Zion's heights,
Made sweeter by life's pain!
For earth's dark scenes of grief more bright,
For loss the greater gain.

Yes, every drop of earthly woe
Will make a priceless gem;
And every storm I meet below
Enrich my diadem!

Pure gold for all earth's base alloy;
A diamond for each tear;
Oh, wondrous recompense of joy
For sorrow's anguish here.

Then gratefully my God I'll bless,
For ills that life has given;
The darkness of this wilderness
Will make a brighter heaven.

—Advocate of Chris. Holiness.

THE COMING OF THE LORD DRAWETH NIGH.

We are told, on every side, that we are living in remarkable times. We read of it in the newspapers; we hear it in our daily conversation; and we feel it to be true. There is, undoubtedly, a rumbling of some extraordinary earthquake, which, growing more and more distinct forewarns the thoughtful that a crisis of no slight importance is not far in our advance. We see, indeed, the Christian, the unbeliever, the philanthropist, and the politician, all agreeing in the expectation of some gigantic outburst. We find the hearts of men of judgment "failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." The eyes of many turn with anxious gaze towards the observers of the times, the learned, the statesmen, the merchants, and the ministers of the gospel, with the inquiry—"Watchman, what of the night?" But who among the sons of men can satisfy the inquiry? Opinions, various enough, come forth. A rush of many voices gives reply. But who is to be trusted? The only safe response which any man can give, is this—It is not for you to know the times and the seasons which the Father hath put in his own power. Yet, for all this, there is a ray of light, feeble certainly, but not to be neglected, for it comes down directly from that Father's hand of love, and sheds its gentle beam upon this wondrous period in which we live. By this one beam, those men who have the spirit of the Lord can read a word of warning, which diffuses joyful expectation through their willing hearts. That word is, "Watch and pray, for the coming of the Lord draws near." This ray of light illuminates, moreover, a few signs and portents, and exhorts, "When these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for your redemption draweth nigh." (Luke 21: 28.) Now for this gleam let those of us who know the Savior render praise; and while we read, and watch, and pray, be humble, looking to the Lord submissively, with patient, waiting hearts; behaving ourselves always circumspectly; being well prepared to leave this bondage whenever our Redeemer's voice shall call us to arise and meet him.

I know that there are christians, not a few, who will agree with me that these are times which ought to lead God's people to be much upon the watch-tower, forasmuch as many things betoken clearly that the coming of the Lord is near. And, doubtless, there are others who, although, perhaps, they will not go with me so far as this, will yet agree that these are days when things around forbode a crisis which has scarcely known a precedent.

An idea is abroad in christian society, that through the progress of civilization and the gradual spread of the gospel, a millennium of peace and righteousness will be introduced, and this world will thereby be prepared for the second advent of our Lord. The Word of God has nowhere sanctioned such a notion; indeed the direct contrary is clearly laid before us. Moreover we ourselves are called to live in days when science and civilization have arrived at wondrous height. Men's talents never were so highly tutored; human skill was never so developed; refinement also has attained to exquisite perfection in almost every grade of life. But what of peace? It is neceful to speak very cautiously respecting it, and to give all our science a direction which concerns the munitions of war. And what of righteousness? In every circle of society (clothed indeed in seemly garment, but all the more iniquitous by consequence) ungodliness abounds; sin grows in presumption and comes in with gentleness and plausibility, to take possession and to overthrow. We are not, therefore, making progress towards this visionary excellence. Nay, are we not departing farther, day by day, from what is good and holy? I need not surely stay to offer proofs of these positions. They are patent to the most casual observers of the times. No one who mingles with society, or reads the daily newspapers, can help lamenting that the case is even thus. It does not seem, therefore, as if we were at present making progress toward millennial perfection. No one, I should suppose, can say that matters lead to any such conclusion.

Our Savior cheers us indeed by the declaration that "The gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations," and by other gladdening assurances; but then, on the other hand, he forewarns us how that as the end draws near "iniquity shall abound" and "the love of many shall wax cold." He reminds us of the days of Noah, when the world was totally regardless of the fear of God; when "every imagination of the thoughts of man's heart was only evil continually," (Gen. 6: 5), and tells us "So shall it be also in the days of the Son of man." Luke 27: 26. He refers, likewise, to the days of Lot, when men were "sinners before the Lord exceedingly," (Gen. 13: 13), and declares "Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed." Luke 17: 30. And elsewhere we find the Savior asking the conclusive question, "Nevertheless, when the Son of man cometh, shall he find faith on earth?" Luke 18: 8.

Paul deals therewith plainly: "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the Son of perdition, whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming. Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power, and signs, and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved," 2 Thess. 2: 3–10. Speaking of the "perilous times" which shall come "in the last days," he says, "Men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, without natural affection, truce-breakers, false-accusers, incontinent, fierce, despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God; having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof." 2 Tim. 3: 1–5. Jude also warns us how that in the last time there shall be "mockers" who shall walk "after their own ungodly lusts." Jude 18.

The glorious rest, therefore, which this world shall enjoy, will not be gradually developed; it will not be brought about by education, nor by the preaching of the gospel; nor by the mutual consent of nations, nor by any instrumentality whatsoever which mankind will bring to bear on its direction. "The whole world lieth in wickedness." It has so lain since Adam fell: It will so lie until the day of its regeneration.—Prophetic Times.

DAY OF JUDGMENT.

L. BOUTELL.

Does the Bible teach that there is to be such a day in the future? If so, what is its object? Is it not that all nations may be gathered, that their accounts may be settled by the deeds done in the body, so that every one may get his just dues? "Will not the Judge of all the earth do right?" Do right when? When all the inhabitants of earth stand before him in judgment. Thus Jesus says (Matt. 12: 36), "But I say unto you, that every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment." Peter could say (2 Pet. 2: 9)—"The Lord knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptation, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment to be punished." Now here is a time, a definite day, for this work—the judgment day. Acts 17: 31—"Because he hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness."

I have quoted Bible enough to show plainly that the time is coming when all the inhabitants of earth are to be called in question, and be settled with by the undeviating rule of righteousness. The Bible rewards no man till the judgment day; then "by thy words thou shalt be justified," and "by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

Having said so much, and all pointing in the same direction, I will introduce 2 Cor. 5: 10—"For we must all appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad." No man gets his reward till this day, consequently no good man has gone to heaven to get his reward yet. Here is the day in which he will judge the world in righteousness, by appointment. Here is the day in which Jesus says for every idle word men shall give account thereof.

Yes, but who is the we in the text—"For we must all appear"? It is evident that two classes are represented in this text; one class that have done good, another class that have done bad. Here are representatives of good deeds and bad deeds, which could not be represented by one man, or one class. Why not? "Because the good man, out of the good treasure of his heart, bringeth forth good things." So an evil man, out of the evil heart, bringeth forth evil things—bad deeds. This is also plainly taught by the Son of man in Matt. 25: 31, when all nations are gathered to judgment. Here is the same judgment where "we shall all appear," with the same distinctive classes; viz., those to whom Christ will say, "I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink"; or, "I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink." The good deeds, the result of faith, entitle the man to the welcome—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom." But that class having evil hearts, bringing forth evil deeds—bad deeds—and among the "all" that "must appear," are on the left hand, to hear their dreadful doom, and receive their wages—death.

Solemn thought! This is soon to be realized. God hath appointed the day, and we must all appear there, whether we will or not. The summons will be heeded; no desire of our own or wish of friends can keep us away. The day is rushing upon us with all its fearfulness, and the inquiry should be, "Who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth?"

THE OLD COVENANT.—No. 4.

R. W. WILSON.

Eld. Andrews has stated, in his work on the two covenants, page 24, after giving his favorite text—"The law of the Lord is perfect" (Ps. 19: 7), and citing also several other passages, that "the first covenant is declared by Paul not to have been faultless." Heb. 8: 7. This is another palpable proof of distinction between the moral law and the covenant, which God entered into with Israel respecting it; nor is this to be met by the statement that Paul pronounces the law itself to be faulty; for the law thus designated by Paul was not the ten commandments, but the Levitical law; and the following are a few points, out of many, in proof of this assertion:

This law was received under the Levitical priesthood (Heb. 7: 11); but the ten commandments were received before that priesthood had been appointed. Compare Ex. 20 with Ex. 28. Here we find the foundation of the "two law systems." This is the first statement for this purpose made or to be found in the writings of the Seventh Day people to sustain this doctrine. And we find that this foundation rests upon an unwarrantable use or misapprehension of the scripture on which it is founded. Proof—Heb. 7: 11. "If therefore perfection were by the Levitical priesthood (for under it the people had received the law)"—Diaglott.

If, then, perfection were through the Levitical priesthood, for with it the people had received the law,—Ex. 19: 5, 6—"And ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests." Here we find in the first proposition, which God has made in regard to his covenant, a promise of the priesthood. Stephen, in his great sermon to the Jewish people, as recorded in the seventh chapter of Acts, said—"Who have received the law by the disposition [or injunction] of angels, and have not kept it"; and at the time of the giving of the law, Moses was in the mount forty days and forty nights. Did it take the angels this length of time to give simply the ten commandments?

We learn from the account given us in Exodus that these were statutes and judgments connected with the first covenant, and Paul said in Heb. 8: 5—"Moses was admonished of God when he was about to make the tabernacle: for, See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern showed to thee in the mount"; also in Heb. 9: 1, 2—"Then, verily, the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary. For there was a tabernacle made."

These scriptures are in accordance with the fact stated by Paul, to which reference has been made (Heb. 7: 11), that with the Levitical priesthood the people received the law. The Levitical priesthood, the ordinances of divine service, all that was connected with the tabernacle—the pattern of which God showed Moses at that time, and the giving of the words of the first covenant—the ten commandments,—all this was instituted during that session of angelic legislation, on the mount, the forty days and forty nights; as Paul has stated in Gal. 3: 19—"Why then the law? It was appointed on account of transgressions till the seed should come to whom the promise related, having been instituted by means of angels in the hands of a mediator."—Diaglott. The law, mentioned in this text, is the same as the one that Paul said in a previous verse of this chapter "was four hundred and thirty years after God had confirmed his covenant with Abraham; and this is just the time when the law was given by the angels on Mount Sinai; and that this law is the moral law is evident from the tenth verse of this chapter—"For as many as are of the law are under the curse; for it is written, Cursed is every one who continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them." The curse or penalty is only incurred by the violation of moral precepts; and as it required time to make the tabernacle, and whereas the service of the Levitical priesthood was connected therewith, it was necessary that it should be made before Aaron and his sons were set apart for the priesthood. The making of the tabernacle was commenced by Moses immediately after his forty days and forty nights on the mount; but this was simply putting into effect what had been previously originated on the mount.

This text, on which Eld. Andrews establishes his "two law system," gives us strong evidence that the apostle Paul considered the first covenant—the law and all it contained, as given on Mount Sinai—as one law, and not two, as he has stated in the next verse (Heb. 7: 12)—"For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change of the law." Again in Heb. 10: 1—"For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices, which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect." And Rom. 3: 20—"Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight; for by the law is the knowledge of sin."

We see by these quotations that Paul, when speaking of the Levitical priesthood, or the moral precepts of the law, designated each by the term "the law." This point will be made more obvious when we consider the claim made by the Judaizing teachers of his day, that the law was a permanent institution, and that pardon and justification could only be obtained by obedience to its precepts, and through the Levitical atonements, and that the Gospel had no divinely appointed sacrifice for sin. Paul's arguments as used in his epistles to the Romans, the Galatians, and the Hebrews, were to refute their false doctrine, and in all that he has said he has never made this modern distinction of ceremonial and moral law.

In his discussions he has not in a single instance contrasted the moral and the ceremonial law, which is so common with Seventh Day teachers. On the contrary, the opposition which he establishes is between the first covenant law as a whole and promise, between debt and grace, between works and faith. Rom. 4: 14–16—"For if they which are of the law be heirs, faith is made void, and the covenant made of none effect. Because the law worketh wrath; for where no law is there is no transgression. Therefore it is of faith, that it might be by grace; to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all."

And as further proof that Paul treated the law from Mount Sinai as one, we cite 2 Cor. 3: 7–10—"But if the ministration of death, written and engraven in stones, was glorious, so that the children of Israel could not steadfastly behold the face of Moses for the glory of his countenance; which glory was to be done away; how shall not the ministration of the spirit be rather glorious? For if the ministration of condemnation be glory, much more doth the ministration of righteousness exceed in glory. . . . . For if that which is done away was glorious, much more that which remaineth is glorious." Here Paul is contrasting two ministrations or dispensations; one of death, which he identifies by saying it was written and engraven on stones, and the other a ministration or dispensation of the spirit, which he calls a ministration of righteousness. The former, he says, is done away, the latter remaineth; and moreover what Paul has stated here is fully in harmony with what we have already proven from the Word in relation to the nature of God's covenants. For the first covenant, which was commanded and engraven in stones, was made for and given to the people of Israel, and it was suited to them, and to no others, as those who had been recently delivered from Egyptian bondage; and this was to remain in force until the seed should come to whom the promise related, or until the beginning of the dispensation of the Spirit; then it was to be "done away." This involved a dispensation to the Jewish people under that covenant of about six hundred years.

We will hear Paul again on this point. Gal. 4: 21—"Tell me, ye that desire to be under the law, do you not hear the law? For it is written that Abraham had two sons, the one by a bondwoman, and the other by a freewoman. But he of the bondwoman was born after the flesh, but he of the freewoman by promise. Which things are an allegory; for these are the two covenants. The one from Mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar. For this Agar is Mount Sinai, in Arabia, and answereth to Jerusalem which now is, and is in bondage with her children. But Jerusalem which is above is free, which is the mother of us all. Now we brethren, as Isaac was, are the children of promise; but as then, he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now. Nevertheless, what saith the Scriptures? Cast out the bondwoman and her son, for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman. So then brethren, we are not children of the bondwoman, but of the free. Stand fast, therefore, in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage."

We learn by this divinely explained allegory that the two covenants are represented by Abraham's wife—Sarah—the freewoman, and the bondwoman Agar; and their two sons, Isaac and Ishmael, typified the condition of the natural descendents of Abraham under the first covenant, and that of his spiritual seed, or children of promise, under the new covenant. Paul is very explicit. Just notice: "The one [covenant] from Mount Sinai, which gendereth to bondage, which is Agar." As she was a bondwoman, or slave, her children would be born in the same condition, and so it was with all who lived under the first covenant; they were in a state of servitude, under obligation to keep the whole law, which in their fallen state they could not do; hence they were constantly under its curse.

But was there no means by which the Israelites, under the first covenant, could be freed from the curse of the law and be saved? Yes; by faith in the promised Redeemer, concerning whom their prophets taught them, and to whom all their sacrificial offerings were designed to point, and to lead them; and those who thus looked by faith to a Christ to come and die for them, God counted their faith to them for righteousness. He justified them freely by his grace, through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus. Many of them were saved in this way, but not one by obedience to the ten commandments, "for by the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified."

Observe, there is in this allegory but one bondwoman—Agar—to represent the first covenant and all it contained, and connected with it as coming from Mount Sinai; but if this "two law system" be true, there ought to be two bondwomen to typify the two laws; and furthermore, if it be true, as Eld. Andrews has taught, that the only difference between the first and the second covenants consists in the "ten commandment law being taken from the tables of stone and put upon the hearts of God's people," then there is no place for Sarah and Isaac in the allegory, for the bondwoman and her son, with some slight change in their condition, would be all that is requisite to represent the old covenant and its change into the new. So we see that this allegory is not sufficient in typical representation in the one case, and it has two much in the other to suit the doctrine of our Seventh Day people on these points.

It is claimed that under the new covenant the law sustains a more sacred relation to the people of God than it did under the old; but this does not agree with what Paul said—"Nevertheless what saith the Scripture? Cast out the bondwoman and her son, for the son of the bondwoman shall not be heir with the son of the freewoman."

By this typical representation we are taught the radical difference between the two covenants, and the condition of those who were under them. Those under the old covenant were in bondage to the law; those under the new were free, by faith in Christ Jesus. Those under the old covenant were born after the flesh; those under the new after the Spirit. The Scriptures furnish us with ample proof that the only relation which the old covenant sustains to the new was in a typical sense, as Paul said, "The law, having a shadow of good things to come," by its giving the Israelites the inheritance of the land of Canaan and the temporal blessings connected therewith, embodies a full representation of the blessings the gospel dispensation has unfolded and conveyed.

This being the case, all connected with the first covenant was provisional in its nature. The life promised under this covenant was temporal life; it was long life in the land of Canaan, having no reference whatever to a future life except typically. We will give you proof on this point. Deut. 4: 40—"Thou shalt keep therefore his statutes and his commandments, which I command thee this day, that it may go well with thee and with thy children after thee, and that thou mayest prolong thy days upon the earth, which the Lord thy God giveth thee forever." Deut. 2: 33—"Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess." Lev. 18: 5, 29—"Ye shall therefore keep my statutes and my judgments, which, if a man do, he shall live in them." "For whosoever shall commit any of these abominations, even the souls that commit them shall be cut off from among their people." Deut. 5: 16—"Honor thy father and thy mother, as the Lord thy God hath commanded thee, that thy days may be prolonged, and that it may go well with thee in the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee."

Surely no one who has any regard for the teaching of the Scriptures can claim that eternal life is obtainable by obedience to parents. The gift of eternal life is made by God's Word to depend on our faith in what Christ has done for us, and not our own works. Paul has said in connection with this point (Gal. 3: 21), "Is the law then against the promises of God? God forbid; for if there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." The just, by faith, shall live. The removal by God of those wicked nations from the land of Canaan, and its possession by the children of Israel, and their temporal life in it, under a Theocratic form of government, was typical of the removal of the wicked nations from this earth. When "the transgressors shall be rooted out of it"; when they shall be dashed to pieces, and become as the chaff, and the wind carry them away—no place be found for them; when they shall be driven from light into darkness and chased out of the world; when they shall be burned up root and branch, and "the kingdom, and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High," then, under a renewed Theocracy, on this earth made new, the saints, with Christ their King, shall enjoy "life, even length of days, forever and ever." Ps. 21: 4. "Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end; upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Isa. 9: 7.

DECISION.

C. H. WILLIAMS.

Decision and firmness are essential to success in every good cause. And especially are these elements of character needed in the great work assigned to us as christians; for without them, our profession is false, our purposes vain, and our efforts a failure.

Many who started earnestly and favorably in the christian army, have become weary of their march, and failed to endure the hardships incident to the journey, because they were unstable; and the beguiler, taking advantage of their vacillation, has succeeded in alluring them with hypocritical formula and attractive follies, which eventuate in the vortex of ruin. And indeed one of the principle means used in beguiling these unstable souls is the deceiver's arguments on the much abused term—"charity."

To favor all of the ungodly practices of an apostate church, and endorse all the errors of a modern theology which may be forced upon us, is far from being charity in a Bible sense; for the apostle Paul informs us that the extent of our charity should be to "rejoice in the truth." True, the element love must pervail in us toward all; but to quietly assent to that which is incompatible with God's blessed word, is far from being a christian duty; and we may reasonably doubt our acceptance with the Lord if we withhold the testimony of heaven's eternal truth in contradistinction to error. However, this must be done meekly, yet firmly and decidedly, as it will never do to sacrifice the principles of the Bible and salvation, to which we are chosen "through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth."

Being servants of the meek and lowly Savior, does not imply that we are to be so conservative as to compromise with persons—individually or collectively—who may profess righteousness irrespective of faith and character. If it did we should be in duty bound to fellowship and encourage all the anti-christian orders in existence. Jesus did not engage in nor advise co-operation with the Jews, who were the most noted pretendenders to piety in his day, but he reproved and admonished as duty demanded, and it will be perfectly safe for us to adopt his rule of action, which always insures success to his servants.

Brethren, be decided in this aggressive warfare. Never be ashamed of the truths that distinguish us as a people. Let us "buy the truth and sell it not." Persist in believing right and doing right, then we may expect the great Arbiter of human destiny to say, "Well done, good and faithful servants; enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

May God bless his true children everywhere, and cement them in the bonds of love and truth, which will make them stand straight up for Jesus, in full decision of faith and character.

THE MILLENNIUM AND THE ADVENT.

A. F. MOORE, M. D.

In the Methodist Quarterly for July, 1875, is an article under the above title, which is perhaps as able and comprehensive as anything of the same length which has been written upon the subject. It is by Rev. Daniel D. Buck, D. D., of Onondaga Valley, N. Y.

He starts with the assumption that it is generally admitted by christian people "that there is to be a millennium, and that there is to be an advent"; also that there is a general conviction that "they sustain very definite and important relations." The "vital question" which he undertakes to settle is, which takes precedence? "The settlement of this cardinal question determines many others."

This purpose in view, he makes two remarkably plain and pointed statements, the proof of which decides the whole matter.

First. "There is not a passage of Scripture, literal, figurative or symbolical, which treats of the millennium and its relation to the advent, that teaches, indicates, or in any manner represents the millennium as preceding the advent."

Second. "There is not a passage literal, figurative or symbolical, which speaks of the advent and its relation to the millennium, that represents the advent as subsequent to the millennium." And he goes on to say, "Now these two very important facts settle, if not the principal questions at issue, at least this not unimportant fact, that the now prevalent belief in a millennium previous to the advent is without Scripture authority."

After speaking of deciding questions of order and relation, he reverts to the original question, and says, "This point must be decided not by conjecture, nor by unauthorized statements, but by divine revelation. Human authority is of little account in deciding questions of this nature. If the Lord has not spoken relative to this matter, it will be useless for man to speak. If he has spoken, 'Thus saith the Lord' must be deemed decisive."

The "primitive Christian church" is then cited as being pre-millennialist, using the word pre-millennial to describe those who look for the advent before the millennium. And next the primitive Protestant church is shown coming "out from the communion of Rome, renouncing the human traditions, the manifold perversions of the Word of God, and the unauthorized perversions of the Papacy, and planting itself squarely upon the teachings of the Bible; then as we have abundant testimony to prove," says our author, "the primitive Protestant church, deriving the great foundation doctrines directly from the Word of God, was quite generally, if not universally, pre-millennarian in respect to this point of relative order." He thinks that "such men as God raised up," would not err "in respect to this vital question."

"Luther, Calvin, Knox, Wicliff, Melancthon," says he, "all gave expression to convictions which showed that they looked for the advent before the complete subjection of the world to Christ. They seem to have apprehended the advent as very near. Not the prospect of the immediate triumph of the church, but the fearful ravages of the man of sin impressed them that the day of the Lord was near. And this was evidently scriptural. Chas. Wesley, the sweet singer of Methodism; Fletcher, the matchless polemic; and Coke, the father of our missionary enterprise, all looked for the advent before the millennium."

And thus he argues quite rightly and conclusively that, assuming that the Bible leaves the matter in favor of the pre-millennarians. There is hardly a reader of the Crisis but would be edified and instructed by a perusal of this article. In a mere review it is difficult to do it justice.

Thank God, the scales are falling from the eyes of some, at least, and not all are with the "many people" of the second chapter of Isaiah, whom the Lord says have "forsaken the house of Jacob," because they prophesy of all nations flowing unto the house of God at the time of Christ's coming, at the end of the world.

The chapter ends very significantly, "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of." In other words, look to God rather than the traditions of men for truth in these matters.

In the effort to prove his position from the Bible, he remarks with great force upon the woeful perversion of Scripture-texts which comes from not considering them with their immediate "connections and parallels," and cites as instances the much abused eighth verse of the second Psalm, also the ninth verse of the eleventh of Isaiah. With regard to the last he says, "The eleventh of Isaiah is by all, perhaps, admitted to refer to the millennial state of the world in connection with the kingdom and reign of Christ. It exhibits, (1) The manner in which millennial blessedness is brought in. (2) The state of the world and its inhabitants during the happy period after it is fully established. (3) The conversion and restoration of Israel and Judah 'in that day.' Verses 10–16 refer to this latter event. Verses 6–9 describe the state of millennial blessedness. Verses 1–5 describe the manner in which the millennial state is introduced. By carefully reading the chapter, it will be seen that Christ is present, not to save sinners as he is now doing in heaven, but to judge and to destroy them. (Verse 4) Christ is present in his royal relations to David, the son of Jesse, exercising his regal authority and power among the nations, and judicially smiting and destroying the wicked. (Verses 1, 5.) And in this manner he brings in the millennium."

It is a great step in advance to put the advent before the millennium, but what clause from verse 10 to 16 of this chapter speaks of the conversion of the Jews? Indeed, if Christ comes to destroy the wicked, how can he convert them at the same time? If we read in this connection the 19th verse of the 26th chapter, also Ezek. 37: 12–14, and Hosea 3: 9–14, we shall discover probably what is meant by "recovering the remnant of his people" in the passage quoted under his third division of the chapter. Ezekiel says, "Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel." Ah, yes! They are lost now, in "the land of the enemy," death, but Hosea says of Christ, "I will be their king; . . I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death." Thus will the Lord "gather the remnant" in the great gathering time, when "the dead in Christ shall rise."

It would seem a little remarkable that a mind which appears so acute upon the subject of the order of events connected with the coming of Christ should have brought the conversion of the Jews in this connection, but like the dog after the fox, the human mind often sees only the one object it is pursuing. But it is a grand point to understand that Christ comes the second time to punish the wicked as well as raise his saints. If that be learned, other matters will follow at further leisure.

REJOICING.

P. C. MARSH.

"We will rejoice in thy salvation, and in the name of our God we will set up our banners." Ps. 20: 5. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; by whom also we have access by faith into this grace wherein we stand, and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Rom. 5: 1, 2. "Let the brother of low degree rejoice in that he is exalted." Jas. 1: 9. "But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4: 13. "Rejoice in the Lord alway; and again I say rejoice." Phil. 4: 4.

Dear brethren, and all readers of the Crisis, have we not all of us great reason for rejoicing in hope, patience in tribulation, continuing instant in prayer? We, here in Hamilton, especially, feel to rejoice that God has led us in such a good way. We have continued instant in prayer, pleading for him to gather together a people that will be found waiting for his Son from heaven, and giving meat in due season; for the promise to such is that they shall be blessed when he cometh. O, what inspiring thoughts! Who can find language to express them fully?

We have hired a hall; held our first meeting in it last Lord's day, Feb. 6th. Bro. Walter preached the first discourse at eleven o'clock A. M. Subject, God's love. Text, John 3: 16. Sabbath school at 2.30 P. M., which we have changed to 10 o'clock A. M., to save one journey for those who have to walk quite a long distance. I spoke in the evening. Subject, Our blessed hope. Text, 2 Cor. 3: 12; after which eleven of us gathered around the Master's table and partook of those much loved symbols which, when partaken of understandingly, do show the Lord's death till he come. Please remember us in your prayers.

APPROACHING CLASH OF ARMS FROM A POLITICAL STAND-POINT.

A special correspondent of the St. Louis Globe Democrat, writing from St. Petersburg, Dec. 22nd, 1875, gives a statement of what he considers facts and probabilities, of a coming European war, built upon observations and proofs gathered while extensively traveling through Europe, visiting the capitals of some of the great Powers, reading their publications, and conversing with high officials, from which we give a few extracts as follows:—

"You have heard, doubtless, of the active preparations for war which have been going on in this country for some time past. These preparations are far more active than is, or can be, known outside of Russia, where, as you are aware, everything political or military,—the two things are the same here—is conducted with the greatest possible caution and secrecy.

The entire empire is getting ready for offensive hostilities, as is evident to any observer who travels to any extent through the dominions of the Czar. The present movement is, indeed, so palpable that the officers of the Russian army hardly deny, when asked by civilians they are intimate with, that a great war is imminent. Of course they don't say yes—in truth, they have no positive knowledge on the subject—but, on the other hand, they don't say no, because a negative would indicate very little intelligence in the face of incontestable facts.

You know that Americans are much liked in this country. They have means and facilities for gaining information which no other nation has. I have been trying zealously for a number of weeks to get a clear clew to the existing situation, and I think I have got it. It is possible that I may not be right; but there are so many apparent corroborations of what I am about to tell you, that you will admit my views to be very plausible at least.

It is generally believed that the object of the present martial activity is the seizure, occupancy and absorption of Turkey by Russia, though it is not understood how or when Russia is to execute the plan she has so long and so ardently cherished. This government rarely, if ever, does or attempts to do anything without ample deliberation and thorough equipment.

Russia, of course, expects to be victorious. She believes that her victory will result in the crippling of England, and the removal of all obstacles to her own further advancement in the East; lastly, to her undisputed control of Turkey, and her long-desired attainment of a sea-board."

We quote extracts from an editorial of the London Times upon the same subject:—

"Over and over again, whatever party has been in power, and whoever has been our Ambassador at Constantinople, our Government has urged upon the Porte the absolute necessity of reforms which would remove the grievances of Christians, and take away pretexts for foreign intervention. Good advice has produced no corresponding good effect, and all the world has now come to the conclusion that, unless compelled to adopt a better system of administration, the promises of the Sultan will remain empty words. Russia's position as head of the Greek Christians renders it impossible for her to abstain from giving them some help; and Austria cannot allow provinces on her border to remain in a state of barbarous internal warfare, the area of which must rapidly extend when the winter is over unless some mode of composing the quarrel can be found.

Austria is the Power most immediately concerned in doing something effectual, and upon her rests the task of persuading or forcing the Turks and Christians in her neighborhood to live together without fighting, if not in real peace. Germany and Russia support Count Andrassy's note to the Porte, and at the late Cabinet Council Mr. Disraeli and his colleagues agreed to give the Austrian proposals a general adhesion. It is not expected that the Sultan will be so stupid as to attempt an armed resistance to projects which Russia, Germany and Austria have agreed, if necessary, to enforce; and the chief duty of our Government is to assist Austria as far as is reasonable and practicable without undertaking any responsibility that can be fairly and honorably avoided. None of the other Powers want the FINAL CRASH of the Ottoman rule in Europe to come JUST YET, if they can help it; and all know that there is a wide difference between appeals to sentiment about Christian wrongs and persecutions, and practical means of obtaining redress.

When the spring comes, we shall see whether the spirit of revolt in the Turkish provinces increases or grows less under the new influences that are to be brought to bear. The best that can be expected is a little provisional tinkering that will make as many or more holes than it will mend. It is a great pity that the European Powers cannot deal with the Turkish question apart from projects of dynastic and military ambition. Why should not Constantinople be made a free, neutral port, and neither Russia nor any other Power permitted to seize it? The Turkish rule in Europe is evidently on the decline, and the Ottoman territories will have to be divided and placed under new Governments.

The preservation of Turkey as long as possible was no idle or mistaken effort on the part of English politicians. No prudent statesman could be blind to the danger of a great Empire falling to pieces, and the fragments becoming the subject of an ambitious scramble amongst military and naval Powers. How far the delay has been useful we have yet to see; but surely the public opinion of Europe ought to be wiser now than it was thirty or fifty years ago."

The Herry (Ireland) Evening Post expresses its views upon this question thus:—

"The great political problem of the present moment is the patching up of the Turkish monarchy for some time longer; but, let the great Powers of Europe deliberate as they may, the divine decree has gone forth, the vials of God's wrath are being poured out upon it, and it must ere long fall to pieces. In this case it will become a strategical necessity for England to get possession of Palestine as a set-off against Russian advances towards India."

All political writers agree in one thing upon the question of the future of Europe; viz., that Turkey must fall, the empire be dismembered, and some new governments be established upon its territory. No one argues that it will not come or ought not to come; but they refer to it as something delayed, having been prevented in the past by the efforts or help of the great powers. They speak of it as the "final crash" and express a hope that it may not come "just yet," as if it is a settled fact that it will come, and will be a momentous event—a finality in a world-wide movement. It seems to us an incredible thing that such a great antichristian, persecuting government, connected directly with Christendom and Christianity itself, should not be found with these great movements and their final issue upon the page of divine prophecy. Its history is found there, and nearly all christian expositors have so understood it. They have also generally agreed that its final overthrow will be immediately followed by a grand change of divine administration upon the earth.

We understand the Scriptures to teach very clearly and definitely that the events to follow are the ending of the gospel, the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead. This is the reason why we feel such an undying interest in the present indications and movements in the East. The evidences that Turkey is about to fall gives us great joy, not because that wicked power is to be destroyed, but because Christ is soon coming, and the glorious age of everlasting blessedness is at hand. THE FRENCH ELECTIONS.

The most important news received from France for a long time is the result of the new National Assembly. These elections have resulted in a great triumph for Republicanism and a signal defeat of Monarchists, and is especially a stunning blow to the priestly party. J. C.

BE SHORT.

Many preachers nearly spoil all the good effects of their sermons by talking too long. But few can listen to a discourse more than forty-five minutes, without being tired. When weariness begins, devotion is dying. Every word spoken after the people wish we would stop, only weakens what has been said. Leave the audience hungry, and they will be sure to come again; but weary them, and there is much less hope of doing them good. There are usually some few hardy ones in a congregation who may say, "I wish you had preached another forty-five minutes;" but such are not the proper standard.

If a sermon an hour, or an hour and a half long, was condensed into thirty or forty-five minutes, it would do double execution. Many are too long in their introductory remarks. They do this because they fear they may get through too soon, and then the people will think they stopped because they had run ashore for want of something to say. But when they get through with their long, prosy introductions, and begin to enter into the pith of their subject, thirty or forty minutes are passed, and it is time to stop; but if they stop then, they must leave their sermons in the middle; so they go on another half hour or more. Instead of this, enter into the heart of the subject at once, and give its marrow and fatness in as few words as possible. Have something to say, say it, and stop.

A correspondent writes concerning one who is considered an interesting preacher; The "services are about two hours long. I become so nervous and weary, that I cannot sit still. Please tell me if you think it is duty to attend the meetings under such circumstances?" This person expresses the feelings of a large number who are compelled to listen to the long sermons. Boil them down one half, and thus double their effect. If the vital force used in a sermon one and a half hours in length, could be condensed into forty minutes, twice the effect might be expected. There may be exceptions, but they are rare.

If a speaker is properly absorbed in his subject, he will take but little note of time; hence he always needs his watch before him, that he may know when to bring his remarks to a close. What seems to him but a half an hour, to the audience will seem as an hour. Let this be borne in mind, for the benefit of both hearers and speakers. M. G.

BRIDGEPORT.

The interest in Bridgeport is increasing. Several have put on Christ, and professors of religion have been much quickened. Last evening (Feb, 23d), a minister who has said very hard things against the Advent people, and opposed them in public debate, confessed very frankly that he had made a great mistake, because of misinformation, and now felt like lending a helping hand to build up what he had tried to pull down. He is a man of fine ability, and has become deeply interested in the prophecies that relate to the coming of Christ. This is true of many others, who are now arranging to have another course of lectures on the great chart of history, illustrating prophecy. There is an unusual interest to hear about the coming of Jesus, and the necessary preparation. We have seen no time in many years when the field seemed so white for the harvest as now. Let every christian do all in his power to lead sinners to Christ. One sinner saved is of more value than all the gold and silver in the world.

Last Sabbath evening, we preached in the Baptist church. We find members from the different denominations are becoming deeply interested in the truths presented, concerning the coming of Christ, the saints' inheritance, the triumph of the holy, and the end of the wicked. Much of the interest has been awakened, as we learn, by reading the Crisis, which Bro. Andrews has sent them for three months. He says he has never paid out any money that produced better results; and the Lord has abundantly blessed him in return. He says: "The papers are working wonders here. To God be all the glory." Those who have been sending the Crisis to over a thousand of their friends for three months, may expect to see rich fruit when Jesus comes. Bro. Andrews finds that about all of the two hundred and over, to whom he has sent it, are delighted with its reading, and are anxiously awaiting its weekly visits. Let all help in this good work. Last evening six new ones requested prayers. M. G.

GEMS FROM LUTHER.

In the days of Martin Luther, his friends were very careful to note down his sayings, which were published in a work called, "His Last Divine Discourses." The sayings in this book caused a great stir among those who sympathized with the Roman Catholic church, as it led many to leave the popish religion. Some eighty thousand of these books were burnt by the Catholics. In 1626, one of these volumes was found secreted, and has been translated into English, with the title of "Luther's Table Talk." On page 202, Section 355, of this work, we find the following:

In 1541, Doctor Menius asked Dr. Luther, in what manner a Jew should be baptized? The Dr. replied: You must fill a large tub with water, and, having divested the Jew of his clothes, cover him with a white garment. He must sit down in the tub, and you must baptize him quite under the water. ... Baptism, you know, is an emblem of our death."

ON THE HOLY SPIRIT. Luther says: "We conclude that man, without the Holy Ghost, is altogether wicked before God, although he were decked up and trimmed with all the virtues of the heathen, and had all their works." Sec. 261.

ON THE RESURRECTION. Luther says: "I shall rise again, and shall speak with you. This finger wherewith I point must come to me again. Every thing must come again; for it is written: 'God will create a new heaven and a new earth, wherein righteousness shall dwell.' It will be no more arid waste, but a beautiful new earth, where all the just will dwell together." Sec. 753.

TURKS. When speaking of the coming of the Lord, Luther says: "When the Turk begins to decline, then the last day will be at hand, for then the testimony of the Scripture must be verified. The loving Lord will come, as the Scripture says." Sec. 759.

Speaking of time in the year, when we may expect the Savior, he says: "I am of the opinion it will be about Easter, when the year is finest and fairest, and early in the morning, at sunrise, as at the destruction of Gomorrah." Sec. 760.

ON PREACHING. Luther says: "I would not have preachers torment their hearers, and detain them with long and tedious preaching, for the delight of hearing vanishes therewith, and the preachers hurt themselves." Sec. 393.

Again he says: "A preacher should be a logician and a rhetorician; that is, he must be able to teach, and to admonish. When he preaches touching an article, he must first distinguish it. Secondly, he must define, describe, and show what it is. Thirdly, he must produce sentences out of the Scriptures, therewith to prove and strengthen it. Fourthly, he must, with examples, explain and declare it. Fifthly, he must adorn it with similitudes; and, lastly, he must admonish and rouse up the lazy, earnestly reprove all the disobedient, all false doctrine, and the authors thereof; yet, not out of malice and envy, but only to God's honor, and the profit and saving health of the people." Sec. 419.

He goes on to say: "Cursed are all preachers that in the church aim at high and hard things, and, neglecting the saving health of the poor unlearned people, seek their own honor and praise, and therewith to please one or two ambitious persons.

When I preach, I sink myself down. I regard neither doctors nor magistrates, of whom are here in this church above forty; but I have an eye to the multitude of young people, children, and servants, of whom are more than two thousand. I preach to those, directing myself to them that have need thereof. Will not the rest hear me? The door stands open unto them; they may be gone. ... An upright, godly, and true preacher should direct his preaching to the poor, simple sort of people, like a mother that stills her child, dandles and plays with it." Sec. 424. M. G.

We clip the following from the New York Daily Witness:—

"Well may the Church of Rome dislike the Press. She cannot put forth her sterner attributes in Austria, Spain, Lower Canada, Mexico or anywhere else, but the Press reports the whole matter in full in Britain, the United States and other countries where that church is all for fairness, equal rights and other purring pretences. It has been likened not unaptly to a cat with paw of velvet and gentle purr when pleased, but stealthy, noiseless and untiring when watching for its prey, and showing glaring eyes and sharp teeth and claws when it springs upon that prey or contends for mastery. The wrath of that church is implacable, its conscience imperceptible, its ambition boundless, its cruelty insatiable, its cunning immeasurable—a combination which gives it a power that can overcome everything but the gospel, an enemy which it dare not encounter."

What kind of a church is that whose "wrath ... is implacable, its conscience imperceptible, its ambition boundless, its cruelty insatiable, its cunning immeasurable?" Such a church is properly represented by the woman riding on the scarlet-colored beast, as described in the seventeenth chapter of Revelation. Another feature of her character is expressed by saying she is "drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus." We see no chance to doubt that the Roman Catholic church is the one symbolized by this woman.

The signs of the times show very clearly that her end is at hand. Her iniquitous cup is full, and she must soon meet her terrible doom. Her critical position is attracting the attention of the whole world. Her final death struggle must be near, and the sight of it will be shocking. When she goes to "the burning flame," the martyred saints are to be raised from the dead to behold "the smoke of her burning." Then comes "the marriage of the Lamb," and the "alleluia" song of the redeemed. These sublime events seem just ready to be opened to an astonished world, and the longing expectation of the loving bride of Jesus. M. G.

THE POPE YIELDING.—The Pope has just made a remarkable concession, as the following:

LONDON, Feb. 15. The Times Rome special dispatch says that the Pope has made a remarkable exception to a rule never before broken during his pontificate, by granting a dispensation for the celebration of the marriage here, on the 9th of February, between the daughter of the sculptor Story, Protestant, and a Catholic, Commendatore Peruzzi, a brother of the Syndic of Florence. Some of the extreme Ultramontanes are highly displeased at the Pope's concession.

One step may lead to another. This one is not orthodox, according to the laws of Papacy, which is said to be governed by "infallible" men. Yet these infallible ones make laws for each other to repeal. What one does, another pronounces infamous. This world abounds in strange things. M. G.

NORWALK.—Last Monday and Tuesday evening (Feb. 21st and 22nd), we preached in the Congregationalist church in So. Norwalk, Ct., about fifteen miles south of Bridgeport. Union prayer-meetings have been held there for several weeks, resulting in much good. The interest is increasing. During the two nights we were there, several gave their hearts to Jesus, and others were seeking the Lord. The lay members have done most of the work by individual efforts. Strong men were coming to the feet of the Savior, and receiving pardon and peace. Praise the Lord, that sectarian walls are tumbling down, like the walls of Jericho, in all directions. May none attempt their rebuilding. M. G.

THE BEST WAY.—All who have bad habits to overcome, will do well to imitate the following example, stated in the New York Witness:

"At the Embury M. E. Church, Brooklyn, last Sabbath, Dec. 19th, a young man stated to the audience that he had joined several temperance bodies for the purpose of gaining strength to resist his appetite for strong drink, but to no purpose. As a last resort he gave his heart to Christ, and with that act the love for liquor ceased. The statement brought forth one from an old gentleman, to the effect that after listening to a sermon a few weeks since from the pastor (Rev. Charles Miller) he determined to give up a sixty years' habit of smoking, to the great joy of his wife and the astonishment of his Methodist brethren." M. G.

SICK.—Sister Theria B. Weaver is very sick with erysipelas, and is not able to answer the letters received from the dear friends who have so kindly remembered her in word and deed. She will write them all as soon as able. She desires the prayers of God's children, and their letters also, as they do her great good in her deep affliction.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

MY REASONS FOR RENOUNCING TRINE IMMERSION.

O. HUDSON.

As a servant of the Lord I feel it my duty as well as privilege to confess my error in regard to baptism. I have entertained the idea that trine immersion was the true and apostolic mode of baptism. I now reject it; first, because I find it is not required in a solitary instance in the Scriptures. Second, because Matt. 28: 19, gives no clue to the mode of baptism, but the authority to baptize. Again, we have no promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit in being baptized by trine immersion. Third, because the Word plainly points out the way the apostles baptized. Fourth, because I learn from the same source that the gift of the Holy Spirit, in accordance with baptism, was in the name of the Lord Jesus. Fifth, because Paul says, in Gal. 3: 27, that if we have been baptized into Christ we have put on Christ, not the Father and Holy Spirit, as trine immersionists would have it. Sixth, says Paul, in Cor. 15: 29, "We are baptized for the dead;" if so, Jesus only died. Seventh, because Paul in Rom. 6, presents no other name for baptism before us.

By the grace of God I will take his Word for the man of my counsel, endeavoring to exhibit the meek spirit of my adorable Redeemer unto the end.

East Cambridge, Mass.

Correspondence.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

Dear Brn.:—I thought I would write a word from this part, to let the brethren scattered abroad know that there were some in this place who were trying to let the light of the gospel shine. We are blessed with four preaching brethren, viz., P. F. Willoughby, H. E. Willoughby, W. S. Mc.Farland, and R. P. Amsden; and they are all men of God, and are ready to work in the vineyard of the Lord.

Bro. P. F. Willoughby has been very sick, but thank God, is again able to declare the kingdom at hand, with a power that will tell when the clouds reveal the long-looked for One.

Eight years ago, when I came to this place, I was the only one of this faith, and I have endured much persecution in that short time. I sometimes think there is no other place in the world where prejudice reigns so supremely. Confidence in Jesus and his Word is all that sustains us; and thank God, this does. Light now begins to dawn, and superstition to give way, and to-day we have about forty brethren and sisters to help bear one another's burdens. We rejoice, and give God all the praise.

Sr. Lawrence, whose letter appeared in the Crisis a short time ago, is our nearest neighbor; and we want to say to the brethren and sisters in Christ that she is a living witness, and is daily walking in the sunbeams of righteousness. Her husband has recently embraced the faith.

I have just closed a discussion with a Methodist man, on the following question: Resolved, That man was conscious between death and the general resurrection. We believe good was done. He said the New Testament was the proper place to argue from, and he rested his case on the 16th of Luke, the "Rich man and Lazarus." He claimed it to be a parable, and argued that it was a reality. We tried to show how fitly it applied to Jew and Gentile, and believe the congregation saw how completely the Jew or rich man had been suffering the torments, and that the gulf was just as impassable to-day as when the parable was uttered. Some of the members of that society attended only the first evening, but there was a good congregation of listeners, and I am satisfied good was done. To God belongs all the glory. I tried to put my trust in him, and great liberty was given me.

Already I have written too long a letter, but must say a word about our blessed paper —the Crisis. I am very poor in this world's goods, but while I can retain the Crisis and the Bible I am rich. How I love to read from Bro. Grant and Couch, and all the rest. We always find something that is just adapted to our case.

Let us pray that God will bless Editors, compositors, contributors, and all, with a will to do his will who hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. Praise his blessed name for what he has done already. I would like to see you all, and by the grace of God I will when he comes to make up his jewels. Pray for me and mine that we may ever be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord.

Rippey, Iowa.

From Sr. S. P. Chandler.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I have felt for a long time that I would write a few words of cheer for our family paper, but perhaps one reason that I have not, is because I do not take it as formerly. This should be no excuse, but I have not been able to pay for it. I have missed its cheering columns, but I have been praying, ever since I have been in my western home, for God to open the way, so that I might have its familiar pages to read once more. Well, praise the God of heaven, he has heard and answered my cry, and I want to tell you a little about it.

Last August I, with my two sons, one very sick, came to Illinois to find a home with a step-daughter. The whole family were unconverted—father, mother, three sons and two daughters, living without God. or a hope of future life. But God, whom I have served for more than forty years, has been hearing prayer—the prayers of my dear lamented husband, who lies sleeping in his lone resting place in N. H. Now all the family are serving the Lord, and are living up to all the light they have. This is not all; four weeks ago a sister came here to preach for a few days (Sr. Colwell, a Methodist), and the power of God has fallen on all the region round for miles, and hundreds have been saved from their sins. Some would not come to meeting, but the Spirit visited them just the same, and they had to come and ask, "What shall I do to be saved?" The very worst that lived here have been thoroughly converted, and are new creatures in Christ. The work goes on, praise the Son of Heaven!

I could tell you a great deal more, but will not take too much space this time, as this is my first writing for our paper; although I have been a constant reader of it since 1854, until I came west. I will just say that the sister has labored here four weeks, and without any undue excitement. There are but two churches here—Methodist and Baptist, and they have been all united, and only one meeting has been held. Old and young have been the subjects of saving grace.

Now I have to tell you that God has brought things about so that I can have our Crisis to read again. Two of the boys have decided to take the paper. I had an old one, a year old, which they have been reading, and they like it; and if you would send me some back numbers, I would send them to persons, and they might get some others to sign. I think I might do some good if I had the means to buy tracts and papers; but I will do what I can by living for Christ, and telling what the Word of the Lord says. If you think this is worth publishing you can do so, but do as you think best, I shall not blame you if you reject it. I may write again sometime, if the Lord will.

Laneville, Nane Co., Ill.

From Sr. L. Damman.

Beloved, all of whom, not having seen, yet I love:—I gladly accept the privilege of speaking to you through the medium of our weekly messenger, thereby complying with the solicitations of dear friends who have written me, being unable to answer all separately. I hail you, not from Beulah, but just this side the celestial city, whither I am still wending my weary way, and singing as I pass, "I hope to live forever."

Though still in bonds in consequence of feeble health, let me say—"It is well." Having fled for refuge I have strong consolation through hope. The storm is indeed threatening, but our anchorage is sure. As I stand upon this rock-bound coast, sometimes timidly watching each approaching wave, a heaven-born echo breaks upon my ear—"Be of good cheer! It is I. Be not afraid!" Ah! 'tis the voice of my Beloved, at the sight of whom the water blushed in Cana of Galilee, and at whose presence the wind and sea were afraid. 'Tis the voice of Him who wakes the slumbering dead, and who said, I come quickly. My weary heart responds, "Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus."

In my solitude and loneliness I do not forget the scattered flock; having loved them in better days, I love them to the end; and although laid aside from active service, yet I breathe the prayer of faith that they all may be one. My heart is inditing good matter. There is much I would like to say, but I forbear the intrusion, because of my remoteness and obscurity; but when the curse is removed, all will be right.

Beloved, be of good cheer; the warfare is ending. "Gird thy bridal robes around thee. Morning dawns, arise, arise!" Thine, to let brotherly love continue.

Corinna, Me., Feb. 1876.

From Sr. A. S. Barney.

Dear Editors:—I have just been reading the last Crisis, and my heart goes out in praise to my heavenly Father that ever I was made to see the light which its precious pages contain. The soon coming of Jesus, —how it thrills my heart when I read anything which proclaims its nearness. This is the first year I have taken your paper, I could not now do without it; it helps me so much. I do wish every dark mind might read its truths, and so find such a hope as I this day possess, of soon seeing Jesus and being made like him, never to die.

It is but a short time since I embraced this truth. I once despised it, and would not read your paper. I believed I had an immortal soul because I had been taught this great error. But thanks be to God I read my Bible and found that I was mortal and that I was to seek for immortality, and through Christ only have eternal life. I expected to go to heaven at death, and yet I did not want to die; and I was often doubting whether I was a christian from this very reason. But when I read the word, it told me the dead knew not anything, and that the meek were to inherit the earth. And to-day this blessed hope is like an anchor to my soul. God has been doing much in Natick this past winter. Many have sought and found him precious to their souls. Our little church has prospered, and many been added to its numbers of such as we trust shall be saved when Jesus comes to make up his jewels.

We have been holding meetings in a hall for some time past, and felt very thankful for so good a place. It is too small to accommodate comfortably all who come. The church thought it best to build a house, and have commenced to do so; and expect in a short time to occupy it. We feel to give God all the glory for the wonderful way in which he has led us, and hope to meet all the dear ones in the kingdom. Yours waiting his coming.

Natick, Mass.

From Bro. P. C. Marsh.

Dear Brn.:—I am fully persuaded that no greater victory was ever achieved by mortal man, than when he, by the grace of God, is able to conquer himself. This have I learned by blessed experience; for twice since I have been in this city I have had my life threatened and the attempt made to take it, all for the truth's sake; but grace was given to help in time of need (Heb. 4: 16). "For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." v. 15. If the old man with his deeds and passions is crucified, there will be no retaliating, blow for blow, when tempted as above; for the new man does not strike; he does not retaliate. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Rom. 8: 14. Dear children of the Lord, my prayer is that we may always so live that we may boldly say with Paul, "The Lord is my helper, and I will not fear what man shall do unto me." Heb. 13: 6.

Hamilton, Ont.

From Bro. M. R. Miles.

Dear Brn.:—Our meeting at Martville commenced Jan. 2nd, and closed Feb. 13th. After the first week Elder B. P. Stevens helped me the most of the time. Eld. E. C. Cowles was with us one Sunday. The Lord has blessed his cause in Martville, and over one hundred and fifty have come forward to seek the Lord. All but a very few have been richly blessed and are praising God for his goodness. Those converted are from twelve to seventy-five years of age; some of the most profane and drinking men of the place have been converted. Our chapel has been crowded. Our brethren and sisters made a noble sacrifice last year and built a neat and commodious chapel, for which they feel well paid, as their sons and daughters have been converted to Jesus.

Last spring we organized a Sabbath school, which the Lord has blest. We have tried to encourage the school, which has steadily grown in interest, and the most of the scholars have been converted to Jesus and the truth we love so well.

Martville, N. Y., Feb. 14th, 1876.

From Bro. W. J. Warner.

Editors of the Crisis:—I have read your paper for five years, more or less, but never with such interest as I have for a few weeks past. I have learned to love the blessed Master, and consequently I love to hear of his second coming.

I would say to the unconverted, that if you would get the love of Jesus into your heart, you would not only love to read the Crisis and other christian papers, but you would love your Bible also. Sinner, why not flee from the wrath to come, and lay hold on eternal life? I would that I had a thousand tongues to warn a perishing world. If I could cause you to realize the peace and enjoyment there is in believing on the Lord Jesus Christ, I know you would turn from the wickedness of your ways; but as I cannot, I beseech you to come and try it for yourself.

From Sr. S. T. Vandermark.

Dear Brn.:—We live here in the far West. Only once in a while do we see one of our faith, and I so much desire to hear from those dear ones that I left when I came here. I thought if I could put a few words in your paper perhaps I might hear from some of them. I want to live a christian, and be all ready to meet my Savior when he comes, and also my dear brethren and sisters, to part no more. I often think of the good meetings we used to have in Rochester, where I first heard the truth. The time we trust is near when Christ will come to judge the quick and the dead. May we be able to say, when we see him coming in the clouds with power and great glory, Lo, this is our God, we have waited for him, and he will save us.

Manhattan, Riley Co., Kansas.

From Bro. C. Parker.

Dear Editors:—I have lately become a subscriber to your paper; and among the many who write for it I have not found a word about Hudson. Yet this town is worthy of notice. There are a few who receive with gladness the blessed intelligence of Christ's speedy coming to establish his kingdom. I have but little to do this winter, as times are hard, so I improve the time conversing about this blessed hope. Our nearest neighbor has remained a constant watcher since 1843. We consider the paper indispensable. I mean to have more than one, two or three sent to this town before next year. I desire an interest in your prayers that I may ever be ready to meet my Lord.

Hudson, N. H.

SINCE the year 1800, England has waged forty-nine wars; France thirty-eight; Russia twenty-two; Austria twelve; Prussia eight; and, in spite of all the peace societies and international conventions, they all appear anxious for another.—Ex.

THE brightest diamond is only crystalized carbon, or, as it might be called, charcoal glorified; and so it is with souls that were coal-black in the defilements of sin, which, by the power of God's grace, are made God's jewels forever.

ELDER GRANT.

Editors of Daily Standard :—GENTLEMEN: As I have no doubt but that you are interested in the intellectual and religious welfare of the people of this city, I therefore beg to call public attention through your paper to Elder Grant's lectures on Sacred and Profane History, and the fulfillment of prophecy, etc., illustrated by the largest and most perfect map in the world. I may say, that I attended the whole course last week. I went somewhat prejudiced against both the man and his principles, expecting to find a narrow-minded bigot, seeking to establish an erroneous sect, whereas, I was most agreeably surprised to hear the pure gospel preached, and lessons in history given by a congenial, large hearted christian gentleman, who is laboring faithfully and with considerable success for the renovation of the whole community. Now, as Elder Grant intends staying here another week, if a suitable place can be obtained, I think it would be an excellent thing for him to give his lectures to all the Sabbath-school children in the city, on each day, say at 3 P. M., and at night to the people. I believe the children would obtain more real knowledge on Sacred and Profane History from these illustrated teachings in one week, than they could in any other way, in a year. I write this spontaneously. No one ever asked me to do so. I never saw Elder Grant before last week, but being somewhat enamored with both the man and his work, I am therefore induced to urge all who can to avail themselves of the privilege of attending these lectures next week.

February 25th, 1876. ANTI-ADVENTIST.

Saturday, Feb. 26th. A number of well known citizens have written a letter to Mr. Ali Andrews, regreting that the late lectures of Elder Miles Grant, in this city, were not more generally listened to, and expressing a desire that they might be repeated, if possible, as it was the opinion of the gentlemen making the request that much good might be done thereby. In accordance with this request, Mr. Andrews, this morning, hired the Universalist church, on Fairfield Avenue, and the lectures will be repeated as soon as the necessary arrangements can be completed.—Standard, Feb. 26.

CLIPPINGS.

The following clippings were sent us by Bro. Thos. Fitzsimmons:

ARE WE GOING BACKWARD?—Dean Stanley, in Westminster Abbey, on Christmas day, spoke of the fears of many at the present time that the world is growing worse. "It may be that sometimes in our gloomy moods we are inclined to think we cannot count on the continuous advance of the onward progress of our race. It may be we are sometimes inclined to fear that the latter half of the nineteenth century is to close in a lower morality, a darker philosophy, a debasement of the senses, or a term of gross superstition. It may be that diabolical crimes shall arise again which we had hoped were dead forever, that statesmen may again become corrupt and self-seeking, that the leaders of sects and churches will again prefer the outward to the inward, the natural to the spiritual, the scen to the unseen."

There are plenty of revelations to bear out in part a pessimist philosophy; nor is there any common sense in varnishing over the ugly facts of the day. It is not always wise to make the best of things and to take a cheerful view of everything all around. Comparing ourselves with our forefathers, we hear of many nearly colossal calamities, and are face to face with a larger number of great crimes. The accidents that shocked them killed or maimed units; our misadventures desolate hundreds of homes. The horrible consequences of strong drink in brutality to women and children have multiplied in our large towns. For one English child brought up in foul air three hundred years ago there are now at least fifty. For ten men habitually unused to country walks in the sixteenth century there are now probably one hundred.

If we look around and remember the civil war in America, or the present French war, we see that the numbers of men engaged in deadly struggle were ten or twelve times the forces our ancestors thought great, and the loss in money and every way to the nations striving proportionately increased. In trade and commerce dishonesty has made gigantic strides; the tiny pickings and stealings of the village have grown into gigantic city frauds. Goldsmith's rogue no longer cheats Farmer Flamborough in a bargain, or overreaches Moses with "a gross of blue spectacles"; he starts a company and dips his hand in thousands of pockets. Then instead of a few sailors being paid to scuttle a ship, giving the passengers time to escape in boats, we have the Bremerhaven monster, who murders by machinery and winds up the assassination eight days in advance of the deed, leaving no hope for the victims of the calculated crime. Moreover, faith has died down.—London Telegraph.

DON'T WANT CHRIST.—Mr. Moody declared in Philadelphia that if the people of any State were to vote upon the question of whether they would have Christ as a ruler he would be rejected. He is not wanted on 'Change; business men do not want him to come and look over their affairs, and politicians down at Washington would not have him, because they could not then indulge in jobbery and tricks. If the world does not want him, has not got room for him, thank God, we can take him individually. The cry of the world is now as it was 1800 years ago—no room.

ROMAN CATHOLIC BLASPHEMY.—The Bishop of Olinda has published in the Univers—France—a remarkable letter upon the claims of the Roman See, and among other titles of honor he calls the Pope "an Abraham in his Patriarchate, a Melchisedek in his priesthood, an Aaron in his dignity, a Moses in his authority, a Samuel in his judgeship, a Peter in his might, and lastly Christ in his consecration by the Holy Ghost."

THE INCREASE OF CRIME.—Ex-Governor John A. Dix lectured in New York recently before the Association for the advancement of Science and Art, taking for his subject, "Some of the political and social evils of our times."

George J. Angell, of Boston, offers to contribute "time and money" to an association of gentlemen to investigate the causes of the increase of crime in Massachusetts, and to devise preventive measures.

THE CENTENNIAL YEAR.—At the close of our first century of existence as a nation, we find a condition of things that should cause us the deepest regret, and alarm for the future. The qualities which made this Republic are those which must preserve it. If we cannot turn back to its best traditions now, will it ever be possible to do so? For surely to-day a crisis is at hand!—Phila. Times.

THE LIGHT SPREADING.—A Russian paper reports that the Cossacks of the Don believe that the end of the world is at hand. Many of them have given up all their property.

MISSIONARY WORK.—The Evangelical Alliance of the United States held its annual meeting recently in New York city, Hon. William E. Dodge presiding. Rev. T. C. Trowbridge spoke in relation to missionary work in Turkey, and said that recent correspondence from missionaries stationed there indicated that there would soon be a change of government there.

SHAW—MOSS. In Hamilton, Ontario, Feb. 15th, 1876, at the residence of the bride's father, by Elder Geo S. Sanders, Mr. ROBERT H SHAW, of Lockport, N. Y., and Miss FLORA EMMA MOSS, of Hamilton.

Obituaries.

CAMPBELL. In Chicopee Falls, Mass., Jan. 26th, Lizzie, eldest daughter of James and Mary Campbell, aged five years and eleven months.

Bro. and Sr. Campbell became interested in the Advent doctrine about one year ago, and were baptized at the Springfield campmeeting last August. Since that time they have been bold in defending their faith in the speedy return of their Lord and kindred doctrines. Although deeply afflicted by the sudden death of their loved one, they look forward to the resurrection morn with joyful hope of seeing their dear Lizzie live again, to triumph over death's dark tomb, and join in songs of endless praise to Him who said, "Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me; for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Discourse by the writer from Rev. 21: 4, assisted by Geo. Tucker of the Congregationalist Church.

I. B. POTTER.

ALLING. In Norwalk, Ohio, Feb. 10th, 1876, Stephen C. Alling, aged twenty-three years.

At an early age our Bro. gave his heart to Jesus, and was baptized when about eight years old. In September, 1871, he fell, in a barn, injuring his spine to such an extent as to make him completely helpless, having lost all sense of feeling below his shoulders. During the years of his confinement and pain he has ever been patient and cheerful, being a living exemplification of the power of God to sustain in every hour of need. His confidence in Jesus was unshaken, he being at all times resigned to the Lord's will.

Thus passed away this suffering saint, leaving us a lesson of trust, submission, patience, and hope. He with David could say—"I know, O Lord, that thy judgments are right, and that thou in faithfulness hast afflicted me." He awaits the resurrection morn. Services by the writer. Text, 1 Cor. 15: 17, 18. C. MENDENHALL.

DURFEY. In Worcester, Vt., Jan. 21st, 1876, Joel O., eldest son of Eld. Milo and Samantha Durfey, aged twenty-five years.

He was killed while unloading logs, and was found with a log lying across his breast, his skull fractured and neck broken. Thus suddenly was called from active life one who was loved by all who knew him. His life seemed to be without a blemish. While his father preached to the poor, and received but little, Joel worked hard to help care for the rest of the little ones at home. God bless his memory! He was a firm believer in the coming of Christ, and the literal resurrection of the dead; but had never made a public profession of his faith; yet we have hope. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer in the Congregational church, assisted by Brn. Scofield and D. Brailey. It was a solemn and impressive scene. May God bless our Bro. and family in this sad hour.

C. S. SHATTUCK.

JOHNSON. In South Acton, Feb. 12th, 1876, of consumption, Mrs. Mary C. Johnson, wife of Fred. W. Johnson, and daughter of Charles and Jessie Lydiard, aged twenty-three years.

She suffered patiently, and with holy resignation and full assurance of hope fell asleep in Jesus, expecting when the Lord comes to make up his jewels to be spared "as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." The funeral was attended at the house of her father, where I tried to comfort them with the Bible promise of a resurrection of the dead, the righteous then to have eternal life, to be like the angels to die no more. May the same blessed hope comfort and cheer the young husband in his loneliness, the parents, and all the relatives of the deceased. L. BOUTELL.

TURNER. At Hebron, Me., Feb. 9th, 1876, Alvin Turner, aged seventy years.

After about four days of severe illness, Bro. Turner fell asleep, to awake when the heavens be no more. For a number of years he has been a believer in the near coming of Christ and the resurrection of the dead. He leaves brothers and sisters, sons and daughters, besides numerous other friends to mourn their loss. He will be greatly missed. He died with a good hope. Death is making fearful gaps in our ranks, but his reign is short. May God sanctify this affliction to the salvation of the family, and his sustaining grace be given to the stricken ones. The writer attempted to speak words of comfort.

G. L. TRACY.

NEWCOMB. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Greenwich, Mass., Feb. 16th, 1876, of congestion of the brain, Sarah A. Newcomb, wife of J. Newcomb, aged fifty years.

Sr. Newcomb embraced the Advent faith in 1854, and has maintained that faith ever since, and died in the full assurance that Jesus would call her soon. She was ever ready to make her home as agreeable and pleasant for pilgrims as their circumstances would allow. Those who attended the campmeeting at Greenwich will remember how interested she was to have the meeting prosper. A husband and four children will miss her, and mourn their loss. The writer spoke on the occasion from 1 Thess. 4: 18.

GEO. A. STREETER.

DIXON. In So. Eliot, Me., Feb. 8th, 1876, Bro. Andrew J. Dixon, aged forty-two years.

Bro. Dixon gave his heart to the Lord about eight years ago, and since then has lived a christian life. He leaves a wife and many relatives, who, together with the church and many other friends, deeply feel and mourn their loss. Bro. C. S. Shattuck spoke the word of the Lord to comfort us at the funeral. The blessed hope gives comfort. GEO. W. BROWN.

BADGER. In Eastford, Conn., Feb. 5th, 1876, Mrs. Lucy Badger, aged seventy-eight years.

She was much hindered in her christian enjoyment by the idea of her unworthiness, yet as she came near the end of life's journey, we have good reason to believe she was able to fully trust in the worthy name of Jesus. May those left behind sooner learn this blessed lesson of wholly trusting our Savior, and thus be ready for his coming. H. DAVIS.

GOODWIN. In Moultonborough, N. H., Jan. 27th, 1876, of consumption, Flora, daughter of Daniel and Lydia Goodwin, aged sixteen years, five months.

God bless the dear ones who mourn, with the blessed hope of Jesus' soon coming. Then Flora will live again to die no more. May God sanctify this affliction to the good of the mourning circle. Sermon by the writer.

FOREIGN NEWS.

HUNGARY.

Pesth, Feb. 24. The Danube has been rising all day. At 9 o'clock to-night the water was seven metres above the ordinary level. Several quarters of Pesth and Buda are submerged. A distillery was undermined by the current and fell to-night, crushing eleven persons. Camom is completely inundated, and hundreds of people are driven from their homes.

London, Feb. 25. A special to the Times from Pesth says the Danube has risen 14 feet in the past 48 hours, and is still rising.

TURKEY.

London, Feb. 26. A dispatch from Ragusa to the Times declares as unfounded the report that arms had been landed from English vessels for the Herzegovinians.

The insurgents are about to resume active operations, probably in Upper Herzegovina. Typhus, small pox and diphtheria are prevalent among the refugees. The work of pacification makes no progress.

Advices from Mostar report serious differences among the Turkish officials, defalcations from the funds designed for rebuilding the villages, and violent opposition on the part of the Mussulmans to the proposed reforms. It is reported from the interior that collisions are apprehended if the reforms are enforced.

Friends of Jesus, attend these meetings, and bring others with you, especially the unconverted; and pray much that the Holy Spirit may fill his servant, and attend the preaching of his own Word in the quickening and comfort of believers and the salvation of sinners. "Brethren, the time is short." What we do to save souls must be done soon or never. C. CUNNINGHAM.

SPRINGFIELD CAMPGROUND.—Some thirteen spots were selected last fall for new wooden tents, in case we could have the ground longer than the present lease, which runs two years longer. I have seen Mr. Chapin, and we can have the ground for five years longer, which will make seven years. That, we think, will be longer than we shall want it; so none need be afraid of having their tents to move, as he will let us have it as long as we wish. The tents are standing in good order. There are two families on the ground to take care of things. H. MUNGER.

A Resolution.

At a business meeting of the Campmeeting Committee of the Beebe Plain Advent Campmeeting Association, held at the residence of Dr. R. W. Warner, St. Johnsbury, Vt., the following resolution was unanimously adopted, and ordered to be forwarded to the Crisis for publication:

Whereas, an impression has gone forth to some extent detrimental to the interests of our Campmeeting, contrary to the facts in the case, to the effect that the majority of the Advent brethren of Canada and of the members of the Conference are opposed to the Campmeeting at Beeble Plain, therefore, to correct any such wrong impressions and set the matter right, as we feel it duty to do,

Resolved, That, to the best of our knowledge and belief, the majority of the Advent brethren of Canada, and of those whose names have been placed on the books of the Conference of the Province of Quebec as members and of the officers, both preachers and laymen, are not only not opposed to the Beebe Plain Campmeeting, but are in favor of it, both as to the locality, convenience of access and character of the grounds; and, as far as they know the facts as to the course pursued in establishing the meeting at Beebe Plain, and the motives that led to the establishment of the meeting there, approve of that course, and will sustain it, and we feel warranted in appealing to the brethren generally in confirmation of the truth of the statements herein made.

M. A. Potter, R. W. Warner, C. L. Percival, John Carbe, Lewis Bergoine, John Elliott, and L. C. McKinstry, Committee B. P. A. C. M. A.

NOTICE.—As I am about to take up housekeeping, and desiring to continue in the ministry of Christ, I would like to know of the brethren in the States (if not too far away) if any of them know of an opening where I could locate and preach. I intended to locate in my own country (Canada), but Satan has done his work in dividing the flock where I was going, and I wish to see if there is an opening in some other field. If not, I shall have to locate here, and go about some other business, and preach when I can. Should any know of such an opening, I would be pleased to have them correspond with me at Highland Creek, Ontario, when they can understand all the particulars required. Your brother in Christ, LUTHER C. KERR, Highland Creek, Ont.

NOTICE.—I expect to be at liberty after the middle of April to go and labor most of the time, as the way opens, with those who may desire to investigate facts of prophecy fulfilled and fulfilling touching the immediate coming and kingdom of Jesus Christ. Address me at Rutland, Vt., immediately. H. K. FLAGG.

THE church in Concord, N. H., have chosen Uri Baker, E. Gordon, and Wm. H. Hurd, for their ministerial committee.

E. D. CLOUGH, Church Clerk.

From Zion's Herald:—"Rev. George Trask is in a fair way to have an efficient successor in Rev. I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me. We have received a spirited tract from his pen, entitled, 'The Tobacco Plug and Cigar.' Its seventy-two pages are crowded with facts and figures, forming a terrible indictment against the foolish and vulgar habit and expensive indulgence of the use of tobacco. We wish it the widest circulation and the utmost success in its important mission."

From the Portland Transcript:—"Rev. I. C. Wellcome, of Yarmouth, Me., publishes a neat pamphlet of seventy-two pages, against the use of the 'The Tobacco Plug and Cigar,' being a friendly talk with those who use tobacco, with the hope of benefitting them in health, mind and money. It is a complete treasury of anti-tobacco argument and appeal. Sold for $10 per hundred, $1.50 per dozen, 15 cents single copy. Send order to the author." Sold at the Crisis Office.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul.—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborganism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. AGENT.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history. AG'T.

LINES.

J. FINN.

I have turned my eyes away yonder;
I have turned my thoughts there too;
That I am tired of this earth is no wonder,
For I have looked its evils through.

I have tried its mirth and folly;
I have tried its wealth and fame;
I have roamed o'er hill and valley;
I have found it cold and vain.

Now I look for higher treasures,
And I am sad to have to stay
Where the evils stain my pleasures,
And my home is far away.

I have heard of a flowing river;
I have heard of life's fair tree;
And my heart admires the giver;
He has offered it to me.

I have heard of a land of beauty;
Of a city rich and rare;
And if I but do my duty,
I shall have a mansion there.

They say there is peace in that region,
And pleasures without alloy,
Where Satan with his legion,
Our peace cannot destroy.

There hearts are forever blended
With friendship that is pure;
Oh, I wish the war was ended,
And I were at home secure.

Here is evil, and sin, and folly,
And trials in the way;
And hypocrites that rally
To lead the young astray.

Oh, heavenly Father, guard us,
And guide us through this vale,
When we are sad oh comfort us;
Remember we are frail.

I am tired of fickle friendship;
I am tired of hearts untrue;
I am tired of toil and danger;
I long for things made new.

How I long for the retribution,
For the curse to be removed;
I long for the restitution—
For God's will to be approved.

JOTTINGS.

I. C. WELLCOME.

January, 1876, we spent in Franklin Co., Me, on our way up to our field of labor. We preached in Farmington the eve of Dec. 30th to an attentive audience, some of whom enjoy the gospel hope. Here we once held a tentmeeting, and many became interested in the good news of the coming kingdom of Christ. But no effort has been since put forth by the real believers there to sustain meetings, hold up the light to this judgment bound generation, and lead sinful ones to Christ for salvation. It is a place where much good might be done if the friends of truth there would sacrifice for it, and do what they might for Christ.

Jan. 2nd. We arrived in Kingfield, and preached in the chapel to a small congregation. Christianity seems to be in great disrepute here. It is quite a prosperous business village, but few meet to worship God. They have preaching one-fourth part of the time by the Methodists; no weekly prayer meeting, only one out to class the week I was there, and he eighty-three years old. But few pray, very few take a religious paper, "are not able," they say; nearly all use tobacco, some church members use a large amount, from $5 to $30 spent for it in a family. Two ministers had just made a two days' effort for a protracted meeting, and closed it for want of hearers. I spent two Sundays and two week evenings with them. Congregations greatly increased, and the interest to hear greatly increased. Some were revived, and promised to commence praying; some seemed deeply anxious for their salvation. We found the truths we preached there three years ago had lodged in the hearts of several, but had not yet brought forth fruit unto righteousness.

We preached two evenings in North Freeman to very earnest listeners; several are believers, and others convicted of the truth; but their prayer and class meeting which had been given up they commenced anew. They take but very little sound religious reading,—say they "are not able;" but here also they pay large amounts for tobacco. Nearly all families use it, and are stupified by it. I found a few who pray and look for the coming of the Lord. Two dear ones who gladly listened to my preaching and Bible conversations there three years ago, and since found Christ a precious Savior, now sleep in death, to awake "in the first resurrection," while others are left to mourn their loss.

I preached at Freeman Ridge one evening in the old school house where I attended school forty-eight years ago, and preached to the man who taught the school, and to several of the scholars who then attended with me. But many of the scholars of those days sleep in death; others are scattered to distant parts. Christianity never prospered in this district; only a few ever became true christians. It is the same now. The people listened with candor, and I tried to be faithful to them in preaching the word. I visited several families of kindred and old friends who yet live, and the graveyard where many now sleep.

At Freeman Center there is some christian society; one man urged me to send an appointment there. I did so; but when I arrived, one said the notice was given, but he doubted if the people gathered. "They are afraid of you," he said. But they did come, and as they flocked in one said, "The lame, the halt, and the blind are here." They listened eagerly too, and entreated me to preach the next evening. I did so, and there was an ear to hear the word of life and the coming kingdom. A few sectarian religious bigots did not attend. We trust the good hearing was not in vain.

We visited Brn. Joseph and Nathaniel Elliott, in New Portland, and found them "living epistles," waiting the coming of the Lord. We gave them several scripture discourses on themes new to them, which they joyfully accepted, but we held no public meetings.

At New Vineyard, where we had left appointments over two weeks previous, and invited the F. W. Baptist minister to come and help in a protracted meeting to commence Jan. 16th, we found on returning that he and another minister had held a two weeks meeting in the house I was to occupy, and had not given out my appointment (as promised), until the evening before I was to preach, although it was publicly known that I was to come. I was told that prayers had been offered to God to have me "kept out of the place," and that I might "be sick." The story had been circulated that I was sick. Then it was said it was too bad for me to be allowed to come in and break up their reformation, etc. I came, not sick, but well; had not been sick. I was ready to fill my engagement. I had invited one minister, when I passed up over two weeks before, to come and aid me in seeking to save souls. This was before their meeting was planned. But they started their meeting ahead of me, called it a reformation, then fled and left their flocks, who had got the idea from some source that I was a wolf, or a bad man, dangerous to Christianity.

Under these circumstances, with bigoted sectarians sitting with the careless in taverns, using Billingsgate slang about me, I commenced with a small audience of respectful and candid listeners. The Lord blessed the word, and drew the hearts of the better portion of the people to the gospel of the kingdom. Our congregations constantly increased during ten days, and some became anxious inquirers. Several spoke for Jesus for the first time. Some rejoiced in the new light and beauty they now saw in the gospel they had never seen before. Our meetings were harmonious and excellent, while those who wished and tried to hinder seemed to have a laborious task. The devil's yoke is always hard, and his burdens heavy, while Christ's "yoke is easy, and his burden light." The cause of Christ and truth triumphed in this case.

We have no gift to tell what we have done, nor wisdom to say how many are converted in our meetings. The Lord knows all about these matters. We trust seed was sown which the Lord will bless, and from which fruit will be gathered in time of harvest.

We found Bro. and Sr. Peabody and their daughter, Bro. and Sr. Looks, and some others in that vicinity, rejoicing in the blessed hope of soon "seeing the King in his beauty." Bro. Peabody was just recovering from a severe fever which came near bringing him to the grave. Sr. P. was too ill to attend any meetings. Bro. and Sr. Newell, a son and daughter, I found sick; none able to attend meetings. Their present prospects are sad, but they look for Christ to come soon, and give them eternal life and health.

There has been quite a reformation in their part of the town lately. I attended several of their meetings, and enjoyed precious seasons with them. Many of the converts testified for Jesus. A good work has been done. I pray it may continue until Jesus comes. All things look as though he must come soon. I long to see him.

Yarmouth, Me., Feb. 12th, 1876.

FROM BRO. R. H. GRESHAM.

To the Faithful Ones in Christ Jesus Greeting:—Many of you have seen the letters from Elders John A. Cargile and J. J. Smith, of their travels, labors and trials in North Carolina and elsewhere; of Elder Peyton G. Bowman, in South Carolina, and of my sojourning and laboring for the truth in Western North Carolina. Yet those who have not passed through similar scenes can scarcely form a correct idea of the labor performed or the buffetings that we have passed through. As to the results, that can only be told after Jesus comes. We have had much to contend with, and if we continue faithful, our warfare must continue until death comes upon us, or until Jesus comes. Then if we are found worthy, our pay for all trials, troubles, privations and difficulties will be more than ten thousand times ten thousand fold. We know that the reward to the faithful will be beyond our present conception, and therefore we strive to press forward and to make our calling and election sure. I came here a short time since on a little business; and came with reluctance, as I was fearful that while here I could do no good in proclaiming the truth. On my arrival I began at once to hand out some tracts and papers, and to talk about the true way into the kingdom of God, and immortality alone through Christ, and was soon made glad by the professions of a few that they really desired to know the truth, and to obey it. Step by step I am trying to lead them out of superstitious fog, and into the truth as it is in Jesus. Sometimes they stagger and come to a stand still, it is is so hard for them to get rid of their old opinions. They cannot understand how it can be possible that all the preaching they have heard since their infancy could have been mistaken in reference to life and death, in reference to the things summarized in Acts 8: 12, and other matters. The truth as I teach it is new to them, as heretofore they have listened to their preachers, and have not heeded or studied the Bible. One man has said to me several times earnestly, that if there be but one man in all this section who should try to get into the kingdom, he wants to be that man; and there are several others who seem to be of about the same earnest determination.

This place is thirty-six miles northward from Spartanburg, S. C., and on the old turnpike road (the Mills Gap road) from Spartanburg, S. C., to Asheville and Warm Springs, N. C. If any of our worthy preaching brethren can make it convenient to come here, they will find a hearty welcome. They may address Col J. M. Hamilton, Bright's Creek, Polk Co., N. C. He will publish the appointment, unless it should conflict with their regular meeting the second Saturday and Sunday in each month, or some special appointment, and find a house to preach in. If any brethren should visit Red Hill, Mitchell County, N. C., they should call on Mr. Samuel Laughrun, and his two sons, Thomas and Marion Laughrun. They and a few others near there are earnestly seeking to know the truth, and they are anxious for more help. I have never been there, and have seen but one of them, and that a short interview. They have been aroused to a study of their Bibles mainly by tracts sent to them, and by my numerous letters to them, also a letter and tracts from Sister Teeple to them.

In the providence of God I think it possible that there may be a congregation of true believers formed in Mitchell county, and another one here, after awhile. Will not several brethren assist us in this labor of love? I want to get up a house, and get located as soon as I can, in the new colony at Highlands, Macon Co., N. C.; but those writing or sending papers to me, may address me at Turnpike, Buncombe Co., N. C., during March and April 1876. Desiring an interest in the prayers of all the faithful ones in Jesus the Christ, I am affectionately yours in the one faith.

R. H. Gresham.

The gift of prayer may have praise with men, but it is the grace of prayer that has power with God.

A TRIP TO PENNSYLVANIA.

C. COLEGROVE.

How shall I write of my trip to Pennsylvania, and my eight weeks stay there, nearly three hundred miles from home? It was in answer to a call to come and stay one, two or three months, and labor in the work of enlightening men in the knowledge of God. My wife was far away in Florida, seeking to stay the havoc of a harassing and destructive cough, and so thus bereft, I might as well forget in part my lonely situation, and go out and plough in God's field (the atom, man, ploughing in a mere atom of ground, and seeking to do good to some other atoms). But what a mighty world to work in, and what a great state is Pennsylvania, and what a vast coal production, and what a host of mines, breakers, columns, railroads, engines, coal cars and miners,—and what heaps and heaps of shining and beautiful coal! And what multitudes of Irish in and about Scranton, and through nearly all the vast region of anthracite, besides Welch, Scotch, English and Americans!

Here and there you meet a man fresh from delving underground, his little lamp stuck forward in his hat, and his face sooty and black with dust. And stand on any elevation and count the columns of steam, sloping heavenward, every one the signal of a mine; and as you travel hither and thither, listen to the soft, small thunder of the fans, that day and night, forever and ever, spin by the potent force of steam, purifying the underground recesses, where the deadly gas is continually eking from crevices, and needing to be fought and expelled with ever-watchful and never-tiring care and toil. What a perpetual screaming of coal engines, and interminable roar and jar, with pounding and percussion of the atmosphere, with every device of machinery, and the evolution of electricity, hydrogen, and carbonic acid and I know not what strange and subtle chemical transformations, all in some way affecting the universal equilibrium, and working out such changes as God Omniscient only can understand.

But how thankful I had occasion to be that I could walk with my usual cat-like briskness, notwithstanding a lameness that was rather annoying from that fearful fall last summer, which God in his mercy was pleased to overrule by such a check, that even though by a hairsbreadth, I was not quite fatally hurt.

I would rather underrate than magnify my labor, and would observe a becoming modesty in any report of results; for a kind report from the Master would be worth millions more than any certificate of mine. Some, I trust, were benefitted, and if God please, savingly benefitted. We had, say, about forty meetings, and right here let me say this—The entire aggregate of labor was in the direction of the truth, and the truth which the orthodox church does not know or receive. I know for eight years my faith has been essentially as now, but yet you know it takes time for a magnetic needle to settle steadily to one aim, and after some tremblings and much praying and inevitable waiting, to survey and feel the ground carefully, excuse me for saying that at last I come clear and strong to stand for the truth as it is in God and his word.

The question was how far to concede by silence, for peace's sake, in any case, for a special or proposed advantage, such as the so called conversion of souls;—no, not exactly a question, yet there was some trembling, as a needle trembles. But it has come at last, a settled work and consistent war for the truth; not a rash, or wrathful, or bombastic war, but steady and God-fearing. And the truth, observe, is not sectarian, but Divine. And as God is the author and giver of the truth, so also honorable and delightful is the work of proclaiming it. And it has struck me more than once, that as in other days, so also now it is true, that the times of this ignorance (it may be), God has winked at, but now commandeth all men to repent. That is to say, teachers and preachers ought to renounce their false theology, and teach it no more; for if they would do that, sooner or later the people would follow. Yet they do not (save here and there one), but plod on in the old treadmill.

Hence it came to pass, on my way home, as the strong and swift-footed iron steed bore us lightning-like through towns and villages, and my eyes caught here and there the hundred steeples of churches, Catholic or Protestant, I said or thought, How much lack all these of belonging to one Babylon? I cannot help the startling sound of the query; nor though any should be thuuder struck at it, would I refrain the silent questioning; nor even though some for charity's sake might say, forbear! nor even though I was warned to look out for bigotry; for it is not now a question what man under heaven or on earth to please, but an honest heart-praying to God to do right, and think right, and speak right.

There is no alternative but to bear faithful witness, and remember that all things are out of joint, and men's opinions avail nothing, and the judgment of our Lord is at hand, and the immortality of the soul is the satanic nest-egg still carefully kept and tended throughout Protestant Christendom. An egg so curiously prolific, that it has not yet exhausted its fertility, after ages of serpent-hatching.

Accordingly, I see in a steeple, a sign ominous and sinister, if that evil dogma is still believed and proclaimed, underneath its heaven-pointing finger. And this is not a rash, but slowly formed conclusion—not a judgment pronounced with a sudden frenzy—but a deep, secret conviction, or something bordering on a conviction,—for this one evil breathing, this one whispered lie, is but the chief corner-stone of whatever apostacy may rear its frightful fabric in this hour of earth's great trial.

How easy it is to see that as our blessed Lord rightfully affirms, saying, "I am the first and the last," so also the enemy fails not to put in a like sweeping and broad affirmation, being first and last in the terrible beguiling insinuation of man's secret, internal, independent, and everlasting life, and so joined in deadly conflict with Christ who only is our life. Ah! the Babylonish lie is in all Protestant Christendom, enshrined and defended there! And there are professed ministers, who will still talk openly about a millennium before the advent! So blind! so untaught! And is this to be wrapped about with the mantle of charity, this open misrepresentation? Is such ignorance excusable? Is this false version of Scripture a frailty on which we are to stoop and imprint the kiss of compassion, when the so called church is swimming and dreaming on, sweetly lulled by the fairy manners or subtle logic of the minister? I have an idea of the thunder jar that is coming, but I cannot stop to elaborate or explain.

I might tell if I had time, of some meetings at Forty Fort, just over the Susquehannah, from Mill Creek. This is the region of the fearful massacres, July 3, 1778. This is the quiet and pleasant Wyoming Valley. Here the Indians and tories raged, and ravaged, and rioted in blood. Just above is the fine monument over the bones of the slain. And still further on, is the remnant of Queen Esther's rock, now hacked and chipped by tourists, until its surface is below the earth level. Here, this cruel half-breed woman with her own hand killed fourteen American captives, who were arranged in a circle around the rock, each one held fast in the grip of an Indian.

But time will fail me to speak of many things, of the still and solemn river, with its freight of floating ice, and the simmering sound of the thousand lumps of slush as they go by, of Wilkes Barre and Pittston, with their strong bridges, of Scranton with its furnaces, of Bro. Finn with his Bible classes, of Bro. Cook at Mill Creek, and the little church with its lamp shining in the darkness, of the murders and other crimes in Luzerne Co., of the timid and slack administration of justice, of the hundreds of mines, of the hundreds of men killed by accident, of preaching, visiting, walking and talking, until at last, I begin to feel a yearning for home and rest. But, alas! my wife is far away, and I shall not see her in the old place. I have been running to the post-offices for messages from Florida, and I leave a charge with Bro. Finn to send everything on from Scranton to Sardinia.

Away we go! Eight weeks to a day since we rolled into the Scranton depot; and now on the wings of the wind we go bowling for Binghampton, and now I see the hills and breathe the air of my own beloved state, New York. A night at Elmira, and then on with the sinewy pull of the engine, girded with strength, the great prodigy of modern times. Here we come to Friendship, and Cuba, and Olean, and here my wife and I, years ago journeyed in company, but how different now! There is an old line, somewhere, "I'm a lonely traveler here," and a little like that I felt, but no matter.

I am home again, and trying to teach people, here and there, in byways, and with work enough for a host, through this entire region.

Wanted!—forty thousand men to teach the truth! But my wife is getting uneasy, and now the question rises, shall I meet her in North Carolina, or elsewhere, and spend a month in preaching thereabouts? By the way—bear with me;—the great Pyramid speaks with a voice of thunder! It tells with its voice of mighty stones, of that wonderful period between 1876 and 1882, What is just at hand? Is it not something concerning the 144000 of Rev. 14? Let every one watch. I love the subject of the pyramid, its argument, its mighty, monumental lesson. Good bye.

CHARITY.

R. G. LADD.

It would seem enough had been said and written upon this subject to keep the matter constantly before the mind; the importance of this bearing upon every individual act in life. Especially the 13th chap. of 1st Cor. is in every one's hand, and the saying in every mouth, to verify the utility of its practice, and yet how few real witnesses to demonstrate the power and efficacy of this love. "Charity (or love) suffereth long and is kind; charity envieth not; charity vauhteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth. Beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things."

What more forcible language could be employed, to show the effect upon the human heart and affections than the development of those gifts and graces. "Charity never faileth;" every thing else fades and dies. No sure foundation but this; it is the chief corner-stone, disallowed indeed of men, but chosen of God, and precious.

Paul says to the church, "Ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar people, that ye should show forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." Not less in our day, "upon whom the ends of the world are come." "Love is the fulfilling of the law." It cannot be hid from view, if it is deeply graven upon the heart. The spontaneous acts gush out; every thought, word, or deed comes laden with the fruit—"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise." It is a natural growth of a heart imbued with the spirit of the Master. It is their delight to follow in his steps, however self-denying or cross-bearing. Half-heartedness, I know, cannot respond to this, but a soul made one with Christ drinks freely at the fountain, and quenches his thirst by the living water that flows directly from the throne—living where its healing streams satiates every desire, searches every motive and impulse, bringing into recognition every trace of the leading, guiding hand, so that the rough is made smooth, and the crooked straight, by the direct agency of the Holy Spirit.

Nothing can happen to one of His without his notice. If the very hairs of our head are all numbered, and not a sparrow falls without his notice, will anything be allowed, or suffered to come upon us, that is not for our good? Nay, verily! Our path may be strewn with trials, and our walk one continual scene of affliction, yet the thought that our Father knows best what is for our good, and sees the end from the beginning, causes a glow of satisfaction, and a perpetual welling up of submission that cries out continually, "Thy will be done!" With it comes the strong consolation, the abiding witness, the steady rest and peace that flows like a river.

Here is where Paul was, when he "gloried in his infirmities," that the power of God might be made manifest. Here is where the church must be before they can be clothed in "white raiment clean and white," without "spot or wrinkle," ready for translation.

We are nearing the time when "he that is filthy, will be filthy still, and he that is righteous will be righteous still." There are signs of the "bride making herself ready." It is a time of decision; some are arising and trimming their lamps, where neither the light of truth or Spirit is openly felt; that no flesh may take the glory. One here, and another there, are coming into this union in Christ. It is the work of God. Not unto us, not unto us, but unto Thy name be all the glory. "Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God, for Christ's sake, hath forgiven you. "Grieve not the Holy Spirit, whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption."

Springfield, Mass.

CHRIST THE REDEEMER.

There can be no Redeemer nor redemption when there is no loss. These words imply a loss, and not only a loss but a restoring, a restoration. He that is a Redeemer, must himself redeem; and he alone can restore, or perform the work of redemption.

If Christ be the Redeemer of the world, then he alone is to redeem it. The work of redemption is, therefore, his work, and not the Father's. This the Scriptures most clearly teach. From the first promise to the last declaration concerning Christ, the idea is distinctly kept in view, that he is to redeem the world. It is the "Seed of the woman" which will "bruise the serpent's head." It is Christ who is "to destroy death and him that had the power of death. It is he that is to "destroy the works of the devil." It is he that is to "put down all rule, and all authority and power." It is he that "must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet." It is he who is "King of kings and Lord of lords." It is he, "out of whose mouth goeth a sharp sword, with which he should smite the nations; and he ruleth them with a rod of iron; and he treadeth the winepress of the fierceness and wrath of Almighty God." It is to him that "every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess!" It is he who is to have the throne of David, and reign forever; and whose kingdom is to be without end.

It is Christ who is to judge the world. He says himself, "The Father judgeth no man, but hath committed all judgment unto the Son." It is he who is to "judge the quick and the dead." It is he that "was called Faithful and Free, and in righteousness he doth judge and make war." It is he before whom all nations are to be gathered, and who is to "separate them one from another." It is he who is to "gather his wheat into the garner, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." It is he who is to "send his angels and gather his elect." It is he who is to "be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God." It is he that is to "raise" men "up at the last day." It is he that hath the keys of death and the grave. It is he that hath "all power" given to him, "both in heaven and in earth." It is he that shall bind the strong man and then destroy his goods. It is he upon whose shoulder shall be the government. It is he that "shall have dominion from sea to sea, and from the river to the end of the earth.

Christ has commenced the work of redemption. He came—was the seed of the woman, and the Son of God. He said he came to save that which was lost. He began the work at his baptism, and is still engaged in it. His prophetic and sacrificial work was done when he was here. His priestly work is being done in heaven. By this and the Spirit which he sent has he been preparing a people for himself in the ages to come. But they are not yet redeemed—they are still lost in death. They are under the penalty and the curse of sin. But he came to deliver them from these; and as he has not yet redeemed them, his work is not yet finished. The consummation is future, and must be looked for in his coming again. He cannot finish the work of redemption and remain where he is. His voice must be heard here upon the earth again, if the dead are raised. He must return to restore the earth and save that which was lost.

This work is Christ's, and not the Father's. The Father has committed all judgment and the execution of all things to the Son. He is clothed with all authority and power to execute the work to be done; and having all power in heaven and in earth, he surely can accomplish the work without the aid of the Father. It is to Christ that we are to look for the finishing up of the work of redemption. For what is he coming, if it be not to do this? If the Father himself is not to do it, why send again his Son? Acts 3: 20. "Behold I come quickly: and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Surely he that rewards will execute, and not another. He that is to reward both the righteous and wicked, must be the Redeemer and do all the work of redemption himself. This the Scriptures teach.

I. I. Leslie.

LETTER.

Editors World's Crisis:—As I have not been heard from by any of the dear ones who have long been waiting and looking for the coming of the blessed Master, I would like to communicate to them through the Crisis concerning the blessed hope that is just to be realized,—the hope of deliverance from a sin-cursed world by the strong hand of our Savior. Surely the signs of the times bespeak his soon coming, for wickedness is on the increase, and men are waxing worse and worse. The world is staggering like a drunken man; and that wicked man of sin will soon be destroyed, whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and destroy with the brightness of his coming. Then all sin and iniquity will be swept away, and the earth purified and filled with the glory of God, and made a fit dwelling place for the redeemed of the Lord.

Dear brethren, be steadfast, for when this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached to all nations, then shall the end come. As the lightning cometh out of the East and shineth even unto the West, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Soon all the tribes of the earth will mourn, when they see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. He will send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

Says Jesus, "Now learn a parable of the fig tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh. So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things know that it is near, even at the doors." Let us put on the whole armor of God; for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places." Let us ask if we are ready; if our lamps are trimmed and burning, that when the Bridegroom cometh we may go in with him to the Marriage Supper.

Dear brethren, are we striving to present ourselves as a chaste virgin unto the Lord? Are we adding to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness, and to godliness brotherly kindness, and to brotherly kindness charity? The apostle says "If these things be in you and abound, they make you that you shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ." "Wherefore the rather brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure. For if ye do these things ye shall never fall; for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord.

HOOSICK VALLEY A. C. CONFERENCE.

The Second Quarterly Session of the H. V. A. C. Conference, according to appointment, was held in the Advent chapel at Low Hampton, N. Y., commencing Jan. 12th, 1876, and holding over the following Sabbath. Three religious meetings were held each day, excepting the forenoon of Friday, which was devoted exclusively to a business session of the conference. The meetings were well attended, and were characterized throughout with harmonious action and a good degree of spiritual devotion. All the preaching brethren present took part in the preaching as is usual at our conference sessions. There were many associations and recollections of the past of peculiar interest, adding very much to the interest of the meetings. Bro. Wm. Miller's old homestead, now occupied by his youngest son, John H. Miller, was a welcome home for a good number of preachers and delegates, and the very generous hospitality extended to us by Bro. Miller and his kind companion will never be forgotten.

There were but two business sessions of the conference. The first was called to order by the President, H. K. Flagg. Prayer by C. W. Baker. By vote the chair appointed Jacob Pike and C. W. Baker a committee on credentials.

Minutes of last conference read and accepted. The committee reported the following names as members of the conference: Ministers—H. K. Flagg, A. A. Waite, R. Moshier, Wm. J. Blanchard, C. W. Baker. Delegates: H. Vanwormer, James Morrison, Jacob Pike, —— Whipple, S. D. Hutchings, R. Candlish, Alice Davis, Wm. P. Lincoln, Harvey Castle, John Grahame, C. J. Rogers, Harrison Phelps. The report was adopted.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson, pastor of the church at Castleton, Vt., being present, it was unanimously voted that he be invited to become a member of this conference. The revised constitution of our National A. C. Association was read. It was then voted that the chair appoint a nominating committee of three, to report the names of three delegates to represent the churches of this conference at the next annual meeting of the National A. C. Association. Robert Candlish, of Rutland, Vt., John Grahame, of Castleton, Vt., and C. W. Baker, of Shushan, N. Y., were appointed as that committee. The names of Eld. H. K. Flagg, S. G. Mathewson and R. Moshier were reported, and by vote of the conference accepted.

We then listened to the report of the preachers and delegates. Eld. Wm. J. Blanchard and A. A. Waite had labored mostly as evangelists since the last conference, during which their labors had been blest in the conversion of many. Arthur A. Waite had accepted a call of the church at Sandy Hill, to become their pastor.

Eld. H. K. Flagg reported his labors as having been mostly with the church at Rutland; but he had traveled one month in Connecticut and Massachusetts with good results.

Eld. S. G. Mathewson had accepted a call to become pastor again of the church at Castleton. The church had passed through some severe trials, yet they were striving hard for victory, trusting in the Lord for strength, who never fails to hear the prayers of those who believe his promise.

Eld. C. W. Baker had preached what he could, under embarassing circumstances, in N. Y., producing encouraging results, which inspired him to double his efforts in the cause of his Master. Eld. R. Moshier had been kept at home most of the time since last conference by sickness in his family, yet he had preached what he could.

The delegates of Sandy Hill report the church as having been in a very low condition, and more especially for the last year. The prayer meeting had been losing interest, and had become almost lifeless. Under A. Waite's labors the interest and numbers are increasing. They now have more at their prayer meetings than used to attend the preaching meetings of the Sabbath. The house is well filled, and the church active.

The delegates from Hebron, N. Y., report the church there as in a low condition, and having had but little preaching; yet there were a few who held up the light the best they could, and continue their meetings every Sabbath. The delegates from Rutland report the church there as prospering under the pastoral labors of Eld. H. K. Flagg. They had passed through their share of trials, yet the meetings were harmonious, spiritual, and well attended.

Bro. Rogers, delegate from Poultney, reported the church there as in a low condition. There are a few who try hard and faithfully to raise the standard, but with little progress. They have some bright lights who stand firm amid all their trials.

Bro. H. Phelps reported the Low Hampton church as having been in a low condition for the past few years, and more especially on account of the brethren being scattered, and living so far apart that it was difficult to sustain their meetings. Bro. Grahame, from Castleton, had been with that church ever since its organization most of the time. It had been blest with able and good teachers. They had recently passed through new trials, but he believed that under the teachings of their old pastor again the Lord would overrule all for good.

The reports of all the preachers and delegates, taken as a whole, gave fresh courage to those who have the faith once delivered to the saints to double their efforts for the triumph of truth.

A vote of thanks was given to the church and people of Low Hampton for the kind and generous hospitality extended to us during our stay among them. Voted, that a report of these meetings be sent to the World's Crisis and the Advent Christian Times for publication. The conference then adjourned subject to the call of the President and Secretary.

HOME AND HEALTH.

VENTILATION.

Of the mysteries of human life we know but little, but we know something of its phenomena, and of how life is maintained. There is a constant process of growth and decay in the human body. The worn-out particles are carried off, and their places are supplied by new. It is said that the particles of the human body are entirely changed in the period of seven years. Our bodies are made over new, but the new body is so formed in the likeness of the old that we do not know the difference.

Of the work of eliminating the waste material from the body, the lungs do a great part. The blood is purified by contact with the air in the lungs. Air once breathed has lost five per cent. of oxygen, and taken on five per cent. of carbonic acid. It is therefore not fit for breathing again.

There should be provision for a constant change of air in sleeping rooms, parlors, school-houses, halls and churches. Instead of this, such places are frequently shut up as closely as possible. Hence persons breathe again and again the exhalations from each other's lungs and bodies. In this way serious diseases are often engendered. It has been said that "a man's own breath is his greatest enemy." What then can be said of the practice of so closely confining an assemblage of persons that each man must not only breathe his own, but the breath of others over and over again?

It is commonly thought that if a room is cold no ventilation is needed. In cold autumnal days churches and halls are often kept closed, until the atmosphere becomes positively pestilential, and if one speaks of ventilation, the answer is: "Oh! it is too cold already!" But cold air may be foul and poisonous as well as warm air, and heated air if pure is not unhealthy, as all can nnderstand who have sat before a roaring country fire. Indeed, as heat causes the air to circulate, it promotes ventilation. It is easy to ventilate a warm room, for in that case the persons occupying it can be comfortably warm while the impure air is allowed to escape and thus make room for the admission of pure air from without.

Some churches are so ill-ventilated that it is a question whether one does not commit more sin by going into them than by staying outside; for the pure air of heaven better promotes the spirit of worship than the muggy, offensive, mal odorous stuff which the sexton so carefully shuts in and saves up from Sunday to Sunday.

Every church should be thoroughly aired after each service; otherwise the air grows worse and worse, and in the evening becomes almost deadly. There should also be a constant change of air during the services. This would cost something for fuel and attention; it would save the congregation much more in comfort and health.—Wayside.

CLOTHING.

In a strictly hygienic sense the only use of clothing is to protect the body against atmospheric vicissitudes. For this purpose it should be as equally distributed over the body as possible; nor should it be allowed to restrain in the least the motions of any muscles or organs of the body. The material may be properly regulated by the sense of comfort. The principle errors in the dress of men are mis-shapen boots and shoes, stiff "stove-pipe" hats, and heavy or tight cravats, or "chokers." With fashionable women the dress is, in a general sense, all wrong. It would be difficult to invent anything more destructive to health, more ruinous to comfort, more inconsistent with true taste and utility, or more degrading in all its moral consequences. Tight shoes and high-heeled gaiters distort the feet and render easy and graceful locomotion impossible; tight-lacing diminishes respiration, prevents due aeration of the blood, and thus directly cuts off the sources of vital energy; while heavy skirts supported on the hips occasion congestion, and frequently inflammation, and sometimes ulceration of the pelvic and abdominal viscera.

Esthetic considerations do not belong to a work of this kind; but certainly all forms and articles of costume that violate every law of life, cannot be consistent with any recognition of the beautiful, except that which is the outgrowth of a monstrous perversion of the sense of beauty.—Science of Health.

Labor and Longevity.—Work by method and on system, even when severe, is not only quite compatible with prolonged life, but is actually conducive to it, while the torpor of idleness or the excitement of fitful effort are the sure precursors of senile degeneration. This is a useful doctrine to preach, and still more useful to practice.

Words by M. V. SALTMARSH. Music by W. A. McNEAL.

2. We are wandering now in this valley of sin,
Here we walk in the darkness of night;
But a glorious morn we expect soon will dawn,
A morn of eternal delight.—Cho.

3. Even now a faint light steals across the dark sky,
And we know that the morning is near;
Soon, soon will the day drive the darkness away,
And the fair sun of glory appear.—Cho.

4. And when that glad day in its fullness shall come,
Earth's night shall return nevermore;
But the good and the pure, in their mansions secure,
Live forever on Eden's bright shore.—Cho.

All their conflicts and trials are o'er;
Now their earth-life is past, they are gathered at last
To rest on that beautiful shore.—Cho.

THE MILLENNIUM AND THE ADVENT.

A. F. MOORE, M. D.

(Concluded.)

Having disposed of the eleventh of Isaiah, the popular quotation from the second Psalm is discussed, and the absurdity shown of isolating the eighth verse from all connection with what follows, for he will not only have the heathen for an inheritance, but dash them in pieces as a potter's vessel, and break them with a rod of iron. Says our author:—

"The jealous rulers of the unsubdued nations become enraged (See Rev. 11: 18). What becomes of them? Do they submit to Christ, yield to his gospel, become his friends, and finally obtain salvation? Or do they continue in hatred and rebellion until the time of mercy expires, and then perish under his judicial wrath? The question has manifest pertinency as an exhibition of the method by which the result is brought about which we all agree to call the millennial state. What is the testimony of the Holy Ghost by the mouth of David in this Psalm? It exhibits the period of the wrath of the Lamb. (Verse 12; compare Rev. 6: 16.) The wicked rulers of the earth are exhorted to 'kiss the Son, lest he be angry and ye perish from the way when his wrath is kindled but a little.'" Then follows "moralizing" on the universal perversion of this Psalm, and a more full explanation of its meaning, which is familiar to most readers of the Crisis. To quote further on, we have the expression of sentiments so dear to every one who is intelligently waiting for the fulfillment of the promise to Abraham of a possession in the land. "The true parallel of the second Psalm is Rev. 2: 25: 27—'But that which ye have already, hold fast TILL I COME. And he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessel of a potter shall they be broken to shivers, even as I received of my Father.'

"Now it is the teaching of the Word of God that the saints are to 'reign with Christ'; that 'the saints shall judge the world'; that when the Lord shall return from 'his journey into a far country, to receive for himself a kingdom and to return,' charging the servants whom he leaves behind—'Occupy till I come' (Luke 19: 12–27), it is the Scripture doctrine that the faithful servants will, at their Lord's return, 'having received the kingdom,' 'enter into the joy of their Lord,' which is more definitely explained, 'have thou authority over . . cities. . . . when the Son of man shall sit in his glory' (Ps. 2: 6), when the twelve apostles 'shall sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel.' Can anything be plainer than this?"

How dear to our hearts is this literal, tangible idea of the happy hereafter. The Bible does not talk of "ghosts," immaterial shadows of beings, living in a shadowy land, which we instinctively feel must be a cold, cheerless place, but God will "change our vile bodies, and fashion them like unto Christ's glorious body," and we shall enter into the real and solid "joy of our Lord," and assist him in his government.

After closing up his argument from these passages of Scripture, the author speaks of the "unmistakable revelation" that the advent will take the world by surprise, and thinks if the world had been preparing for and expecting it for a thousand years, they would hardly be surprised when it came; hence it must come before the millennium. The very misconception with regard to the matter, he argues, "explains completely the predicted fact as to the unexpectedness of the event."

After considering slightly the nature of the "good time coming," and "the restitution of all things," etc., the great prophecy of his coming and the end of the world (not kosmos, but aion) is reviewed (Matt. 24, and parallels). Nothing is here found, according to our author, of the virtue and blessedness of the millennium. The masters are carousing and saying, "My Lord delayeth his coming." The days of persecution, distress and tribulation continue unto the last. The day of the Lord, or the coming of the Son of man, overtakes the unbelieving, unwatchful, unprepared generation by surprise. "There is not in all this broad prophecy that covers the whole dispensation down to the end of the aion (as long as the gospel commission continues—Matt. 28: 20) the slightest intimation of such a state of the world, or of the church, as the millennial prophecies give us reason to expect. Wickedness and the wicked continue unto the end, and the Lord suddenly comes to reward and to punish. We have found the second advent on the farther coast; but there is no island of paradise on this side of it."

Taking up the millennial indications beyond the advent, the signs of the coming kingdom are spoken of, such as Christ gives in Luke 21, etc.; and the question is asked, "Is not this the kingdom Daniel spoke of? and is it not the fulfillment of the petition which the Lord has put into the heart and mouth of the church, 'Thy kingdom come [Eltheto, from erkomai, to COME, never to extend or increase]; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven'?"

The parable of the tares is mentioned and well applied. "How forcibly," says he, "this and other similar parables of our Lord remind us of the eschatology of the prophecies of Daniel!" And the eleventh and twelfth chapters are dwelt upon in a manner truly refreshing, as coming from a member of a body of christians not given to quoting Daniel in this connection. The remarks upon the parable of the ten pounds, and the nobleman going into a far country to receive a kingdom, are exceedingly apt. It is discovered that he did not expect to find the kingdom in the far country, but as Herod went to Rome to obtain the kingdom of Judea, and came back to Judea to reign over it, so Christ has gone to heaven, not to find the kingdom there, but to get his appointment, so to term it, and by and by he will return and reign in his kingdom.

"It was in reference to this very coming," he observes, "or return of the absent Master, that the evil servant said in his heart, 'My Lord delayeth his coming.'" It is also observed that it is not until this return that those who are faithful and watchful "'enter into the joy of their Lord,' and are called to share the government with him (Luke 19: 17)." The author now takes occasion to say, "It will be understood, of course, that this discussion has but a single point in view; the relative order of the associated events. It is not an argument to establish the fact of either; both are assumed.

"With anti-Adventists, if there be such readers of the Methodist Quarterly Review, and with anti-millennarians, if there be such, we have nothing to say. To those who perceive and recognize, as revelations of the sacred Word, both the advent and millennium as more or less related events, our argument is addressed." We desire to thank the author of the article for the manner in which the two sentences are expressed.

It is noticed that the thrilling interest with which the primitive christians regarded these two events has notably abated in our day, and the consideration is offered, whether this very evident fact does not give "the true rationale of the oft predicted representation of the ultimate unbelief and unpreparedness of the world and of the church, even, for the advent when it shall occur." Application of the parable of the ten virgins is made to time just previous to the advent; the theory of applying the coming referred to by Christ at this time to the destruction of Jerusalem is noticed and considered "exploded and mostly abandoned." The objection that the unpreparedness of the world for the event is as adverse to pre-millennial theory as to post-millennarian, on account of the blessedness expected to follow in the thousand years, is considered; and perhaps the writer is a little in the fog by holding to the idea that the lion and the lamb will lie down together during the thousand years spoken of in Rev. 20, which is the only place in the Bible from which the word millennium may be coined as referring strictly to a future age.

During this time, to be sure, the saints will live and reign a thousand years, and Satan shall be bound, but we have no intimation that every creature in the universe is praising God, as represented in chap. 5: 13,—after the "Lamb slain" has opened the book, and judgment has been held; but on the other hand, the general judgment comes after the millennium, and it is then that the second death is visited upon the wicked.

In the second Psalm, before referred to, Christ is spoken of as having the heathen for an inheritance, and breaking them with a rod of iron, dashing them in pieces as a potter's vessel. In the second of Revelation, 26–28, Christ is represented as having this inheritance, and distributing it among his saints, saying—"He that overcometh . . . to him will I give power over the nations; and he [that overcometh, to whom is given this power] shall rule them with a rod of iron; as the vessel of a potter shall they be broken to shivers; even as I [Christ] have received of my Father."

Will the saints have this power and authority before Christ comes? Verily not. Will they be able to rule over the wicked nations, after such nations have suffered the second death? Is not the idea preposterous? When, then, can this ruling of the heathen be, except just when John describes the saints as ruling and reigning during the thousand years of the millennium? It is not mentioned even that probation extends that time, but after the advent of Christ. There is the ruling with the iron rod, and breaking, and after the devil is released, he gathers all the wicked in rebellion, and they all ultimately perish in the second death.

Neither is it intimated that the blessed time spoken of in the eleventh of Isaiah is to be seen during the millennium, when all the animals shall dwell together in harmony, and "the lion shall eat straw like the ox," and it is to be feared if the lamb laid down with him during this time he would "get up inside of him." John saw thrones, and those that sat upon them were commissioned to judge the blessed and holy saints, and they live and reign"; and "there remaineth a rest for the people of God," when they shall "enter into the joy of their Lord," and be rulers over cities. Matt. 25: 21; Luke 19: 17. After the six thousand years of toil, there comes the seventh-thousand of Sabbath, or rest. The worldly people will spend it as they do the typical one—in worldliness, and when it is ended they will be judged, the earth and heavens renewed, and then!—the new Jerusalem and the perfect kingdom of Christ, when everything is made new, will come. Then will "nothing hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain; for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea," and "the lion shall eat straw as the ox"; "the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together"; "the wolf and the lamb shall feed together." Isa. 11, and 65: 25.

From the first advent to the present time, people have been trying to hurry up the prophecies and crowd them all in at once, and so now there is a disposition to put everything which is to take place after the thousand years are finished into the millennium, when there is not the least warrant in Scripture for it.

The Jews expected all the momentous events connected with the regeneration and perfection of the home of the saints to be accomplished in their day, when Christ first came, and rejected him because they were disappointed; and we are confused because we cannot put it all in the thousand years. We cannot examine the ground we pass over too closely in deciding upon these matters, and it behooves us to take no preconceived opinion for granted.

But to return to the article under consideration. The coming, or parousia, is next discussed and defined to be, in the just twenty-four times it is used, "a personal coming, in every place, without a single exception." The "falling away" which must first come is noticed, and it is observed that Christ must come before the millennium, or the Wicked One with lying wonders will continue to act through the millennium, "which would make no such time as we are led to expect from the prophecies, types, and symbols."

And here he evidently mixes things a little, expecting a blessedness in the millennium which is to come after it; yet it is said Satan will not deceive the world during that time. The anti-Christ of St. John and the Harlot of Babylon are noticed as presenting bases for the same line of argument, and for the same reason one of little value in this connection. The many passages counseling us to draw comfort from expected deliverance at Christ's coming, are adduced as evidence that the coming is before the millennium. So also it is considered, if a millennium is to elapse before the coming, there is no propriety in teaching men to watch for the advent, for there would be no propriety in their looking for it till the millennium be past. And indeed we know this belief in post-millennarian theory is the grand obstacle to the spread of the good news that "the redemption draweth nigh." Yet in the only place where the millennium is named as a thousand years, it is distinctly stated that the righteous are raised at the beginning of it, and we know they are raised at the coming of Christ. 1 Cor. 15: 23.

Calling the coming of the Lord death, is, with other things of the same sort, characterized as "a glaring inconsistency"; and it is further remarked that some of the latest and best expositions of the Bible are distinctly pre-millennial in sentiment.

To Origen is ascribed the blame of bringing into disrepute the primitive doctrine of the coming of Christ and the millennium; and these remarkable words are used, which all would do well to ponder, seeing they reveal the source of most of the corruption which has crept into the christian belief: "Not learning," says our author, "but imagination, not common sense but Platonic speculation, robbed the church of her primitive simplicity, and her original pre-millennarian faith." Truer words were never spoken.

To Origen is generally ascribed the doctrine of final restoration, which has resulted in the flood of Universalism in our day. He, being a Greek philosopher, brought his preconceived ideas and methods of thinking into the Christian church, perverting the plain word of God.

Next follows an encomium on the eminent Bishop Butler as endorser of the true faith on this subject, and quotations from his writings in support of the doctrine are given.

The article closes with an extract from the writings of Dr. Alford, the Dean of Canterbury,—and few Methodists of the present time, methinks, are given to endorsing such sentiments as are found in the extract. It is commonly preached that we must prepare for death, but Dean Alford says of this question: "First. The view of things proposed by the inquirer is not that taken by the Holy Scripture, which is the rule and pattern of our teaching. There we do not read anything of preparation for death. I doubt whether one text can be found in which we are exhorted to make such preparation as such. But the constant note, the continually occurring exhortation, is to be prepared for the Lord's coming. So that if we would teach as God's Word teaches, as our blessed Lord and his apostles taught, we cannot do as the inquirers would have us." The second answer considers that if one is prepared to meet the coming of the Lord, he is prepared to die. And these two answers are written to the question, "Will not the Lord's coming, to most of us, in all probability be the day of one's own death?" And nobly is it answered.

Thank God, there are yet the figurative seven thousand who have not bowed the knee to men's tradition. Yet it is surprising to a superficial observer how little the great lights in the church have endorsed these commonly received opinions with regard to death and the end of the world. For the opinion of Christ and his apostles on the traditions of men in matters of religion see Matt. 15: 1–6; Col. 2: 8, 22.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE GREAT PROPHETIC SYMBOLS OF DANIEL AND JOHN.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

These great prophetic symbols should be studied by the servants of God with increased interest and attention at the present time, when develqpments affecting the destiny of the nations are in such rapid progress, and the chronological periods of prophecy are on the eve of their termination. Their study and development on a sound basis will manifest light, and produce conviction in every honest heart, undermining infidelity, resulting in the conversion of infidels to Christ, and a settled belief in the divine origin of the Holy Scriptures; also comforting, strengthening, and establishing the faith of many a wavering child of God.

If the last generation of the present age is now on the stage of action, the duties and responsibilities of the church of Christ is without a parallel in the annals of the past; and the great prophetic light shadowed forth by these symbols are of the highest practical importance, and cannot be too deeply considered; for they assume a more direct claim upon our attention, and are of more vital importance as we enter the great conflict of ages—the battle of that great day of God Almighty.

Coming events are rapidly casting their shadows before them, all speaking in thunder tones of convulsions, and the death throes of the nations about to enter the final conflict, which is to result in their eternal discomfiture, when Christ shall appear to claim and receive the sovereignty of the world promised to him in Psalms 2: 8.

If we, as Adventists, believe that we are called to proclaim the great prophetic message, drawn from the symbolical and chronological prophecies, that the "hour" or season of "his judgment is come," let us unswervingly continue in the work, influenced neither by flattery or frowns, remembering the words of Christ—"He that is of God heareth God's words"; also, "Blessed is he that readeth, and they that hear the words of this prophecy; for the time is at hand."

Tha dream of Nebuchadnezzar is declared to be "certain, and the interpretation thereof sure." The great image disclosed in the second of Daniel stands forth with due prominence as a great light-house to the church of Christ, indicating the course and progress of human history to the end of probation to man and nations. It is now clearly seen that the greater part of this history is in the past, and that a few more rolling suns must complete the work, and usher in the kingdom of the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, that is to demolish—"grind to powder"—all that belong to the image; and then Christ will take the dominion, and reign king over all the earth, in person, and fill all the earth with his glory, or visible brightness that will bathe the immortal company of his saints—the joint-heirs with him in the inheritance.

As God troubled Nebuchadnezzar—the heathen monarch of Babylon—with a dream, setting forth the history of our world from his day to the end of human governments, and the establishment of the kingdom of Christ; and impressed its importance upon his waking thoughts to that extent that he called together all the wise men of his kingdom to unravel the mystery, and threatened them with swift destruction in case of a failure, and was on the point of executing his threat, when a Daniel was found with a degree of faith in God sufficient to meet the emergency, and satisfy the monarch that the God of heaven has his own chosen servants through whom he would make known his purposes, and disclose in their order the history of nations. So will he trouble this generation through his own chosen instrumentalities, with the evidence of the speedy accomplishment of his word, in the ushering in of the kingdom of the stone that is to fall upon and grind to powder the kingdoms of the present world, that are to be blown away like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor.

While this prophetic description is most majestic, touching the aspiration of nations, yet it is so simple in its application to human history, that the child of ordinary capacity may grasp its meaning and be interested and benefited in its study.

This image is said to be "a great image," "whose brightness was excellent, and the form thereof terrible"; thus it must have been of great dimensions, like the tree in chap. 4, "whose height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth."

An image of such dimensions, with a head of gold in proportion, dazzling in splendor, with breast and arms of silver, deteriorating, yet magnificent in appearance, with belly and sides of brass, and legs of iron, with feet part of iron and part of potter's clay, comprises this significant structure, yet all demolished with one stroke of the "stone." Thus human greatness is to be obliterated, and give place for a divine government to be established in the earth, filled with God's glory, or visible brightness seven-fold that of the sun and moon.

According to stubborn facts, which commend themselves to all candid students of the prophetic Word, we now stand on the eve of the world's history shadowed forth by the ten toes of this great image, the last of its component parts, or Rome divided, as it has been for fourteen hundred years; and now the ten kingdoms, shadowed forth by the ten toes, doing the very work predicted that is to complete the history of Rome, and she go down like a great mill-stone cast into the sea to rise no more forever.

No candid person can deny that the empire of Babylon has existed, as shadowed forth by the head of gold of the "great image," in human splendor and pomp, without a rival in previous or subsequent history; yet notwithstanding its gigantic dimensions and splendor, its doom was written beforehand near two hundred years by the prophet Isaiah, in these words: "And Babylon, the glory of kingdoms, the beauty of the Chaldees' excellency, shall be as when God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah." It was foretold that God would stir up the Medes and Persians against it (see Isa. 21: 2)—"Go up, O Elam [that is Persia], besiege, O Media"; (Jer. 51: 11)—"The Lord has raised up the spirit of the kings of the Medes, for his device is against Babylon to destroy it."

The taking of Babylon was one of the greatest events in ancient history. The Almighty God not only revealed the fact of the taking of Babylon, and the instrumentalities employed, but he gave the exact period of time, which was at the END of the seventy years' service (see Jer. 25). This service commenced in the eighth year of Jehoiakim's reign. (See 2 Kings 24: 1, compared with Josephus, Ant., B. 10, c. 6, s. 1.) The wrath of God was kindled against Babylon because of her insupportable pride, and sorceries, and cruelty in oppressing the captive Jews. (See Isa. 77.)

It was foretold that various nations would unite against Babylon (Isa. 13: 4)—"The noise of a multitude in the mountains, like as of a great people; a tumultuous noise of the kingdoms of nations gathered together; the Lord of hosts mustereth the host of the battle." Particular kingdoms are mentioned. Jer. 51: 27—"Set ye up a standard in the land; blow the trumpet among the nations; prepare the nations against her; call together against her the kingdoms of Ararat, Minni, and Ashchenaz." These nations were united with the army of Cyrus in taking Babylon, according to history. (Xen. Cyr. 1, 5, c. 3, etc.) The name of Cyrus was given more than a century before his birth, as God's special agent in the conquest of Babylon. Isa. 45: 1–5—"Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have strengthened to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two-leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut. I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight; I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron. And I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I the Lord, which call thee by thy name, am the God of Israel. For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name; I have surnamed thee, though thou hast not known me. I am the Lord [or Yahveh], and besides me there is none else; there is no God beside me." Other facts were foretold, such as the terror of the Babylonians (Jer. 51: 30)—"The mighty men of Babylon have forborne to fight, they have remained in their strong holds; their might hath failed; they became as women." Also that the river should be dried up, and the city taken by surprise, and during the time of a feast.

These prophetic announcements have all been corroborated by such historians as Herodotus and Xenophon, who have related the facts after they became history. How significant, then, is this symbolic head of gold, representing the mighty kingdom of Babylon, begun in Nimrod, the great grand-son of Noah (Gen. 10: 10). He also went out into Assyria, and builded Nineveh (v. 11), the metropolis of the Assyrian empire; for a long time the oppressor of Israel; that carried the ten tribes into captivity; as also did the king of Babylon the remaining two tribes of Judah, as says the prophet—"Israel is a scattered sheep; the lions have driven him away; first the king of Assyria hath devoured him; and last, this Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon has broken his bones. Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Behold, I will punish the king of Babylon and his land as I have punished the king of Assyria."

After the fall of Babylon the kingdom of Persia succeeded, symbolized by the "breast and arms of silver" of the "great image," and continued about 160 years, when it was overthrown by Alexander the "Great," B. C. 330, and then is introduced upon the stage the kingdom of Grecia, symbolized by the brazen part of the "great image." This kingdom continues 300 years, and then was overturned by the Roman power symbolized by the legs and feet of the "great image," B. C. 30, from which period Rome has continued to the present time through various changes, but must soon be overwhelmed in sudden destruction by the coming of Christ, whose coming is now almost due, according to prophetic chronology, and the consecutive order of events.

While we respect the great facts of history in the order of events, from the days of Babylon to the present time, we must be impressed with the significance of the symbols God has employed, by which to set them forth. The symbols employed are of a diversified character. In the seventh chapter of Daniel, instead of the great "image," we have "four great beasts" to shadow forth the same four great kingdoms as previously in the 2nd chapter. The object of this diversity seems to be twofold: (1) to impress the church with the importance of prophetic utterances, and (2) to unfold some new features not previously given; and thus render "the path of the just . . as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day."

In this seventh chapter, the kingdom of Babylon is represented by a "lion," with eagles' wings. As the lion may be regarded as the king of beasts, and the eagle king of birds, so was the Assyrian or Babylonian kingdom the greatest and most powerful and majestic of any Gentile kingdom that ever existed on the earth. The eagles' wings fitly represent the lofty aspirations of the Babylonians; as the eagle soars high, so this people, in their early history, erected the tower of Babel, whose height reached unto heaven; but in after time they built the great city Babylon, sixty miles in circumference, and walls three hundred and fifty feet in height." Says the prophet—"Thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion unto the end of the earth."

Dr. Gill says the wings denote "the celerity and swiftness with which Nebuchadnezzar ran, or rather flew, over several kingdoms and countries, and added them to his empire"; and the plucking off of the wings denotes that Nebuchadnezzar was retarded and stopped in his conquests, he also was humbled in his pride; and the nation, in seeing their king "driven from among men," and his habitation "with the beasts of the field," till he acknowledged that "the Most High ruled among men, and gave the kingdom to whom he would."

PROPHECY.

A sermon on Prophecy was lately preached in Christ church, Belfast, Ireland, by the Rev. Wm. Stewart Ross, the incumbent, to a crowded congregation. The subject was Ezekiel 28.

He said that the words which he had read were clearly prophetic, and had long run among the nations of the earth as an alarm of war. The awful events here predicted will be the culmination of that time of trouble foreshadowed in the 12th chapter of Daniel, "Such as had not been from the beginning," and upon which Christ put his own broad imprimater in the 24th chapter of Matthew, where the disciples were told that a time of tribulation should come, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, nor ever should be. Some persons seek to spiritualize these passages of inspired truth, and others say that the events foretold by the prophets have long since become historical, and are, therefore, not prophetic; but these passages are clearly prophetic, as nothing has ever occurred either before or since they were given forth which in any way resembles what is recorded here.

So far from a moral improvement taking place in the world, disintegrating and deteriorating forces are increasingly prevalent both in communities and in nations. Although civilization and science and art have most certainly ameliorated and ennobled the condition of mankind, and thrown immortal lustre upon the human race, we cannot shut our eyes to the fact that civilization too often has led, and will lead, to selfishness, science to atheism, and art to pride. Selfishness, atheism, and pride. Here we have a fatal triad! So far from civilization leading to peace, war must ultimately spread her blood-stained wing over the nations. The terror of the time of blood will again cover the earth, only that more fearful will be the portents, and more awful and fatal will be the vengeance of heaven than ever before.

The portents spoken of in Scripture certainly have not yet taken place. From the light which modern erudition has cast upon the passages referred to, we arrive at the conclusion that the present dispensation must soon end, and the thunderbolts of divine wrath be hurled upon a ruined and apostate world. The whole of prophetic Scripture points to the one grand universal empire which shall then overspread the earth, and whose characteristics shall be love and righteousness and peace. But this happy end must be preceded by the troublous times of which Daniel speaks. The combination of nations referred to in the 38th chapter of Ezekiel, as interpreted by Lowth, Gesenius, Chamberlain, and others, shows that Rosh, the "northern nation," is probably the Russian Empire of the present time, and the period predicted is that of the restoration of the Israelites to the promised land.

The political situation of Europe, the union that is being formed between the three great Northern Powers—Russia, Austria, and Germany—and the condition of Turkey, indicates the nearness of these events. We are evidently approaching the solution of the long-pending Eastern problem by the dismemberment and partition of Turkey. Turkey at present is sick unto death. It is only a question of time, and God only knows how short the time may be when the Russian eagle, which has so long hovered over the sick and dying man, will swoop down on his dominions. The Treaty of Paris, purchased by British and French blood and treasure wasted on Crimean plains, only secured the peace of Europe for a very short time. It has been ruthlessly torn in pieces by the Czar; the double-headed eagle now proudly floats over the dark waters of the Euxine with rapacious gaze. Russia has designs upon Palestine and upon Jerusalem, and the highway to this great prize is, of course, through the fertile provinces of the Turk, and Constantinople is the gate to Jerusalem. The predicted confederation of European powers will soon be marshalled.

Mr. Ross concluded by an eloquent appeal to his hearers to embrace the present opportunity of coming to Christ.—Chris. Herald.

A PRAYER.

J. FINN.

We cannot ask to be taken away from the earth, but we can ask and implore Thee, O gracious Father, to keep us from the evils of this wicked world, and to guard us from its delusive snares. O give us light in thy light, and let the influences of thy Spirit and thy Word be our guide and comfort, as we make our pilgrimage through this vale of tears, contending with foes without and foes within. We find our pathway beset with snares, false lights, and glittering toys, to turn our feet astray. O thou, in whom is everlasting strength, lend us a helping hand. We know thou art willing; encourage us to trust in thee. We feel our weakness. We know we are but dust; therefore we look to One that is mighty to save. O, turn us not away.

READY.

"Therefore be ye also ready."

Whose commandment is this? Christ's, the Judge of quick and dead. To whom is it given? To his church. What is it to be ready? To be prepared, fitted, qualified, put in a condition to meet certain circumstances, fill certain positions, do a certain work, stand a certain test, meet certain demands of law, justice and truth. Readiness implies two parts; one fitted for or to harmonize with the other.

A timber, made ready, is fitted for something outside of itself. To fill some place, to support some weight, to be associated with some other timbers, or things, for the accomplishment of some specific purpose. It is ready when it is so prepared as to harmonize with every thing which must come in contact with it, so that it shall not prevent, but serve to accomplish the object for which it is used. Just so it is with all things or beings. God, the Creator of all, made every thing ready, fitted, qualified to fill its place, do its work, and so harmonize with all other parts and beings in the great compact, so that the specific object for which each was created might be accomplished; thus reaching the acme of creative design, infinite and universal perfection in all.

But alas for our world! the clay has been terribly marred, so that not a perfect vessel can be found. Every thing is so deranged that the earthly frame will not come together. The post is not fitted to the beam, nor the beam to the rafter; therefore the harmonies are all lost; there is friction and grinding destruction produced by every motion and change in the elements, and war unto the death among all its creatures. All things earthly need a thorough and radical change to make them ready to accomplish the Divine purpose, to fill the place appointed by the Creator, and exactly harmonize with every thing designed to be associated with them. Stupendous work! Mighty revolution! A glorious reconstruction! Order brought out of anarchy; peace out of war; life out of death; a sin-cursed earth changed to a heavenly paradise; a vile, warring race to peerage with angels, and eternal loyalty to Jehovah! Who is able to accomplish such a matchless and God-like work? Who can make ready a world in every part and being so as to accomplish one of the most infinitely glorious and grandly sublime objects ever conceived in the Infinite mind? Staggering, puny humanity inquires who can do this? The responsive echo rolls down from the throne above—the "Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

The momentous question growing out of this subject is, What preparation and qualifications do we need to make us ready to enjoy the grand unification, glorification, and eternal blessedness of a God-restored world? When can that preparation be made, and what means and instrumentalities are necessary for its accomplishment? It must be made during this mortal life, before death; for after death comes the judgment, which makes the final decision as to the requisite qualifications for the perfect state.

The instrumentalities and means are of heavenly origin and divine appointment; for nothing can raise an object above its own capacities, to a gradation of existence above itself. If a world and beings are to be raised to a certain grade of perfection, no instrumentality, occupying a lower grade, can produce that exaltation.

A mechanic cannot produce a machine more perfect than his mechanical skill. So if man is to be exalted to a higher grade of being, to a more perfect condition than he now is in, he cannot do it himself, but must be dependent upon some agency as high and perfect as he is to be raised.

A being cannot give to another what it does not itself possess. If moral excellence is to be received, it must come from one possessing it. If intelligence is to be gained, it must be communicated from one who has it, and can and will teach it. If a deathless existence is to be obtained, it must be sought for in one who can eternally support or communicate the principle of life; and therefore must himself be possessed of immortality.

If we would be put in possession of wealth, we must seek it of him who is rich, and will bestow those riches upon them who seek it.

If we would be made equal to the angels, we must seek that exaltation from Him who made them what they are. If we would obtain citizenship in the kingdom of heaven, we must apply to Him who has the royal prerogative to select and accept those who voluntarily choose him as their King, and his laws as their rule of life forever.

Anything prepared for heavenly associations and use must be prepared by heavenly skill and power. A being, to be prepared for divine society, must be fitted by divine wisdom and agencies. That which is earthly and human can only prepare us for that which is earthly and human. A stream cannot rise above its fountain. "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? Not one."

The harmonious perfection of a world is produced by the unification of all its parts and beings, as to purposes, actions, and results.

This harmony commences in intelligence, and ends in the results of the execution of the purposes made by that intelligence. If one mind absolutely governs an empire, and that mind is undivided, as to principles and designs in governing, then there can be no discord or war among all the subjects in their acts of obedience to that ruler. Absolute harmony among the subjects of a government can never exist until each subject perfectly harmonizes with that government; which must produce universal peace as far as the political relations extend. So it is under the divine government.

The human family has become a rebellious class against God's government, which has produced unreconciliation and war between them. This rebellion or sin not only produced sad results in the intellectual and moral department, but it threw the whole physical world into destructive antagonism by bringing the curse upon all--animate and inanimate. Sin has afflicted man in both departments, moral and physical;—in his heart and flesh. To make man ready for the perfect world where God will be, surrounded with infinite moral and physical perfection, he must be raised to the same grade or quality of nature, so as to mingle and harmonize with all things and beings, in movements and positions. Such a readiness must be produced in the heart and organism. Both must be raised to the status of that world which is vastly higher than that belonging to any part or class of this world.

God himself has raised the standard, and given the pattern by which all must be tried and approved who will be accepted as citizens of that world. He has expressed in his Word, in the most explicit terms the changes required, the condition of heart, the kind of spirit to be possessed, the nature to control, and the fruits produced by these in a christian experience, which becomes the evidence of a readiness for that state.

The standard is altogether too high for any human effort to reach it. It demands a change of heart, so far above anything that natural law or human power can produce, that it is a direct and glorious miracle. God alone can produce it. God's standard of readiness for the kingdom of heaven requires holiness of condition, sanctification of acts, consecration of life and possessions, purity of purpose and affection, divinity of spirit and sacredness of devotion.

When we look at this standard of character from the stand-point of fallen humanity, with all its depravity and inability, our hope of reaching its marvelous height sinks, and we instinctively exclaim, "Who then can be saved?" But when we view it from the gospel stand-point, and learn that God himself, by his own instrumentalities and power, does this work for us, we occupying a passive position, consenting to have him elevate us, yielding to be operated upon, so that the state is not reached through any wisdom, power, or virtue in us, but through the wisdom, power, and virtue in Jesus Christ; then hope rises as our confidence increases in Jesus.

God has vouchsafed to do this preparatory work for every one who shall voluntarily submit to have it done by the means and in the way he shall choose. Therefore, when we are not holy and sanctified worshipers, we may know that we have not yielded to Christ, to be prepared by him for present duties and future glories.

Let us remember that we are not holy or pure in heart because we are learned, rich, or morally virtuous, or because of any worldly refinement or standing in society, or that it is produced by any good deeds we have done; but because we believed that it was important that we enjoy it, and that Christ was able and willing to produce it in us, and therefore we trusted him for the blessing and received it.

God is impartial, and will produce this glorious readiness in all who apply for it, so that all may be made ready,—the poor and the rich, the learned and the unlearned, the king and the peasant; all who come in season before the door is closed.

Christian experience, from conviction to glorification, is a series of miraculous manifestations produced by superhuman, heavenly power. We are converted by it, sustained by it, and glorified through it. He who does not trust God to change his heart by divine power, remains a sinner. He who does not trust God to lead and support him every day, falls into the snare of the devil.

Let us remember that if God saves us, he saves us completely; for all his work is perfect. He cannot imperfectly save any more than he could imperfectly create. One imperfect act of Jehovah would constitute him an imperfect being. Let none imagine therefore that they are enjoying the salvation of God while they are unholy and in their sins. A sinner with the stain of sin upon him is not ready for the approaching judgment. He must be condemned by the great Judge.

O reader, be careful and see that you use the gospel standard in proving your readiness for the kingdom of God. A mistake at this point will be infinitely disastrous to you.

CHELSEA.

Our meetings in Chelsea have been increasing in interest for several weeks. This has been manifested in deeper-toned expressions of faith and hope, more earnest longings for the salvation of those out of Christ, more spirituality and heartiness in worship, a seeking to find work to do in the Master's vineyard, and more unity with the saints in spirit and effort.

We have held special meetings, evenings, for the last three weeks, with good results. Sinners have been hopefully converted, and a goodly number of backsliders reclaimed, and still (March 4th) the work is progressing. Bro. Munger has been with us several evenings, and rendered efficient aid. The work has been characterized by deep conviction and strong resolutions, without undue excitement. The church is well equipped to take an advanced position. The exhortations and prayers have, many of them, been gloriously shortened, and therefore greatly strengthened. Quick and decided movements defeat the enemies of the State and Church, while slow and tedious movements always result in inglorious defeat. Our rear rank has been greatly depleted, while the front rank has been increased, and gloriously consolidated. May the great Martial of the heavenly hosts lead us to future and eternal triumph.

IS CATHOLICISM INTOLERANT?

The Catholic press and priests of this country generally teach that all they want as a class of citizens is equal rights and privileges in all civil and ecclesiastical matters. This we believe is not true, and we also believe that these Editors and priests know that it is not true. The Roman Church has been an intolerant body from the commencement of its history to the present date, and has never failed to exercise its bloody intolerance against all dissenters when it has possessed the military power to do so. We are astonished to see how English and American Protestants are being duped with the beguiling sophistry and satanic duplicity of Jesuitical priests, while they are forging chains to enslave them and faggots to burn them.

The spirit of that church and its present designs may be seen in its demands upon Spain, the only government over which it now exercises political control. A correspondent, writing from Madrid, Feb. 22nd, says: "The Archbishop of Toledo and other prelates have petitioned the Cortes to grant Catholic unity and prohibit any other worship in Spain."

We have no doubt but the prelates of this country would petition Congress to-morrow for the enactment of a law, closing every Protestant church in these States if they thought there was a probability of its passage. That church designs to be a unity, governed by the same policy every where; therefore what they would do in Spain they would do every where if they could.

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY.

"The Theosophical Society" is the name of an association in New York, formed to investigate the secrets of "the divine government." This they expect to accomplish through the power of demons, or spirits exercising their influence upon the human family, and upon the earth and air; or as expressed by another, "a spiritual world devoid of all moral nature, which environs and influences the material world in which we live. It is, in short, a revival of the ancient study of Magic." Col. Olcott is the President of the Society, and is convinced that the work of the magicians was based on truth. This Society is not composed of Spiritualists, strictly speaking; but of those who accept the phenomena as real, but think there is a class of "elementary spirits," who have the control of things mundane. In short, they are the gods of the ancient magicians. The true God of the Bible seems to have no place in the system of "The Theosophical Society." It is a return to the old heathen oracles. This is just what we have been expecting for years as the result of Spiritualism.

If time should last a few centuries more, we might expect to see Brahmanism and Boodhism re-established under new names. Satan is busily laying his plans to seduce the human family away from the pure religion of the Bible. Let us not forget that "the Spirit speaketh expressly that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, and doctrines of devils." 1 Tim. 4 : 1.

YOUNG PILGRIM BIBLE LESSONS.

We are pleased to announce that the Bible Lessons, which have, since November last, been published in the Young Pilgrim, have given satisfaction so far as we have heard from those using them. Thus far the lessons have been devoted to particular subjects, forming a basis or ground-work of Bible knowledge; but with the April Nos. a change will be made, and the Scriptures used as the basis of the International Series will be adopted by the Pilgrim.

The lessons for the second quarter of the year, commencing with April, will be in the Acts of the Apostles, and our friends will have an opportunity of calling the attention ofothers to some of the truths found therein which are overlooked or omitted by most publishers of Sunday-school lessons.

If any of our Sunday-schools have not yet adopted these lessons, April will be a good time for them to begin. Besides the lessons, the paper contains reading matter of an interesting and profitable character,—illustrations, and other features which make it a very attractive paper for the children. Being the only Sunday-school paper published by the body, it deserves and ought to receive the liberal patronage of all lovers of, and believers in, the glorious truths relating to the Advent of our Lord.

DESPERATE.

The present state of Turkey is said to be "desperate," and continually growing worse, with no prospect of ever being any better. The Mohammedan system has been a deadly enemy to Christianity. The Turks have "trodden down" Jerusalem for centuries; and, no doubt, will continue to do so till the time of the coming of Christ, who said, "Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled." Luke 21 : 24.

In order that we may know when the Gentile times are about to close, Jesus gave some "signs," to be seen "in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars." And following these, "upon the earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring; men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth." Luke 21 : 25, 26. When these things come to pass, "then shall they see the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and great glory. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." Luke 21 : 27, 28.

The evidence now before us arising from the signs of the times, and the fulfillment of prophecy, warrants us to rejoice, because our "redemption draweth nigh." The Savior goes on to say that when "the fig tree, and all the trees" "shoot forth, ye see and know of your own selves that summer is now nigh at hand. So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Then it follows that "the kingdom of God" cannot come till after these signs have been seen; as they will indicate when it is near.

As there is good reason to believe that the Turkish power, which has "trodden down" Jerusalem for several centuries, can do it but little longer; and as all the other signs which are to be seen in the last generation, have now transpired, or are just at hand; we believe we are warranted in expecting the speedy coming of our Savior.

This is a period of thrilling interest to the student of prophecy. It is a time when all who wish to be saved should examine themselves carefully by the light of the sacred Scriptures. No one should live a moment without being ready to meet our coming King. Eternal interests are involved. Whoever will consecrate all to Christ can be ready to meet him in peace at his coming.

BRIDGEPORT.—The meetings being held in the Universalist church, in Bridgeport, are daily increasing in interest. The house is well filled with very attentive and intelligent audiences. Many members of the different denominations are present every evening, and are receiving the truth joyfully. Among these are several prominent citizens. They are eager to hear the evidences which show that Jesus is soon coming. There is a general impression that we are living in the last days; hence the people are ready to look at the prophetic light on this subject, which is now shining very brightly. No one manifests any opposition, but seems eager to hear more. The unconverted are seeking Christ, and professors are being much quickened.

We have never before seen such a healthy interest in the Bridgeport meetings as at the present time. We think there has been no period in the past twenty-five years when the people looked upon the reasons of our hope so favorably as to-day. We are looking for still richer fruits.

MRS. WHITE'S VISIONS.—A correspondent wishes to know if there is evidence that Mrs. Ellen G. White's prophecies and visions have ever been false? Yes, positively untrue. Of this there is certain and abundant evidence.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. The times are ominous of coming events, and admonish us to diligence in the Master's work. The Lord is at the door, and what we do must be done quickly. Let the contributions be prompt, hearty, and liberal. The Lord will reward the liberal giver.

AG'T.

MY SOUTHWEST TRIP.---No. 4.

P. S. W. DEYO.

Oct. 11th, I began to prepare for winter, which kept me at home some time. I preached near Charles City, east of town, while at home, on Lord's day as often as every other Sabbath; sometimes oftener. Truth there is on the gain, but finds some strong opposition.

Dec. 10th, I was sent for to attend the Quarterly Meeting at New Hartford. I took the cars in the night, and on arriving found brethren Kenney, Ridley and Marsh. The church wanted me to remain to protract the meeting, but I could not. Having an invitation to visit Clear Lake, I went there to preach Dec. 19th to 21st. I had not been there for two years. It seemed good to see old friends. They have a neat little chapel. I organized this church as much as fifteen years ago, and am glad they have a place to worship, but sorry they have moved the old landmarks by adopting names that do not advance the truth. Religion here is at a low ebb.

Jan. 1st, 1876, finds us with a strong resolution to press the battle. Have made some improvements to make my family comfortable. I hope to go forth soon to fill the calls that press me on all sides.

Jan. 14th, helped Bro. A. Raymond hold a two days' meeting at the little Cedar church north-east of Charles City. This church I organized some ten years ago. Bro. A. Wilbur has preached to them most of the time till he went to California. I preached to them one year, and Bro. Raymond since that time. There is a marked improvement. Outsiders are more favorable. They did nobly in a collection for Bro. R. Gave $30, and pledged $10 for the Iowa Mission tent for me.

I found Bro. Matthew Livingstone wide awake in the cause. He united with the church some years ago, but held more or less to the immortality of the soul. Last summer he was taken with inflammation in his eyes. It was suggested to him to go to the Lord with it. He was afflicted some three months. His eyes seemed to be better, but he could not see to read. Fears were entertained that he would be blind. Bro. Raymond preached from the words—"He that cometh to God must believe," etc. Bro. L. said to another brother that if the Lord had given him his eyes, and wished to be remembered. That evening, while at worship, he asked the Lord to heal them. The next morning he went out to work with his eyes all well, and they have been so ever since. This I had from him and the Bro. who encouraged him to go to the great Physician. He now plants his feet on the truth, and rejoices in the blessed hope.

Feb. 1st. Having made every preparation to start South, New Hartford church sent for me to go and help them; but there were hindrances. I had promised to be at Pen Centre.

Feb. 15th. After much toil and labor, I left for the South. Stopped all night with Dr. Ticknor, at Clarksville. I found Bro. Marsh, nephew of Joseph Marsh, preaching here every two weeks. Feb. 16th, drove on to New Hartford. Bro. C. C. Ramsay came the day before to assist Bro. Kenney, who had been holding the meeting and looking for me for more than a week. There is need of a reformation here. There are some who will work, no matter who preaches. They love the cause.

Feb. 17th. This evening I went to the village, to the Baptist and Methodist meeting. I had great liberty and spoke twice in the meeting. May God bless them. At two o'clock A. M., I took the cars for Madison county, Pen Centre, where I am to begin a meeting.

MY EXPERIENCE.

H. COVEY.

As you have requested friends to write, I thought I would write a few lines of my experience. I was born of Methodist parents, and was brought up in the most strict way of their faith, and taught by them and preachers that I possessed an immortal soul, and if I died in my sins, must go to eternal torment. I often thought of it when young, but tried to banish it from my mind. I could only think of it with horror, but supposed it must be true. O how dark is the mind when led by such errors! I was led along in this way over thirty years of my life, not knowing what my Bible taught.

I was living in Canada, and became acquainted with Bro. Wm. Deverel, an Advent preacher. I heard him preach often, and he let me have Eld. Storrs "Six Sermons" to read. Blessed be God! it was the means, under the blessing of God, of opening my eyes to see the beauty and treasures of the blessed Bible. It was a new book to me. Every page it contains now brings new light. It is a fountain of delight, overflowing with promises for all who love Jesus and his appearing.

I am so glad to see the signs of Jesus' coming. My heart leaps with joy as I anticipate that glorious morning soon to dawn. I think, if I know my heart, I have given all for Christ. I am his and he is mine. He is my only hope; all my joys are centered in Jesus. He is a present comfort and help in all times of trial and affliction. Who that loves Jesus would not wish him to come, and that quickly?

Thanks to you for sending your paper so long. If I cannot pay you I will try to get others to send for it. I give it to all who will read it, and leave it where others will find it; and when I am done reading it, and my eyes fail, I shall get some of my children to read it for me. If you get tired of sending it to me, please stop it, and all will be right.

Dear Editors, and friends of Jesus, press forward, and the victory will soon be won.

CHURCH GOVERNMENT.

C. P. DOW.

Occasionally evidence is afforded that some of our people discover whither we are tending, and what we very much need to perpetuate our existence, and greatly promote our usefulness as a special people, called to an important work.

Eld. Sergisson called attention to a most important subject for consideration by those known as Adventists, in an article tritely headed, "Our mission—Is it a failure?" for which I would ask a candid and careful reading to be followed by a calling up of facts with which we are well acquainted, which, of themselves are eloquent in the confirmation of his position. I don't write this to repeat what he has so well said, but to endorse it with an emphasis, to call for the reading and adoption of similar sentiments set forth by Eld. Couch, in a well written editorial, pointing most distinctly in the same direction. An article which, like all efforts of our honored christian brother's, will at least secure a careful reading, and, I would fain hope, prompt to right action.

Indeed, it is a wonder to me that our wise and good men, who are leaders in this cause of present truth and duty, do not more forcibly feel the imperative necessity of immediate and earnest action, of a uniform and decided character, to stay, if possible, the further continuance, confusion, and resultant evil works.

Is there not a cause for such reference? Out of the aggregate number of persons known and distinguished as Adventists, in the United States, and the Dominion of Canada, who, in all the leading matters of religious belief, are substantially united; and who cannot conscientiously uphold by their influence and money certain gross errors and unscriptural sentiments—as the world's evangelization by preaching, a spiritual kingdom in place of the real one, final and full rewards at death; thus practically ignoring and effectually setting aside the scriptural judgment and the great and glorious resurrection, the true hope and salvation of such multitudes,—how many of these are properly united in church capacity, after a New Testament model—with duly constituted officers who are acting as deacons, elders, pastors, etc.? And all these united, numbered and known as composing State Conferences, out of which comes a General Conference, unifying and utilizing for effective work the whole body.

This harmonious Scriptural arrangement we lack. What? Is there not wise men among us? those well qualified, and whose have so long been wanting among us? Let us ponder this subject well, and may some Joshua lead us to a better condition.

CORRECTION.—In Bro. Leslie's article published March 1st—"Christ the Redeemer"—ninth line from the bottom, for "If the Father himself is not to do it," read—"If the Father himself is to do it."

ALAS, if only half the breath be spent in saying kind words to the lonely that is foolishly wasted in mere assertion of self, and mere complaints at the want of appreciation, there would be far more men and women worthy of notice than there are now. Let us avoid all putting forward of self in action or word, and thus our life will shine forth modest and unassuming, and we shall be following the example of the meek and lowly Jesus.

Correspondence

From Bro. A. N. & Sr. M. A. Seymour.

Brn. Editors:—Through the goodness of God we still survive the dead, and are able to be about; but feel the infirmities of age, and the effects of our toils by the way quite a good deal. But our strong faith in soon being at rest with Jesus, and all of God's saints, in the kingdom, nerves our energies for still further efforts in the precious cause.

It is now thirty-three years since we embraced the truth of the Savior's speedy coming, and nearly thirty years since we landed upon Michigan soil, for the purpose of heralding the proclamation "Behold, the Bridegroom cometh: go ye out to meet him." Our principle labor has been in Michigan, although we have from time to time visited and labored in other States. How much or little good has been accomplished through our instrumentality God only knows; but we can say, we have done what we could in making known the way of life and salvation to dying men, and faithfully warning them to flee the wrath to come. In doing this work we have found it to be an up-hill business all the while. We have found trials, crosses, and sacrifices all along the way. Nevertheless, we have recognized the faithful hand of God and his promise, "Lo, I am with you always," which has sustained us while holding forth the word of life.

We still have an undying love for the cause we espoused so long ago, and never in all our history have we had a more settled conviction that Jesus is about to come, and the christian's hope consummated than now. All the lines of prophecy, prophetic periods, and signs of the times, as exhibited in the political, moral, and physical world, fully demonstrate that we are on the very threshold of the eternal judgment. And so long as we can do, we are anxious to do what we can for the church and world. We have calls to preach here and there, and labor in protracted efforts; but our health at present forbids these long strains upon our nervous system; our strength is not sufficient. "The Spirit is willing but the flesh is weak." For many years past, we have had an earnest desire to attend the annual gathering of the saints at Wilbraham and Springfield, but our pecuniary circumstances have been limited, and we have not ventured to start. We purpose, if it be the pleasure of the Lord, to attend the next gathering, should time continue; and to accomplish this desirable end we propose to travel by private conveyance East through Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York; and as we go, "preach the word of life," visiting old friends,—the homes of our childhood,—the graves of our parents; and should brethren and friends along the route desire a call from us, longer or shorter, we will endeavor to comply with their wishes. We intend to leave home early in the season, perhaps by the first of May. Friends who wish can write us at Reading, Hillsdale Co., Mich. Pray for us. Yours in Christ.

A. C. Times, please copy.

From Bro. E. Hubbel.

Brn. and Srs.:—After reading many interesting letters in the Crisis, I feel like reporting a series of meetings held in this part of God's vineyard. Bro. Hunt, of southern Kansas, commenced on the evening of the 26th of January, and preached eight discourses; and notwithstanding the strong and determined opposition from the churches, had a good congregation, and anxious and inquiring minds to hear the exposition of the prophecies concerning events in the past and the near coming of the Savior.

I am the only one of the Advent faith in this township, and have had to bear a great deal of reproach from the different sects. During the meeting we were called hard names and disturbers of Christianity; still I think the cause will be more prosperous on account of it.

Bro. J. C. Smith preached the Word here last winter, and opened the way. Bro. Hunt had a debate last spring with a Christian Bro., and gained a complete victory. Brn., pray that the cause may prosper here. Brn. Hunt and Smith and the writer went to Tarbelo, seven miles north, where we have a band of brethren contending for the faith, and living in the hope of the soon coming of Jesus and the restoration of this earth to its Edenic beauty, when wickedness shall have no more place. Bro. H. preached six sermons to large and attentive audiences, from which the brethren received strength and encouragement, and many were induced to search the Scriptures.

From there we went fourteen miles southwest, where there is a small church of Advent brethren, and the writer was recently chosen their Elder. Bro. Hunt preached four times to a goodly number of attentive hearers. On the last evening three came forward and expressed a desire to become members. One, an aged sister, formerly a Methodist, said she was fully convinced we had the truth. May the word of prophecy send the arrow of conviction to the hearts of many more.

We truly are living in perilous times. Satan is doing his last work. The harvest is great, the laborers few. Brethren, pray for more laborers, for the great reaping time is at hand. Evils of every kind—theft, drunkenness, murder, suicide—are abroad. By these signs we know the Lord is near at hand. Dear Brn. and Srs., let us wait with patience; the Master is near. Glorious hope! Pray for us, that we may abound in grace more and more until the coming of the perfect day of the Lord.

Tonganoxie, Kan.

From Bro. J. W. Burroughs.

Dear Brn.:—Having just returned from our visit to Illinois, I am constrained to say for the encouragement of our brethren that we had an excellent meeting at White Rock. Brotherly love and unity prevailed. Notwithstanding the terribly muddy roads, we had a fair congregation, and good interest manifested. We met with many old and tried friends. It was heart-cheering to hear them testify for Jesus, to know that they were still holding on to the faith amid the perils of these last days. The brethren in Illinois have scarcely recovered from the terrible effects of some peculiar trials. Some of them were almost discouraged, but they have learned not to put their trust in man, but to lean upon Jesus and his blessed Word. The Lord has raised up some new heralds of the cross to proclaim his Word since we left the State. Bro. Smith, of Foristoe, is a man of energy, and bright prospects are before him. Bro. Britton, of Byron, has given himself entirely to the work. He also is talented, and feels the "wo" upon him if he does not preach the gospel. May the good Lord bless and help these young ministers to their calling; and we trust that the brethren will not fail to sustain them financially, so that the work be not hindered.

We parted with the dear brethren, expecting to meet them soon in the glorious new earth. May the Lord bless and keep his own in perfect peace and everlasting rest.

From Bro. J. Kingsley.

Dear Brn.:—Thinking that it might not be uninteresting to the dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad to hear what the Lord is doing for us here in Sandy Hill, I thought I would write them through the columns of our valuable paper.

The Lord has done wonderful things in reclaiming the backslidden in heart, and converting sinners to Christ. Under the labors of our pastor, Bro. Arthur A. Waite, the church has been built up, and many added to its numbers, whom we hope will be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus. Since Dec. 1st, our congregation has increased from an average of sixty to three hundred; attendance at our regular prayer meeting from fifteen to two hundred; in our Sabbath school from thirty to one hundred and forty. It would do your hearts good to be at our prayer meetings, and listen to the testimonies of the young converts, coming from hearts full of the love of God.

Six weeks ago meetings were started at Moss St., some two miles distant, in a school house that will seat about two hundred. The house is packed full every night of the meeting, and a deep interest seems to prevail. Many sinners have been converted and backsliders reclaimed. Last Thursday night seventeen rose for prayers. At our regular prayer meeting Friday night, there were seventy testimonies in one hour and fifteen minutes. Saturday night, at a prayer meeting at Bro. Cook's, some fifteen young converts were present. As on the day of Pentecost, the Spirit of God seemed to fill the house. The young converts had to speak two and three times. They could not sit still. Twenty have been baptized already, and more stand ready to be buried with Christ in baptism. To God be all the glory.

The Advent church here was never more united than now; never more strong in the Lord, or more willing to work for God and the salvation of souls. They are waiting for the coming of the desire of all nations; waiting for the redemption of the purchased possessions; waiting for immortality and eternal life.

Sandy Hill, Feb. 28th.

From Bro. G. Crouse.

Dear Editors:—I love the Crisis which comes to us every week. I appreciate the great truths held by the people who publish it, and I would to God that the circulation of it were more extensive than it is. I would like to know that it was in every house in the land, that people might read the glorious truths which its columns contain. If they should read it without sectarian prejudice it might be the means of doing them much good.

From Sr. E. L. Crumb.

I would say to my friends whom I left so abruptly at the Conference, that I found my son threatened hard with a fever, but he is now convalescent, and I shall probably be able to attend to my appointments as usual. Pray for me. Yours in hope.

Forestville, Ct., March 4th.

Bro. H. F. Carpenter writes Feb. 23d, from Vallejo, Cal.:—"This month is perfectly delightful, and makes one in love with this clime; and I feel the Lord is kind to send me to so good a place. My health is constantly improving, and I now begin to gain flesh. My wife, after three months of suffering, is getting quite smart again. The children are very well indeed. The youngest one is twenty pounds heavier than when we came. Our meetings are still excellent. The weather has been bad for congregations, but when others had no meetings, we had good ones. There is work enough to last till Jesus comes. I am perfectly contented, and enjoy my work. The church in San Francisco is growing in grace."

Bro. E. McCulloch writes from Nevada, O., Feb. 28th, :—"The Lord is still at work here. Three prominent business men united with the church last evening, and four others, making fifty-six in all since the meetings commenced, and still the work goes on."

The interest in the meetings being held in the Advent Chapel, Danielsonville, Ct., continues to be great, and the good work is yet progessing. All denominations have united, in greater or less degree, in the services of prayer and song, and the meetings have been of an unusual character in many respects. That the spirit of God has been present in a marked degree, no true believer can doubt. May those who have been won from Satan's service through the influence of the earnest ministrations of Mrs. Crumb, and the many faithful Christians who have aided her, be kept by the grace of God in the safe path they have chosen, to become such shining lights in the Christian life that many shall be guided by them into the only haven of safety for shipwrecked souls which sin has well nigh driven to ruin and moral death.—Windham Co. Transcript of March 2nd.

Obituaries.

Wellman.—In Palmer, Mass., Feb. 16th, 1876, of hemorrhage, J. Franklin Wellman, aged thirty years.

Thus one of the faithful children of God has finished his work. He leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his loss. He was the first one whom I buried with Christ in baptism in this place, and also the first that the King of kings claimed since the organization of our little church. While the church deeply mourn the loss of a brother that was always faithful and cheerful, we feel to rejoice to know that he fell with the armor on, and we mourn not as those having no hope. Were it not for the blessed Word of God, the future would look dark; but "the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." Our heart cries out, Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Words of comfort were spoken from John 11: 25, and Matt. 25: 34.
H. H. Tucker.

Robinson. Died in the Lord, in Lowell, Mass., Feb. 1st, 1876, of consumption, Georgie Robinson.

Our sister was converted under the labors of Bro. B. S. Emery, at Richmond, Me., her native place, a number of years ago, and was by him baptized; and the testimony of those who knew her well is, "She lived a christian ever after." For a number of years past she has resided in Lowell, and her upright and modest deportment and faithful christian life have won for her many friends, not alone in the Advent ranks, but outside, who deeply regret her departure so early in life. Georgie was a firm believer in the soon coming of Jesus, and fell asleep in the blessed hope that it is only a little while "till he shall come again." May God sustain the lone, widowed mother and other friends in this hour of affliction.
Chas. H. Hurd.

Hoyt. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Magog, P. Q., Canada, Jan. 30th, 1876, Bro. Joseph Hoyt, aged fifty-eight years.

After many premonitory symptoms, the last painful illness came, during which our brother evinced strong faith in God, a joyful hope, and, as we trust, a full preparation to pass the vale of death, saying, "If I go down I shall rise again." "There is to be a resurrection of the dead." Bro. Hoyt was an Adventist of over thirty years standing, a critical Bible student, and was blest with a wonderful memory. He was a kind husband and father, and a valued member of christian society, who will be sadly missed by many. He selected as a text for his funeral discourse, 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8, which was used by the writer. We buried him in Pine Hill Cemetery, Magog, on a stormy day, to rest in hope of a land where all storms will cease.

Thompson. Died, as we trust, in the Lord, in Arkansaw City, southern Kansas, Dec. 21st, 1875, after a short but painful illness, Sr. Lydia Smith, daughter of the late Elder Smith of Bolton, P. Q., Canada, and relict of Dea. Richard Thompson.

After her husband's death our sister accompanied her three sons and two daughters to Kansas, and they became the first settlers in the place of her death. The dear children are left in orphanage to mourn the loss of a kind mother, and one of the most gifted of my acquaintance. May they so follow her good example and counsels as to meet her again in the deathless, painless, joyous land, where Jesus shall reign and death come no more.
C. P. Dow.

Wentworth. Died in the Lord, in Wakefield, N. H., Jan. 31st, of apoplexy, Mark Wentworth, aged eighty-five years.

Bro. Wentworth gave his heart to Christ at the age of forty, and though somewhat along in years when he thus chose, he made commendable progress the next forty-five years of his life. His neighbors say, "He was a christian." He lived his religion in the family and out; was kind and liberal toward all who loved the Savior. He leaves eight children to mourn his departure; and may the blessed hope with which he was made happy in life, and sustained in death, be the portion of surviving friends.
A. D. Taplin.

Bridge. In Hazardville, Conn., of lingering consumption, Sr. Frances Elizabeth Bridge, aged forty-one.

Blessed and holy are they who have part in the first resurrection. Sleep on, beloved, sleep, and take thy rest.

FOREIGN NEWS.

London, Feb. 26. A dispatch from Vienna to the Daily News says that the Austrian Consul at Moslar has received orders to report immediately on the threatening attitude of the Mohammedans. Austria ceases to subsidize the refugees at the end of March.

Rome, Feb. 26. The King's signature has been forged to a bill for 200,000 francs. Several arrests have been made, but the guilty one is confessedly the Marquis of Mantegazza of Milan, who added that to other bills for a greater amount which are in circulation.

Schoenbach, Germany, Feb. 26. Inundations here have caused fearful damage. The water entered 600 out of 700 houses in the town, most of which were flooded to the roofs. The inhabitants had barely time to escape through the attics. Over thirty houses were wrecked. The waters are now subsiding. The newspapers are appealing for subscriptions for the sufferers.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 26. The Golos urges the incorporation of Khokand with Russia under the name of the Government of Ferghana. It is believed at Khodjent that after the recent battle at Asake all the Russian prisoners in the hands of the insurgents were massacred at Marghilan.

London, Feb. 29. A Vienna special to the Standard says the Herzegovinian chiefs have telegraphed the Bosnian leaders that they will reject the reforms recently proffered by Turkey, so long as the people are not consulted. They wish to act in concert with the Bosnians. In North Bosnia the decree has been published, but the inhabitants refuse to accept it.

London, Feb. 29. Sanguinary affrays occurred at Kraguevatz and Semendria, in Servia, during the communal elections. The fomenters of the disturbances are hoisting the revolutionary flag.

Paris, Feb. 29. The waters of the Seine are rising, and the plains near Paris are already inundated.

London, March 1. A Berlin dispatch to the Post says the Agent of the Russian Society for aid to the sick and wounded Herzegovinians is, with the approval of the insurgents, framing a memorial for presentation to the six powers.

The paper recommends the union of the insurgent districts with Montenegro, under a system of perfect autonomy, but subject to the suzerainty of the Porte, as the only acceptable solution of the difficulty. The Mussulmans of Bosnia particularly oppose the Porte's proposal, that Christians and Mohommedans be equally represented in the Executive Committee, and demand that they have two-thirds majority.

Berlin, March 2. The inundations from the floods in the rivers of Eastern Prussia are spreading, and many lives were lost. At Posen the loss of life was great. Along the Danube over fifty-five persons were drowned.

The Hungarian villages on the Danube are nineteen feet under water. The inner town of Pesth is safe, but the new city is in ruins.

DOMESTIC NEWS.

Vicksburg, Feb. 27. The steamer Mary Belle took fire and burned to the water's edge to-day; origin of fire unknown. The boat was taking on cotton below the elevator. The boat and cargo of five or six thousand bales of cotton, many thousand sacks of seed and sundries, and the baggage of all the passengers, numbering about 200, will be a total loss.

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 29. Private advices to the Journal indicate that the storm which was so destructive at Princeton Sunday night visited Henderson and Christian counties, Ky., doing immense damage. It passed over both counties in the north-easterly direction, commencing in Christian county about eight miles southwest of Hopkinsville, and leaving a pathway of desolation about half a mile wide. Two negroes were killed and several persons seriously injured. In Henderson county a little girl was killed. A large number of persons had hairbreadth escapes. No estimate of loss is yet made.

San Francisco, March 2. A dispatch from Portland, Oregon, says a steam scow engaged in removing the obstructions in Umatilla Rapids, Columbia river, blew up yesterday. Some say the boiler burst, others that a package of giant powder exploded. The boat was blown to pieces, one man killed, two fatally injured and twelve are missing, supposed to have been blown into the river.

A Resolution.

At a business meeting of the Campmeeting Committee of the Beebe Plain Advent Campmeeting Association, held at the residence of Dr. R. W. Warner, St. Johnsbury, Vt., the following resolution was unanimously adopted, and ordered to be forwarded to the Crisis for publication:

Whereas, an impression has gone forth to some extent detrimental to the interests of our Campmeeting, contrary to the facts in the case, to the effect that the majority of the Advent brethren of Canada and of the members of the Conference are opposed to the Campmeeting at Beebe Plain, therefore, to correct any such wrong impressions and set the matter right, as we feel it duty to do,

Resolved, That, to the best of our knowledge and belief, the majority of the Advent brethren of Canada, and of those whose names have been placed on the books of the Conference of the Province of Quebec as members and of the officers, both preachers and laymen, are not only not opposed to the Beebe Plain Campmeetting, but are in favor of it, both as to the locality, convenience of access and character of the grounds; and, as far as they know the facts as to the course pursued in establishing the meeting at Beebe Plain, and the motives that led to the establishment of the meeting there, approve of that course, and will sustain it, and we feel warranted in appealing to the brethren generally in confirmation of the truth of the statements herein made.

M. A. Potter, R. W. Warner, C. L. Percival, John Carbe, Lewis Bergoine, John Elliott, and L. C. McKinstry, Committee B. P. A. C. M. A.

Immersion and Sprinkling: "The water and the blood, the ordinance and the atonement," is the meaning of the proposed title of our forthcoming work—"Baptism and Rantism," which we hope to issue soon, showing what "Baptism" is, and that "Rantism," or sprinkling, is not baptism, but relates to the atonement and the "blood of sprinkling," and therefore has a place in the teachings of the New Testament. Please continue to send in orders. Price of the book not over 50 cts. Let all who want it send in at once, to L. C. McKinstry, Richmond, P. Q.

Appointments.

☞ Appointments must be received as early as TUESDAY MORNING (as our paper goes to press about noon) to insure insertion for the coming week.

☞ The following Resolution was passed at the late meeting of the A. C. P. Society:—

"Resolved, That no appointments be published in the Crisis henceforth for persons unknown to the Editorial Board (by which is understood the Editors, Editorial Committee, and Business Agent), unless satisfactory reference shall be given."

The Committee appointed by the Adv. Chris. Association, at its last Annual Meeting, to advise with the Editorial Board "in relation to the publication in the World's Crisis of the appointments of men unworthy of recognition as preachers," having attended to the duty assigned them, recommended, and the Editorial Board have adopted, and ordered to be published, the following resolution:—

"Resolved, That when the Editorial Board is properly notified by any of our Churches, or Ministers, or responsible persons by a written allegation that a certain minister, or ministers, lack moral character, that they be instructed to notify such minister, or ministers, of the information received as a reason for withholding their appointments till after a proper trial and acquittal."

All communications in relation to this matter should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board—Geo. T. Adams, Boston, Mass.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question: "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection.—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.

WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?

AN EXAMINATION OF

MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.

BY MILES GRANT.

ISSUED

BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,

A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. Agent.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

NOT OUR OWN.

Not in anything we do,—
Thought that's pure, or word that's true,
Savior, would we put our trust:
Frail as vapor, vile as dust,
All that flatters, we disown;
Righteousness is thine alone.

Though we underwent for thee
Perils of the land and sea;
Though we cast our lives away,
Dying for thee day by day,
Boast we never of our own—
Grace and strength are thine alone.

Native cumberers of the ground,
All our fruit from thee is found;
Grafted in thine olive, Lord,
New-begotten by thy Word,
All we have is thine alone;
Life and power are not our own.

And when thy returning voice
Calls thy faithful to rejoice;
When the countless throng to thee
Cast their crowns of victory,
We will sing before the throne—
"Thine the glory, not our own."

—Dean of Canterbury.

THE GREAT DOCTRINES AND THE GREAT DUTIES.

C. COLEGROVE.

It may seem to some strange; but nevertheless there is a high and binding duty laid on true and faithful men. What is that great and important duty? Nothing less than this; to rectify a corrupt theology. Not the theology of a few weak perverts or rash schismatics, but the theology of almost all nominal Christendom.

It may seem a gigantic and thankless labor. It may be uncongenial, and to many it may appear hopeless. And some will say it is better to teach what is practical, and omit any special work of attempting reformation of doctrinal faults. But nevertheless the work is before us, demanding to be prosecuted with energy, with wisdom and unfaltering determination. The work is great, for the errors are great. They are not only great but widespread, and not only widespread, but strongly entrenched.

And is it really true that orthodoxy is thus corrupt? Yes, true by the searching and decisive test of God's word; and there is no alternative but to enter on the work of protest, and attempted reformation,—no alternative! For what God says, is of the first importance. And again, how obvious and proper to be constantly kept in mind is this; whatever is doctrinal is practical! Accordingly it is no part of a faithful man to be deterred from doing his duty by an outcry against innovation, or special pleading for one thing and that only; to wit, practical teaching! because it saves men! But mind! it is the truth that saves men! God's word is truth. And what God thinks, and what he knows and what he says, is of the highest importance. There is no evading or denying this.

So upon a careful and thorough survey of the situation, the work to be done is plain. It rises in all its greatness and magnitude to view. It is a work requiring the labor of upright and determined, but yet humble and prudent men. And this is a point worthy of special attention; has the mighty power of the truth yet been fairly tried? Has courage or faithfulness, united with meekness and wisdom been so enlisted in this work, as to give a just illustration of what is capable of being accomplished? The strongholds of orthodoxy may seem formidable, but no matter for that. There is a tremendous advantage open and available to the friends of truth, which they never should forget or neglect, and that is this: They have access to the people, though they are repelled and resisted by the churches. And as to the particular and most effective method of access, I apprehend, it has scarcely yet been tried; and that is by personal, family, and neighborhood labor; going from house to house, protesting against the misrepresentations of pulpit teaching, and showing plainly and fully what is the true doctrine of God and of Christ.

Many people are perfectly accessible. They are incredulous of orthodoxy more or less,—or if not, are at least open to instruction. Some may regard the true and Scriptural account of man's nature and relation to God, his state before, in, and after death, with surprise, but if a teacher is a wise man, he may win wonderfully. He must be frank and friendly, and he must be earnest. He should go into a neighborhood, and arrange for little social meetings for studying the Bible, and then he should show his skill and capacity as a teacher, which consists in any handy way of bringing out the truth, and showing the wide and striking difference between the teaching of the pulpit and the teaching of Scripture. Bring out the contrasts fully and clearly, and here and there interweave suggestions to personal obedience to God's word. The first work of obedience is to believe the truth.

To be believed, it must be presented and apprehended. Men are taught through their understanding. If there is an opposer present, it may do no hurt, but much good, by exciting the interest of others to attend to the objections, and observe carefully the answers.

Now here is a great work. Any man or woman in any neighborhood, who has the testimony of a good character and an upright life, and who has a moderately good faculty of arraying and presenting and pressing Bible quotations and Bible testimonies, may be a useful laborer in this great field, and in this great cause of reform. The corrupt and rotten doctrines of the churches must be exposed and explained. Not that any truths which are taught should be in the least overlooked, but that there should be a separation between the clean and vile, and the incongruity, the incompatibility of truth and falsehood exhibited.

It should be shown how odious and abhorrent is the attempt to compel truth to cohabit with error, or to league them together in a bad or impossible alliance. Yet this is the aspect and spectacle presented; this is the strange and afflicting situation. And it is this noble, and useful, and necessary work of disentanglement and correction, which summons every man and woman with a little talent for familiar talking to engage in it, and battle courageously for the right. We want to see the power of the truth to bless and save, brought to a new demonstration, by a faithful and widely extended effort.

Let the little army of believers deploy its lines, and move forward to the assault. Let the laity, so-called, try its hand. Let faithful women put forth their unused strength. There is an immense reserve of power, which ought to be called out; honor to be gained—trophies to be won. And time is passing, and time is precious. Well may we groan over our inaction, but let it be a groan of repentance, and let us practice a little in that swift and energetic labor, in which we hope to be expert, when we are made immortal, and whereby we hope to serve God, with lightning speed and unspeakable joy in the better time to come.

Try the power of rectified theology. Go out, ye hesitating. But go strong in faith, and quickened by the truth. Go, after wrestling prayer. Go, believing the day of Christ is at hand. Go, meekly and carefully, yet boldly. Go, not empty-headed and rash, but go armed with the work of a Mightier and Wiser than men.

You who have a gift for teaching, and who are laboring like sheared Samson in the treadmill of orthodoxy, are you satisfied? Is this your post? Are you not muzzled and confined? Can you, dare you speak plainly? If you can, and you dare, then go on. But if you cannot, then go forth into the highways, into hamlets, neighborhoods and families, and teach the uncorrupted word. There is this special charge, this high commission; it is from the King; it is pressing, urgent and blessed. The harvest is great, and the laborers are few. Let a man feel the force of this commission, and how it would animate him! Let him believe truly that this is his charge, to close up the work of guest-gathering for Christ's house, by special works of instruction and persuasion, and would he not like to fulfil it faithfully and well?

The great Baal of the age stands revealed. The idol which has been worshiped longer than any other since the world was made, is the fond imagination of man's internal eternity. It is this which has come down from ancient generations. It is older than Greece, older than Babylon, older than Egypt. It thrusts its root deep into antiquity. It discloses its beginning backward beyond Moses, or Abraham, or Seth. And Rome with all her age and pride of great pre-eminence, is not nigh so old. But she has managed well to live and rule by the potent force of this very age-long error. If Satan has maintained his place, if he has lorded it over man so powerfully by this adroit and foul invention, who will believe that he will abandon it easily? Who supposes he will surrender, without a life and death struggle? Who can doubt he will send out his courtiers of obsequious or desperate demons to inflame, and arouse, and convoke the battalions of flesh and blood, to fight?

Now is it not true that every province of the great Babylon of our time, is leavened with this vice of opinion, that the soul is immortal? And again,—yet more expressly, is not every sect of mankind, every form, phase, body, or party ecclesiastic, marked with a membership in this Babylon, if it keeps and holds the lie, and persecutes, or denounces, or rejects those who hold to the lie? Call it membership—daughtership, or any other ship; who wants any part or lot in it? For that Babylon herself is a ship reserved to wreck and burning.

Come out of this Babylon, all who fear God! Renounce the evil and escape the curse. If you love fire and darkness, earthquake and tribulation, stay in that Sodom; —otherwise, escape.

Sardinia, N. Y., Feb. 23rd.

AT THE DOOR.

N. M. GROVES.

"So ye in like manner when ye see these things come to pass, know that it is nigh, even at the door."

Our blessed Savior, when he was on the earth, told his disciples that he must go away and leave them; but said he, If I go away I will come again. The disciples were sad at the thought of a separation from the One who had instructed them in the ways of righteousness and truth, suffered with them in tribulation, as well as rejoiced with them in prosperity; so they were earnest to know, if he was going away, when he would come back again; and they came to him privately, and asked him what should be the signs of his coming and the end of the world. He gave them the signs which should precede his coming, which we read in Matt. 24th chap., and said: "This generation" (the one that shall see those signs) "shall not pass away until all be fulfilled." In Mark 13th, we read: Then shall they see the Son of man coming in the clouds with power and great glory. And then shall he send his angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds of heaven, from the uttermost parts of the earth, to the uttermost parts of heaven.

The question arises in our minds, Are we living down in the time when those things spoken by Jesus to his disciples are in the past? If so, then Jesus is now at the door, and may, at any moment, appear. We know that the great tribulation is past; history tells us fifty million of the saints of God were put to death. In seventeen hundred and eighty the sun was darkened, and no one has accounted for it except as a sign of Jesus' coming. Allowing a hundred years for a generation, 1880 will close the generation that saw this sign.

Is Jesus really at the door? Every throb of the great heart of nature speaks in thunder tones—He is. What mean those tidal waves, coming with mighty force, destroying everything before them? Luke tells us there shall be distress of nations with perplexity, the sea and the waves roaring, men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken. When the children of the Lord see these things begin to come to pass, they are to lift up their heads and rejoice, for their redemption draweth nigh. "The Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel and trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Comfort one another with these words." Peter says, "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat: the earth also, and the works therein shall be burned up." "Seeing then that all these things shall be dissolved, what manner of persons ought ye to be in all holy conversation and godliness; looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God, wherein the heavens being on fire shall be dissolved, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat." "Nevertheless we, according to his promise, look for a new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness." "Wherefore, beloved, seeing that ye look for such things, be diligent, that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot and blameless."

CHEERFULNESS IN HEALTH.

It is impossible, many times, to be cheerful when we desire to feel and appear so. The effort is often made without success, and we are made sadder by the failure.

There are causes for depression of spirits, which are not taken into account when we ask, "Why art thou cast down, O my soul?" Diseases which effect the mind, and trouble, not borrowed nor imagined, forbid many hearts being cheerful. The effects of the former are far more difficult to overcome than those of the latter. Diseased organs of the body make the mind sick; and a sick heart and mind cannot well be cheerful.

Men often look for cheerfulness when God does not. He knows it is impossible for us always to rise above those feelings of discouragement which are the result of a mind enfeebled by disease. The sick and aged cannot walk firmly. No more can the soul stand up in sunshine and strength after it has been cast down from its foundation. It may hope in God, who is its strength; but in itself it must and will be lying as in the dust, until that time when the foundation is restored, and an immortal, undiseased body is given. We can hope and be sad. We can rejoice and not laugh. We can be Christ's and not appear cheerful. Not all the martyrs could smile in the midst of their sufferings.

But when the mind is not weakened by disease, though affliction and trouble be ours, we can be cheerful. And this we should always try to be. An effort continually made to be cheerful can never harm us; while on the other hand if we suffer our troubles to depress us, there is on our part a loss, and also a loss on the part of others, who are made unhappy by our condition of mind. While we may expect those who have no hope in Christ to fail in their efforts to be cheerful in their troubles, we may not look for God's people to lose their courage and cheerfulness, simply because they are afflicted with the loss of earthly possessions, friends or friendships; nor by reproach, persecutions, or sacrifice of anything for Christ's sake. The early christians took it joyfully when their earthly goods were spoiled, and they themselves persecuted.

The Savior knew what his disciples would suffer for their faith in him; but he told them to "be of good cheer." He was himself cheerful; never complained; and he would have them to be in this same state of mind. "Let not your heart be troubled," he also said. "Be not cast down nor anxious. This will not benefit you, nor lessen your trials and sufferings for my sake. Take no thought even what ye shall say, for this, like everything else shall be given you. Be of good cheer, I will be with you, even to the end of the world."

We, therefore, should never, when in health, lose our cheerfulness. No matter how much we may be deprived of, nor by whom we may be forsaken, if we have Christ, and he cleaves to us, we should be cheerful. To be sad and disconsolate, cast down and dejected when we have him, is to say that he is not more than all else; and that he cannot make up for the loss of all earthly things. We can be cheerful with Christ alone. With him for us and with us, we can never be discouraged nor fear. We can smile in the face of adversity when we know that he is by our side. The sick may fail to be cheerful, but they who are in health should carry the sunshine of cheerfulness wherever they go. This, with the spirit of Christ in the heart, will cause joy and gladness to spring up where sorrow and sadness have already taken root. Be cheerful.

THE PROSPECT BRIGHTENING.

Z. B. CHASE.

Having been confined to the house for the past week, I thought I would like to express a few thoughts to the scattered ones. I was thinking to-day of the many pentecostal seasons I have enjoyed with the saints at Alton Bay and Springfield, as also in many places west, and my spirit seemed revived and refreshed at the thought.

But that which is more cheering to me is the prospect that in a little while we shall see Jesus, and meet all of God's dear saints in the kingdom to part no more forever. Notwithstanding the many sore trials, conflicts and discouragements we have had to pass through, in the language of the poet I can say—"Sweetly I'm resting in Jesus." By the help of God I am going through When I decided to go this way I made an unconditional surrender, and said, "Lord, I give myself away; it is all that I can do." This is all God requires of us. Thank his dear name! As unworthy as I may have been of his favor, I know he loves me, and blesses me more and more as I follow on to do his will.

I wish to say just a few words to those who have grown weary, as I know of some such. There never was such substantial evidence that Jesus is about to appear as there is at the present day. This is the wrong time to falter or give up. We are just in sight of land. Could we know just how near we are to the port of eternal rest, no doubt we should all be surprised. It has become the general belief of those who stand upon the watch-tower that the great Eastern Question is to decide this subject very soon. Truly it looks plausible. But we should be careful and not fix our attention too much upon the policy of man and governments, but upon the Bible; and hold ourselves in readiness as minute men to go forth to meet the Bridegroom, and share in the marriage supper of the Lamb.

Should this be the true phrophetical application of the prophecy, that the Sultan is the one who is to plant his tabernacle, or tents, between the seas, in the glorious holy mountain, then we are truly living in a most wonderful time. Were I confident, beyond a doubt, that this position was correct, I should be the happiest man living. For I have no doubt but what in a few months more will be settled the great question in relation to Turkey's future peace or downfall.

Dear reader, perhaps you can see no evidence of the immediate coming of the Lord Jesus, but there is much evidence to us that in a little while the Savior will appear. Oh do not pass this subject as unimportant when such great events are at our very door. We are not safe a single hour out of Christ, for as truly as God hath spoken, we are now very near the end of this present probationary age, and the door of mercy will soon forever close.

Dear unconverted friend, should probation end so soon, and you found unsaved, what excuse can you have? You can never say, I had no warning! For we do in tears of sympathy and love invite you to Jesus now; and may the Lord help you to come, that you may help swell the ranks of the redeemed on the immortal shore. Amen.

THE ATONEMENT.

From "The Plan of Redemption."

Atonement presupposes two parties at variance, or one party opposed to another, as in our subject—God, the offended, and man, the offender in irreconciliation to God. We propose to examine this subject under three heads.

First. The necessity for an atonement.

Second. The universal atonement by the death of Christ.

Third. The conditional atonement by the blood of Christ.

I. The necessity for an atonement.

In entering upon this subject, we shall consider man, first, in his alienated and lost condition, together with the effect of his transgression upon his forfeited inheritance and upon all the animal creation. The Scriptures abundantly show that the condition of Adam in his fallen state is the condition of the race. "When we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son. . . . Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin, and so death passed upon all men, for that (in whom—margin) all have sinned." Rom. 5: 10, 12. Our race was a unit in Adam: we shall therefore use Adam in this chapter as the representative of the race, and will apply to them equally as to him.

The word ATONE, or reconcile, is compounded of at and one, and signifies "to unite or agree." ATONE. To agree, to be in concordance, to accord. ATONEMENT. Agreement, concord, reconciliation after enmity or controversy. Webster.

The texts at the head of this article plainly show that the condition of Adam under the first transgression was the condition of all the race in their relation to God and his law. All were sinners, and "death passed upon all, for all had sinned." All were unreconciled, and enemies to God; and Rom. 5: 10, shows the remedy God had provided, viz: "When we were enemies, we were reconciled to God by the death (not the blood) of his Son." See also Prov. 13: 8. Christ is stated to be the "Lamb slain from the foundation of the world." Thus fallen under sin, unreconciled to God, and an enemy of God, Adam was under sentence of death: "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return."

This is not eternal death, nor the death of an immortal soul, as some vainly imagine, but the death of the man whom God had formed of the dust of the ground; and in this condition Adam had no rights but to die, and in him the race must perish without the mediation of a third party. The violated law offers no remedy. It could not give life; it knows no mercy. Thus the apostle argues: "He that despised Moses' law died without mercy under two or three witnesses." Heb. 10: 28. And again, "No flesh shall be justified in his sight (by the law) for by the law is the knowledge of sin." Rom. 3: 20.

Also, in further proof of this position, we hear Paul saying, "For if righteousness came by the law, then Christ is dead in vain." Gal. 2: 21. Consequently all were lost. In this condition, without a mediator and atonement, man had no rights; God could not treat him as a free agent; he was disposed of; sold under sin, he must die; and no progeny or descendants could follow, else the proverb "The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge" (Ezek. 18: 2), would be most true and just; for God would have suffered a poor, fallen, degenerate, sinful, dying race to issue from a vile and corrupt stock, who had become thus vile and corrupt by his own voluntary act, and for which issue (who could have had no voluntary part in bringing upon themselves this wretched condition) he had provided no help, and to whom no possible hope could be held out by any effort which could be made, either on their own part or on the part of those who were the authors of their existence.

The injustice of such a conclusion, and of this proverb in Israel, is fully shown in that God hath provided a remedy, and declared to the author of this evil, "The seed of the woman shall bruise (Heb. crush) the serpent's head." And in view of this provided remedy, he inquires, "What mean ye, that ye use this proverb concerning the land of Israel, saying, The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge? As I live, saith the Lord God, ye shall not have occasion any more to use this proverb in Israel. Behold, all souls are mine: as the soul of the father, so also the soul of the son, is mine: the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. 18: 2, 4.

We find the same fact stated by Jeremiah also: "In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape and the children's teeth are set on edge; for every one shall die for his own iniquity; every man that eateth the sour grape his teeth shall be set on edge." Jer. 31: 29, 30. He then speaks of the remedy, thus: Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel and with the house of Judah." Verse 31. And not only so, but, had God found no ransom, and Adam died without issue, the whole plan in creating him would have failed, and the devil would have triumphed.

Let us read the purpose of God: "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness, and let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, and over the fowl of the air, and over the cattle, and over all the earth, and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth. . . . And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it, and have dominion" etc. Gen. 1: 26, 28. Nor would it avail to reason that God could have created another man in the place of Adam: his purpose in regard to Adam would still have been a failure. And not only this, Satan would have pursued the same advice with the new-made man. But this would not do; Satan must be foiled; his head must be crushed. Amen.

A HEALTHY COUNTRY.

W. J. HALSE.

"The inhabitants shall not say, I am sick." ISA. 33: 24.

This cannot be said of this world, because it is full of disorders. Our fellow men are all subject to infirmities, languor, and nervous apprehensions. Sickness is the fruit of sin. Pain the offspring of iniquity. Could we be borne to every hospital, infirmary, and chamber of the sick, what should we see and hear? Afflictions abound among all classes of men, in the palace of the monarch as well as in the cottage of the peasant. The wasting consumption, the burning inflammation, the raging fever, the suffocating asthma, with a fearful train of ills and pains storming every part of man. The atmosphere of the heavenly country is to be untainted.

How many of our loved ones have been, and are tossed to and fro upon their beds of sickness and pain. Dear reader, although the text cannot possibly refer to this world, in its present state, it will have a complete fulfillment in the everlasting kingdom of God which Daniel says is to be under the whole heavens.

Sinner, friend, Jesus has died for you. He has carried and nailed the sins of a guilty world in his own body on the tree, that by the exercise of faith in him you might be an heir of God, and joint-heir with him to this blessed land where the "inhabitants shall not say, I am sick. Where there will be no pain to rack, no disease to waste our bodies.

Inspiration says, "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more; neither shall the sun light on them, nor any heat. For the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them into living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain; for the former things are passed away." This, dear sinner, is the prospect before the christian. Do not the beauties of such a country, and the blessings to be bestowed upon its inhabitants encourage you to seek an interest in the blood of Christ? Do you desire to be free from sin? Then believe God. Confess your sins to him. Throw yourself upon his mercies. Obtain pardon now, then when Jesus comes you will be gathered with the blood-washed company. Do you desire that your vile body may be fashioned like unto Christ's glorious body? Then confess, pray, and yield perfect obedience to God.

There will be no burdens, no depressions then. No clogs, no confinements, no animal wants, no debased appetites, no unruly passions, no fluttering hearts, no aching heads, no treacherous men or women, no undue ambitious dispositions.

Let me ask you to come to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. Lean not on man, however much he may boast of his ability to lead. Jesus calls; he waits to save you; spurn not his invitations. Come as you are, burdened, and weary, and sick of sin. Christ is able and willing to save all who will come unto him. Come and be forgiven. Look and live. Come all, whether bond or free, white or black, Jew or Gentile. His promises are all yea and amen in Christ Jesus. Despair no longer sinner. "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Come, repent and believe, for by these we are saved, and by being saved now we will be fully prepared to reign with Jesus when he comes, and become an inhabitant of that land "where the inhabitants shall not say, I am sick."

REVIVAL NEWS.

C. H. HURD.

The second protracted effort at the Union Chapel in South Hiram, Me., was a most excellent meeting up to last Sabbath, and the meetings were to be continued during the present week; the result of which we have not yet learned, but are expecting to hear of a powerful work going on there. Up to the time we last heard from them, a number of heart-wanderers had back to their Father's house returned, and one unconverted person had risen for prayers. A deep feeling of conviction seemed to be resting on the minds of many; especially was this the case last Sabbath, when the house was crowded to the overflow with people from this and the surrounding towns, and a real, old-fashioned meeting was had, commencing at half-past nine in the morning, and running until just before noon-time. We had stirring exhortations, heart-felt prayers, and sweet songs of praise by the brethren and sisters. Bro. Stevens gave a very timely discourse of about fifteen minutes, on charity.

In the afternoon there was another blessed season like the one in the morning, only there was no preaching after the manner of these days, of "let the minister do it all," but each one seemed to speak as some of old did, "as they were moved upon by the Holy Spirit," and a deep feeling of solemnity rested on the minds of many, and the best of attention and good behavior from the entire congregation. It was truly a day not soon to be forgotten by those present. In the evening the house was again crowded, and another good meeting was had. Bro. Sweet preached a discourse on the prodigal's return, to good acceptance, and then gave way to the brethren, who as usual improved the time in speaking to each other.

THE TWO SYSTEMS.

Reader, there are two distinct and separate systems of Christianity at the present day. It is useless to deny it. Their existence is a great fact, and one that cannot be too clearly known.

According to one system, religion is a mere corporate business. You are to belong to a certain body of people. By virtue of your membership of this body, vast privileges, both for time and eternity, are conferred upon you. It matters little what you are, and what you feel. You are not to try yourself by your feelings. You are a member of a great ecclesiastical corporation. Then all its privileges and immunities are your own. Do you belong to the one true visible ecclesiastical corporation? That is the grand question.

According to the other system, religion is eminently a personal business between yourself and Christ. It will not save your soul to be an outward member of any ecclesiastical body whatever, however sound that body may be. Such membership will not wash away one sin, or give you confidence in the day of judgment. There must be personal faith in Christ, personal dealings between yourself and God, personal felt communion between your own heart and the Holy Ghost. Have you this personal faith? Have you this felt work of the Spirit in your soul? This is the question. If not you will be lost.

Reader, this last system is the system which those who are called evangelical ministers cleave to and teach. They do so because they are satisfied that it is the system of holy scripture. They do so because they are convinced that any other system is productive of most dangerous consequences, and calculated to delude men fatally as to their actual state. They do so because they believe it to be the only system of teaching which God will bless, and no church will flourish so much as that in which repentance, faith in Christ, conversion, and the work of the Spirit, are the grand subjects of the minister's sermons.—J. C. Ryle.

THE CUP OF SORROW.

The Lord gave me a bitter draught and said,
"Drink it quite up."
I slowly lifted up my anguished head,
Turned from the cup.

"Be brave my child! be brave, and falter not;
'Tis for thy good."
I looked again—I looked and trembled not,
And said I would.

I reached the cup and set it to my lip,
Hearing him speak;
But set it down again without a sip—
Faith was so weak.

Again he said, so sweetly, and so soft,
"Be brave, my child."
As with both hands I raised the cup aloft,
He looked and smiled.

I drained the chalice to its dregs, and lo!
Before mine eyes—
What he himself, the Lord who loved me so,
For my surprise—

Had hidden there with his most loving hand
A rich and radiant jewel from the land
Of Paradise.

YES, HE IS COMING.

G. H. CHAPPELL.

Is it really so? Is Jesus of Nazareth, the crucified, the rejected Son of Mary, who had not where to lay his head, who sought the lowly, the poor, the publican, the fishermen, who was so mighty to save even the dead, coming again? Is this being to appear the second time! Will he come to take his throne and crown, and reign over Israel? Do we unwaveringly believe in the coming of Jesus of Nazareth?—the world's Redeemer, the friend of sinners, the King of glory? Is this Elder Brother, to whom we have committed all our interests and unbosomed all our sorrows, and into whose arms we have fallen when our hearts were full of anguish and bitter woe coming to take us to himself? Sometimes darkness and defeat seems to shut out every ray of sunshine, and even our friends, those from whom we sought counsel and encouragement, have met us with distrust and half-heartedness; but Christ never.

When we sought with weeping eyes and heavy, aching heart our heavenly Elder Brother, and poured out our burdened heart to him, he pressed upon our souls the assurance that although nothing but defeat and sorrow were visible, still we must go forward, and victory would surely crown our efforts. Is this dear friend, this long-looked for Shepherd, to return to his fold and flock? Yes, he is coming to his dear children, and to these lonely fields and deserted walks of earth. Our Redeemer will surely come in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. He is coming very soon. O spread the news around! Let all the family of the Lord know of his coming, that his dear, waiting, longing bride may rejoice and make ready. The earth is ripening. O, Jesus! I long to be with thee! come and receive me!

Brethren, sound the welcome news—the happy message of the glorious day of eternal rest and endless peace, Come, dear Lord, come quickly!

Our Jesus says that he will come
To gather home his own,
And at the Supper of the Lamb
We shall with him sit down.

Oh, when we hear the Bridegroom's cry
At morning or at night,
May all our hopes on Christ be stayed,
And all our lamps be bright

And when we join the blood-washed throng,
And sing the song divine,
This strain shall burst from every tongue,
The glory, Lord, be thine.

A BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.

William IV. expired about midnight at Windsor Palace. The Archbishop of Canterbury, with other peers and high functionaries of the kingdom, were in attendance. As soon as the "sceptre had departed," with the last breath of the king, the Archbishop quitted Windsor Castle, and made his way, with all possible speed, to Kingston Palace, the residence at that time of the princess—already, by the law of succession, Queen Victoria. He arrived long before daylight, announced himself, and requested an immediate interview with the princess. She hastily attired herself and met the venerable prelate in her ante-room. He informed her of the death of William, and formally announced to her that she was, in law of right, successor to the deceased monarch. "The sovereignty of the most powerful nation at the feet of a girl of eighteen." She was de jure Queen of the Anglo realm, in fact, on which the "sun never sets." She was deeply agitated over the formidable words, so fraught with blessing or calamity, and the first words she was able to utter were these: "I ask your prayers in my behalf."

They kneeled together, and Victoria inaugurated her reign, like the young king of Israel in the olden time, by asking from the Highest, who ruleth in the kingdoms of men, "an understanding heart to judge so great a people, who could not be numbered nor counted for multitude."

The sequel of her reign has been worthy of such a beginning. Many a throne in Europe has tottered since that day. Most of them have been for a time overturned. That of England was never so firmly seated in the loyalty and love of the people as at this hour. Queen Victoria enjoys personal influence, too, the heartfelt homage paid her as a christian woman—incomparably wider and greater than that of any monarch now reigning.—Ex.

GIDEON destroyed not only the altars of Baal, but cut down the groves in which they stood. The evil and the appearance of evil were to be taken away. The sin and its resemblance to be set off, and all temptation to fall back on idolatry to be removed. It does not do to compromise with sin, or to spare that which God commands to be destroyed.

BE just to yourself as well as others.

HOME AND HEALTH.

CANDY AND ITS EFFECTS.

Is candy injurious to the teeth? Most certainly it is. For outward proof of it I will refer you to any candy making village in our country, as the village of Neponset, Mass., where the shocking condition of the teeth of the youth brought up in proximity to large candy manufactories shows plainly the cause. But this is perhaps negative proof, and we should seek for proof positive, because other causes than those of the use of candy may be the reason, in this instance, of the disease.

But by far the most injurious consequence in the use of candy is in its indirect action through the system; first by its constituents, second by its disturbing action.

By long research I have discovered that the effect of the use of cane sugar in small or large quantity is to produce a more or less constipated state of the alimentary canal, more particularly the refined sugar of the present day.

If, then, the balance of intestinal action is normally correct, the presence of sugar always disturbs it.

There is a point that may be stated here, and that is the action of sugar on an exposed nerve. We eat bread, meat, vegetables, and our "exposed nerve" makes no complaint; but the moment a little sugar is dissolved in the tooth the tissue sets up a cry. What does it mean? Does it mean that it dislikes it, and that it is discordant to the system? Does it mean that it is injurious to the fleshy or to the bony substances, or both? I have as yet not solved the problem. Who will do it? By an analogy we must conclude that cane sugar is injurious, and yet there may be other reasons and other causes for the pain produced in the tooth.

Beside the sugar contained in the candies of the present day and the coloring matters (mostly made of tincture of cochineal, which is harmless) are occasionally other materials, such as pigments of green and yellow, which are poisonous.

We have a large number of essential oils, or mendicants, every one of which has a peculiar medical effect on the system, toning it up or down, binding up its parieties or loosening them, and to these medical effects much of the injury of the present time is due.

If we wish to eradicate from our youth the very strong tendency toward high seasoning or high sweetening, we must begin at home, and tone down instead of toning up, and teach ourselves and children to love the inherent flavors of the grains, the fruits and vegetables; and as we and our children cultivate a love for them so will their tastes grow, until this excessive sweetness will bear disgust, and their appetites will turn away from what cloys and sickens and disturbs the normal condition of the human body.—Herald of Health.

JOHN WESLEY A VEGETARIAN.

The following are a few extracts from the diary of John Wesley:—

"I can hardly believe that I am this day entered into the sixty-eighth year of my age! How marvelous are the ways of God! How has he kept me even from a child! From ten to thirteen or fourteen, I had little but bread to eat, and not great plenty of that. I believe that this was so far from hurting me, that it laid the foundation of lasting health. When I grew up, in consequence of reading Dr. Cheyne, I chose to eat sparingly, and drink water. This was another means of continuing my health till I was about twenty-seven. I then began spitting blood, which continued several years. A warm climate cured this. I was afterward brought to the brink of death by a fever, but it left me healthier than before. Eleven years after, I was in the third stage of consumption; in three months it pleased God to remove that also. Since that time I have known neither pain nor sickness, and am now healthier than I was forty years ago! This hath God wrought."

At the age of eighty-two Mr. Wesley observes, "To-day I entered on my eighty-second year, and found myself just as strong to labor, and as fit for exercise in body and mind, as I was forty years ago!" "Again I am as strong at eighty-one as I was at twenty-one, but abundantly more healthy, being a stranger to the headache, toothache, and other bodily disorders which attended me in my youth." Also at the age of eighty-three, he remarks, "I am a wonder to myself; it is now twelve years since I have felt any such sensation as weariness. I am never tired (such is the goodness of God!) either with writing, preaching, or travelling; one natural cause, undoubtedly, is my continual exercise and change of air."

Mr Wesley was a thorough vegetarian, as other passages in his diary indicate.—Health Reformer.

LOCKJAW.—The following remedy, simple as it is, is said to have saved thousands from death by lockjaw: Smoke the wound or bruise with the smoke of wool. Twenty minutes in the smoke of wool will take the pain out of the worst wound, and repeated once or twice, will allay the worst case of inflammation arising from a wound.

HEALING OF SMALL WOUNDS.—Do not use plasters, salves, or washes; bring the edges together, keep out dust, but permit free access of air, and trust to the healing powers of nature.

A ROOM which is too cold to admit ventilation or change of air, is not fit for any human being or for any breathing animal to occupy.

SOME DAY.

"Some day," we say, and turn our eyes
Toward the fair hills of Paradise
Some day, some time, a sweet, new rest
Shall blossom, flower-like, in each breast.
Some time, some day, our eyes shall see
The faces kept in memory.
Some day their hands shall clasp our hands
Just over in the morning lands.
Some day our ears shall hear the song
Of triumph over sin and wrong.
Some day, some time; but, oh! not yet:
But we will wait, and not forget
That some day all these things shall be,
And rest be given to you and me.
So wait, my friend, though years move slow:
The happy time will come, we know.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE GREAT PROPHETIC SYMBOLS OF DANIEL AND JOHN.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

The time came when Babylon with all its greatness must pass away, and the second kingdom succeed it, represented by "another beast like to a bear, and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it, between the teeth of it; and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh." This is the kingdom of the Medes and Persians; in character like the "bear," cruel and voracious, more uncivilized than the Chaldeans, and answers to the breast and arms of silver of the "image," and to the "ram" in chap. 8; "And it raised itself up on one side," evidently referring to the preponderance of power on the Persian side, the same as the "higher" "horn" of the "ram," that "came up last"; for Cyrus was the principal agent in raising the empire to its highest eminence. "And it had three ribs in the mouth of it, between the teeth of it." Some refer these "three ribs" as applying to Babylon, Lydia and Egypt, as being ground and oppressed by the Medes and Persians.

We cannot adopt this application, for two reasons: First, it conflicts with the natural order of the prophecy that previously represents the "bear" as already having been raised up "on one side" or the "higher" horn of the "ram" in power—a period subsequent to the conquest of Babylon; therefore at this time an integral part of Persia, and therefore could not be said to be "in the mouth of it." Second, it would be absurd to suppose that kingdoms being ground and oppressed by their conquerors should be represented as calling upon their oppressors to arise and devour other kingdoms.

These "ribs," being a relic distinct from the "bear," must represent the remnant of a nation occupying a peculiar connection with it; which was the case of the remnant of the nation of Amalek, in the days of Haman, recorded in the book of Esther. The action of Haman, the mouth-piece of this remnant, calling upon the king of Persia to destroy utterly the whole Jewish race from the face of the earth, answers most strikingly to the voice attributed to the "ribs," speaking to the "bear,"—"Arise, devour much flesh." Jerome, one of the early fathers, understood this as referring to the orders of Haman to destroy the Jews in the times of Ahasuerus. (See Dr. Gill, on Daniel 7.) The action of the "bear" in listening to the voice of these "ribs" is manifest by the king of Persia's signing the decree for the destruction of the Jews, and posts being sent out with haste to notify all concerned that this awful decree was about to be executed on a given day in the same year that it was issued. The "ram," in chap. 8, is also represented as "pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no living might stand before him." The similarity in the predictions under these two symbols in the 7th and 8th of Daniel, applied as above, is most remarkable.

The attitude of these "ribs" while speaking is in the mouth of the "bear," between its teeth; clearly foreshadowing their own destruction, while plotting in enmity the slaughter of the Jewish church and nation. Surely there is a significance to some of these symbols that have been greatly overlooked by noted expositors of prophecy.

Some seem to suppose if the expression, "Arise, devour much flesh," refers to the plot of Haman, as above set forth, the Jews would have been destroyed. It has truly been said that "man proposes, but God disposes." This was true of Nebuchadnezzar and Darius. The former in his decree that those who would not fall down and worship the "golden image" should be cast alive into the furnace of fire; and of the latter in his decree that whosoever should ask any petition for thirty days of God or man, except the king, should be cast into the den of lions. Neither of these decrees accomplished the destruction of those for whom they were issued. If decrees that affected a few of the eminent servants of God in the Jewish church could not be executed to their injury, how much less a decree whose object was to obliterate the entire church of God and the race of the Jews from the face of the earth!

The symbolic representation and relation and position of these "ribs" with the "bear" is most peculiar, and the historical facts recorded in the book of Esther and in Josephus' His. of the Jews are no less remarkable in the signal deliverance of the Jews, and the crushing of their enemies, the remnant of the nation of Amalek, who are represented by the "ribs" in the mouth of the bear.

Although in the book of Esther the name of God does not occur, yet his wonderful providence is there as manifestly seen as though his name had been written on every page. And we have an application of prophecy in the book of Daniel, although generally overlooked by writers in the past, and regarded as novel by some now on the stage of action, yet it is so agreeable to facts of history and common sense, that all who will look at it with an unprejudiced mind cannot fail to see the force of the application. But if any see any difficulty or fatal objections to our application, please point them out and give us something better, and thus subserve the cause of truth.

After the "bear," a leopard is presented having on its back four wings of a fowl; also four heads. This beast represents the Grecian monarchy, that attained to the supremacy of the world under Alexander the Great, who overcame the Persians with a small number of soldiers, in comparison to the Persians, who were conquered in a rapid succession of battles, extending from Illyricum and the Adriatic Sea to the Indian Ocean and the river Ganges, embracing a part of Europe and all of Asia, with a swiftness that the leopard pounces upon its prey, aided, as described, by "four wings of a fowl."

The "heads" represent the division of the Persian empire into four parts, after the death of Alexander, and his brother Philip Aridacus, and his two sons, Alexander Ægus and Hercules, who occupied the throne for a short time, being put to death, and the kingdom was then divided between his four generals:—Cassander held Macedon and Greece, and the western parts; Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern regions; Ptolemy had Egypt and the southern countries; Sileucus had Syria and the eastern provinces. "And dominion was given unto it"; i. e., the dominion of the world; as says another part of prophecy—"And a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion." Alexander did not attain to this wide extent of a dominion by his own courage and ability, but it was given unto him by the God of heaven, for "he giveth the kingdom to whomsoever he will"; and thus Alexander, with thirty thousand soldiers, could defeat Darius with six hundred thousand, being assisted by the mighty power of God, whose predictions must be verified.

The next beast, the fourth in the order, is a nondescript beast, unlike anything under heaven, described as "dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth; it devoured aud brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it." This beast represents the fourth and last earthly empire that will exist on the earth. As Rome was the fourth in the order, in history, and its historical character agrees also with the description of it in the prophecy, forever fixes the seal to Rome as the kingdom designated by this "fourth beast."

Says Bishop Newton—"The 'fourth beast' was so great and horrible, that it was not easy to find an adequate name for it; and the Roman empire was 'dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly,' beyond any of the former kingdoms. It was 'diverse from all kingdoms,' not only in its republican form of government, but likewise in strength, and power, and greatness, length of duration, and extent of dominion. 'It devoured, and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it.' It reduced Macedon to a Roman province about 168 years, the kingdom of Pergamus about 133 years, Syria about 65 years, and Egypt about 30 years before Christ."

Wherever the Roman arms came, they struck terror among the nations, and threw them into a panic, killing, wasting, robbing all they met with. Rome was especially "dreadful and terrible" to the church of God, in persecuting and wasting it, both in its pagan and papal character. Says Dr. Gill:—"In its original language, laws, customs, and forms of government, it was such a monster that no name could be given it; there was no beast in nature to which it could be compared; it had all the ill properties of the other beasts for craft, cruelty, oppression and tyranny; and therefore John describes this same beast as being like a leopard, having the feet of a bear, and the mouth of a lion. Rev. 13: 2."

A Greek writer, who flourished in the reign of Augustus Cæsar, said to be a grave and judicious historian by Bp. Newton, gives the order of the kingdoms from the Persian to the Macedonian, and then the Roman. He speaks of the superiority of the Roman over all the others. He had no conception of Alexander's erecting one kingdom, and his successors another. After speaking of Alexander, in his overturning the force of the Persians, and of his kingdom exceeding in greatness all the kingdoms before it, he says of it: "It did not reduce all the earth and sea to obedience. For neither did it possess Africa, except that part adjoining to Egypt: neither did it subdue all Europe; but only northward it proceeded as far as Thrace, and westward it descended to the Adriatic Sea. But the city of Rome ruleth over all the earth, as far as it is inhabited; and commands all the sea, not only that within the pillars of Hercules, but also the ocean as far as it is navigable, having first and alone of all the most celebrated kingdoms made the east and west the bounds of its empire; and its dominion hath continued, not a short time, but longer than that of any other city or kingdom."

Rome continued unbroken some 300 years after the period here spoken of. But the days of its unification and glory must pass, and its broken or fragmentary condition obtain; for this fourth beast had "ten horns," interpreted by the angel to be "ten kings" that must arise.

Rome having been founded by Romulus, 753 B. C., continued in its onward march till A. D. 329, when the seat of government was removed from Rome to Constantinople by Constantine, and in A. D. 395 the government was divided into two parts, between the two sons of Theodosius—Arcadius and Honorius, as the lawful emperors of the East and West; and the entire disruption of the empire into ten parts was accomplished in A. D. 483.

Thus the significance of the ten horns as symbols of the ten kingdoms of the Roman empire is attested to by the unanimous voice of history.

PROPHECY.

A. ROSS.

Notwithstanding we have often found ourselves mistaken in some things relative to our exposition of prophecy, yet there remains a strong desire in the hearts of God's people to know all he has been pleased to communicate to us by such means. He does not condemn us for this spirit of inquiry, but lets fall the Divine benediction on "those who read," and those who "hear the words of this prophecy, and keep those things which are written therein; for the time is at hand."

That there is a great importance attached to the study of prophecy is evident from the testimony of the apostles. Says Peter—"This second epistle, beloved, I now write unto you, in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets." 2 Peter 3: 1, 2. Again the same apostle says—"We have a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed."

One great leading object in God's dispensing his prophetic word to the children of men is to make us participants of his own thoughts. He could not give us a more tender pledge of his love and confidence, nor anything have a holier tendency as it regards ourselves. If men are to be known by the ends they are pursuing, our conduct in the present life will have the impress and bearing of that futurity which we are expecting. Our life here will be colored by a foretaste of things there. Those whose ambition leads them to seek for dignity and power; those who dream of riches; those who have no other aim than the pleasures of this world, act according to that which is in their hearts. Their deportment bears the marks of that for which they are longing.

So it is with the church. If christians understood their calling here, which is no less than a participation in a coming heavenly glory, what would be the consequence? Nothing less than a living here as pilgrims and strangers, like Abraham, Isaac and Jacob; who looked for a "city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God."

We should not see them as many have been and are still, so immersed in worldly care and speculation as to be annoyed when evidences are presented of the speedy return of Him who has gone to receive for himself a kingdom.

Another benefit derived from a knowledge of prophecy is, it enables the present generation to judge (if they will but give heed to what is written) of the spirit of the age, and preserve their hearts from being engrossed by human objects, and from many a care and distraction, hurtful to the life of the new man. They would exercise a happy dependence on Him who orders all things after the counsel of his own will, and knows the end from the beginning, and would yield themselves entirely to the discharge of those duties growing out of the relation they sustain to God and each other.

The position taken by some is, that the real use of the prophecies is to show the divinity of the Bible, by those which have already been fulfilled. This is certainly a use which may be made of them; but it appears to me that this is not the special object for which they have been given.

They are to communicate the intentions of God to the church, and be its guide and light, before the arrival of those events which they predict, or during their accomplishment.

Shall we use the revelation of God merely as a means of convincing us afterward that he has told the truth? It is as if some one were treating me as his intimate friend, heaping benefits upon me and communicating to me his most sacred thoughts, telling me all he knew would shortly come to pass, and that I should use all his confidence for no other purpose than to convince myself that he was a truth-telling person, when everything had happened.

Dear reader, we wrong the goodness and friendship of God in acting thus towards him. We have no need of witnessing future events before we believe God is true; his faithfulness in the past should remove all doubt and fear from our minds. Prophets at sundry times and in divers manners, and the Son of God himself hath spoken to the world the word of God; all of which that relates to the present dispensation is nearly accomplished.

Now, when the present administration of mercy shall be brought to its consummation, and human probation be ended, it will be too late to be convinced of the truth of the prophecies, or to employ them for the conviction of others. The terrible judgments that will come upon those who disbelieve them will be a sufficient demonstration of their truthfulness. But they are given to us now to direct our present walk in the ways of the Lord, and to enable us to see that God is the disposer of all events, and not man. Thus the church of God, amid the upturning of human things, is quieted from acting any part in the political strife now raging among the nations of earth; seeing in the events now transpiring the unfolding of the purpose of the Most High, and not a field abandoned to the struggle of human passion.

The judgments of God are to be poured upon the wicked nations of earth, which may be looked upon as no less in their apostate condition, than an embodiment of Satan's power, though some of them claim to be the defenders of the faith. They are destined to drink of the cup of God's fury. Their awful doom is penned by Inspiration. Of this the church is informed, and thanks to the teaching of the Holy Spirit, understands and believes it, and escapes the things which are coming.

For one, I have no disposition to alter the great plan, or turn things in a different direction from which they are moving at present among the nations of the world. Prophecy warrants us to believe that the closing up of this dispensation will be characterized by an increase of wickedness morally and politically. I do not rejoice that men are doing wickedly, but I do rejoice that in the wickedness of this generation I see the dawning of an eternal day of glory.

"From this national confusion,
From this ruined earth and skies,
See the times of restitution,
See the new creation rise."

THE CHRIST.

J. RIDLEY.

In the days of our Lord and his apostles people generally had but one name. We do not read of John K. Smith, or Joseph Henry Jones; but it was simply John, or John the son of Zebedee. The child was named, and then if it was necessary to distinguish it from some other children of the same name, they done so by telling whose child it was, or where it lived.

When the angel appeared in a dream to Joseph, he spake to him concerning the child that should be born of Mary, his espoused wife, and said, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus." This was his name by divine appointment, and the one by which he was known among his family and kindred. We have no account of his ever being called anything else until after his baptism. The disciples also called him by this name.

The word "Christos" was used not as a proper name, but rather as a title, or to tell who Jesus was. It has not been translated, but transferred, as though it was a proper name. It means "Anointed." So when Jesus asked the question to the Jews, "What think you of Christ?" as it is in our version, he did not ask them what they thought of him, but what they thought of the "Anointed,—whose son is he?" And Peter when asked who he thought Jesus was, replied, "Thou art the Anointed, the Son of the living God."

We sometimes fail to perceive the strength of Scripture expressions by not understanding the meaning that the people of those times placed upon such expressions. The word "Christos" (i. e. Anointed) had a volume of meaning to the Jews; but it did not mean to them a tithe of what it did to the disciples after they had received the Holy Spirit.

When Samuel was commissioned to go down to Jesse, the Bethlehemite, he was commanded to fill his horn with oil; for, saith the Lord, "I have provided me a king among his sons . . . and thou shalt anoint unto me him whom I shall name unto thee." When, therefore, Samuel had come to Jesse, all of his sons were brought, and David the youngest, who was ruddy, and of a beautiful countenance, was named as the one whom the Lord had chosen to be king over his people Israel. Him Samuel anointed unto the Lord as king. And from that time he was recognized by God and his prophets as the king of Israel; although he did not take the throne until after the death of Saul, whom the Lord had rejected.

To anoint a person was to set him apart as a king. Unto this David God made the promise, and confirmed it with an oath, that of the fruit of his body, according to the flesh, he would raise up an anointed one, or one to set upon his throne.

For this promised king (or Anointed) the Jews looked with longing hearts; but they had imbibed a wrong idea in regard to the nature of his kingdom. They expected him to come in pomp and splendor, and with an army, and by the power of the sword they thought he would break the bands of the Roman yoke, drive the Roman rulers with their soldiers from Judea, and reign in a world of sin and death over the seed of Abraham after the flesh. So when Jesus asked them how according to their view of the kingdom, the Anointed could be David's son, and David's Lord also, they could not answer.

They had overlooked, or misinterpreted those prophecies and types that spake of his coming in a lowly manner, and of his being anointed, and conquering the "giant," as did David the type, before he would take the right to reign.

The disciples in their shortsightedness were also expecting Jesus to reign as a temporal king. They had accepted him as the Lord's Anointed, and they were ready to hail him as their king, as also they did as he rode into Jerusalem. And doubtless some of them were filled with worldly ambition, and so they disputed about who should be greatest; and an ambitious mother was very anxious to have her two sons occupy a conspicuous and honored position when the kingdom should be restored.

But, alas, how soon were their cherished hopes blasted! Their king is taken and crucified. They very probably expected to see him, who had convinced them by his many miracles that he was the promised Anointed, come down from the cross in the presence of his enemies. But no; he dies. O what thoughts must have crowded upon their minds! We trusted that it had been he which should have redeemed Israel. But, alas! alas! Can it be possible that we were deceived? Was our Jesus an imposter? They could not harbor such a thought for a moment; but there were the facts, and how could they get around them? For as yet they did not understand that he was to rise from the dead.

On the morning of the first day of the week, therefore, we see Mary, and some other women, with sad hearts and downcast looks, wending their way, with the spices they had prepared, toward the sepulchre to embalm the body of Jesus. They reach the tomb, but Jesus is not there. The first thought that enters their minds is: "they have stolen away our Lord." And seeing a man sitting near the tomb whom they mistook for the gardener, Mary asks—"If ye have borne him hence, tell me where ye have laid him, and I will take him away." But instead of receiving an answer to her question, she hears her name spoken in a familiar tone, and the voice that had so often spoken that name she recognizes. The truth now flashes across her mind in an instant—Jesus is risen. What a volume of glad surprise is thrown into that one word that springs from the heart, and comes leaping from her lips—"Rabboni."

The news soon spreads among the disciples, and hope revives in their hearts. "He will now," they think, "establish the kingdom." But for forty days he passes in and out among them, eating and drinking with them, and their longing hearts grow impatient to have their hope consummated; so they ask him, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore the kingdom to Israel?" Does Jesus rebuke them for their inquisitiveness, or reprove them for not understanding the nature of his kingdom? No. He tells them that they cannot understand it now, but after they should be endowed with power from on high they would understand, and they should be his witnesses "unto the uttermost parts of the earth."

On the day of Pentecost they receive this power, being baptized with the Holy Spirit, and now they have an enlarged view of the Anointed, and of his reign. They perceive that the inheritance will be incorruptable, and the subjects will be immortal, and instead of having Jerusalem, which had been in bondage to foreign powers, as the capital of the kingdom, they would have the New Jerusalem, with its streets of gold and gates of pearl, which was "ready to be revealed in the last time."

They therefore went everywhere preaching the gospel of the kingdom, or the gospel of the Anointed. They proclamed with boldness that Jesus was the Messiah—the long looked for Anointed One, who should take the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there should be no end.

The coming of the Anointed One "to take unto him his great power and reign," was the central thought around which all their hopes clustered, and it was their impelletive to move men to repentance. And it has been the one bright star to which the church in succeeding generations has looked. It has ever been Jesus the Anointed, and Jesus the Anointed our Lord, and our Lord Jesus Anointed. For him they have borne persecution; for him they have laid down their lives; and to him they have been loyal citizens; and as a result, when he shall come to dash the nations in pieces, they will have an entrance ministered unto them abundantly into his everlasting kingdom.

Eighteen hundred years ago Jesus was anointed, and very soon he will be crowned. Are you his friend? If not, become reconciled at once.

TRUTH MAKES FREE.

J. A. CLEAVELAND.

What is truth? The word of the Lord. Jesus said, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth." John 17: 17.

Since we have lived in Randolph, Vt., it has been our privilege to hear some preaching, and it sounds strangely when we listen to the views of those who follow human tradition, and put more confidence in what some learned divine said three or four hundred years ago than in the word of God. We learn from what Paul said to the church at Colosse that we get redemption through his (Christ's) blood, even the forgiveness of sins. As christians we have many things promised if we continue in the truth, grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel—anticipate the coming day, when we shall enter the blessed kingdom, and enjoy its fruits forever.

I do not think there ever has been a time in my experience when I have had more solid comfort in looking forward to the coming of Jesus than at the present time. The nearer the time of Christ's coming appears, the better I feel. Yet there are very few out of the multitude who know or care anything about it. All seem to be anxious to have a good time in the things of this life. But pleasures of this world are very empty to the lover of Jesus and his coming. God's people are peculiar in all things. They are not of the world; the Lord has chosen them out of the world. Says the apostle: "Ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." When this time comes we shall have what some think we get at death. I am truly thankful that we have been permitted to see the truth of these things. What promises there are in the blessed Bible for the faithful believer.

Brethren, it looks as though we had got almost to the kingdom. It cannot be long before Jesus will say, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly.

A CLEAR HEAD—AN HONEST HEART.

G. W. STETSON.

Dear Crisis:—Clear heads, honest hearts, sound arguments, good confessions, and rational views of things, with logical conclusions, are so rare in these days of "the apostasy," that when we do find something of "that sort" we very much like to share it with our brethren of "like precious faith," and earnestly commend the same to all who are disposed to be "wise above what is written."

We providentially found such a gem of truth in the learned Dr. Joseph Mede's answer to Dr. Swift's fourth letter, in which he gives the following explanation of Gen. 13: 14, 15, which ought to be re-published in every religious paper in the land.

He says:—"I doubt not but you have felt some scruples (as well as others) at our Savior's demonstration of the resurrection, in the Gospels (Matt. 22, Mark 12, and Luke 20). God said to Moses in the bush, 'I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob; God is not the God of the dead, but of the living.' Ergo, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob must some day rise from the dead. How does this conclusion follow? Do not the spirits of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob still live? God should then be the God of the living, though their bodies should never rise again. Therefore some Socinians argue from this place that the spirits of the just lie in the sleep of death until the resurrection. Or, might not the Sadducees have replied, the meaning to be of what God had been, not of what he should be, viz: That he was that God who had once chosen their fathers, and had made a covenant with them: 'I am the Lord that brought Abraham out of Chaldea, who appeared to Isaac and Jacob whilst they lived,' etc.

"But how would this then make for the resurrection? Surely it doth. He that could not err said it! Let us see, therefore, how it may. I say, therefore, the words must be understood with a supply of that to which they have reference, which is the covenant which the Lord made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in respect whereof he calls himself their God. This covenant must give unto them and to their seed the land wherein they were strangers: mark it, not their seed or offspring only, but to themselves. To Abraham—Gen. 13: 15, and 17: 8. To Isaac—Gen. 26: 3. To Jacob—Gen. 35: 12. To all three—Ex. 6: 4, 8; Deut. 1: 8, 11: 21, and 30: 20. If God then makes good to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob this his covenant, whereby he undertook to be their God; then they must needs one day live again to inherit the promised land, which hitherto they have not done. For the God that has covenanted with them covenanted not to make his promise good to them dead, but living. This is the strength of the divine argument (Jesus against the Sadducees), and irrefragable, which otherwise would not infer any such conclusion."—Mede.

There, now, that makes any man that fully trusts God's promises for salvation feel strong. For surely "the word of our God shall stand for ever." One, with God, is in a very heavy majority, though all the world may be against that one obscure individual. 'Wait patiently on the Lord, and do good, and he will bring it to pass. When the Lord shall exalt [resurrect] thee to inherit the land, thou shalt see it. Wait, I say, on the Lord."

(Joseph Mede, B. D., styled "the illustrious Mede," was born in Essex, England, 1586. All his biographers pronounce him "a pious and profoundly learned man. . . . In every part of his works the talents of a sound and learned divine are eminently conspicuous. . . . . A man almost inspired."—Voice of the Church, p. 167.

The answer to Dr. Swift was written two hundred and fifty years ago, and yet we are told that the view he presents in that answer is "something new under the sun," a "modern invention of those shallow-minded Adventists and crazy Millerites." Well, so be it. "We are fools for Christ's sake. . . We are made as the filth of the world, and the offscouring of all things unto this day. I write not these things to shame you, but as, . . . beloved, . . . I warn you." 1 Cor. 4: 10–14. Hearken! "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him? . . . Be patient, therefore, brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. . . . Stablish your hearts; for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." We shall be of a very choice, select, "wise" company then!

Edinboro, Pa., Feb. 3d, 1876.

Church edifices, however costly, will not insure religious prosperity; add the most attractive service; provide the most charming and entrancing music; put into the pulpit a minister of commanding culture and matchless eloquence; fill the pews with the most learned, wealthy, and refined of society, and yet there may be no revival power. Such a church may be spiritually dead like the church in Sardis, living only in name. There is no substitute for the Holy Ghost.—C. W. Millen.

PSALMS 30: 5.

"For his anger endureth but a moment; in his favor is life: weeping may endure for a night, but joy cometh in the morning."

NELLIE M. TRIPP.

What blessed thoughts are herein expressed! When we feel sad, and cast down with the trials and disappointments of this life, how cheering the thought that the day is coming when all will be peace, joy, and happiness; when God will wipe all tears away, and there will be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things shall have passed away. Weeping may endure for the night, "but praise the Lord," joy will come in the morning. Jesus knows all about us; he knows what trials we all have, and he knows just how to sympathize with us; for he has been here on earth, and was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin; and he knows how to succor us when we are tempted. God is faithful, and will not suffer his children to be tempted above that they are able to bear, but will with the temptation also make a way for their escape. Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth them out of them all.

How many precious promises there are in the word of the Lord. Dear tried and tempted ones, "be of good cheer," think that the Lord knows what is best for us; for we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose; so let us try and be patient a little while longer, bear the cross here, that we may wear the crown over in the kingdom. Jesus said that in the world we should have tribulation, but told us to be of good cheer, for he had overcome the world."

Dear unconverted friend, I would invite you to seek the favor of the Lord, that you may at last have everlasting life. If you feel burdened with the weight of sin, go to Jesus, for he said, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light." Don't delay, thinking you will wait until you are a little better before you come. Come now, just as you are; come humble at the feet of Jesus, beg of the Lord in the name of Jesus to have mercy upon you; for "if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." "Though your sins be as scarlet they shall be as white as snow: though they be red like crimson they shall be as wool." If you will seek Jesus, with a full purpose of heart, you will find rest unto your souls.

Let all that have ever named the name of Christ, depart from iniquity. Let us "lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race set before us. Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith." Oh, I am glad there is a day coming when there will be no more weeping, for when Jesus our life-giver comes, he will put an end to all that causes us sorrow, and it will be one eternal day of rest to the saints of God. Oh, I want to live so that I may be counted worthy to be gathered into the kingdom when Jesus comes. Let us pray for each other, that we may be overcomers, and at last sit down in the kingdom with our blessed Savior. We must make an earnest effort; we must strive to enter in; we must separate ourselves from the world, its pleasures and amusements, deny ourselves, take up our cross and follow Jesus, through evil report as well as good. For, says Jesus, "whosoever will save his life shall lose it, and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it.

Well, let us be good children, live at the feet of Jesus, try and be willing to do and suffer his will; for we know if we suffer with him we shall also reign with him. Let us be shining lights in the world, be like a city set on an hill that cannot be hid. May the Lord bless us, help us, and at last crown us in the kingdom. Let us confess Christ in our daily walk and conversation, that the unconverted around us will be led to take knowledge of us that we have been with Jesus, and that we are truly the children of God. May the Lord help us to be faithful, that we may be instrumental in his hands of doing good, and that we may so improve upon the talent that he has given us that when Jesus comes, we may have it said unto us, "Well done," is the prayer of your sister in hope of eternal life.

FEAR OF JUDGMENT.

Jerome used to say that it seemed to him as if the trumpet of the last day was always sounding in his ear, saying. "Arise ye dead, and come to judgment." The generality, however, think but little of this awful and important period. A christian king of Hungary being very sad and pensive, his brother, who was a gay courtier, was desirous of knowing the cause of his sadness. "Oh, brother," said the king, "I have been a great sinner against God, and know not how to die, or how to appear before him in judgment." His brother, making a jest of it, said, "these are but melancholy thoughts." The king made no reply, but it was the custom of the country, that if the executioner was to sound a trumpet before any man's door, he was presently led to execution. The king, in the dead hour of the night, sent the executioner to sound the trumpet before his brother's door, who, hearing it and seeing the messenger of death, sprang into the king's presence, beseeching to know in what he had offended. "Alas! brother," said the king, "you have never offended me. And is the sight of my executioner so dreadful, and shall not I, who have greatly offended, fear to be brought before the judgment seat of Christ.—Your Paper.

OUR EDITORIALS.

We are under the necessity of asking our readers to excuse us for not furnishing our usual editorials this week and perhaps a little longer, on account of our health. We have taken a severe cold, which has brought on the same bronchial and catarrhal difficulties which troubled us last spring. This difficulty doubtless originated in mental and vocal overwork, and rest is demanded for those organs thus weakened and irritated. God gave us a large degree of constitutional recuperative power, which we think, with his special blessing will, in a few days, enable us to occupy our post of duty again.

We desire no rest from the labor which Christ has appointed us to do in his vineyard until he comes and discharges all his servants, unless it be to renew our strength so as to labor more vigorously at the very closing scenes. We never loved the work of warning the world of swiftly coming judgments and exhorting the church to be sure and know that they have obtained the divine witness that all is ready every hour for the sounding of the last trumpet better than now.

We earnestly desire the prayers of all the friends of Jesus, that our health may speedily be restored, and we be guided by wisdom from above to do all our responsible duties through this period of earth's wonderful transition, from the bewildering, destructive curse to the heavenly peace and eternal glories of the new creation.

O the wonderful privilege of standing for Christ and his pure gospel amid the last-day theological strife, and the final fearful charges of satanic reserves now sweeping down on the ranks of Dan's fearless hosts who "shall leap from Bashan" when the last trumpet sounds the end of mortal strife. Grand position! Sublime work! To stand amid the moral, religious, political and physical elements, upheaving, surging, roaring with terrible sublimity, all convulsing in the premonity spasms of earth's death scene.

Our prayer is, let us stand amid the shattered debris of a ruined world until the last brand is plucked from the already kindled fires of judgment. Our aspirations are to live till the dawning of Zion's last day of weeping, when will be swept away the darkness of her night of watching, and to stand, shoulder to shoulder, with the faithful sentinels of Christ, to echo the final sentence of eternal truth given for a ruined world.

"TAKE HEED."

We have just received a tract of eight pages, entitled, "The last great warning to the world! TAKE HEED." The author's name is not attached, but its contents give very strong evidence that it is prepared by one who has been trusting in the teaching of Eld. W. C. Thurman. In the conclusion of the tract we find the following:—"The angel of the Lord has touched the One Body the second time, and the glad tidings have been revealed to us, by 'the Spirit of the Lord,' that on the first day of March, at midnight, shall appear 'the sign of the Son of man in the heavens'; and on the first day of April, 1876, at twenty minutes past four o'clock, morning, 'the Lord himself shall descend from heaven,' to raise the dead and change the living. 'The darkness is past, and the true light now shineth.' Praise, honor and glory be to his holy name."

It seems strange that honest christian men and women should be led to believe teachings so directly opposed to the words of Jesus, who said, "Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. . . . Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." Mark 13: 33, 35–37. We shall all do well to "take heed" to the teachings of the Master. He says: "Of that day and hour knoweth no man." Let us "take heed" and believe him. He has informed us how we may know when he is near; and that evidence is now before us.

EVIL THOUGHTS.

"Do you believe a person can live without having any evil thoughts?" E. B. MOODY.

It is said of the people who lived before the flood: "God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually." Genesis 6: 5. Again, we are told of seven things which "are an abomination" unto the Lord. One of these is a "heart that deviseth wicked imaginations." Prov. 6: 16–18. Paul describes a true christian soldier as one who is in the habit of "casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." 2 Cor. 10: 5. Among the things that defile a man, the Savior mentions "evil thoughts." Mark 7: 21.

It appears to be plainly taught in the Scriptures that "evil thoughts" are defiling in their influence. In Rev. 21: 27, Jesus says: "There shall in no wise enter into it [the New Jerusalem] anything that defileth, neither whatsoever worketh abomination." Again he says: "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." Matt. 5: 8. With these scriptures before us, we cannot avoid the conclusion that when evil thoughts are allowed to remain in the heart, it becomes defiled; and if not cleansed it will continue to be an impure heart, and unfit for the kingdom of God.

We are taught to be "filled with the Spirit." The Spirit of God is a holy element, and when filled with that, there is no room in which to lodge "evil thoughts." But we cannot prevent Satan from presenting to our minds impure subjects for our consideration. In other words, we cannot hinder him from tempting us; but, by the help of the Lord, we can resist him and not allow him to have any place in our thoughts. He may knock at the door, but cannot come in till we give consent. It is not a sin to be tempted; for Jesus was "in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. 4: 15. Our Savior says: "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation." Matt. 26: 41. This is the security.

Whenever Satan tries to introduce into the mind an improper thought, pray at once. We cannot attend to Satan and pray to Jesus at the same time. In all cases, we find the following prayer a complete shield to keep "evil thoughts" out of the heart:—"JESUS, KEEP MY THOUGHTS." When a temptation comes, repeat this prayer till Satan leaves. In most cases, by the time it has been said two or three times, the enemy will be out of sight. Try it.

BRIDGEPORT.—The meetings in Bridgeport have continued to increase in interest to the present time (March 6th). Some twentyfive or thirty have given their hearts to Jesus and obtained pardon, and quite a number are under conviction, being almost persuaded to be christians. The prospect is much better than we have ever seen in the city before. A great amount of prejudice has been removed, and many are now loving the truth they once believed to be heresy. Yesterday several decided to follow Christ. The meetings were densely crowded, and some had to go away for want of even standing room. Members of different denominations take an active part in the conference and inquiry meetings, and have been richly blest. We find no opposition on their part against the reasons of our hope. They seem delighted with the prophetic evidence in favor of the speedy coming of Jesus to set up his kingdom. There is a deep impression being felt that we are truly in the last days. There is an unusual willingness to hear and talk on the subject. This fact affords an extra stimulus in favor of increased efforts to lead the people to Christ.
M. G.

COSTLY CHURCHES.—Church debts are great clogs to the vitality of Christianity. They are very crippling in their tendency. Knowing this, Satan has done his best to get every church into debt as deeply as possible, and then cause its members to devote their chief energies to devising means to pay the debt, instead of laboring for the salvation of sinners. As a consequence, many resort to fairs, festivals, bazaars, concerts, exhibitions, oyster suppers, etc., etc., adopting all sorts of means to raise money, but running deeper in debt spiritually at every such pleasure gathering. While they are thus occupied with unhallowed devices to raise money to pay up the church debt, created to gratify the pride of some fashionable members in erecting a house too costly for their means, Satan is very careful to conceal the fact that they are being filled with the spirit of the world, and grieving away the Spirit of Christ.
M. G.

WINNING SOULS.—The best work a man can do in this world is to lead sinners to Christ. There is no other that affords such sweet comfort, peace and satisfaction. "He that winneth souls is wise." He who does it is working directly for Christ. He is doing the most noble deed possible to his fellow man. Every follower of Christ should engage in this heavenly business, if he would please his divine Master. Opportunities are offered almost every day to invite some one to come to the dear Savior for pardon and peace, joy and rest in this life, and eternal life in the world to come. If the reader is not doing this important work, we entreat you to improve the first opportunity.

"YOUR GENERATIONS."

It is quite common to find in the old Testament Scriptures the expression, "throughout your generations." These terms invariably apply to Israel, and in their application do not in any case extend beyond the limits of the Jewish dispensation. They have no application to the church of Christ, under the New Testament or covenant. The following are examples: "And thou shalt put upon Aaron the holy garments, and anoint him and sanctify him; that he may minister unto me in the priest's office. And thou shalt bring his sons, and clothe them with coats; and shalt anoint them, as thou didst anoint their father, that they may minister unto me in the priest's office; for their anointing shall surely be an everlasting priesthood throughout their generations." Ex. 40: 13–15.

No Bible student would claim that this Aaronic "everlasting priesthood," which was to continue "throughout their generations," extended beyond the resurrection of Christ.

"And Aaron shall make an atonement upon the horns of it [the altar] once in a year with the blood of the sin offering of atonements; once in the year shall he make atonement upon it, throughout your generations." Ex. 31: 10. "And when Aaron lighteth the lamps at even, he shall burn incense upon it; a perpetual incense before the Lord throughout your generations." Ex. 30: 8.

Would any one assume that these requirements are now in force upon the followers of Christ? Certainly not. "So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not; and it shall be a statute for ever to them, even to him and to his seed throughout their generations." Ex. 30: 21. "And thou shalt speak unto the children of Israel saying, This shall be a holy anointing oil unto me throughout your generations." Ex. 30: 31. "And the two kidneys, and the fat that is upon them, which is by the flanks, and the caul above the liver, with the kidneys, it shall he take away. And the priest shall burn them upon the altar; it is the food of the offering made by fire for a sweet savor; all the fat is the Lord's. It shall be a perpetual statute for your generations throughout all your dwellings, that ye eat neither fat nor blood." Lev. 3: 15–17." "All the males among the children of Aaron shall eat of it. It shall be a statute for ever in your generations concerning the offerings of the Lord made by fire; every one that toucheth them shall be holy." Lev. 6: 18. "This is the portion of the anointing of Aaron, and of the anointing of his sons, out of the offerings of the Lord made by fire, in the day when he presented them to minister unto the Lord in the priest's office; which the Lord commanded to be given them of the children of Israel, in the day that he anointed them, by a statute for ever throughout their generations." Lev. 7: 35, 36.

It is most evident that all these references to "perpetual" statutes, which were to continue "for ever throughout their generations," only reached to the full establishment of the Christian dispensation, under the "new covenant."

"And the Lord spake unto Aaron, saying, Do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou, nor thy sons with thee, when ye go into the tabernacle of the congregation, lest ye die; it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations." Lev. 10: 8, 9. "And ye shall eat neither bread, nor parched corn, nor green ears, until the self-same day that ye have brought an offering unto your God; it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings." Lev. 23: 14. "And the priest shall wave them with the bread of the first-fruits for a wave offering before the Lord, with the two lambs; they shall be holy to the Lord for the priest. And ye shall proclaim on the self-same day, that it may be a holy convocation unto you; ye shall do no servile work therein; it shall be a statute for ever in all your dwellings throughout your generations." Lev. 23: 20, 21. "And whatsoever soul it be that doeth any work in that same day, the same soul will I destroy from among his people. Ye shall do no manner of work; it shall be a statute for ever throughout your generations in all your dwellings." Lev. 23: 30, 31. "And ye shall take you on the first day the boughs of goodly trees, branches of palm trees, and the boughs of thick trees, and willows of the brook; and ye shall rejoice before the Lord your God seven days. And ye shall keep it a feast unto the Lord seven days in the year; it shall be a statute for ever in your generations; ye shall celebrate it in the seventh month." Lev. 23: 40, 41. "And the sons of Aaron, the priests, shall blow with the trumpets; and they shall be to you for an ordinance for ever throughout your generations." Num. 10: 8.

These examples must be sufficient to show that any ordinance, statute or requirement, limited by the term "throughout your generations," ran out by limitation when the old dispensation was abolished, and the new was established by Christ and the apostles. When referring to the "Lord's passover," it is said: "And this day shall be unto you for a memorial; and ye shall keep it a feast to the Lord throughout your generations; ye shall keep it a feast by an ordinance for ever." Ex. 12: 14. Does any one believe that the followers of Christ are now required to keep the feast of the passover?

With these facts before us, let us examine one more portion of Scripture: "And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Speak thou also unto the children of Israel, saying, Verily my Sabbaths ye shall keep; for it is a sign between me and you throughout your generations; that ye may know that I am the Lord that doth sanctify you." "Wherefore the children of Israel shall keep the Sabbath, to observe the Sabbath throughout their generations, for a perpetual covenant." Ex. 31: 12, 13, 16.

By what law of interpretation can it be said that the seventh-day "Sabbaths," mentioned in these last passages, are to be continued throughout all generations, both Jewish and Christian? We are not able to find another example where the term "throughout your generations" can possibly be made to reach beyond the resurrection of Christ. It seems as clear that the observance of Saturday, as a day of rest, is not binding now, as it is that burnt offerings are not required morning and evening in the Christian dispensation.

ROMAN EMPIRE.—The Roman Empire began with Augustus Cæsar, B. C. 31. Previous to that time it had been a republic for four hundred and seventy-eight years; that is from 509 B. C. to 31 B. C. From the founding of Rome 753 B. C. to 509 B. C. it was under kingly power. An eminent writer, in describing the empire at its beginning, under Augustus Cæsar, says: "It was then that Rome attained her widest dominion. She was the mistress of the whole world, from Egypt to Brittain, ruling on all sides of the Mediterranean, along the shores of Europe, Asia and Africa. And then the whole earth contributed to the magnificence of the Eternal City."
M. G.

BRO. MOODY is having excellent success in New York. Hundreds upon hundreds are submitting to Christ, to be saved through faith in his blood. There is no abatement of interest, but rather a steady increase. Those who know him best are fully satisfied that his only aim is to arouse the professed church of Christ to diligent work in the vineyard of the Lord, and to lead as many of the unconverted to Jesus as is possible. To secure these objects, he does an amount of work which but few can endure. Pray for him, that the blessing of the Lord may be with him continually.

THE VATICAN.

The Pope's Palace, called "the Vatican," is said to be the most splendid in the world. It has been the store-house of the costly merchandise of the world. It was fitting that the symbolic "woman" of Rev. seventeenth chap., representing the Pope and his church at Rome, should be most richly dressed, "and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls." In riches it has far surpassed all others in the entire history of the world.

William Howitt, the veteran author, who is now upwards of eighty years of age, and is residing at Rome with his wife, Mary Howitt, the poetess, has given some facts showing the riches of the Papal court. The Pope claims to be now a "miserable prisoner," and poor. If that is his present condition, what was it when he was free and wealthy? Mr. Howitt says:—

"The fiction of his miserable imprisonment, with his lying on rotten straw, the open sale of little bundles of these fabled straws in most Catholic countries, the photograph of him peeping through his prison bars, with a soldier with musket and bayonet fixed on each side of him—all these outrageous lies have drawn an actual river of gold from the bosoms of the silly Popish pelicans that far outrivals the ancient Pactolus. The priests, by such means have drawn not merely from the stupid rich, but from the millions of poor girls—servants and workwomen—their few pence, which should have gone to the savings bank or to buy them comforts; and these arts of priestly robbery have been enforced by the assurances of eternal damnation if they did not do all possible to relieve the sufferings of the Holy Father. By these infamous means no less than twenty millions of francs have been poured into the Papal chest during the year of jubilee just passed, and all this described as the voluntary tribute of the faithful."

Thank the Lord, the days of this "mystery of iniquity" are numbered, and it must soon go "to the burning flame," and the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom. Let us be clothed with the righteousness of Christ, that we may all be ready for "the marriage of the Lamb."
M. G.

ANCIENT PILLARS.

Josephus speaks of some very ancient pillars, erected before the flood, and which were standing in Moses' time seven hundred and seventy-seven years after the flood. When speaking of Seth, and his associates, he says:—"They also were the inventors of that peculiar sort of wisdom which is concerned with the heavenly bodies, and their order. And that their inventions might not be lost before they were sufficiently known, upon Adam's prediction that the world was to be destroyed at one time by the force of fire, and at another time by the violence and quantity of water, they made two pillars; the one of brick, the other of stone. They inscribed their discoveries on them both, that in case the pillar of brick should be destroyed by the flood, the pillar of stone might remain, and exhibit those discoveries to mankind, and also inform them that there was another pillar of brick erected by them. Now this remains in the land of Siriad to this day."—Josephus' Antiquities, B. 1, c. 2, sec. 3.

CONFERENCE REPORT.

Met at Haverhill, N. H., Feb. 3d, 6-30 P. M. Though the weather was severe, yet the attendance was good throughout. The preaching was of that kind that removes prejudice, and carries conviction to the heart of the candid listener, and such were present. Saturday morning Bro. Wm. C. Bixby (formerly a preacher in the M. E. Church) was received as a member of the Conference. Saturday the 6th, Bro. Geo. M. Little, of Warren Summit, was set apart for the work of the ministry by the interposition of hands. Sermon by J. G. Smith, prayer by D. W. Davis, charge and hand of fellowship by N. Wheeler.—Com.

THE TRACT FUND.

THE ADVENT CHRISTIAN PUBLICATION SOCIETY, at a meeting on Springfield camp-ground, August 11th, 1875, voted to raise Two Thousand Dollars for the free distribution of Tracts the ensuing year; and they invite the help and co-operation of all lovers of the Lord and of his truth, in the furtherance of the good cause. FROM BRO. P. G. BOWMAN.

Dear Brethren:—While writing to the office on business, there is a matter which has occupied my mind for sometime, and which I will now present to the Advent people for their prayerful consideration. It is this: As every nation under heaven is to be represented in Philadelphia this year, a thing which has never taken place since the creation of man, and as millions of people will be attracted to that place during the summer months, will there ever be such an opportunity offered again of proclaiming loud and long the speedy coming of Jesus, the Christ, to establish his everlasting kingdom upon the eternal overthrow and extermination of all evil?

My plan is this: Let it be entirely missionary work. Let the Mission Board at Boston have the supervision of the matter. Let them procure the largest tent possible, and let the tent be pitched in a proper location, say the first of July next. (I have no doubt Bro. Brown and the Brn. in Philadelphia would render efficient service in starting the matter.)

The question may be asked, How are the funds to be raised to get up such an enterprise? I answer, not by breaking into banks, or forging paper, or cheating or swindling in any other way; but let all the Advent people who believe sincerely in the speedy coming of the Lord, and who are desirous for the salvation of perishing souls, send to Bro. Adams, our Treasurer, by the middle of June next, whatever amount may be suggested to their minds while on their knees, making it a special matter of prayer to Almighty God. Every tree is known by its fruit. Let two or three preaching Brn., of the right stamp, be kept with the tent all the time of its continuance in the field. They can be changed every week or two, as circumstances may require.

Now, beloved, I simply throw out these views for ventilation through your paper. Do please pray about it, talk about it, write about it. Who can tell but God would bless such an effort in sounding out the coming king and kingdom to earth's remotest bounds? I am still serving God, and watching and waiting upon my poor suffering wife. O, my dear ones, do pray for her.

Feb. 28th. Last Saturday I was called to speak on the occasion of the death of Bro. Elder L. S. DuBose's infant child, about seven or eight months old. The child was buried at, and the services performed, in Newmaid's Swamp Church (Methodist). A goodly number of persons were out, Methodists, Baptists, and Adventists. I read every passage in the New Testament where little children are mentioned, and took for my text Jer. 31: 15, 16, and 17. I showed the prediction of the prophet had direct reference to the bloody decree of Herod in the destruction of all the infant children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof; and proved from reason and Scripture that the dead are in the enemy's land, and that death, the merciless tyrant, the king of terrors and the terror to all kings, had from the days of Abel to the present time dragged from the earth one hundred and eighty generations to his dark, dreary and silent regions, there to remain to all eternity, as though they never had been, unless Jesus, the second Adam, comes from heaven to conquer for them death and hell (hades), as he conquered for himself when his soul was not left in hell (hades) nor did the holy one see corruption; but who exclaimed, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forevermore."

O brethren, when I spoke of the resurrection as the only time when we shall see and meet our loved ones to part no more forever, and when I made that last grand, grandest Exodus depend entirely on the literal, personal advent of Jesus, the Christ, the entire congregation, old and young, male and female, were melted into tears. I do not know that I have been in such a meeting for years past. I hope and pray that God will make it a lasting blessing to all who were present. It seemed to me I never before felt such inspiration and power in the simple scriptural doctrine of a present, personal blessed Jesus and the resurrection.

O that God may help me to preach Jesus and the resurrection more than ever heretofore. For just in proportion as people believe these grand old truths, they are led to holiness of heart and life. O my Brn. preachers, let us go forth afresh everywhere, and proclaim to dying men the coming of the Lord—the speedy coming of the Lord. It is the only truth for this generation and dispensation. The Lord help us all, is my poor prayer, for Jesus's sake. Amen.

Lydia, S. C.

A CONCLUSION.

I have come to the conclusion that I can do little or no good by going to a place Saturday evening, and coming away Monday morning. I would, therefore, say to my brethren and sisters, if they desire me to come and help save the perishing among them, they must have me come for a longer period than one day. I am willing to go and labor with any church and people who desire earnestly the salvation of men, and will, themselves, help in the work of saving sinners. Preaching for a living, or to build up a name, are not the objects which I have in view.
I. I. LESLIE.

Correspondence

From Bro. L. D. Carey.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in Christ:—How it cheers my heart when I look over the columns of the Crisis, and see the testimonies of so many that are willing to crucify the flesh, and bear the scoffs and frowns of the world for Jesus' sake. Truth is not popular. The acceptable service of the Lord implies the giving up of the world and all its pleasures. We cannot serve God and mammon. We must be for or against Christ. There is no neutral ground. It is life or death, salvation or ruin.

We are truly living in the perils of the last days, when it is hard to live christian lives. Satan, knowing his time is short, is working mightily in every conceivable way to draw God's people in the broad road that leads unto death. "But he that shall endure unto the end the same shall be saved." Christ is able and willing to save unto the uttermost all them that come unto him. Let us make a full and complete consecration, and ever be found with the whole armor of God on, "for we know that our redemption draweth nigh." "Having been made perfect, he (Christ) became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." Heb. 5: 9.

Dear friends, one and all, let us trust in Jesus, put our hand in his, and be led by him; knowing that he will lead us just right, and is willing and able to give us all that is for our good. Jesus came into this world to redeem us from the power of the grave, and to bring us from the land of the enemy. Christ said, "I go to prepare a place for you. . . . I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." John 14: 2, 3. Can we then believe his word, and patiently wait his return, amid the thickening perils that surround us?

Eternal life is only promised to those that continue faithful unto the end. Then shall we give up, when we are almost in sight of the glittering crown and mansions fair? Never, no never! If we do we lose all, and all our days and months of weariness and watching have been spent in vain. Let us then press forward with new zeal in the race that is before us, that we may have a crown of life when the chief Shepherd doth appear.

Amid the voices of that happy throng we shall distinguish the voices of the loved ones that have been torn from our embrace by the hand of death; we shall meet them face to face and enjoy their society in the "new Eden" forever and ever.

What a glorious destiny awaits the faithful follower of Christ! To be forever with the Lord; to share in the pure pleasures of the angels; to be forever free from all pain and sorrow; to be assured that perfect peace will never be disturbed by the corroding cares of mortal life—all this will be inexpressibly glorious. If a righteous man has ever enjoyed in this world, while fully trusting in God, a "peace which passeth all understanding," what pencil can paint, or pen portray the beatific vision which shall unfold to his enraptured gaze when permitted to behold the new heavens and the new earth. He will behold the glory of his Redeemer, and share in the perpetual pleasures of the Paradise of God?

In that bright world sickness and sorrow, disease and death will be unknown, for the former things are passed away. There will be no mourners to weep over the sad ravages of the king of terrors, "for God will wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death."

Day is breaking in the eastern skies! The morning star heralds the approach of day, which will usher in eternal glory and blessedness to the saints; but the blackness of darkness forever to those who are unprepared to meet their God. Let us

"Hold the fort for I am coming!
Jesus signals still;
Wave the answer back to heaven,
By thy grace we will."

Pray for me. Your brother hoping for eternal life at the revelation of the Just One.

Cherokee, Iowa.

From M. H. Tirrell.

Dear Brethren:—With your permission I would like to add my testimony to the many which have appeared in the Crisis, to those precious truths I love so well. I have been a professor of religion for eighteen years; seventeen years of that time I spent in trying to live a devoted life to Christ. I tried to believe in the eternal torment of the wicked. This doctrine was very repulsive to me. I never could look upon God as such a being. I read in his Word that he was a God of love—a God of justice, and I could not feel that there was either love or justice in eternal torture. I prayed and labored to get into the place that I thought a follower of Christ ought to be; where I could say, "Thy will, not mine, be done," I never could from my heart repeat those words.

Last summer it pleased the Lord to call my attention to the literal reading of the Bible. After a long struggle to support the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, I found it was the doctrine of man, not of God. I saw at once that it was through Christ that I was to have eternal life;—that I did not inherit life, but death; but Jesus had paid the whole debt, and all to him I owe.

I believe that Jesus is coming soon, and I want to be ready to meet him. I want more holiness. I want to be pure and blameless in the sight of God. Oh, what a glorious hope we have! Jesus is coming soon to redeem this sin-cursed earth, to restore Paradise, to call his sleeping saints from their graves, and we shall all be changed. For this corruptible will put on incorruption, and this mortal will but on immortality.

We are a little band—only eleven in number. We are trying to work for Jesus. Eld. G. L. Tracy preached to us on the 13th and 20th of this month. He is an earnest laborer in the Master's vineyard. These meetings were seasons of refreshing—meat in due season. Pray for us, that the Lord will add to our numbers such as shall be saved.

Chase's Mills, Me.

From Bro. P. A. Smith.

Dear Brn.:—I have just been reading in the Crisis a letter from P. A. Smith, Rippey, Iowa. By it many will suppose that I have moved to that place; but not so; I am still in the sunny South. It is the first time I ever saw that name in the Crisis beside my own signature.

My health is not as good this winter as usual. I have worn out this climate and am not able to preach but little. I have been up the St. John's River two hundred and seventy-five miles, to Sand Point, Indian River. Was absent three weeks, preached twelve discourses, and a number became interested. Bro. Thos. Johnson is their Sabbath school superintendent over a flourishing school. He is a good, true, sound Adventist. They have a good meeting-house for all denominations to preach in. The place has improved since I was there five years ago this winter. A number of families have moved there from other parts. The best oranges grow there that are to be found any where. I hope I shall be able to go there again next winter, according to their request. As the inhabitants increase I think there can be an Advent church raised up there, although most all other denominations are represented. The only one organized now is the Baptist.

I am pleased very much with the articles in the Crisis on the "old covenant," by R. W. Wilson, of Santa Clara, Cal., my old companion and fellow laborer here in this field. We came here eight years ago, to raise the Advent banner in this State. His expositions are excellent. I hope they will be read by all the readers of the Crisis, and all those who have got on the yoke of bondage. May the Lord open their eyes to see the truth.

Bro. Grant, go on in your good work with your chart. I think that will introduce you into places where you would not be received in any other way. That is the right kind of guile to use. May the Lord give you abundant success. I wish my health was so that I could endure the fatigue of traveling in new places; but I must be content to do all I can as I am. Yours in the gospel hope.

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 6th, 1876.

From Bro. E. N. Bliss.

Dear Editors Crisis:—It is now Lord's day, and we are having our first storm, of any note, this winter. It is snow too, and being Sunday, and no one can go out, I thought I would spend the time in letting the loved ones know where I am and what I am doing.

First, I can say that the good Lord is blessing me (as harsh as I am), and bringing sinners to Christ through my labors. It has been very hard times with me, and I have been unable to preach more than half the time for the last year, for the want of decent clothes to wear, and because my wagon was broken so I could not go with it. I will soon have to lay it aside for the want of repairs, as I have no money to pay for it with. I have within two months organized two churches; one with twenty members, and the other with twelve. Eight more are to unite the next time I go there to preach. I now have two series of meetings engaged, which will occupy me a month at least. The people are willing to hear the word of God, that is, those who are not prejudiced.

I do believe that we are giving the last message to the world, and that the Lord is calling out a people for himself. While holding meetings here I received $3.80 in money, and the value of $1.00 in other things, which is more than I have received at any one time, for my labors, for the last eighteen months. Opposition was very strong in Salem, so much so that one or two Methodist preachers, who were present at our communion, refused to partake with us. The U. B. minister opposes us very strongly, but I have by the help of God got the people for fifteen miles around to reading their Bibles; and there never was such a time known in this part of Kansas for reading as now. Thank God! One of the sisters in the Christian Church said, when I first came here to preach, that she knew she had an immortal soul. But since she has found out how easy it is to be mistaken, and is now with us.

Salem, Jewell Co., Kansas.

From Bro. H. Keener.

Dear Brn.:—I am still striving to serve the Lord; am holding a few meetings in the neighborhood. Some are coming to Christ, but a great many are still in darkness.

My desire is that you would send us a preacher. We have no Adventist preacher in this part of the country. We have a few Methodists and Presbyterians. Our neighborhood is thickly settled.

I have ground for a church or to accommodate a Tent meeting. All we want is a preacher. Towards fall we would like a tent meeting. There is an open field here for much labor. I am striving to keep the brethren united. Brethren, send us some that will help us, or come and make us a visit.

York Furnace, York Co., Pa.

[Our sympathies are deeply stirred by the plaintive cry from such scattered sheep upon the bleak mountains, in these days of peril and religious apostasy. We would be glad to fly on the wings of the morning, and tell them to trust the Great Shepherd, whose sleepless watch-care will guard the faithful until he gathers them into his fold.
J. C.

From Bro. C. G. Reed.

Dear Brn. and Srs. in Christ:—For the first time I address you through the colums of the Crisis. It has been but a short time since I embraced the faith of the soon coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and yet I believe that the time is near when we shall see him coming with his "Father and all the holy angels." How important it is that we have our lamps trimmed and burning, that when the "Bridegroom" comes we may go out to meet him. We cannot do too much for Jesus. I often think he has given his life for me, what have I given for him? He gave himself a living sacrifice, that we through him might have everlasting life, yet how many reject him.

My dear unreconciled friends, do you want a home in the kingdom? If you do, then come to Christ. Come now; now is the accepted time. Come with all your sins and wickedness. Put your trust in the Lord; give yourself up entirely to him, and he will save you. Oh, I long for a home in that land where there is no sickness, sorrow, or death; but I fear sometimes I shall never gain it; for "Satan, with malicious art, watches each unguarded heart," and he will get the mastery, if he can. But I know if I am faithful I shall soon see Jesus, and be made like him, and reign with him forever more.

Richmond, Maine.

From Bro. E. McCulloch.

Dear Brn.:—I am here in a new field, holding a protracted meeting in the Methodist church. The Methodist and Baptist ministers, together with many of their members, join in helping carry forward the good work. Our meetings are well attended, and quite an interest prevails. We have been here one week, and quite a number have come out on the Lord's side and professed faith in Christ, and many more are inquiring the way of salvation through Christ. We shall remain this week, and expect others will come to Jesus.

Just before coming here we labored for one week at East Creek, and the result was encouraging. Some gave their hearts to the Lord while we were there, and the work is still progressing, and many are coming to Christ. Pray for us. Your Bro. in the Lord.

New London, O., March 7th, 1876.

From H. B. Chase.

Dear Brethren in Christ:—I wish to write a few lines to many that know me, to let them know how I get along down here in Maine. I have preached ten times since I came here, and there is a growing interest to hear the truth. I have met with some opposition, but it has proved for the good of the cause, and the non-professor sees the aim of those who oppose. There is a cry all around "Come over and help us." I feel as if God is going to work in Sebec. Already two intelligent people are seeking Christ for the first time; and others are convinced of the truth. Thank the Lord Jesus for his help to poor me, unworthy as I am. Pray for me brethren, that much good may be done and God's name get glory, and sinners saved from the storm that is coming soon, is the prayer of your brother in hope of eternal life when He who is our life shall appear.

Sebec, Maine.

From Bro. O. Garland.

Dear Brn.:—I wish to let you know what a great work God is doing in the town of Hampton, under the preaching of Brn. Morrill and Bean. There have been twelve or fifteen stout-hearted young men turn from their evil ways, and have decided to do their Master's will.

This is that which was spoken by the prophet Joel—"And it shall come to pass afterward that I will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; . . . and I will show wonders in the heavens and on the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. . . . And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be delivered." Pray that the work of God may still continue. We expect there will be great good done.

From Bro. C. Carman.

Editors Crisis:—Permit me to thank our Eastern friends for tracts and papers sent, on call for second-hand tracts. Many have been received and duly distributed among the people, who are searching the Scriptures and are coming to the knowledge of the truth as it is in Christ. Strong men and women are seeing the glorious light, and we hope and pray will soon take a stand and proclaim to the world salvation through Christ. Pray for us.

Obituaries.

Hicks. In Central Falls, R. I., Feb. 9th, Bro. Elias A. Hicks, aged thirty-one years.

Bro. H. leaves a large circle of friends to mourn his premature death. He was a noble, generous young man, beloved by all his acquaintances. He loved the appearing of the Lord, and his flesh rests in hope of immortality at the appearing of Christ. His dear companion mourns her loss, yet she does not mourn without hope, for he left the blessed assurance that ere long he will come from the land of the enemy. May the Lord sustain her in this great affliction. C. G.

Palmer. In Lee, N. H., Jan. 22nd, Sister Palmer, aged eighty-two years.

Truly a mother in Israel has fallen. She had been a believer in Christ for more than sixty years. She embraced the great truths of the soon coming of the Lord, the resurrection of the dead and the inheritance of the saints, more than thirty years ago, and rejoiced in hope of the glory of God. She was a great sufferer for years, but patiently endured to the end. She leaves three sons to mourn, but not as those who have no hope. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, C. S. Emerson, assisted by Eld. Cummings.

Prouty. Fell asleep in Jesus, in Royalton, Jan. 20th, 1876, Bro. Edward Prouty, aged seventy-eight years.

Thus another of our number has fallen by the foe of man. Bro. Prouty laid his companion in the silent grave one year before he was laid by her side. He sleeps, but not forever. His hope was strong in Jesus, and he felt that all was well. He said he was ready to go. We miss him in the prayer circle and in the church. Words of comfort were spoken by Bro. T. L. Hall, from 1 Thess. 4: 13. J. A. Packard.

Morrill. In Barnard, Vt., Feb. 13th, 1876, of cancer, Sister Rosette E. Morrill, aged fifty-four years.

She leaves three children, and brothers and sisters, who deeply mourn their loss; yet we sorrow not as others who have no hope. Our sister was a firm believer in the soon coming of Christ. She died in the triumph of faith, having a bright view of the better land. Cheering indeed were her last words of counsel to her friends. May God grant that they may not soon be forgotten.

D. D. Page.

Abbot. In Harrison, Me., Feb. 11th, 1876, Bertie Abbot, youngest son of Charles W. and Sarah J. Abbot, aged four years.

It is not the first time death has broken the family circle, and while they sorrow, it is not without hope. The blessed hope of soon seeing the King in his beauty, and being made like him, and meeting those little treasures that sleep, is their support. May God give sustaining grace to the family. Words of comfort by the writer, from Jer. 31: 15. J. Whitman.

Lapham. In Lynn, Nov. 7th, 1875, Bertie T. Lapham, aged ten years and two months.

GOD'S PEOPLE NOT IN DARKNESS.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

God is favoring his people greatly in these last days of troubles, when he gives them light and instruction through the Holy Ghost, in the present signs of his coming, whilst he seals the vision of countless others, and permits them to see nothing. Praise God for blessings and light in these dark days to his little chosen band of followers! Adventists and believing christians can see and understand where others see nothing. They can read the language and signs in every daily newspaper they take up; others read the same things, but they cannot interpret or understand.

God the same way preached through Noah and his servants to the antediluvians, but the people of those times also could see or interpret nothing, so the promised vengeance—the flood—came, and they were not. The Babylonian world, the Ninevites, the Egyptians, they also could see and interpret nothing, and their empires and people were destroyed. The Jews knew not the time of their visitation, and how has it been with them? To-day it is the same story, and soon we will have its lessons to the nations of the nineteenth century completed.

FOREIGN NEWS.

Ragusa, March 6. The Insurgent leaders on Sunday last informed Baron Rodich, Governor of Dalmatia and the Austrian Commissioner, that they require Turkey, as a condition of peace, to withdraw forty battalions of her troops from Herzegovina, and allow the insurgents while remaining in arms to treat with the Beys.

If this is refused, the leaders of the insurgents propose that Austria, or some other power, effect an armed intervention. Baron Rodich informed them that their conditions were inadmissible. Austria would maintain complete neutrality, strictly guard the frontier, and cease to relieve refugees at the end of March.

London, March 6. A dispatch from Pesth says the Danube is again rising and houses are falling. The new Pesth gas works have been undermined and destroyed. The duration of the flood is unprecedented. Some of the suburbs have been submerged for twelve days. The rivers Waag, Grau, Morava and Eipel have also overflowed their banks.

Manchester, Eng., March 6. The Examiner states that private advices from Prague announce the suspension of the firm of Kauffman, large manufacturers of cotton goods, with liabilities estimated at $500,000. Trade in Austria is reported at a complete standstill, and a disagreeable state of uncertainty prevails in commercial circles.

London, March 7. The Pall Mall Gazette's Copenhagen correspondent writes that the last mail from Iceland reports that 500 inhabitants of the Westmanna Islands group, lying to the south of Iceland, and belonging to Denmark, are probably dying of starvation. The fisheries there last year were unsuccessful, and the inhabitants, fearing their food would not last them through the winter, sent to Iceland asking for supplies. Accordingly a small quantity of supplies were despatched. About a month ago, however, a bottle was found on the coast of Iceland containing a letter stating that the supplies on hand were only adequate for one week, and a famine was inevitable. The danger of the sea during the winter months renders communication with the Westmanna Islands almost impossible.

London, March 9. A telegram from Berlin says a fresh difficulty in the way of peace has arisen in Turkey. The Christian subjects of the Sultan hitherto have been exempt from military duty, and they now refuse to pay the exemption tax, and offer instead to give their military services.

The Christians justify their action on the promise contained in the Sultan's Irade of full and perfect equality with Mohammedans. The Sublime Porte refuses to accept on the ground that Christians are not to be trusted in his army.

It is reported that Don Carlos intends seeking refuge in England.

Last night, between eleven and twelve o'clock, while the way freight train, with a passenger car attached, was crossing a bridge over a narrow passage on Harper's Ferry and the Valley Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, sixty-three miles from Harper's Ferry, the middle span gave way, and the engine and tender of the train fell through and were wrecked. Ten persons were killed, and others wounded.

Halifax, N. S. Three lads, each about sixteen years old, went to the woods in the neighborhood of St. Johns, N. F., to cut fire wood, where they were overtaken by a snow storm and perished. Two bodies have been found.

San Francisco, Cal., Feb. 18.—A despatch from Tueson reports a battle January 14th between the Sonora revolutionists and the State troops near Alamas. The latter were routed. SPECIAL NOTICE.

As the Mass. Annual Advent Christian Conference is soon to convene, and as at its coming session there are Delegates to be chosen to attend the National Meeting of the Second Advent Christian Association, it is necessary, in order to determine the number of Delegates to which the Conference is entitled, that there be sent to the Secretary by each church the number of members therein. It is therefore earnestly requested and hoped that each church within the bounds of this Conference will without delay send to the Secretary its present membership, so that at the Conference it may be certainly known how many Delegates are to be sent by this Conference to the meeting of the Association. Let every church do this at once, and so be represented in the Conference. Direct—Boston, Mass., Drawer 5140.

The Father by his Spirit is bringing to light and to our remembrance numerous evidences of the approaching end.

Brethren in the ministry, do come to this meeting with the light you have, that we may feed and be fed with the pure Word of God. Do not wait to be blest at the meetings, but come filled with the Holy Spirit, to work for the salvation of others. The meetings will be held in Millard's large Hall, a short walk only from either of the depots. Those who are dwelling in God and God in them, will you pray for this meeting? H. K. Flagg, Pres.

THE BIBLE DOCTRINE OF THE SOUL.

An answer to the Question; "Is the Popular Conception of the Soul that of Holy Scripture?"

BY CHAS. L. IVES, M. D.

Professor of the Theory and Practice of Medicine in Yale College.

This is a book of 119 pages, in which the Author discusses the above question in an interesting and able manner,—showing the material nature of, the mortality and destiny of the Soul,—A future immortality to be the special portion of the Righteous,—What the Bible teaches as to the future of the Wicked,—The intermediate state,—The Resurrection.—That of the Righteous and of the Wicked, etc.

The Author claims that the doctrine set forth,—"Honors God, exalts the Bible, insures preaching of future punishment, subverts Universalism and Infidelity, errors of Romanism, of Spiritualism and Swedenborgianism, helps in work of Missions, rightly values the body, brings Christian unity, and promotes personal holiness."

We are much pleased with this work. It is having a wide circulation. We have just received a quantity of the pamphlet edition, and can now fill orders at the following prices: Pamphlet, 25 cts. per copy; $2.25 per dozen by mail; $15.00 per hundred by express. Bound in cloth, 30 cts. per copy by mail; $3.00 per dozen by express.

THE TRUE SABBATH.
WHICH DAY SHALL WE KEEP?
AN EXAMINATION OF
MRS. ELLEN G. WHITE'S VISIONS.
BY MILES GRANT.
ISSUED
BY THE ADV. CHRIS. PUB. SOCIETY,
A NEW WORK

On the Sabbath of the Old Covenant. An investigation of Mrs. E. G. White's Visions, showing that they are not from God.

All who have accepted Mrs. White's visions as coming from heaven, or who have been led to rest on Saturday instead of the Lord's day, should read this work. Let those who live among our Seventh-day brethren send and get a number of the books to give away. If the reader has friends at a distance who have received Mrs. W.'s Visions as true, have a copy of this work sent to them.

It contains 106 pages, and we will send it at the following prices: Single copy, 20 cts.; per doz., $1.75 by mail; per hundred, $10.00 by express. Agent.

PRICE REDUCED.

The great Map of History, twenty-two feet long, and about thirty inches wide. This valuable work, of which mention has been made in the Crisis, we now have a supply of, and will send to those who may order at the publisher's reduced price of $12.00 per copy, by express. We have them on rollers, and in book form, and can supply either way.

The best method of using the chart or map of history is to hang the frame on the wall of the room (the map being in the frame, of course), by the two hooks in the upper bar of the frame, high enough to stand, or sit, in front of it, and there examine or study it.

Students and beginners in history should occasionally look over the map in its entire length—drawn out on the wall, or tables, or on the carpet—until they are well acquainted with the entire outlines, plan and compass of the map, which embraces all history.

CHRIST STILLING THE TEMPEST.

H. M. GILMAN.

The storm was loud, the night was dark,
The winds and waves tossed the fragile bark
Where the Savior peacefully sleeping lay,
Wearied and worn with the toils of the day.
Louder and fiercer the wild winds blow,
Higher and higher the mad waves flow,
Till the weary disciples cry out in fear,
Master, carest thou not that we perish here?

Quickly aroused by that cry of distress,
And then, as now, ever ready to bless,
He rebuked their doubts and calmed their fears,
And quickly dried their flowing tears.
For he stood in the ship with outstretched hand,
Like one who governs both sea and land
By his mighty power and sovereign will,
And he utters the mandate, "Peace, be still."

Obeying at once his high behest,
The foaming billows sink to rest;
And the raging winds forbear to blow,
For they their Master's mandate know.
The wondering disciples stood amazed,
And at their Savior mutely gazed:
"What manner of man is this," they say,
"That even the winds and seas obey?"

Thus when temptation's winds arise,
And clouds of sin hide the light from our eyes,
We toil in vain our souls to save,
And are ready to sink beneath the wave;
Our Savior is near, and he sleeps not now,
And if at his cross we humbly bow,
A heavenly joy will our bosoms thrill,
As he bids those temptations, "Peace, be still!"

Even so in our lives, when sorrows roll
Like dashing waves, to sink the soul;
When we lay our loved ones in the tomb,
And it seems that nothing can pierce the gloom;
If we call on him he will surely hear,
For his blessed presence is ever near,
And a trusting calm our hearts will fill,
As he gently whispers, "Peace, be still."

And when life's toils and cares are o'er,
Ere I sleep in death to wake no more
Till Gabriel's trump, with piercing sound,
Shall rouse the slumberers 'neath the ground;
Oh, Thou who alone art mighty to save
And redeem my soul from the power of the grave;
May thy gentle voice my weary heart still,
By softly whispering, "Peace, be still."

TIME TO WORK.

L. BOUTELL.

Dearly beloved, of like precious faith, believing that "all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets, and in the Psalms concerning Christ"; that "as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life"; and that he will soon be seen "coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," when "he will send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather his elect from the four winds," when they that are holy, just and righteous will be so still, and the unjust—filthy—remain so eternally; I feel that it behooveth us above all others to be earnest to make a mighty effort, in the name and strength of our Lord Jesus, to save all we possibly can of the perishing race.

We see the multitude in an unsaved condition, doomed to eternal destruction unless created anew in Christ Jesus by believing on him, and thus by faith putting off the old man with his deeds, and putting on the new, "which is Christ in you the hope of glory," to be had when he comes.

Shall we not, with strong faith and united action, concentrate our prayers, tears, and earnest efforts, waiving everything of minor importance, and with heart, hand and voice go into this holy, heaven-pleasing work of saving men from death—the wages of sin? The judgment is coming! It is a reality, and all nations will be assembled by the trump of God, to be individually settled with. If dead and in the grave, we shall be summoned and must come, whether we are wheat or tares, whether sheep or goats. Now there is a chance to come to the All-cleansing fountain, and be washed clean and white.

Then, dearly beloved, "let us lay aside every weight," every hindrance, seek divine direction, the fulness of the Holy Spirit, and with joyful heart and strong determination throw ourselves into this blessed work, feeling that we must see sinners convicted and converted, and the backslidden reclaimed. This is emphatically the work before us. And with our dependence upon God, and power in prayer, we shall see the work of God prospering and somebody reclaimed.

We all have dear ones who have neglected this great salvation, and will be lost unless reached by the goodness of God. Shall we not, then, combine our strength, and make a corresponding effort, by prayer and fasting, to recover them out of the hands of the great destroyer? This is a propitious time. The Lord is smiling, and saying, "Come." The Spirit urges, "Come." The bride, making herself ready, echoes the cry, "Come." Truth is sought after, and men are inquiring, What shall I believe? What shall I do? Yea, more; "What shall I do to be saved?" There is conviction resting upon the people that something unusual is about to overtake them. Let us, by holy living and a complete giving up of all for Christ, and abiding in him, let our light so shine that men, seeing our good works, may be induced to run to the same fountain and be healed. We earnestly desire to see the work of the Lord prosper.

Now for Christ's sake, for the sake of dear ones, and a lost race, let us take hold of the horns of the altar, and make heaven rejoice over the repenting and returning prodigals. My heart, hand, and influence is in this preparation work to meet the Lord with a hearty welcome at his coming, and save men from utter destruction.

A PARABLE.

There came into a country the son of the King thereof; but the people of that country were rebellious, and when they saw the Prince of the blood come into their own country, they took him and evil entreated him. They set him in the pillory and put him to scorn. Now, in the midst of all that rebelled—amidst those who mocked and jeered at the Prince—there was one loyal subject; and when the Prince was brought to trial he stood up and defended him; and when they laughed and jeered at the Prince, the loyal subject so interposed himself always that they jeered and laughed at him too; and they counted him to be the offscouring of all things. They set the Prince in the pillory, and the loyal subject took his place by his side, and wiped off his face the filth that had been put upon it; and if he saw anything come that way that would offend the Prince's honor he would put himself in the way, so that the reproaches fell upon himself. A lot of people thought the man must have been mad, and ridiculed him.

At last the Prince came to his own, and on a certain day all the princes of the empire were gathered together, and the Prince sat upon the throne, and as the ceremonial of the grand court went on, he suddenly interrupted the proceedings as he espied among the crowd the man who had been his companion in the time when he was shamefully entreated; and singling him out he called to him, and said to all the princes, "Make way; there is the man whom I delight to honor, for he was with me in my shame, and he shall be with me this day in my glory."

Do you need me to translate the story? I will do it in a few words. If you are with Christ in the day of affliction, the time will come when, looking from his mercy-seat, he will spy you out, and he will say, "Make way, angels! Stand back, cherubim and seraphim! You never suffered hardship for my sake; you never bore ill names for me; nor were you laughed at and held up to scorn for my sake. Make way and let him come forward. He was with me in my shame; he shall be with me in my honor, and sit on my throne."

Let us all feel that we are sworn in for Christ, and that we mean to defend his cause at all hazards, even to life's latest hour. Let us all in the name of God be such, and "cast not away your confidence which hath great recompense of reward."—Spurgeon.

PERSONAL EFFORT.

HIRAM MUNGER.

The cause of religion has always been started and sustained by personal effort. This means a great deal, for it works in many ways, if it is carried on scripturally. See the woman at the well. What a great work started from that short personal effort of our Savior. Many similar results are recorded in his life, not connected with his public efforts. The apostolic personal effort is seen in Philip's attack on the eunuch in the street. The result was, Philip did not leave him till he had baptized him. Acts 8:27–39. Approaching a great dignitary in this way might appear a piece of ill manness; but religious duties sometimes intrude upon false dignity. See Paul's attack on the worshipers at Mars' Hill (Acts 17:22), and many other similar efforts by the apostles which resulted in spreading a religious influence.

Personal effort has been found effectual in all ages of the church. Luther's Reformation and John Wesley's great godly work consisted in personal effort, and is continued now where there is a live church. A class meeting rightly managed is a personal effort; for every one is spoken to if they do not speak without. This is like the inquiry meetings that prove so successful now-a-days. Such meetings have two necessary qualifications. First, it instructs the inquiring minds, and strengthens the weak and tempted. Second, it shuts off these long, spun-out testimonies, that have killed more religious meetings than the great Indian king Philip ever killed white men. I do not know as this inconsistent practice of killing meetings by long talking and long prayers will ever be got over, unless it is done by having a meeting, like a class meeting, where all shall have a chance to speak. A church prayer and conference meeting is common stock, and doters about questions of no profit always take advantage of such meetings to put in a wild gourd that makes the children sick, or the young, weak christians stay away. It is more of an effort and tact to keep a conference meeting in order than it is to preach. Few good preachers have that gift.

A short time ago a preacher started a conference meeting, so I was told, by reading a long hymn, every word, prayed twelve minutes, read another hymn, then talked twenty minutes, exhorting all to speak and speak short (which they must if at all, for he took half of the time in getting out of the way). Then there were fifty four to give in their testimonies. Of course but few spoke, if they followed his example. But the meeting was dead enough to bury before the preacher got through. This is a fair sample of many conference meetings led by preachers. Such preachers generally preach very long, which is the cause in most cases of a dead church; especially if they are settled. But such ought to travel, and divide the distress among many.

It is a fact that there is more complaint of late about long praying, talking and preaching than for twenty years. Such a course will kill the effort made by church members in inviting others into our meetings. It is right and consistent to use our influence, individually, to get others to attend meeting; and it is also consistent to have the meeting so judiciously managed that they will like to stay. We need a reform in many places in this respect.

THE DAY IS AT HAND.

My night is far spent, my day is at hand. The wilderness is nearly traversed; Canaan and Jerusalem are almost within my view; the summits of the everlasting hills are already appearing.

What manner of person, then, ought I to be in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hastening forward unto the coming day of our God?

I must press forward; and so much the more as I see the day approaching. I must be heavenly minded, so walking worthy of my calling, and setting my affections on things above. For what have I, who have a crown in prospect, a kingdom in reversion, to do with the vanities or pleasures of this poor and passing world? My eye is above; my treasure is in heaven; shall not my heart be there also? If I am in Christ, I must seek to be like him, and to follow him more and more closely, as the night is hastening to an end, and the day about to break. If I am in sorrow, I shall call to mind that weeping endureth but for a night, but joy cometh in the morning. If I am in comfort, I must see that this prosperity which God has given me is making me a holier man, and a more self-denying worker for him who loved me and washed me from my sins in his own blood. If I am poor, I shall rejoice that my day of wealth is at hand. If I am rich, I shall take the gold my Lord hath given me, and lay it all at his beloved feet. Mine must be no half discipleship—no serivce of two masters,—no divided heart. The night is far spent, the day is at hand. What remains of this brief life of mine must be given wholly to the Lord.—H. Bonar.

Bees find the flowers, not because they are symmetrical and beautiful, but because they have honey in them. If sinners are ever attracted to the churches, it will not be by the observance of stated and stately forms, or by the display of gaudy paraphernalia, but because there is honey in them.

LETTER.

To the Editors of the World's Crisis:—
Dear Brn.:—Having long enjoyed the privilege of reading the Crisis through your generosity, a word or two may not be untimely by way of explanation.

For many years the paper has been sent to me "without money and without price." My first impressions of "life through Christ" were acquired by diligent attention and careful investigation of the subject as presented in its pages, and especially through the help and kindness of a very near and dear brother, who considered my circumstances and secured my name a place on your "free list." Though my will always responds to the dictates of conscience that to publish a paper it costs money, yet circumstances over which I have no control denies me the privilege of contributing to its support. The many beautiful thoughts and words of its contributors, now registered above, have with other new and pleasant connections, always found a place in my heart. It has left under my roof sources of hope and consolation that has mitigated the poignant grief and pain incidental to sickness and death; and I have clung with undying solicitude to its pages like the Bereans, "searching to see if these things were so." And while it does not, and cannot abridge my interest in the divine Transcript, yet it is a beautiful lexicon of thought, anticipating that final peace which eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath entered into the heart of man.

I am profoundly thankful to enjoy its pages, and with my heart and life on the side of Christ, pray that this mission work of heaven may prosper in your hands. I realize that in God's creative and providential goodness we are assimilated in thought and purpose, and as I hope with you, that after life's hopes have wasted into ashes, and all human aspirations are under the drifting dust, and its shadows all forgotten, so we shall meet where torn hearts shall be bound up, and the bitterness of bereavement forgotten in the joy of union forever.

A word or two more, and I will cease to encumber your columns. As I write, this "Advent Messenger" before me, assuages the affliction which the rushing torrent of the fountain of the past bears on its surface, and which memory will never fail to unseal. But a little way there are graves where dead leaves lie heaped in mounds, where the moonlight glistens, and the howling winter winds play their solemn dirge around the marble slabs. One whose feet have wandered through all life's seasons—its violet-purpled spring, its rose-flushed summer, its fruitful autumn and its dreary winter,—but their rest shall be eternal. Hands, weary with labor, have fallen listlessly from their tasks; eyes have grown dim, and shoulders, which have bowed beneath earthly burdens, shall once more stand erect in the sunshine of heaven. The old man sleeps well. Death is always peaceful.

One more. Memory goes back to the time when a beloved daughter nestled a helpless wailing thing in our arms. The precious life that flowed so evenly with ours went out in darkness. The head that has lain on our breast, the arms that have encircled us, the lips that have kissed us, and the heart that measured such an eternity of love, lies under our feet. But a little while, and she will have crossed the dark river, and climb the white shores of the other side. How should we tremble at the storms if we knew not that God's hand was at the helm! If there has been a November in our hearts there will surely come a May-time. May we be able to say with Eli—"It is the Lord, let him do whatsoever seemeth him good.

"For after every storm there comes a calm,
And quiet havens border every sea;
So faith, transcending every rude alarm,
Speaks quiet rest and peace at last for me.

Rest with the loved ones past this state of sadness,
Sorrow, pain, death, and evil gone;
Rest where the hills smile in endless gladness,
Tinged with the light of the unchanging morn."

Woonsocket, R. I. ALVIN G. DODGE.

THE GREAT ERROR.

THOS. FITZSIMMONS.

It is urged by some, that such a coming state of lawlessness and anarchy, as is maintained on Prophecy by Adventists to occur soon, can never come in the United States, where the intelligence of the people and the law will keep it down, and maintain order by force. Now it never occurs to those logicians, what if the officers of the law are the elected agents from the disorderly elements themselves?

No one will deny that the past ten years in America has witnessed a vast deterioration and drift in our politics this way, and we believe it will still further go on, as the people are more and more getting restless of control, and the orderly will then discover that the leaders in power are of and from the turbulent elements, and will at the bidding of their constituency inaugurate the bloody contest themselves.

Every intelligent man knows the kind of men who largely fill the public offices of the country to-day, and knows the organization now rapidly going on in every part of the country among the labor, democratic, socialist, and secret political orders, to combine as one great political party to put their own leaders into power for political purposes! How many labor and radical conventions have been held the past few years with this avowed purpose! There is to-day an entire schism in all the old political parties, and there is every indication that the next party in the United States will be a people's labor, democratic, revolutionary party, with the avowed purpose of getting the reins of the government into their own hands. To-day the war cry of these organizations are, "Combine! combine! In unity there is strength, and in strength success." We think they are blind who cannot see this significant new drift over the country.

The following, from a recent New York Journal, is but one of many testimonies. It says:—

"A large meeting of working men was held in the Cooper Institute, New York, at which remarks were made by Peter Cooper and others. A resolution was also adopted looking to the formation of a new political party, 'based upon the principles of liberty, equality, and justice to labor.'"

Later. The New York correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger thus writes to that Journal on this movement:—

"New York City.—The labor question is again assuming political prominence. To-day we have the manifesto of the Executive Committee of a new organization that has been formed for the purpose of resisting the repeal of the Eight Hour Law, and also of uniting all the working men of the city in a compact party, to maintain their own interests independently of the politicians. It is this organization which was powerful enough to defeat the nomination of Fitz John Porter as Public Park Commissioner last week, and which threatens the confirmation of his successor now, unless he can give satisfactory proof that he is not in favor of reducing wages. It is also making a strong effort at Albany to have a bill passed fixing those wages at $2 per diem for laborers doing corporation work. There have been many attempts heretofore to combine the labor interests, but they have always failed for want of cohesion. This one promises success."

In the City of Philadelphia recently two large mass meetngs of working men have been held, one American and the other German. We let the papers of that city show the sentiments that were there expressed. The Philadelphia Ledger says in its report of these meetings:—

"After a brief speech by the chairman, Mr. John Swinton, of New York, delivered an address, during which he said that at New York they were constantly informed of Philadelphia's prosperity. He assured the audience of his utter astonishment on arriving in town at being informed that there were here between fifty and seventy thousand men out of work. "There must be something wrong," continued the speaker, "in the order of things and the manner of our system of society, when we see these myriads of miserables roaming about the country unable to find anything to do, with nowhere to lay their head, and no prospect for the next meal except by begging for it. The working men must take hold of this matter themselves, must lift themselves out of their misery and degradation; for the working man would never rise until he used for his own purposes the immense power of the ballot which had been entrusted to his hands."

The meeting was further addressed by Mr. P. J. McGuire, of New Haven. He united with the previous speaker in expressing astonishment at the fact that there are in Philadelphia thousands of idle working people, and he was of the belief that the Social Democratic party would remedy these difficulties.

At the meeting of Germans, Mr. John Swinton, of New York, was introduced, and made some remarks, during which he explained the aim and object of the "Social Democratic Working Men's party." Speeches were also made by P. J. McGuire, of New Haven, and others, when the meeting adjourned."

Within the past six months similar meetings have also been held in New England, the west and south. Facts are very stubborn things.

THE CAUSE.

W. TEFFT.

I would say a word of encouragement to those watchmen on Zion's walls who are willing to strike out right and left, "without fee or reward," but wait for a "recompense at the resurrection of the just." I think I never witnessed such general interest to hear on the "signs of the times" and other kindred truths. Everywhere I go people have become disgusted with formal, heartless ceremonies, and it seems almost like a "famine for hearing the word of the Lord." We do not need to be orators, nor do we want to try to preach like others; nor yet to see how much noise we can make; but first of all we must be filled with the Holy Spirit, and then "study to show ourselves workmen that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word."

Sensational or emotional preaching does but little in saving men, although it may seem to convert them quicker than "sound doctrine;" yet when the emotion (which is the immediate cause of action) is over, and instead, trials or persecutions come, they have no "anchor," no basis of faith, and the "blessed experience" or emotional excitement, which was the mainspring of their action, being gone, they naturally conclude that either they never were converted, or else "there is nothing to religion after all."

A man converted by the Word, if trials come, he immediately runs to it for consolation, and every promise he appropriates. Hope springs up, light and joy inspires him, his faith grows stronger, and "he endures as seeing him who is invisible."

This agrees with the instruction of our Savior, Matt. 13:18–23; where, among the four classes of hearers, none were really benefitted, but he that heard the Word and understood it.

But I took my pen to say a word about the cause. I preached at Milldale, Ct., Jan. 23rd. Here is a good church. Deep interest was manifested by outsiders. While there, through the aid of Brn. C. S. Branch and I. Belzer, we obtained a place, and commenced evening meetings in the little village of Marion. This is a new field, but very deep interest was manifested. We held meetings three weeks, three meetings each week, and filled our Sunday appointments. And although the weather was very stormy all the time, and mud deep, the interest increased. We had good attendance, the very best attention, and the people were not willing the meetings should close. I left them in the care of our dear Bro. O. D. Woodruff, who was with us two evenings, from whom we expect to hear good news. I think I never saw a better prospect of raising up a people for the Lord. The public mind was all in our favor, and prejudice was all gone.

Jan. 30th went to Bridgeport. I think I never met with a church with better prospects before them. Had a large congregation of the most intensely interested hearers. Spoke in the P. M. on the signs of Christ's speedy return, and when we closed, some Baptist brethren came up and wanted to know why we spoke so short; but when I reminded them that I had spoken nearly one hour and a half, they seemed much surprised, and said they could stay all night to hear such preaching. One said he could have got five hundred more hearers if he had known we were going to take up that subject. The giving away of those copies of the Crisis by Bro. Andrews, is already productive of great good.

There are some items of interest I must omit, as I have already trespassed too long on your columns. O how often I am led to exclaim with the Master—"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few," and then I do pray the Lord to send forth faithful laborers, who will not shun to declare the whole counsel of God.

Just as a person with weak sight will yet see things more clearly in the open day than one with the strongest vision at midnight; so a poor unlettered man can discern spiritual truth, as one who walketh in the day; whilst other men, however naturally gifted, do but grope in the night.

FROM BRO. R. H. GOODE.

Dear Editors:—We crave your indulgence a short time while attempting to pen a few thoughts for the pages of the Crisis.

On the third Sabbath in this month we had an opportunity of listening to a sermon upon immortality, delivered by Eld. Bridges, Methodist minister of this place. Ample preparations had been made to render the sermon convincing, and if possible, erase from the minds of the people Advent heresy. Adventists were especially invited to attend, and assured by Methodist brethren they would hear something conclusive upon the subject, as Mr. B——. is considered by his demonstration an able man. Actuated by this assurance, and thinking to hear something different from the ordinary routine of modern theological discussion, I, in company with others of like faith, attended the meeting. The discourse, though a long one, amounted to little else than a repetition of modern theological ideas regarding the immortality of the soul; and a futile attempt at criticism upon Advent views of the Bible. Nor was criticism the least fault pertaining to the sermon; if so, it might have passed unnoticed; but the Scriptures of divine truth were so warped as to mystify the teachings of the early christians, and make void the ancient hope of Christ's second coming to raise the dead, and give eternal life to all those who love his appearing.

Eld. B——. labored hard to convince his hearers that Adventism was a false doctrine, subversive of the teachings of the Bible, and that man does possess an innate principle that lives, moves, and has a conscious existence independent of the physical organism. This he attempted to prove from philosophical and historical standpoints.

Philosophically we were told, that whatever is indestructible is immortal; and that as the spirit or soul of man is indecomposable it must be immmortal. Then it follows, that as electricity and oxygen are indecomposable they too are immortal. Historically we were told, the heathen philosophers, the fetich Egyptians, and the idol worshiping Hindoos taught the doctrine away back in the primeval gloom of the past, and therefore it must be true.

What an argument for a learned man to advance! To accept immortal soulism upon such reasoning would drive us to the acceptance of a theology that teaches the worshiping of animals, the transmigration of the soul, and the existence of three hundred and thirty millions of gods.

History informs us that the Egyptians and Hindoos have taught the same from time immemorial; and if we accept one item of their creed upon the score of age, why not accept the whole upon the same conditions? If they are good authority regarding the immortality of the soul, are they not good authority as regards its migratory nature? We see no reason why they should not be, and no reason why authority does not embody into its theology the doctrine of the transmigration of the soul.

Again Eld. B——. says, Solomon taught the Egyptians that man possesses a distinct entity, which at death quits the body, and is wafted by angels to heaven's gate—Poetry catches the strain—

"And shouting on their wings he flies
And gains his rest in paradise."

If Solomon ever taught such a doctrine to the Egyptians or any one else, we hazard nothing in making the assertion, that it was after he had abandoned the worship of the true and living God for the worship of idols. But let us refer to Solomon's writings, and see if he ever taught such a dogma. And by the way this brings us to the brother's text: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Eccl. 12th chap., 7th verse.

This passage of Scripture Mr. B——. thought was conclusive evidence that man possesses a personal entity, capable of a conscious existence, separate from the physical organism. Taking the position of Eld. B——., that spirit is the soul, he houses in heaven the wicked dead of past ages, and establishes beyond a doubt the doctrine of universal salvation. For note the language of the text—"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." There is no distinction made as to the spirits that ascend. The evil and the good go up, and one is as much a participant of the bliss of heaven as the other, if Eld. B——. is correct.

Perhaps we may be told the spirit or soul receives its reward at death, and is assigned to the happiness of heaven or the torments of hell. Then I inquire, what need is there of the resurrection, and a general judgment to judge the quick and the dead? Why call the sleeping dust from the tomb, the saint from heaven, and the damned from hell, if sentence is passed upon them at death?

The Scriptures are so plain upon this point that it does seem to me wayfaring men, though fools, should not err therein. Take the testimony of Solomon; "For the living know that they shall die, but the dead know not anything, neither have they any more a reward; for the memory of them is forgotten. Eccl. 9:56. From the reading of these verses it does seem evident the dead are not rewarded. Again the Savior says: "Behold I come quickly, and my reward is with me, to give to every man according as his work shall be." Then the dead will hear the voice of the Son of man, and come forth from their sleeping dust to put on life and immortality.

In Rev. 11:18, we read, "And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name small and great." Is it not evident from the reading of this Scripture that the righteous—the patriarchs and prophets of God—are awaiting the voice of the Son of man to pierce the cold, still ear of death, and call forth from t e sleeping dust?

Looking forward by the eye of faith to the coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead, Paul exclaims—"So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?"

ANTICHRIST.

In John 4:2, 3, it is written "Hereby know ye the Spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come (eleluthota) in the flesh is of God. And every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God; and this is that spirit of Antichrist, whereof ye have heard that it should come, and even now already it is in the world.

In 2 John 7, it is written, "For many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is to come (erchomenon) in the flesh. This is a deceiver and an Antichrist."

In the former passage, those who do not confess the incarnation of the Son of God and his having come in the flesh are declared to be of Antichrist. In the latter, those who do not confess that the incarnated Son will come again in the flesh, are declared to be an Antichrist. The main point in which both agree is in the denial of the second coming of Christ in the flesh; for the latter denies it positively, and the former, by denying the incarnation, consequently deny the second coming in the flesh. Beware of the Anti-Christ.—Prophetic Times.

HYMN.

J. ALBERT LIBBY.

Before thy face, with lifted hands,
My helplessness, O God, I plead;
Look on the form of Him who stands
With thee, for me to intercede.

The marks of sin are on his brow,
Yea, in his hands, and feet, and side;
Here were the fountains whence did flow
For all my guilt, the cleansing tide.

My sins helped weave the thorny crown,
The nails were driven for my guilt;
On me his eyes were looking down
When freely thus his blood was spilt.

With broken heart and bowing head,
Fallen upon my bended knee,
I hear the words "forgive him," said,
And now I know he meaneth me.

His name hath led me to thy throne;
His work for me this boldness gives;
I nothing am, I gladly own,
I live redeemed because he lives.

LETTER.

MRS. B. LOOMIS.

To the church of Christ greeting:—As I have taken the Crisis since I first knew of its existence, and have taken a great deal of comfort in reading its contents, especially the christian experiences, I thought I would write a little of my experience, thinking it might benefit some one. When about thirteen years of age, I became awakened, and much concerned for my soul's salvation, and would go by myself and try to pray; but finding no relief, I concluded the next meeting I attended I would let the people know how I felt. The next Sabbath the minister preached upon the judgment, when the wicked will stand on the left hand, and the Judge will say, Depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire." This so affected me that I arose and asked what I should do to be saved; and from that time went on trying to be a christian, but do not now think I was then converted.

Three or four years after I went among a class of people called Shakers, and they appeared to me such a pure and holy people, that I concluded to stay among them, as they were quite anxious I should do so. They taught that if we confess and forsake our sins, God is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and cleanse us from all unrighteousness. And as I well knew the Bible taught this, I set myself about it in good earnest, confessing to their Elders, and after a time I was brought into severe trouble of mind. I would go again and try to so confess that God would give me peace of mind; but the more I confessed the more troubled in mind I became, until I almost fell into despair. Still I would pray God to enlighten me, that I might be comforted, as I thought I could not live so. I went to the sister I had so often confessed to, and said to her, "Do pray for me." After a while I became happy, the light broke into my mind, and my burden of sin was gone, and the Lord showed me that it was through the prayers of this sister. This gave me faith in prayer, and that it was not by my own efforts that I could obtain salvation. Had it been I should have obtained salvation before that time.

Some of their teachings were that Christ would not appear in the clouds of heaven, but that he had already appeared in the clouds of his witnesses, and that we were then living in the millennium. Thus they perverted the Scriptures. I was a strong believer in most of their doctrines, and yet at times I doubted that Christ had made his second appearance. I prayed the Lord to lead me in the right way, and he heard and answered my prayers, and led me out of Shakerism in a most remarkable manner.

One day, as I was busily engaged, it came to my mind that Christ would make his second appearance in the clouds, and it was not far distant; and it seemed so near I thought I might live to see that day; but I kept this idea to myself, and still stayed with them, until the Lord enlightened my mind by many remarkable manifestations of his power, and gave me to see their teachings were the teachings of men. When this was made known to me, the disappointment I experienced I cannot describe. I then retired to my room, but did not close my eyes during the night, for I had found the foundation on which I had rested my hopes, and where I had borne such a cross, was among those whose leaders were blind lead ing the blind, and so must fall in the ditch.

What must I do? I arose in the morning before it was day, and proceeded to the Elders, and told them what the Lord had made known to me, and they called their minister, and when they had heard this, all they could say was, "Do the best you can for yourself;" and they wept like children. Now I must go to the Lord to know what to do. I began to fear I must leave my home, and the Lord would forsake me. Then my mind was drawn to the Bible. I took it up, and opened to the second book and second chapter of Kings, where Elijah was taken up to heaven. This I took as a promise from God that if I did right I would not be forsaken. After a while I told them I wished them to take me away, and after a stay of nineteen years I took my leave to wander, I knew not where.

How often I have been reminded of good old Abraham, in my sojourn, as I had not a relative in that part of the country, nor scarcely an acquaintance; but the Lord has been with me, and led me in a way I knew not. As yet I knew no believer in the second appearance of Christ being near, until, as I went into a house one day, and saw a pamphlet on the table, I found it to have been written by Wm. Miller. He had so studied the Bible and computed the time, that he thought Christ would come in 1843 or 4, and truly I felt glad to find that any held the same belief as I myself. I still have the same mind that Christ is near, and the time hasteth greatly; and though I am almost seventy-five years of age, I still think I may live to see that day.

Should any one read this who has not made their peace with God, I would say to them, Flee to the Rock of safety that is cleft for us, that you may not at that day call for rocks and mountains to fall upon you, to hide you from Him who sitteth upon the throne.

HOME AND HEALTH.

COMPOSITION OF THE AIR.

The chief constituents of the air are nitrogin and oxygen. These two gases compose so nearly the whole bulk of the atmosphere that other elements need not be considered in estimating their relative proportions. Nitrogen is a neutral gas, serving merely to dilute the oxygen. It constitutes very nearly four-fifths of the air. Oxygen is that element which sustains the life of all animals. It forms only one-fifth of the great aerial ocean. These proportions are the same in the air found upon the tops of the highest mountains, and in the deepest valleys. If the proportion of oxygen is either increased or diminished to any appreciable extent, animal life is greatly interfered with.

But besides oxygen and nitrogen, there are various other gases found in the air. In fact, the air really contains a little of everything found upon the surface of the globe. Most of these elements are in such very minute proportions that they can have no material influence either beneficial or otherwise; but there are a few which are sources of serious mischief.

Carbonic acid, or carbon di-oxide, exists in air considered pure in the proportion of four parts in ten thousand, by volume. In breathing, oxygen is taken into the lungs, and is absorbed by the blood, carried to all the different parts of the system, and finally appears at the lungs again, and is exhaled as carbon di-oxide. About four cubic inches of oxygen are taken into the lungs at each inspiration. Of this quantity, about one-fourth, or one cubic inch, is converted into carbon di-oxide and poured out into the air at every breath. All animals produce carbon di-oxide in this way, making an enormous aggregate daily production. Lamps, stoves, candles, gas-lights, and all processes of combustion and decay, add to the amount of this poisonous gas produced by animals. When the proportion becomes increased from four parts in ten thousand to six parts in the same quantity of air, it becomes a very grave cause of disease, producing consumption and other lung diseases, besides disturbing nearly every function of the body.

Various gases, such as sulphureted hydrogen and ammonia, escapes from sewers, cess-pools, and other places where organic decomposition is taking place, and poison the air, and thus become a source of disease.

One of the most remarkable constituents of the air is the organic matter present in it. This is made up of decomposing animal and vegetable matter, microscopic animals, and the spores and eggs of microscopic plants and animals. Many diseases are occasioned by the inhalation of germs of this character. They are even more poisonous than the gaseous poisons which contaminate the "breath of life."—The Health Reformer.

FASHION AND NEURALGIA.

A physician of a London hospital, writing to the British Medical Journal, remarks on the increase of neuralgia in the face and head of females compared with the amount of the disease found in the male sex, and says:—"There is no doubt that it is one of the most common of female maladies—one of the most painful and difficult of treatment. It is also a cause of much mental depressson, and leads more often to habits of intemperance than any other. This growing prevalence of neuralgia may to some extent be referred to the effects of cold upon the terminal branches of the nerves distributed to the skin; and the reason why men are less subject to it than women may to a great extent, I think, be explained by the much greater protection afforded by the mode in which the former cover their heads when they are in the open air. It may be observed that the surface of the head which is actually covered in man is at least three times that which fashion allows to a woman; indeed, the points of contact between the hat or bonnet and the head in the latter are so irregular as practically to destroy any protection which might otherwise be afforded. If I were to report to the journal a case of facial neuralgia cured on the principle of protecting the lateral and frontal surface of the face, as well as the superior part of the scalp, it might excite a certain amount of ridicule. I can assure you, however, that my patient considers that her case ought to be reported; for she says that, if we cannot do much for neuralgia with our prescriptions, we ought to oppose fashion when we find it prejudicial to health and productive of suffering."

Women are without doubt the slaves to fashion, but if the ridiculous custom of wearing a make-believe bonnet or hat, a mere frame on which to stick a few feathers and ribbons, is the cause of neuralgia, with all its more serious results, it is time that a more suitable head-covering should be invented.—Boston Journal of Chemistry.

"WHEN HE COMES."

ANTHONY BUSCH.

O for that day, that natal day,
When sleeping earth shall wake,
And from her eyelids shake
The lethargy of ages lost in sin,
And taste the joys—those joys that might have been;—
'Twill be—'twill only be—when He comes.

O for the time, that promised time,
When nature, bowed in gloom,
Shall rise afresh to bloom;
When all the pangs of Paradise deplored
Shall be the bliss of Paradise restored!
'Twill be—'twill only be—when He comes.

O for that hour, that hallowed hour,
When mortal dust shall stand
Where the sure guardian hand
Shall signal to the dying clay—"Arise!"
And man redeemed, immortal, pierce the skies!
'Twill be—'twill only be—when He comes.

O for the age, undying age,
When death and woe and pain
Shall curse no more again;
When blooming earth renewed, enrobed in light,
Shall swell the tuneful chorus to His might;
'Twill be—'twill only be—when he comes.

THE LAW OF GOD.

R. W. WILSON.

From the use which Seventh Day teachers make of the expression "The Law," as frequently found in the Bible, we would be led to believe that it always referred to the ten commandments. We will give a few Scriptural examples to show that this expression "the law," is quite general in its meaning; very frequently it has reference to the five books of Moses, the Pentateuch, and at other times it relates to any part of the Jewish Scriptures; it signifies, also, God's doctrine as a whole, embracing all the instruction he has given in his word. John 10; 34: "Jesus answered them, Is it not written in your law, "I said, Ye are gods?" John 12: 34: "The people answered him, We have heard out of the law that Christ abideth forever." John 15: 25: "But this cometh to pass that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, they hated me without a cause." Matt. 5: 17, 18: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law or the prophets. I am not come to destroy but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled."

What law did the Savior refer to here? This is answered by a passage in Luke 24: 44, "And he said unto them, these are the words which I spake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things must be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moses, and in the prophets and in the Psalms concerning me." Gal. 4: 21, "Tell me ye that desire to be under the law, do ye not hear the law?" Paul means by the first expression, "under the law," the one which is contained in the first covenant, and in the allegory, of which he speaks in the connection, as from Mount Sinai which gendereth to bondage, which is Agur: but in the second, "do ye not hear the law," the context shows that he has reference to what is written in Gen. and in Isa. Psalm 19: 7: "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul." The marginal reading is "doctrine," which is instruction, or that which is taught.

Sabbatarians depend more on this text than any other to prove the perfection of the ten commandments, as a rule for moral conduct; but they offer not the slightest proof that this text has any more reference to the Decalogue, than it has to any other portion of the All Scripture given by inspiration of God and is profitable for doctrine.

In reading an article on the law, written by Eld. J. H. Waggoner, I find he has used this text six times as the foundation of his theory relative to the perfection of the ten commandments; and as one error is generally the root of another, he has produced several from his perversion of this Scripture, that are very contradictory to the word of God and quite pernicious in their tendencies.

I will give you some of his own words on this point as found in No. 38 of The Signs of The Times. "But if it could be shown that another law had been given in the New Testament, why should it be called a better law than that given on Mt. Sinai? Could it be more just in its nature? That was perfect. Could it be more replete with moral obligations? . . . But if that law was perfect, embracing in its requirements the whole duty of man (and so it must have been or the Scriptures are not true), then every principle of morality that could arise out of our relation to God or our fellow-men must have been embraced in it. . . . If all the moral duties growing out of our relation to God and to our fellow-creatures were included in that, then none remained to be added thereafter."

False premises produce false conclusions. According to Eld. Waggoner's teaching we have no moral instruction in the word of God, either in the New Testament or in the Old, except what is contained in the ten commandments. Inasmuch as the object of this writer is to prove the importance and supremacy of the ten commandments, as a code of moral instruction over the teachings of the New Testament, we will examine this position in the light of the Divine word. Deut. 18: 18, 19, "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth, and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him, and it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him.

By referring to the context of this Scripture you will find that God in accordance with the request of the children of Israel, did not give them all of his words or commands in the day of the assembly in Horeb (or Sinai), but reserved a portion to be given and commanded by his prophet like unto Moses; and it is very manifest from the doctrine of Christ, which is the doctrine of God, that the words or commandments which God has spoken to us by his Son have much more weight in point of completeness, and in producing moral obligations, than those of the Decalogue. Acts 3: 22, 23: "For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me: him shall ye hear in all things, which he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that prophet shall be destroyed from among the people." John 8: 51: "Verily, verily I say unto you, if a man keep my sayings he shall never see death." Therefore, if destruction is the result of not hearing this prophet and eternal life the result of "keeping his sayings," he must have given some very vital instruction touching morality.

Prominent in these sayings of Christ we find "Have faith in God;" and "This is the word of God that ye believe on him whom he hath sent," also repentance and remission of sins, supreme love to God, love to our neighbor, and the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of God as the reward. These sayings are saving, and meet the real wants of fallen humanity. Said Paul, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by our Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him?" Again in 1st Tim. 4: 16: "Take heed unto thyself and unto the doctrine; continue in them; for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee."

What doctrine does Paul refer to here that is so saving? The doctrine of Christ which he had declared, and called it "the whole counsel of God;" and in giving God's whole counsel did he ever enjoin obedience to the ten commandments? No; but the strongest arguments he ever used were in support of the fact that God does not require perfect obedience to any law as the ground of justification, but heart-faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

After giving in Rom. 3: the most indisputable and infallible proofs in support of this position, he sums up by saying, "therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law." Paul did say in giving the whole counsel of God with regard to the fourth precept of the Decalogue, in Col. 2: 16, "Let no man therefore judge you in meat or in drink, or in respect of an holy day, or of the new moon, or of the Sabbath;" and also in 1 Tim. 1: 9, "Knowing this that the law is not made for a righteous man, but for the lawless and disobedient, for the ungodly and for sinners, for unholy and profane, for murderers of fathers and murderers of mothers, for manslayers, for whoremongers, for them which defile themselves with mankind, for menstealers, for liars, for perjured persons, and if there be any other thing that is contrary to sound doctrine." Mark this point, "the law is not made for a righteous man."

We learn from this that after a man has received Christ and abides in him by faith, he does not live in sin; he is complete in Christ; he has righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Spirit; and having the Spirit in him, and the love of God shed abroad in his heart thereby, he is in possession of that pre-eminent, law-fulfilling power—love; and it is his very nature to live righteously. He does not require the restraint of law, for it is the love of Christ which constrains him; so the law is not made for such, but for the disobedient.

We read in Isa. 33: 22, "For the Lord is our judge; the Lord is our lawgiver; the Lord is our king; he will save us." We are required to fulfil the law of Christ. What is the law of Christ? It is the doctrine of Christ. 2 John 1: 9: "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God." Did Christ teach his own doctrine or that of his Father? John 7: 16: "Jesus answered them and said my doctrine is not mine but his that sent me." And whereas God did not give all of his doctrine necessary for the moral instruction and salvation of man, when he gave the law from Mt. Sinai, but reserved what he has given since by his Son, this in itself furnishes positive evidence that any exposition of Scripture that is used to show the perfection of the ten commandments as a moral law embracing the whole duty of man, is grossly perverted.

We will hear Eld. Waggoner again. I now quote from the 44th No. of the same paper referred to above. In this article he uses his favorite text "The law of the Lord is perfect" over and over again, on which to base his arguments in favor of the perfection of the ten commandments; and he claims "that this law is so perfect that in the day of judgment God will judge the world by it. The day when God will judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ." But why did he not give the balance of this passage? Because it would spoil the point he was trying to establish. I will give you the whole passage. "In the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel", and not according to the ten commandments.

It is equally as culpable in any one to suppress a part of God's word, in order to give a different sense from the one contained in the passage as to add to it for the same end.

In another article we have found that this same writer has added one of his words to the word of God, in order to give strength to his position. If we find any more of this unfair dealing, we will not only conclude that Eld. Waggoner is the advocate of theories that are not in harmony with divine truth, but that he himself is not just what he ought to be. God has said in the passage already quoted, Deut., "It shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name I will require it of him." When will he require it of him? John 12: 48, 49: "He that rejected me and receiveth not my words hath one that judgeth him; the words that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day. For (or because) I have not spoken of myself, but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak."

Therefore the commandments of Christ are the commandments of God, and we have found that the doctrine or truth spoken by Christ is the doctrine or truth of God. Ps. 96: 13, "He shall judge the world with righteousness and the people with his truth." Eccl. 12: 13, 14, "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter, Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is the whole duty of man. For God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil." God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ, according to my gospel; and Paul's gospel was the gospel of Christ; and why will God judge the world according to it? Because it contains the sum and substance of every moral precept that God has given to man. It gives the fullest revelation of sin in its various forms, and it presents the whole duty of man with the greatest clearness and comprehensiveness.

Jesus said in relation to the Jews who were in possession of the law, and who lived under all the light of its obligations,—John 15: 22, "If I had not come and spoken unto them they had not had sin, but now they have no excuse (margin) for their sin."

But we will hear Eld. Waggoner once more on this subject. I quote from the 37th No. of The Signs of The Times: "Some would be willing to admit that Paul's endorsement of the Old Testament Scriptures is correct in some degree; they would accept his words yet under large limitations, but Paul's words allow of no limitations. . . . After saying "they are able to make thee wise unto salvation, they are profitable for doctrine, for discipline, for instruction in right-doing;" he adds, "that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works;" and as a confirmation of this he gives his usual text, "David said the law was perfect." This statement does not apply to us, for we receive this divine utterance of truth in full, and not with the limitation in which it comes to us from Eld. Waggoner. He has left out that portion of this passage which explains all the rest: "And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, [How?] through faith which is in Christ Jesus."

The Old Testament Scriptures mentioned here were only able to make wise unto salvation by means of the report which they gave of the Savior, and men were saved in Old Testament times, in the same way that they are now, not by rendering perfect obedience to any law. God saved them graciously by counting their faith in him who was to come and put away sin by the sacrifice of himself to them for righteousness, as Paul has said, Rom. 3: 21, 22. But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets, even the righteousness of God which is by faith of Jesus Christ, unto all and upon all them that believe."

"Being witnessed by the law and the prophets, "every sacrificial offering made for sin by the law witnessed for Christ, that he would come and "put away sin by the sacrifice of himself. And the prophets taught both his sufferings for us, and his righteousness. Jer. 23: 6, "In his days Judah shall be saved and Israel shall dwell safely; and this is the name whereby he shall be called the Lord our Righteousness." Ps. 89: 16, "In thy name shall they rejoice all the day, and in thy righteousness shall they be exalted." Isa. 44: 17, "This is the heritage of the servants of the Lord, and their righteousness is of me, saith the Lord." Our blessed Savior called Abel righteous, and he is the first one of our race who is thus declared. He was brought into this condition by faith in the promise God had made of a Redeemer, which he evinced by the offering of a more excellent sacrifice than Cain; and all who have become righteous since the days of righteous Abel down to this day, have been made such in the same way, namely, by having their faith in Christ counted or reckoned to them for righteousness.

God has but one method to save men, which is by his grace through faith in Christ, and this he instituted immediately after sin had entered into the world, and our race was brought under the curse; which is by means of his promises relative to Christ. This he has called his word, the everlasting covenant, reaching from the fall of man, through time, unto the eternal kingdom. It was confirmed to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, also to David, and to many more by Christ, who sealed it with his own blood. It was called the new covenant, to distinguish it from the Sinaitic, or old covenant. Ps. 105: 8, 9, "He hath remembered his covenant forever, the word which he commanded to a thousand generations; which covenant he made with Abraham, and his oath unto Isaac; and confirmed the same unto Jacob for a law." The covenant as declared here consisted in the promise God made to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, concerning Christ and the eternal inheritance. But how was this confirmed unto Jacob for a law? Because "by the obedience of faith in this promise he was brought into the same condition of righteousness as the fullest obedience to a given law could have rendered him [Having the same point in view Paul speaks of the Law of faith"]. Jacob is a representative of all who have heart-faith, and like him wrestle with God and prevail.

THE SIGNIFICANCE OF THE GREAT PROPHETIC SYMBOLS OF DANIEL AND JOHN.

L. T. CUNNINGHAM.

While Daniel's attention was fixed in considering the ten horns, "behold there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots." As there is a general agreement of writers as to the application of the ten horns to the ten kingdoms of the Roman empire, but some dispute as to the application of this little horn, we will notice some of the conditions of the prophecy.

First, it is said that this little horn came up among them, i e., the ten. This was in Western Rome, for here was where the body of the beast grew, and here is where the ten horns are to be found, and are so located by Machiavel, the Catholic historian, and others. As this "little horn" was to come up "among" the "ten," and the "ten" can only be located in Western Rome, it follows and is certain that this "little horn" can in no way be identical with the Eastern empire. The Eastern empire at the time of the rise of this "little horn" constituted the imperial power of the old "dragon," and we know that the "dragon" was to "give" the "leopard beast" (which is identical with this "little horn") his power, and throne, and great authority." This was done by Justinian, the Emperor of the East, who conquered the Vandals in Africa, and the Ostrogoths in Italy, and gave Rome, the original throne of the old "dragon," to the "beast," or the papal hierarchy.

The removal of the seat of government from Rome to Constantinople by Constantine in 329, which has so puzzled historians, was evidently ordered of God to bring about those changes in the empire that were necessary while undergoing the change from its pagan to its papal character. The imperial or dragonic power must exist somewhere at the time Popery was established. Now it is a historical fact that imperial power ended in Rome in A. D. 476, by the abdication of the emperor Augustulus, the last of that line of emperors established in the West, after the division of the empire by Theodosius in 395. The line of emperors in the East was not broken, but continued till the fall of Constantinople in A. D. 1453; therefore about A. D. 540 Justinian, the Eastern line of emperors in whom the imperial power was vested, conquered the Goths in Italy, and gave Rome into the hand of the papal hierarchy. So now the West with the East became united again, and the papal hierarchy adopted the code of laws framed by Justinian, which became the basis of legislation for papal Rome, or the empire, till broken by the French revolution in 1793–8.

It is a historical fact that imperial power was wholly transferred from Rome to Constantinople by the abdication of the emperor Augustulus, and by the vote of the Senate, in A. D. 476, and continued there till popery was established in Rome, about 540. That the Justinian code of laws was framed in the interest of the papacy, and incorporated into that system of abomination, is evident from the fact that they became the basis of European legislation for 1260 years, which legislation was under the direct control of the papal hierarchy. So that Gibbon could truly say that the laws which governed all Europe for more than a thousand years issued from the Vatican in Rome; and thus the saints and times and laws are now in the hands of that "little horn," for the predicted period of "time, and times, and the dividing of time."

It may be interesting to give here an extract from Irenæus, an ancient Christian writer, who lived in the second century. He interprets this little horn, applying it to the rise of antichrist. He says that "ten horns shall be upon the beast, and another little horn should rise up in the midst of them, and three horns of the first be rooted out before him; and behold, saith he, in this horn are eyes as the eyes of man, etc., of whom again the apostle Paul, in 2 Thess., declaring together the cause of his coming, thus says, And then shall the wicked one be revealed, etc. He also refers to John, the disciple of the Lord, in the Revelation that he "hath yet more manifestly signified of the last time, and of those ten kings in it among whom the empire that now reigns (the Roman empire) shall be divided; declaring what shall be the ten horns which were seen by Daniel, saying, The ten horns which thou sawest are ten kings, which have received no kingdom as yet, etc. Therefore it is manifest that of these he that is to come shall slay three, and the rest shall be subject to him, and he shall be the eighth among them."

Jerome on the place says that this is the sense of "all ecclesiastical writers, that when the Roman empire is destroyed there shall be ten kings who shall divide it among them; and an eleventh shall arise, a little king, who shall conquer three of the ten kings; and having slain them, the other seven shall submit their necks to the conqueror." This power he says is "the man of sin, and son of perdition; so that he dare to sit in the 'temple of God,' making himself as if he was God."

Says Dr. Gill, from whom these extracts are taken: "Now to the Roman antichrist everything here said answers. He is a horn possessed of power, strength, authority and dominion, of which the horn is an emblem; a 'little' one, which rose from small beginnings, and came to his ecclesiastical power from a common pastor, or bishop, to be a metropolitan of Italy, and then universal bishop; and to his secular power, which at first was very small, and since increased, and yet in comparison of other horns or kingdoms, but little; though being allowed to exercise a power within others, is, or at least has been, very formidable. This came up among the other horns (or kingdoms). When the northern barbarous nations broke into the empire, and set up ten kingdoms in it, this little horn sprung up among them; and while they were forming kingdoms for themselves, he was contriving one for himself; they rose at the same time and reigned together. See Rev. 17: 12, 13."

Says Bishop Newton:—"Antichrist then (as the fathers delight to call him), or the 'little horn,' is to be sought among the ten kingdoms of the western Roman empire. I say of the western Roman empire, because that was properly the body of the fourth beast. Greece, and the countries which lay eastward of Italy, belonged to the third beast; for the former beasts were still subsisting, though their dominion was taken away. 'As concerning the rest of the beasts [saith Daniel, v. 12], they had their dominion taken away; yet their lives were prolonged for a season and a time.' 'And therefore,' as Sir Isaac Newton rightly infers, 'all the four beasts are still alive, though the dominion of the first be taken away. The nations of Chaldæa and Assyria are still the first beast; those of Media and Persia are still the second beast; those of Macedon, Greece and Thrace, Asia Minor, Syria and Egypt, are still the third; and those of Europe, on this side of Greece, are still the fourth. Seeing, therefore, the body of the third beast is confined to the nations on this side the river Euphrates, and the body of the fourth beast is confined to the nations on this side of Greece, we are to look for all the four heads of the third beast among the nations on this side the river Euphrates; and for all the eleven horns of the fourth beast among the nations on this side of Greece. And, therefore, at the breaking of the Greek empire into four kingdoms of the Greeks, we include no part of the Chaldæans, Medes and Persians in those kingdoms, because they belonged to the bodies of the two first beasts. Nor do we reckon the Greek empire, seated at Constantinople, among the horns of the fourth beast, because it belonged to the body of the third.' For the same reason neither can the Saracen or the Turk be the 'little horn' or 'Antichrist,' as some have imagined them to be; and neither do they come up to the character in other respects."

We regard this reasoning of the two Newton's as sound and conclusive, because it is based on facts for evidence rather than fancy, and as it agrees with the express requirement of the prophecy.

This little horn had eyes, and a mouth; these are features, or elements, not stated as connected with any of the other horns. The kingdoms represented by the ten horns were composed of men of intelligence, with eyes to see, and mouths to speak; but in this, is a power of remarkable foresight and penetration, greatly differing from other kingdoms in its constitution, being an ecclesiastical and spiritual, as well as of civil and temporal authority. The policy of the Roman hierarchy is the most deep and damning of any ever before known among men. Its schemes and plans have been laid with consummate skill, and executed with a resolution second to none but of Diabolus himself; of monstrous wickedness surpassing all before it; the "detestable, horrible," or the "abomination of desolation," falsifying every righteous principle under heaven; while professedly an overlooker, or overseer, or bishop, professing to act as a good shepherd, to lead the sheep into good pastures, and beside still waters, they have been of the character of the "wolf" that has devoured the "sheep."

The "mouth" in this "horn" has also spoken "great things." The popes in their bulls of excommunication have arrogated to themselves prerogatives and titles that belong only to God; setting aside the laws of God, and in their assumptions as above all law, they have spoken most blasphemous words against the Most High, and have "worn out," or wasted, "the saints of the Most High," and have "changed times and laws," have made war upon all that have dared to oppose its pretensions or resist its claims. It became inaugurated and established by reason of "arms" that stood "on his part"; first, in suppressing paganism; second, in plucking up three Arian kingdoms—the Burgundians, the Vandals, and the Ostrogoths; this last in 540. It is called in Scripture "the mystery of iniquity," and its workings have been, as it were, behind the curtain in its rise, so that superficial interpreters of prophecy have confounded it with the Greek empire, they not having given close attention to its scriptural delineation. Jurisdiction was given to it over the whole Roman empire, both East and West, and all have been appalled with amazement by reason of "the great words which the horn spake," and all the world have worshiped the beast, except "those whose names were written in the book of life." But "he that has" led "into captivity has gone into captivity; he that has killed with the sword is now being killed by the sword." The times of its continuance in its several conditions have well nigh run their course. The "time," and times, and the dividing of time" (or 1260 years) evidently terminated near the commencement of the present century, and the 1335 years from its establishment to its final overthrow must now be near their completion; and accumulating signs keep even pace with prophetical and historical data.

THE ATONEMENT.

I. C. WELLCOME.

Having shown the hopeless state of man by Adam's transgression, so far as any effort which he could make to reclaim himself, or anything the law could do for him, we now pass to consider the effects of Adam's transgression upon the earth and the animal creation.

This is presented to us first in Gen. 3: 17: "Because thou hast . . . eaten of the tree of which I commanded thee, saying, Thou shalt not eat of it, CURSED is the GROUND for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. Thorns also and thistles shall it bring forth unto thee, and thou shalt eat the herb of the field . . . till thou return unto the ground." Paul gives us a grand comment on this: "For the creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but by reason of him who hath subjected the same in hope. . . . For we know that the whole creation [every creature—margin] groaneth and travaileth in pain together until now." Rom. 8: 20, 22, "For the creature was subjected to suffering"—Whiting. These Scriptures and many others show clearly that the evil results of Adam's sin, fell not only on him, but upon all the creation which God had pronounced good, very good. But this point we have argued more fully in another chapter of this book.

In view of these facts our loss in Adam may be summed up as follows: 1. We lost in Adam the right to live. This right was involved in the command (Gen. 1: 28), "Be fruitful, multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it." Also in Gen. 2: 16, "And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, Of all the trees of the garden thou mayest freely eat." This includes the tree of life, whose fruit was not to give life, but to preserve life. We do not argue that Adam's life was eternal life. No term of time was given by which to measure it. Its perpetuity depended on his obedience to the command of God. Thus it is written: "But of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it, for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." Gen. 2: 17.

We lost in Adam the prospect of eternal life, and dominion over the earth (Gen. 1: 28), which was based on the condition of obedience to the law of God. Adam had right to the tree of life, which would have preserved his life forever. See Gen. 3: 22, "Lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever." He had this prospect laid before him in the benediction. "And God blessed them, and God said unto them, Be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it, and have dominion." This dominion is referred to by the Psalmist: "Thou madest him (man) to have dominion over the works of thy hands." Ps. 8: 6. We find Paul also arguing upon it as a matter of much importance. He quotes Ps. 3: 6, and refers it to "the world to come," Heb. 2: 5, 9.

Again, we find a graphic statement of this matter by the prophet: "And then, O tower of the flock, the stronghold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come [What come?], even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of [New] Jerusalem." To this add the statements of Christ: "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth" (Matt. 5: 5), and again, "Come, ye blessed of my father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 34.

In the above text Jesus refers to the same dominion presented to Adam; and that it was an eternal dominion is settled by Christ's words in the 46th verse of Matt. 25th: "And these [the wicked] shall go away into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal." All this was in prospect for Adam on condition of obedience to God, and was lost by his transgression.

3. We lost in Adam a state of probation or trial preparatory to eternal life, and the dominion. Gen. 1: 28. Ps. 8: 6. If Adam had obeyed the law of God, which he might and ought to have done, no death would have entered nor curse blighted the fair creation of God, which he had pronounced very good. Then we, his posterity, in pursuance of that law, would have gained the promised dominion. But, alas! in the hour of temptation, by a single act of disobedience, his prospects were blighted in a moment, and all was lost. "By one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that [being in him] all have sinned." Rom. 5: 12.

4. We lost in Adam a good, sound, and healthful organism, both physical and mental; for thus it is written: "And God saw everything that he had made, and behold, it was very good." Gen. 1: 31. In this respect man was holy, else God created and gave breath of life to an unholy being. We do not use the term holy as a moral attribute in reference to character and action, but in reference to his physical, mental and moral organism; for, though thus created, Adam formed a very unholy moral character. We find the word defined thus: "Holy—whole, entire, complete, sound, unimpaired"—Webster. The term holy was once applied to a spot of ground: "The ground whereon thou standest is holy ground." It is also used in reference to other things, as, the holy Sabbath, holy temple, holy city, holy vessels, holy oil, etc.

Let no one therefore conclude, that, because Adam lost for himself and his race a good physical, moral, and mental organism, and that Christ by his death will effect a restitution of all things, the wicked are entitled to a good moral character. This does not follow: a good moral character in God's sight is gained by faith in the atoning blood of Christ.

Much theological speculation has obtained in our world as to what was man's original nature; the nature and effect of the tree of life, the character and object of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, and of the nature of the penalty of God's law, which Adam incurred by his sin, and which now holds his race. Although we have discussed these points in other parts of this book, yet a few remarks may be in place here.
